Students experience new culture

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

Rotary International Youth Exchange students Marisa Rose of Wayne and Yun-Pei Hsiung (or David as he likes to be called) of Taiwan are each beginning the school year in a country unfamiliar to them.

Marisa left last Thursday for Taiwan and David is attending Wayne High School. The students are staying with each other's parents; Marisa with Eric and Stacy Hsiung of Hsin-tien (a suburb of Taipei, Taiwan) and David with Dan and Kyle Rose of Wayne. Both Marisa and David are juniors in high school.

Marisa has wanted to be an exchange student for some time. She originally wanted to go to Japan but the District chair of Rotary chapter 5650 (of which Wayne is part of) wanted an exchange with Taiwan. So, Marisa agreed and this is a first time exchange with them. (David is sponsored by Rotary Club of Taipei Tungmen District 3520 of Taipei, Taiwan).

To prepare for her trip, Marisa took her junior classes during her sophomore year. This way she will be able to graduate with her classmates and not be a year behind.

As for Rotary procedure, students should start the application process about a year prior to when the

Pastor and family leaving Wayne

Rev. Mark Steinbach, Pastor of Praise Assembly of God Church in Wayne, has announced his resignation effective Sept. 1, 2002. The Steinbach family moved to Wayne on Labor Day in 1992, and will be leaving the community on Labor Day.

Rev. Steinbach and his family are moving to Bellevue where he will be on staff at Bellevue Christian Center. The church has over 1,500 members and has a K-8th grade school. They will be overseeing the Children's Ministries Departments, assisting with dramatic presentations and musicals, and will be developing ministry teams to work at campus and conferences.

Rev. Steinbach is currently involved in writing curriculum which will be used to train and equip Children/Youth Ministers in Latin and South American Bible Schools and Colleges. This move will provide a broader base of operation and experience which can help to make the project more successful.

"We have thoroughly enjoyed the 10 years we have shared with our church, school, and community," Steinbach said. "I can still remember our first Christmas when we had a fire in the house and the headline read 'Holiday Fire Leaves' Family Homeless.' We didn't know anyone very well and we had no family in the immediate area, but the community and churches responded with open arms and we felt accepted and loved." Steinbach also said over the last

10 years they have endeavored to be faithful to serve their church, Praise Assembly of God.

"They are a wonderful family of believers and we will miss them immensely. I am confident that God will bring a great family to come and pick up where we left off," Steinbach said. "We also appreciate the support from the area churches and community who have supported many special events like the "Living Last Supper."

Steinbach also noted they have tried to connect with, and do their part to help the community and schools. He feels the Wayne to follow and serve Him with all Community has a lot to offer and they have enjoyed the opportunities to connect with the Rotary Club, work with the City on building projects, be a part of Community Theater, Park and Rec., and other events like Chicken Show.

"The schools in Wayne are wonderful and we greatly appreciate the faculty, administration, staff, students and parents who have helped our children learn, grow, and mature," Steinbach said. "Our kids have been pretty involved in the music programs here, and they have enjoyed every minute of it. Our understand is that Bellevue West High School has an excellent music program so we hope they can get plugged in there right away."

Steinbach said it is his prayer that their lives have made an impact on the church and in the community in a positive way. They have endeavored to share Jesus and His love in many tangible ways and their greatest desire has been that people could know Him and that they would have a desire their hearts.

"We will miss everyone and the community." Steinbach said. "God bless and we hope to get back and visit from time to time."

A farewell reception will be held at Tacos & More on Sunday, Sept. 1 from 2 - 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Welcome back!

Classes start this week at the college and many new and old students will be arriving. The streets will be crowded and this town of ours will start its annual change once again.

AND DESCRIPTION OF A DE

I personally look forward to this time of year. The students and the college bring a lot to this town and as a resident of this community, I appreciate both.

We all need to make sure that the new and returning students feel welcomed in our town. We both have much to offer each other. We need to continue to improve the lines of communication between the students, city and the college on matters of drinking on or off campus. I feel relations have been strained at times in the past. I know efforts have been made on both sides of the fence to improve the situation. I plan on trying my best to improve those feelings whenever and wherever I can this year. I believe we all can do a better job if we go the extra step.

So lets start the year off right by welcoming every student we see with a "hello" and "welcome back."

This first step of welcoming might lead to a lot of good things for the "friendliest college town in Nebraska."

Capital View What happened during special session?

By Ed Howard

The Wayne Herald

> Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

The Legislature's recent special session went as expected - not much excitement and not much that wasn't predictable.

One particular piece of business did indicate the seriousness of the state's fiscal problems. Lawmakers approved a plan to divert some new sales tax revenue from the highway trust fund.

When lawmakers manage to snag highway money en route to that fund, and the road construction lobby basically goes with the notion, you know the situation is serious.

What actually happened during the special session?

The Legislature made some real spending reductions and also moved money around - from one fund to another - to make sure the state didn't bounce any checks in the current budget cycle. What lies ahead?

