WAYNE -There will be no Chamber coffee this week due to the Fourth of July holiday.

Chicken story time

WAYNE — The Wayne Public Library will be hosting a Chicken Story Time at the Wayne Public Library on Thursday, July 11 at 3 p.m. Those attending will enjoy stories, a craft and a visit from the big, friendly chicken. In addition, kite making workshops will be Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, July 8, 9 and 11 at the Library, prior to the Wayne Chicken Show.

Actors needed

AREA - The Wayne Community Theatre would like to put on a free night of entertainment at Bressler Park some time in late August or early September As part of the night, a melodrama would be produced. For this to happen, a number of fun-loving, dependable actors are needed to participate in this family show. Anyone who would like to be part of the fun is asked to stop at the Main Street Office (208 Main Street) on Monday, July 8 between 6 and 8 p.m. For more information, call Mollie at 375-2869 after 5 p.m.

The Providence Medical Center Foundation is planning its second annual Pro-Am Golf Tournament fundraiser. The tournament is scheduled for Friday, Aug. 9 at the Wayne Country Club, with registration and kick-off luncheon from 11 a.m. to noon. Golfing will begin at noon. A prime rib dinner will be served at the club beginning at 6 p.m. and prizes will be awarded to all the winners, tournament, and everyone who attended was very complementary following the event. We were able to raise over $3,000, which was used to purchase a whirlpool tub and hair care station for the hospital," Sandra Bartling, PMC Foundation Director, said.

"This year, all the funds we receive from the tournament will be applied toward the purchase of a pressure relief air bed and mattress, which will be used by patients who have a decreased ability to reposition themselves in bed. The specialty mattress has bulbs of air that allow the patient to stay cool, a factor in decreasing skin problems, and to join with another business to form distribute the pressure from the sensitive areas of the patient's body. This will be the first such bed and mattress for PMC,"

According to Troy Harder at the Country Club, the golf Pro on each team will play his own golf ball. The three Ams on the team will play the scramble. Each team's handicap will be based on their individual handicaps.

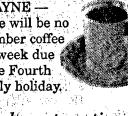

Golfers are encouraged to remember that they can register as a single golfer and be placed on a team, OR if they are a business owner/manager, they may

Fun in the park

Those involved in this year's City Recreation program took advantage of last week's warm weather to have a number of water-related activities. The students, in grades kindergarten through seventh grade were divided into a number of groups and had water balloon fights, blew bubbles, spread shaving cream on themselves and had the opportunity to have their faces painted. The program was under the direction of Colleen Janke. Teachers for this year's program included Toya Vande Velde, See FOOTBALL, Page 2A Jessica Monahan, Jodi Stowater, Kiley Luhr, Ashley Stowater, Dwan Jensen and Jessica Volk.

Winside students take biology trip

Twelve students from Instructor Raul Sok's dvanced Biology Class spent five days in the Black Hills and western Nebraska.

The group left from Winside High School at 5 a.m. on June 17. The first major stop for the day was at an original sod home, settlement north of the Badlands. The house was originally built by a couple from Pierce in the late 1800's.

The students then hiked and drove through the Badlands National Monument.

The second major stop for the day was at the Blackhills School of Mines in Rapid City, S.D. where . they toured the Geology museum. After this they spent an hour and a half on a personal guided tour of the Journey Center in downtown Rapid City.

The final afternoon stop was at Reptile Gardens where the students had the opportunity to walk through the displays and view the crocodile and snake shows. The evening was capped off with a viewing of the night lighting ceremony at Mt. Rushmóre,

The second day was an equally busy day. The group began with an 8 a.m. tour of the Wade Historic Gold Mill. After the tour they were instructed in gold panning techniques and spent about an hour "trying" to pan for gold in the mill's stream.

The second stop of the morning was particularly

Ensuring best education vital

Ensuring that Nebraska's children receive the best education in strong schools is one of the most important and critical issues facing our communities today. For most communities, state funding or state aid is not the only issue. There are many. You undoubtedly have read near daily coverage of education news in Nebraska newspapers or heard reports on television and radio broadcasts about the financial crisis facing our schools as well as national influences that are changing Nebraska's public schools. And the likelihood of that issues list growing in the months ahead is very real.