Current projections are that the state will still face a $473 million revenue shortfall over the next three years.

Improvements or rough spots in the economy could change that number for better or for worse. Obviously, the current drought doesn't augur well for the agricultural sector, and the importance of that situation speaks for itself in the Cornhusker state.

What to do?

The options available to lawmakers form only a short list. Continued reduction in the size and scope of state programs, from education to social services, is certainly the target of opportunity. An experiment with casino gambling is a very narrow possibility in the long term. But passing a bill that allows casinos doesn't generate any revenue. The things first have to be built, and then they have to succeed.

Since 2003 is not an election year, the discussion of higher taxes might be an option; but that's all it would be.

Gov. Mike Johanns spent years laying the groundwork for his first campaign for governor. He traveled the state and talked to thousands of folk. To this day, he will tell you that the question he was asked most often: "You're not going to raise taxes, are you?"

One of the catch phrases in a lagging economy is, "Do more with less.

The Legislature might have to decide whether state government will simply have to do less, with less.

Feeding drought-stressed soybeans and sorghum and the extension of Claycomb

Feeding drought-stricken soybeans or sorghum as forage requires close management. While they're good sources of needed livestock feed, they also can be toxic, University of Nebraska specialists.

When used right, the droughtstricken forages are a good substitute for dry pastures, said Bruce Anderson, forage specialist in NU's Institute of Agriculture and while swine can use it more as a filler, Anderson said. Livestock can graze soybeans, but usually shouldn't graze sorghum because it is too high in prussic acid and nitrates, which are poisonous to cattle, Anderson said.

Soybean silage is best made with a moisture content between 60 percent and 70 percent, Anderson said

A useful in-field method to test and cut earlier if possible because the stems become woody and poor in quality.

It's especially important to harvest before a freeze to prevent leaf loss, Anderson said "Mith soybeans we also have to avoid the loss of leaves," he said. "They crumble easily. We just can't cut them when they start drying, or we'll get sticks." To aid fermentation in chopped beef specialist. Testing for protein, energy and moisture will allow producers to design a ration that meets the animals' needs.

"Test, mix and blend," he said. "If the forage happens to test highin nitrates then you have to blend it with feeds that are low in nitrates.

The easiest way to do that is to. grind it and blend it." Rasby said producers planning to Harvesting and feeding soybean hay or silage is similar to feeding alfalfa, he said. Harvesting sorghum for forage is similar to harvesting corn and it also can be made into hay or silage.

Feeding these drought-stressed crops is much like feeding other hay crops. Beef, dairy cows and sheep can use the fibrous nature of these drought-damaged plants, silage moisture is the squeeze test. After chopping some forage, grab a couple of handfuls and squeeze it tightly for about 30 seconds. If it stays in a ball and the palm of the hand is moist, but not dripping wet, it's just right for chopping.

Forage quality drops quickly in soybeans after seed begins to form. It should be harvested before the bottom leaves start to turn yellow, Offering English and Spanish resources will help the 4-H Cyber Fair reach a broader population at the State Fair, Fairchild said. Last year, almost 17,000 people visited the Cyber Fair in 11 days, she said. Volunteers from Madison soybean silage, it may be best to mix in chopped soybean plants with corn or sorghum silage, Anderson said. A ration of 1 ton soybean silage to 3 or 4 tons of corn or sorghum silage will improve fermentation of the soybean silage and increase protein content of the corn or sorghum silage by 2 to 3 points.

Soybean producers also could add a silage inoculant designed for legumes like alfalfa and one to two bushels of rolled or ground grain to each ton of silage or add 50 pounds of molasses to each ton of silage.

"In many cases, we'll find these nontraditional hay crops best fed if they are ground and blended with other feedstuffs," Anderson said. "Grinding will help increase consumption and reduces refusal of stems in the feed bunk or hay rack by cattle."

When feeding the silage to livestock, be sure it has gone through its full fermentation cycle to avoid highly toxic nitrites, he said.

When grazing drought damaged forages, do not force cattle to eat the bottom part of the stalk because that's where the nitrites have accumulated.

want to leave. Last year Marisa far he feels people are friendly contacted Reggie Yates, representative for the Wayne Rotary Club in youth exchange. He gave her a short, basic application which after she filled it out, it went to the Wayne club for review. Then, there was a short interview.

Afterwards, she filled out a long application (14 pages) which included records such as dental, school, health, interests such as family, hobbies, etc. The application then went to the District chair and later she was asked to do an interview in Grand Island. On the application she indicated three places she would like to go: Italy, Belgium or Japan. Three other exchange students went to Sweden.

Taiwan is mountainous with no snow. At this time of the year, the temperature is hot and does not cool down until November. There are around 22 million people in Taiwan. Chinese is the language spoken there. David's home is located on a mountain quite far from his school, so Marisa will have to ride a bus.

Students are required to wear uniforms at school; Marisa will wear a plaid skirt and a t-shirt with tie. School starts August 30 and will end in July of 2003 with classes running from 7:30 a.m. to 4 or 5 p.m., five days a week. David's parents careers are in the insurance business. They are both Rotarians. This is the first time his parents have hosted an exchange student. David has a younger brother who is 14.

As for David staying in Wayne, so here. He wants to improve on his English, learn about the American culture, and make some friends while he's here. David's interests include watching movies and playing ping pong.

As for what he likes to eat, "We were concerned we would have to eat a lot of rice and our family isn't fond of rice," Kyle said. "I was relieved when he said he didn't like rice very much."

This is not the first time David has been in America; his family was in the United States on vacation when he was 15.

Nor is this the first time Dan and Kyle Rose have hosted Rotary exchange students. So far, they have hosted six students (including David) with the first one staying with them during the '92-'93 school year. Adriana from Mexico was first, then Ben from Belgium, Gabor of Hungary, Ingrid from Brazil, Csilla of Germany, and now David.

The Rotary Youth Exchange program has been in existence for over 25 years. Every year there are approximately 7,000 students ages 15-19 who go abroad for the academic year or an extended period of time.

Through this program, there is an increased global perspective that wouldn't be possible without volunteer host families and youth exchange officers. Rotary Youth Exchange students are ambassadors and represent their country.

Many continue their involvement in Rotex after the exchange. Rotex is a group of past youth exchange student Alumni who stay connected. They also help with the youth exchange program in their orientation process and activities that are planned. Rotex is a good source for outgoing and incoming information on the youth exchange program.

The criteria used in the selection of Rotary Youth Exchange students during the screening process is: scholastic record, linguistic ability, community involvement, potential as a cultural ambassador and age.

A primary goal of the program is to foster world understanding by way of intercultural exchange. There are two types of exchange: long term which usually lasts for a academic year and a short term which can be from several days to several weeks. These exchanges usually take place in the summer. Older students can take part in a New Generations Exchange. These exchanges are from 3-6 weeks in duration and may be organized for individuals or groups.

Host families do not have to be Rotarians. During their stay, a student usually is with three or four host families which gives them as much change in culture as possible.

More host families are needed during David's stay in Wayne. Anyone interested in becoming a host family can call Dan Rose at 375-2340. Also, anyone interested in being part of the Rotary International Youth Exchange program for academic year 2003-04, can contact Dan.

National auxiliary awards fund grants

Thanks to the overwhelming generosity of its members, the American Legion Auxiliary collected $94,239.50 in its special 9-11 Fund and recently made final grant disbursements to officially close the fund.

The Departments of California, Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin had contributions of more than $5.000 each from individual members, Units and Department contributions. The Department of Wisconsin's total, contribution of $13,330 was most among 39 Departments sending in donations to National Headquarters in Indianapolis by the April 15 deadline.

· Five non-profit organizations that have been instrumental in assisting victims, their families and the military were chosen as grant recipients. The groups are: The Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors (TAPS); the USO of. Metropolitan New York City; the USO of Metropolitan Washington; Comfort Zone Camp, Inc. and the Bayonne (N.J.) Fire Canteen.

Auxiliary National President Sherry McLaughlin of Vinton, Iowa, created the 9-11 Fund in September to assist those most affected by the nation's tragedy. "This fund was established in direct response to members collectively wanting to do something to help the victims of 9-11," McLaughlin said, "We tried to find organizations which intimately assisted victims and their families in relief efforts and are continuing to help the families today. These organizations were already working on limited budgets when their services were greatly expanded and their resources were severely strained. I can assure our members that the donations we have made to these groups have made a big difference in their work for victims, their families and our military."

The Auxiliary extended its first grant late in September to TAPS in the amount of $10,000 and later awarded the group additional grants of $25,000 and $13,739.50 in December 2001 and May 2002, respectively.

TAPS, based in Washington, d.C. and founded by Bonnie Carroll after her husband, Army Brigadier General Tom Carroll, died in a military plane crash in 1992, provides free services to military members and their families who have lost a loved one while on active duty in the armed forces. August crop report provides information on fall harvest

By Roy Frederick Public Policy Specialist Department of Agricultural Economics University of Nebraska-Lincoln

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's August crop report is always one of the most important of the year. This year is no exception.

The significance of the August report is that it provides the first real indication of the size of fallharvested crops. Prices for corn, soybeans and other crops likely will be impacted for months based on the Aug. 12 estimate.

Not surprisingly, crop yields are expected to be much lower in Nebraska this year. Corn, for example, is estimated to average 121 bushels per acre, down from 147 bushels last year. Dryland corn production is taking an even bigger hit, with this year's projected average of 59 bushels per acre equating to just over half of last year's 110 bushels. Potential yields of other Nebraska crops are worth noting as well. A 2002 soybean crop averaging 33 bushels per acre would be 27 percent less than last year's 45.5 bushels.Sorghum, at 46 bushels per acre, would be down 45 percent from 2001. Alfalfa hay and wheat yields are down 18 percent and 13 percent, respectively.