Public opinion polls show most parents of school-aged children and community members think schools are or should be one of their community's top priorities. Polls also show that most parents are happy with the school their children attend. They know the local teachers, the neighborhood school principal and are, in general, pleased with the education their children receive. But when it comes to schools in other communities or those across the nation, they become skeptical about the quality. I think some of that skepticism is based on all the new federal and state initiatives aimed at "improving" public schools. If you have to improve them, then there must be something wrong, right? Well, I'll let you decide that for yourself in the months ahead as we look at how Nebraska's public schools are doing, what they are doing and why. We'll also look at President Bush's major education initiative-No Child Left Behind-and how it will affect Nebraska students and their public schools.

In the months ahead, I plan to write a column twice each month to you and your community. The goal is to have a frank, straight forward and honest discussion about education issues in Nebraska and those that are surfacing nationally. We'll also discuss what critics are saying and what it means, some set and

We must work together if we want to keep strong public schools as the centerpièce of Nebraska communities. You need timely and accurate information about what we're doing and, why. The way for that work to begin is through expanded discussion in our local newspapers. Acusade and the state of the state of

I've told you about some of the things I want to address in this space in the months ahead, now I need your suggestions. Let's make this a two-way dialogue. The number of curb stone lawyers in Nebraska no doubt increased by a substantial number last week. First, a decision by the U.S. Supreme Court cast a shadow, a big, dark one, over the death sentences previously ordered for seven men on Nebraska's death row Then, a couple of judges sitting on a federal appeals court panel in San Francisco let fly with that decision about the Pledge of Allegiance. In the field of life, it seems, the judiciary became a musk thistle in the minds of a great many. The important thing is to keep some perspective on these things. Of course, perspective doesn't usually set in until after the screaming and shouting. and snouting. The appeals court ruling at least has the potential for a bright side. It might force a clarifying decision of some scope and magnitude out of the U.S. Supreme Court when it comes to all this judicial business about when the people can say "God" in public. The nation's highest court is overdue when it comes to such an informative epistle to the people.

A court that opens its sessions with "God save the United States, and this honorable court" might take the opportunity to say something definitive, laying down some concrete guidelines for what's kosher (so to speak) and what's not. In the long run, the decision could be a good thing, Remember, the 9th Circuit decision involved only two judges (it was a 2-1 decision). It was a beginning, not an end.

Court decisions questioned

The Supreme Court's decision on the death penalty, however, could be more problematic for the state, The immediate question: Does the decision set aside and require re-sentencing for all seven Nebraska death-row inmates. The attorney general thinks not.

Others aren't so sure. In any event, it will lead to (naturally) more legal cases that will further clarify what Nebraska has to do to maintain the death penalty and a preferred societal tool for dealing with some convicted murderers.

Certainly the pro-death penalty lobby has nothing to fear insofar as the Legislature's choice of public policy. The Nebraska Legislature isn't going to abandon the death penalty. Not in an election year and not in any other year.

The only real issue centers on what language the state will adopt in an effort to keep Old Sparky available to impose the ultimate penalty - on the rare occasions when it gets the chance to do it, One thing appeared certain; Even if the Supreme Court decision doesn't set aside the death sentences of Nebraska's condemned, it certainly gave all or most of them an extended lease on life. The wheels of justice grind exceedingly slow, especially when it comes to the death penalty and the federal courts.

Advice given on fishing during Dog Days up and down the shoreline trying hang up on the rocks and snags on don't get a bite, hold your rod tip Well the heat of summer has finally arrived. The heat, south winds, along with the lack of moisture will make any outdoor activity tough.

The dog days of summer are tough. Humidity soars and this along with the strong winds make fishing a lot of work.

When it's this hot, the fish will locate in the deeper or more oxygenated areas.

Species such as walleyes will use the break between the muddier water and the clean water as an ambush point. Muddy water will also allow the walleyes to move shallow during the heat of the day to feed. The majority of the time, the fish will move into the deeper clearer water to find the oxygen and temperatures that they prefer. In a lake or pond, vegetation becomes important to the angler during the Dog Days. Look for the greenest vegetation as this will be the area where oxygen levels are highest. Fish will move into these green weed beds as the oxygen given off by the plants will make this area more comfortable. Shallow running crank baits such as Rapalas, when trolled or cast along the edge or run over the top of these green weed beds will account for some nice fish. All predator species of fish will cruise these areas looking for an easy meal.

Fish the shaded shallower areas if your fishing early morning or late afternoon. These areas cool off quickly and hold good numbers of bait fish, which will attract the predators.