Each of these commodities is, of course, produced in many other states. Although yields are down nationally, Nebraska tends to be suffering more than most other states. The estimated corn yield, for example, is down 6.5 percent nationally, while soybeans are off 9.1 percent.

A comparison with Iowa, the leading producer of corn and soybeans, provides even more contrast. Both crops are expected to reach last year's yield levels, despite significant drought damage in the southwest part of the state.

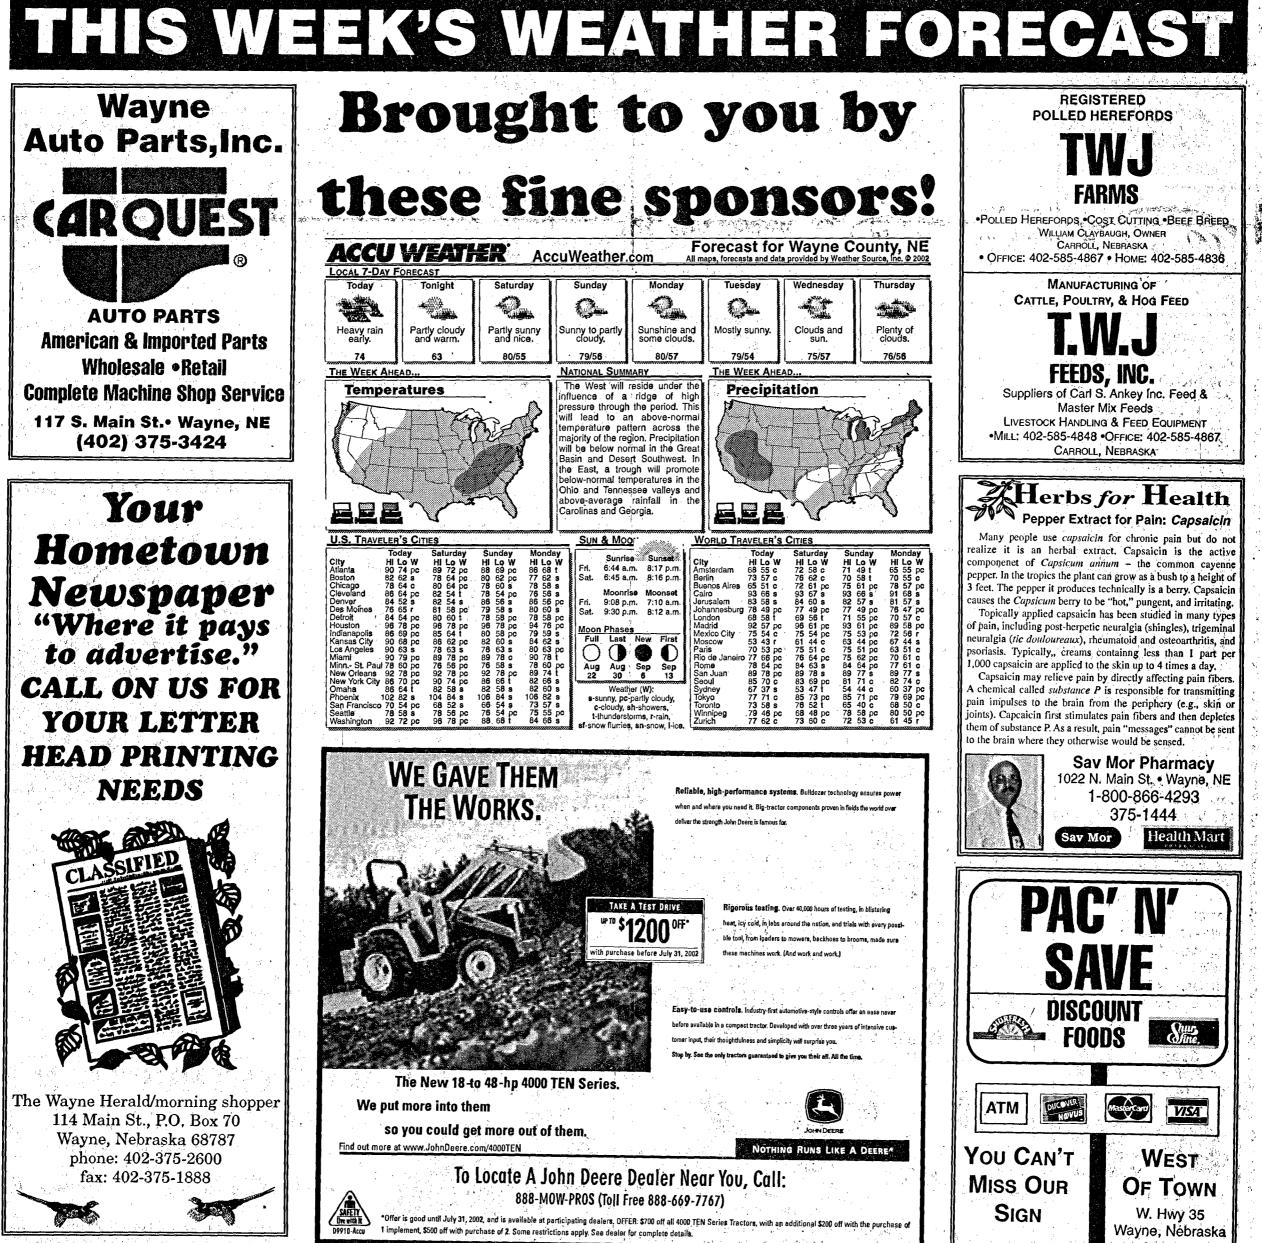

Estimated yields nationally spurred prices higher in the immediate aftermath of the crop report. Cash corn prices at some Nebraska locations approached $2.50 per bushel. Soybean prices topped $5.50 per bushel. These levels had not been reached since 1997.

Droughts tend to create "haves" and "have-nots" among producers. If nothing -- or very little -- is produced, it doesn't make any difference what the price of corn or soybeans is. Income is sure to be low.

On the other hand, someone lucky enough to have near-normal production benefits from droughtinduced higher commodity prices. For this reason, average farm income in 2002 will mask greater than normal differences among producers.

Finally, the drought in Nebraska seems likely to hurt cate tle producers in two ways. Already burdened by shrinking pastures and sub-par hay crops, ranchers must now deal with the reality of. higher corn prices.

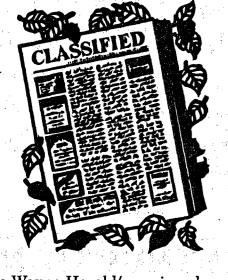

This usually means lower prices for feeder cattle. Indeed. that's how the feeder cattle market reacted to the crop report, It's just one more thing to make droughts no fun at all.

With an influx of military called to New York City and Washington, direct assistance to emergency. D.C., to provide homeland securiworkers at "Ground Zero" and ty, the USO groups have expanded

Northeast Community College receives grant

In spite of continuing concerns over the budget and the special of the Nebraska session Legislature, the Board of Northeast Governors at Community College are smiling tonight with the announcement of a $1,000,000 U.S. Department of Education grant for migrantworker education.

Larry Goedel, vice president of educational services at Northeast, announced that Northeast submitted one of the top-ranked applications and has been selected to receive a High School Equivalence Program (HEP) grant. The grant start date is July 1, 2002, and will be a non-competing continuation award for a five-year project period. The grant will be awarded at a rate of $200,000 per year for five years. The HEP project will be closely integrated with the existing Adult Basic Education Program.

"This is a dream come true for our Adult Basic Education Program," said Mary Honke, Northeast's dean of continuing education/distance learning division. "Our success is due to the efforts of our staff and support from other agencies and educational institutions."

According to the grant application, the 20-county area served by Northeast has seen a large increase in meatpacking and processing plants during the last 10 years. There has also been an influx of thousands of individuals of Hispanic, Sudanese and Somalian descent into the area and many are employed in these meatpacking and processing plants.

While the number of these Hispanic, Sudanese and Somalian vide eligible migrant adults and their families a chance to complete high school and continue on to postsecondary education or training, career positions or the military.

In the application, Northeast officials said they will provide outreach and recruitment services in a culturally-appropriate manner so migrant students will enroll in Northeast's General Educational Development (GED) program through the Adult Basic Education program. Other goals include providing GED assistance and support services for at least 75 percent of HEP students could complete their GED during the first year of the grant funding, NECC will also provide placement services to HEP students so they may reach their career goals.

To reach those goals, Northeast personnel will conduct intensive recruitment through its ESL and GED programs, other migrant agencies, and businesses that employ migrant workers, the grant application said. The institution will also develop bilingual promotional materials and expand the GED program in Norfolk, South Sioux City, West Point, and Madison.

HEP students will receive financial assistance with educationrelated expenses. Participants will be challenged to complete their GED tests with incentives and receive personal and academic counseling services and diagnostic testing. In addition, the college will also host special workshops on personal issues and life skills, career planning courses and activities, cross-cultural activities, and staff development.

"This project really strikes at the heart of the role and mission of Northeast Community College," said Dr. Bill Path, president of Northeast. "The HEP grant will assist the College in meeting the needs of the growing migrant population in northeast Nebraska. We are most grateful for that opportunity."

Program changes are made

Nebraska's Every Woman Matters (EWM) program for breast and cervical cancer screening has recently gone through some major changes.

While emphasizing the importance of screening and early detection of breast and cervical cancers is still a number one priority for EWM, they are now able to provide additional screenings for cardiovascular disease and diabetes for women 40-64 years of age.

Funding for these additional services is received from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Nebraska is just one of ten states awarded the grant to provide the additional screenings, follow-up and lifestyle interventions to prevents and reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease.

The services, which have begun in July, will include: blood pressure, lipid panel (serum total cholesterol, HDL-cholesterol and LDL-cholesterol, and triglycerides), blood glucose, and height and weight.