In the river below the dam, you'll find more fish moving into the fast water area below the turbines. This water is highly oxygenated and the bait fish will run to stay ahead of the marauding fish that cruise the area. The water being drawn through the turbines carries all sorts of food down stream to the waiting fish.

An easy way to tell if the shiners are up along the wall is to look for the birds working the area. They like most other wild animals are opportunist and will pick up the wounded shiners that float to the surface.

If you see a concentration of i gulls or blackbirds working along the wall, you can bet that the shiners are up and that the game fish are forcing them up along the wall.

Use a floating Rapala or # 4 or 5 Mepps spinner with a silver blade. Let the crank bait float down stream and twitch it like a wound ed minnow from time to time. The closer you work it to the wall or shoreline, the more likely your bait will be taken. Don't crank to deep or you'll the rain without a raincoat or an umbrella? Would you send a child to play in the snow without gloves. or boots? Would you send a child out in the sun without sunscreen and a hat?

If you said no to each question, you are well aware of the importance of protecting children from, the outdoor elements. If you said yes to the last question about the sun, think again.

Playing in the sun is a fun outdoor activity for children. But is it safe and healthy?

The sun can be dangerous. Even though a suntan may look nice and make one feel good, there is no medical evidence to suggest that a suntan improves health.

Recent medical research shows it is important to protect children. and teenagers from overexposure to the sun. Skin damage is cumulative and starts with that first sun exposure.

Young people get about 80 percent of their total lifetime sun exposure in the first 18 years of life. Sun protection and prevention are important to preventing. skin damage later in life. Some studies suggest there is a link between early exposure to the sun and skin cancer as an adult.

The two types of ultraviolet sunlight that can damage the skin are Ultraviolet A and Ultraviolet B rays. UVA rays are the slowtanning rays that penetrate deep into the skin and age the skin prematurely. UVB rays cause burning of the skin and are considered the major cause of skin cancer. Many young children spend their early years at a day-care center. They are dependent upon the primary care giver to take the appropriate precautions in providing sun protection, and the stars

As a parent of young children or UV, or a person who cares for children in a day-care center, there are several precautions you can take to help protect the children around you from future health. problems related to the sun

* Use a sunscreen. Apply a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 to block the most harmful sun rays. This needs to be done before the child goes outside. Don't forget the lips, backs of hands and feet. Reapply sunscreen every two hours. Teach children to use sunscreen regularly, like they use a

* Wear sunglasses. Protect children's eyesⁱ from ultraviolet radiation. Sunglasses that provide 95+ percent protection greatly reduce sun exposure * Wear protective clothing.

Loose-fitting clothes that are tightly woven are a good choice.

Be aware of ground surfaces. Ground surfaces such as sand, cement and white painted surfaces reflect the sun's rays. In the water, ultraviolet light penetrates Follow these simple guidelines three feet deep. Teach children the ABC'S for Fun

* A is for away. Let children know about staying away from the sun in the middle of the day. * B is for block. Encourage children to use a sun protective factor

(SPF) of 15 or higher sunscreen, * C is for cover up. Wear a shirt and a hat.

* S is for speak out, Have children talk to family and friends about sun protection.

What children are more at risk to sunburn? A commonly used method to assess the risk is the Skin Type system. The lower numbers indicate children are more likely to burn. These include children who are fair-skinned, with light, red or light-brown hair; blue, green or gray eyes and have numerous moles.

Skin Types-

Type 1 Always burns, never tans Type 2 Usually burns, tans with difficulty Type 3 Sometimes burns, sometimes tans

Type 4 Burn minimally, always tans (Asians, Native Americans, Latin Americans)

Type 5 Rarely burns, tans profusely (light-complected African-Americans, east Indians)

Type 6 Never burns, deeply tans (dark-skinned African Americans) may need protection with intense exposure

Since all skin is not created equal, it is important to know that the more skin pigment, the better to prevent sunburn. For individuals tection for the eyes, ears, face and who tan, tanning is a way the skin acts as a defense shield against damaging ultraviolet rays.