A health risk self-assessment an assessment of relevant behaviors. Case management for each woman involved will also go through a stage of change assessment and assessment barriers the woman may have to overcome. The case manager will also develop an individualized intervention plan. These assessments will be carried out through a six month behavioral time period. Lifestyle interventions will also be given (nutrition, physical activity, or smoking cessation) via community-based programs and services.

Besides the new services, EWM will continue to pay for a pelvic exam with a Pap test, a clinical breast exam, the teaching of a breast self exam and a mammogram. Every Woman Matters also pays for other follow-up tests including cervical and breast biopsies and other tests to diagnose breast and cervical cancer.

Study shows that Northeast is underfunded ate).

The study results are in and prove what Northeast Community College officials have long suspected: the Northeast Community College area is underfunded in comparison to other Nebraska community college areas.

Northeast, along with the state's other five community college areas, is funded through a combination of tuition and fees, state-aid and local property taxes. The amount of state-aid and property taxes each area receives is based upon a statewide funding formula that allows for a base increase of two percent each year. Based-upon funding concerns expressed by Northeast, the Nebraska Community College Association (NCCA) contracted with the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems (NCHEMS) to conduct an up the difference. "Because of our increasing enrollments and extremely tight budgets, there is an urgency to move forward with implementing these recommendations," Clarence in-depth review of the current Nebraska community college funding formula.

The results of the study clearly show that Northeast and Southeast Community Colleges are underfunded, according to Dr. Bill Path, Northeast president. The amount of underfunding for Northeast is estimated at $4-$5 million per year. "We have been very concerned about our level of state-aid funding," Dr. Bill Path, Northeast President said. "Now,' research shows those concerns are justified."

The study was presented to the NCCA by NCHEMS President Dennis Jones. Jones feels the funding inequity lies in the funding base, not the formula itself. Jones believes the base levels for both NECC and SECC were set too low when the formula was implemented in 1997-98. The base rate was figured on the 1997-98 audited revenues of the colleges. State-aid appropriations in subsequent years are all tied to the base year revenue.

The study recommends fine-tuning the funding formula for both Northeast and Southeast by adjusting their base year revenues by $5 million over a 4-6 year period. "According to the study, we should do that while leaving current funding in place and not taking funds from other institutions," Path said.

It was also proposed that the current fiscal status of the state be considered and that the two colleges not depend on additional state funds during the next two' years' (biennium) state-aid appropriation. According to the study, Northeast and Southeast should be given the authority to increase local property tax levies to make

BB The Wayne Herald, Thursday, August 22, 2002 Midterm report shows blood donor program is successful

On May 31st the Siouxland Community Blood Bank announced it's 2002 summer donor recruitment campaign, Heroes Unite, It's About Life!

The campaign was designed to help sustain the blood supply throughout the summer when blood donations trend down but the demand for blood goes up. The theme for the campaign was meant to honor not only the lifesaving blood donors, but community fire, rescue, and law enforcement personnel.

The summer campaign was design to help recruit blood donors by stressing community participation in blood drives. From June through September, the blood bank will conduct blood drives in over hundred communities in the tri-state region. To help make the drives successful, the blood bank asked city officials, fire, rescue, and law enforcement personnel to help encourage their communities to donate blood.

Katie Heggemeyer

Heggemeyer recognized for Who's Who achievement

Katle Heggemeyer of Wayne, daughter of Lydell and Joan Heggemeyer received notification for the 2001/2002 school year from the publishers of "Who's Who Among American High School Students" that she has been selected to receive honorary recognition.

Only one half of one percent of American high school students accomplish this level of recogniAs of July 31st, the Siouxland Community Blood Bank had 3,949 people register to donate blood in support of their local rescue, fire, and law enforcement squads. The donors registered for 159 community squads throughout the tristate region.

According to Janette Twait, blood bank executive director, "the Heroes Unite: It's About Life program has help to encourage communities to step forward during blood drives this summer. Typically, blood donations are lower during summer months while the need for blood transfusions increase."

The campaign not only helps to increase blood donations, but will reward a community's participation. One community will receive a sponsored, donated gift certificate of $1,000 to benefit local fire, rescue, and law enforcement squads. The sponsored gift certificate may be used for equipment and supplies. The winning community will be based on a participation formula, not population. For the campaign, blood donors are asked to register under their community squad's name to receive credit. Whether donors register at their local, community blood drive, or at blood bank headquarters on 1019 Jones Street in Sioux City, they can request their donation be credited towards their community fire, rescue, and law enforcement squad.

"Donating blood regularly not only helps to provide a safe and adequate supply of blood for local community health care needs, but also for national disasters," says Janette Twait. "Thanks to area blood donors, we have been able to help in disasters such as Flight 232, Oklahoma City bombing, Columbine High School, and 9-11." The Siouxland Community Blood Bank is licensed by the Food and Drug Administration, and accredited by the American Association of Blood Banks. They are also a member of a national blood system called America's Blood Centers (ABC) that collects approximately half of the nations blood supply.