Since parents and child-care workers become role models to children, they need to set an example and follow the sun protection guidelines

Gov. Mike Johanns said, "Fostering strong rural communities is vital to the future will being and growth in Nebraska. Whether it's through setting a course for community goals and objectives, strengthening infrastructure or providing more quality housing, it adds up to improved quality of life for all Nebraskans." The awards were made either through the federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program, or the Nebraska Affordable Housing Program that receives federal funding through the CDBG and HOME programs, and state funding though the Nebraska Affordable Housing Trust Fund. Both programs are administered by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development (DED), 120 b 30 3 Since 1999, Gov. Johanns has

time to take a vacation from exer-

While you probably won't improve your fitness level while on vacation, a little planning can help you maintain the status quo and have fun doing it, according to the American Heart Association in Nebraska.

'Vacation is not the time to take a break. It will make it more difficult to resume your regular fitness routine once you return home," says Geri Moore, an American Heart Association spokesperson and a clinical exercise specialist at Creighton University in Omaha.

If you already are physically active, here are some tips from the American Heart Association in Nebraska to help you keep in shape during your summer travels:

•Stay at hotels with gyms, swimming pools or agreements whereby guests have access to local health clubs for free.

•Remember to pack your exercise clothes and a good pair of walking or running shoes. •Take advantage of breaks between flights or at rest stops, and walk,

• Exercise in the early morning when you are fresh and before tourist activities derail your resolve. An added bonus is that you will have more energy for the rest of the day.

•Use stretch bands or resistance tubing to work your muscles and a jump rope for aerobics; they are inexpensive and easy to pack. Before you buy a rope, make sure it is long enough. Stand in the middle of the rope; the handles should reach your armpits. •Walk whenever possible and use the stairs. If you are unfamiliar with the area, ask a hotel clerk to recommend interesting and safe walking routes. •Good hotel-room exercises requiring no equipment include stretching exercises, push-ups and truck curls.

·Choose activities such as zoo trips, hikes, bike rides and scuba diving that are guaranteed to keep you moving.

•Remember to drink plenty of

It may be summer, but this is no water. In the event of an emergency, always carry identification, contact information, and the name of your hotel.

• If the weather is hot, consider mall walking. You may even get a few tips form the locals about recommending activities and destinations that you won't find in any tourist book: •As always, older adults and people with disabilities should consult their physicians before starting a new physical activity.

Shear chosen as ambassador

Natalie Shear, a junior at Doane College in Crete, is among 28 Doane College students who were chosen as Doane Ambassadors for the 2002-03 academic year.

Ambassadors are a highly select group of students whose function is to host visiting alumni, prospective students, and special guests of the college. Ambassadors also travel with admission and advancement office staff as representatives of the student body. Students were chosen following an interview process. Shear is the daughter of Phillip and Julia Shear of Wayne.

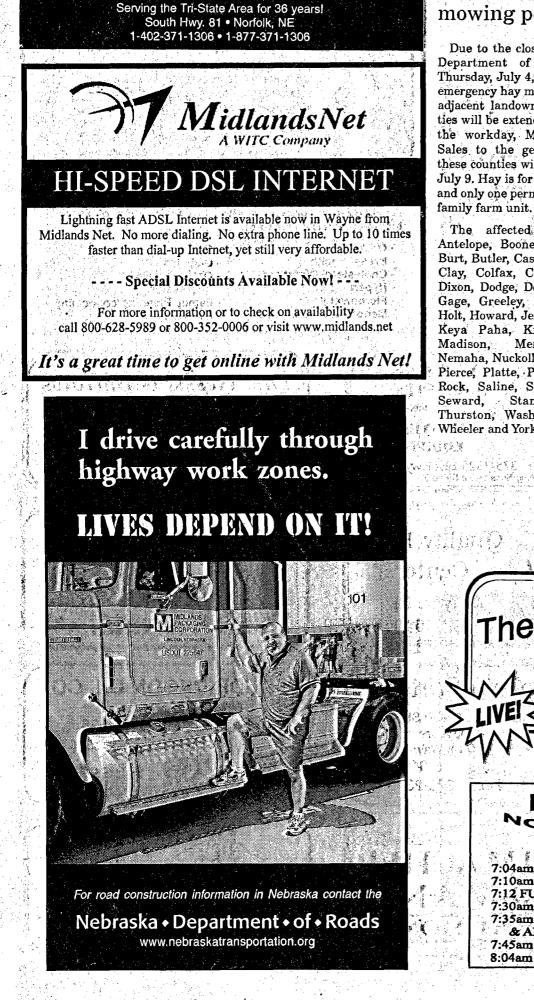

Water safety tips are shared

The swimming pool is a great place to beat the heat this summer, if you remember to follow some basic safety rules.

These water safety tips from the American Heart Association in Nebraska can help prepare you and your family for a safe and relaxing pool season:

·Learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Drowning is a leading cause of fatal injuries in infants, children and adolescents, •Remember that a drowning child often sinks quietly without screaming for help or thrashing the water. • Maintain constant supervision, even if your children know how to swim. Drowning can occur in minutes, even in shallow water: • If you or your children don't know how to swim, take lessons. Never swim alone. Put lifeveste on your children. Children should wear life vests when swimming in natural bodies of water such as lakes or rivers. •Don't mix swimming and alcohol. Alcohol impairs your judgement and coordination. To find a CPR training center near you, call the American Heart Association at 1-877-AHA-4CPR or visit americanheart.org and click "CPR." When calling your local training center for course information, specify that you would like to take a Heartsaver CPR course that includes the child and infant module.

water with you. You need 6-8 ounces right before and right after physical activity

·If humidity is about 70 percent, watch out for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Know the symptoms. Heat and humidity interfere with the body's natural cooling process. Drink water, not caffeinated or alcoholic beverages. They can actually cause your body to lose water. Don't depend on thirst to tell you when to drink-drink often. ·Choose acrylic socks. Cotton socks hold moisture at your feet and can bunch up when they

Will attend parade on 4th

Every day we watch the forecast for news of rain. We scan the skies for clouds. We keep the doors closed and AC on, knowing how high the electricity bill will be. The shades on the west are drawn, trying to keep out that afternoon sun; today, they've added humidity to the heat index. Actually, that will help the crops, but not the people.

Our guests from California insist the heat has not bothered them. They are intrigued by the fireflies. And every evening, they eat in South Bend at the saloon. They claim the prime rib there is better than any they've had.

Our other guests this week are manning their son's fireworks stand at Waterloo. Every evening, when they come in, they look hot, tired, and dusty. They make very good money, they tell me, but it looks very hard and a shipt house h We're bracing for a houseful, two different groups, all next week; the first from Texas, the second from Arizona. They should be used to heat!

We've been flying the flag since Flag Day, As we consider Independence Day, I want to share something I read recently about John Hart, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The signers pledged their "lives, fortunes, and sacred honor."

John Hart fled New Jersey when the British invaded but then risked his life to return home to his dying wife. He was 65-years-old at the time, and slept in caves, until he made it home. There, his wife was already buried, his farm destroyed and his 13 children. taken away. He died in 1779 without finding any of his children.

It's true, "freedom is not free." I wonder what the Founding Fathers would think today, as we celebrate with barbecues, boating, and beer. I'm going to make every effort to get to our local parade, even if the temperature, and humidity are both up. That's really not a sacrifice, compared to what went on 226 years ago. God Bless Americal

Advice is offered on grasshopper control

Extension Educator, By Ralph Kulm, Holt/Boyd County

Grasshoppers are being found in more areas and in larger number than we have seen in several years. Planning for their control needs to take place now if a successful program is to be possible.

Grasshoppers hatch from eggs as symphs which begin feeding one day after hatching. They will reach the adult stage in six to eight weeks (after going through five instars) starting in late June to early July. Only adult grasshoppers have wings. Adults generally live from two to three months depending on the weather. Control: One of the best methods to control grasshoppers in the garden is to kill them before they get there. Leaving border areas around gardens unmowed will delay grasshopper movement into the garden and provides a good. location for control using chemicals you wouldn't use in the garden. Growing a good crop of marigolds or zinnias or some other bush growth around the garden will function as a trap crop, again providing a place for the grasshoppers . to congregate and be controlled. The best time to control grasshoppers is during the middle (third and fourth) instars. These stages will occur from from late June through mid July. At this time most eggs will have hatched, the young hoppers will be more susceptible to the insecticide, and they will still be concentrated in the hatching areas. Grasshoppers will be concentrated in these areas and they can be controlled more effectively than when dispersed later in the summer. The sources of grasshopper infestations (i.e. surrounding grassland, ditches, and other untilled areas) should be treated before the larger hoppers

move out. Chemicals for control: The following insecticides are helpful for grasshopper control in and around the yard and garden. Always check labels for application instructions, and safety precautions including waiting periods prior to harvest of vegetables, Garden