It is a network of locally controlled, not-for-profit community blood banks that support not only their local communities healthcare needs, but they also network together to share blood where the greatest need is. This relationship is needed not only for disasters but also for ongoing community needs of healthcare throughout the year.

On a daily basis more than 32,000 Americans will receive blood or blood products, often in a life-saving situation. Annually, 4.5 million people would die without blood transfusions in the United States. The support of volunteer blood donors throughout the Siouxland Community Blood Bank's service area is necessary to provide an adequate and safe blood supply for our region.

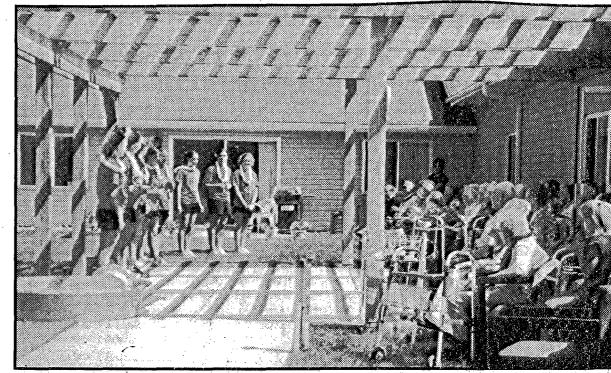

For more information call the blood bank at 712-252-4208, 1-800-798-4208, or visit the blood bank website at www.siouxlandbloodbank.org.

Editor's Note: This article was written by Morgan Caldwell, a senior at Daniel Hand High School in Madison, Conn. Reprinted with the permission of the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference and the Connecticut Association of Schools. "Hey Ref! What kind of call was that?" "Why don't you watch the game, man?" "Don't you know what offsides is?" Throughout the course of a typical soccer game, these are only some of the things you would probably hear if you were standing on the sidelines. Over-eager parents shouting insults and making their personal opinions known to everyone in the stadium, on the field and probably the parking lot. But it is not only the parents who contribute to the overwhelming amount of noise that is heard at a game; there are many other factors, both positive and negative, that add to this symphony of sound. "Good hustle, team, keep it up!" "Nice effort, you've got her!" "Great passing ladies, good work!" The sounds that our team makes are unbelievable as well. When players make errors and get down on themselves, there is always a team member to look them in the eye and say, "It's okay, don't worry about it, keep your head up and keep playing hard!" The support system we have is amazing and can be heard loud and clear. However, there are some comments that we hear which defeat the purpose of the game. When players argue with referees, or yell at their teammates, or even instigate verbal conflicts with opposing players, the sportsmanship previously felt is gone. While some players can make the game less enjoyable, parents can make any soccer match a terrible experience for payers and spectators alike. Granted, there are many parents who know how to sit still on the sidelines and only scream words of encouragement and praise to the team, but there are others for whom this concept is incomprehensible. They demand fouls, yellow cards and ejections. They insist that the referee does not know what he is doing; that they could do the job better. They yell at their children and some even at other's children. They hurl insults at coaches, both their own child's and the opposing team's. And they take away from the meaning of the game. During 80 minutes of playing time, sometimes all that we can hear is the commentary of the people in the stands. This is of no benefit to anyone on the field. We players are out there to have fun, to win games and to play our hearts out. But if overzealous parents and spectators are screaming on the sidelines, then how are we supposed to concentrate? They create distractions as they try to coach us from the bleachers, when in reality the only person who should be instructing us is the coach. Telling us how we should play takes away from our focus and our efforts and in turn causes us to play with less of the emotion and excitement that is essential to our success.

The parents tell us what we should and should not be doing, as if they know the game better than we do or our coaches do. But the reality is, those parents wouldn't survive too long on the soccer field doing what we do.

Thus, the message is simple; let us play. Sit down, offer congratulations on a job well done and remember that it is not always as easy as it looks out there. Offer us words of motivation; positive words of recognition and praise, not negative criticism that can deflate the confidence necessary for even the most talented players to succeed. When we hear you cheering for us, we are inspired to play that much harder.

So please, respect what the players, coaches and referees are doing; and just let us play the game. It is what we are there to do.

For families 4-H teaches commitment

Commitment is an act of committing. For families this means that they place a high priority on spending time together and are dedicated to the well being of their family. It means trusting one another, being honest, dependable and faithful. It also means sharing.

The benefits of long-term commitment are considerable. If families can work to be committed to one another they can count on each other, have a safe place to think through choices and have help in making decisions that keep with their values. Family commitment is also the key to developing the memories that last a lifetime, because when families are committed they spend time together and make those memories.

Maintaining strong family commitment is not easy. Demands of all kinds pull us away from our family. Making family a priority and sticking to it takes work. After all is it a commitment!

4-H works to help families build commitment. Projects enable families to work together and spend time together. 4-H families credit the 4-H program for buildlasting memories.

Commitment to the family is the key to this, because the memories are made when the family is spending time together.