Sevin (carbaryl) - labeled for use on many vegetables and ornamentals, will be most effective when hoppers are small. Sevin 5 percent bait (carbaryl) (formulated on wheat bran) - can be useful in garden if you do not get recurring infestations from surrounding areas, easy to apply, apply to soil surface or areas of minimal surface residue or canopy, re-apply after rain or heavy dew, can be spread among planting without direct contact with the plants; no residues, Diazinon (available in several formulations) - labeled for use on many vegetables and ornamentals. Ornamentals and non-crop areas

Orthene (acephate) (available in several formulations) - labeled for use on many ornamentals, labeled or use on non-crop areas; use as perimeter spray on non-crop areas around yards and gardens.

The cause of algae in ponds is the action of sunlight and excess nutrients: Nutrients come from plant debris, such as tree leaves falling into ponds, overstocking and/or overfeeding fish, run-off of lawn fertilizer into ponds, overfertilizing aquatic plants, or the lack of nutrient uptake by plants caused by planting too fay plants in the pond.

Methods for reducing algal growth include reducing excess nutrients in the pond, establishing a balance in the pond, establishing a balance in the pond between plants, scavengers, and

To create a natural balance, try to cover 50 to 75 percent of the water garden with plants with floating leaves, such as water lilies and lotus. This reduces sunlight into the pond and keeps the water at a cooler, more constant temperature.

Along with these plants, use submerged plants as they absorb nutrients from the water that would otherwise feed algae and some, will oxygenate the water. Examples are Anacharis and Cabomba.

Scavengers, such as snails and tadpoles, add to the natural balance. They graze on organic waste that settles to the bottom and sides of water gardens. Fish, in the right quantity, consume organic matter and add interest.

Filtration is the most common way to keep algae under control. The filtration process removes sus-pended particles and oxygenates the water. Filtration may be mechanical, biological, or a combination of the two.

Chemicals, called algicides, can be used but are best used as tem-fish, mechanical and/or biological filtration, bacterial inoculation, and the use of chemicals.

To reduce excess nutrients, locate and construct the pond so turf fertilizers and grass clippings will not run into it; remove excess plant debris such as tree leaves on a regular basis; flush the pond and add new water; and avoid overstocking and/or over feeding fish. A general rule for stocking fish is for every square-yard surface of the pool, stock six four to six inch goldfish or koi, feed fish specified, amount of food per day, but only if necessary. Most fish can thrive on naturally occurring foods within porary measures. Algicides must be applied according to label directions and careful attention paid to the impact on fish and aquatic plants. In some cases, fish will need to be removed before chemicals are applied.

Keep in mind several weeks may be necessary to achieve a natural balance. When first establishing a water garden a green water condition is normal. Give the water garden at least six to eight week s to establish a balance before using chemicals.

Department of Agriculture has received complaints about telemarketers who are calling the state's farmers and ranchers and allegedly making misleading and false claims.

Iowa has allegedly experienced similar problems with telemar. keters. The Iowa Attorney General has filed two lawsuits alleging that two companies operating out of New York and Florida are engaged in deceptive and fraudulent practices in the telemarketing sales of pesticides. The companies market the pesticides Triple Threat, Turf King and C-Lex.

"""They claimed their products would exceed the performance of similar products on the market, but they failed to disclose that their products were highly diluted compared to other reputable products," Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller said recently when filing the lawsuits.

In each of the Iowa cases, a district court judge issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting any further marketing of pesticides by the defendants in Iowa while the matters are pending. The suits' ask the courts to order permanent injunctions, restitution to victims and civil penalties up to $40,000

Will Davis Sav-Mor Pharmacy Study Shows Drug Helps People Lose Weight, Keep it Off

The prescription weightloss medicine subitramine (Meridia) originally was studied as an antidepressant. It was found to cause weight loss in some individuals and was approved by the US Drug Food and Administration for treatment of obesity. It is not a "central nervous system stimulant." And is has no effect on fat absorption, as does another popular weight-loss medicine.

Keeping weight from returning is a problem for anyone who has lost weight. But according to a study published in The Lancet, sibutramine may help many people sustain their weight loss. After 18 months on sibutramine, 43% of patients maintained at least 80% of their original weight loss as compared to only 16% of those who took a placebo. Yet the medicine is not a magic bullet for obesity. Effective meal planning and physical activity are required to help the medicine work.