4-H allows families to learn together, play together and win/lose together. Families must realize that all of these issues center around the commitment to helping their child grow and should not be manipulated in any way. Commitment to making your family strong means helping everyone learn the values of life. Often times families feel so committed that they do acts that don't show character.

Commitment in its purest form means family members are displaying good character and making good choices when it comes to their family. 4-H works to build in its members and their families commitment by encouraging them to complete their projects, meet deadlines and follow through on responsibilities.

The commitment 4-H teaches enables members to grow into committed adults. It must be remembered that everyone can be committed to something, but to build a strong family, the commitment* needs to be to your family. 4-H allows families to be a part of the program together, enabling the family to come first because you are spending time with each other.

Commitment takes work; the 4-H program works to teach commitment as well as encourage family commitment; helping families achieve one of the six qualities of strong families.

NU Veterinary Diagnostic Center busy with West Nile testing

West Nile Virus testing is keeping pathologists and staff busy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Veterinary Diagnostic Center.

The center has been flooded with dozens of bird and horse samples arriving every day, said David Steffen, director of the center. The center began testing horses last week and by Aug. 15 was testing 28 horse serum samples, he said. Testing the serum takes two to three days, Steffen said.

Prior testing was referred to the National Veterinary Sciences Laboratory in Ames, Iowa, but the high infection rate revealed in initial tests prompted a more rapid response testing of horse serum in Lincoln Aug. 11, he said. Samples will be set up each day as long as the incidence of new horse cases remains high, Steffen said.

"I would hope we're heading into the peak of the outbreak now as evidence of the virus is being found across the state," he said.

Three birds tested positive for the mosquito-borne virus in Lancaster County in June and July, signaling the disease's arrival in the state. A Lancaster County mule was the first confirmed equine case in August. By the middle of the month, cases were confirmed in 27 Nebraska counties. The lab is receiving as many as 40 bird samples a day, up from about five a day earlier this summer, said Grasso Ebako, NU extension and diagnostic poultry veterinarian.

Testing has forced Ebako and other workers to spend extra hours at the center. Ebako said he works an average of 13 hours every day and has stayed as late as 3 a.m. to keep up with the workload.

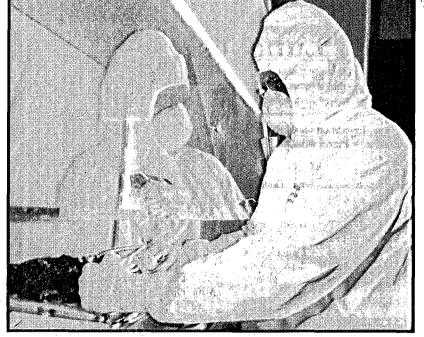

"It's been overwhelming," he said.

The extra work also has forced postponement of some other activities planned as equipment and staff have prioritized West Nile Virus testing during the epidemic, Steffen said. The center tests all bird samples in Nebraska under contract with the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Servićes. More than 300 birds have been tested since September 2001, Ebako said.

The center anticipated the arrival of the virus in Nebraska, Ebako said.

"We've been doing surveillance for the last three years and we were expecting it (the virus) this summer," Ebako said. "When reports indicated the virus was approaching Nebraska, we had the equipment and procedures in place.'

Grasso Ebako, extension and diagnostic poultry veterinarian at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, wears protective gear as he prepares a dead crow for a necropsy to test for the West Nile Virus at the Veterinary Diagnostic Center on East Campus.

Steffen said cases will continue coming in until the first hard freeze, which will diminish mos-infected horses seen in the last 10 davs. Horses need to be protected from exposure as much as possible and owners should assume the virus and mosquitoes are present statewide, Steffen said. Horse owners should discuss vaccination of their animals with a veterinarian, he said.

"If we have a late frost and mild winter, vaccination this year may still be beneficial this year," Steffen said.

The center prepared for the West Nile Virus by adding a biosafety cabinet for handling infected birds, which reduces risks of human exposure, and by adding equipment for polymerase chain reaction testing, which detects the viral RNA or genetic material, Steffen said.

Positive test results help track the virus.

"Our effort in testing makes a big difference in the sense that we can identify which counties in the state have the virus present.' Ebako said.

Identifying counties helps warn residents to take precautions against mosquitoes, Ebako said. Public health officials will monitor mosquito populations and infection rates and may control mosquitoes if risk to humans increases, he said.

"It's very, very serious," Ebako said. "The virus has gotten so much media attention because of its human implications. If birds and horses keep coming up positive, it means people have to be very careful."

Clinical signs of the West Nile Virus in horses often can be confused with other diseases, which could be dangerous for humans, Steffen said.

These signs can include stumbling, weakness or paralysis of hind limbs, muscle tremors and other neurologic symptoms. Sometimes the animals cannot get up and fever is inconsistent, he said.

"The clinical symptoms are similar to those of rabies," Steffen said.

"We need to rule out rabies to make sure owners aren't being put at risk by handling the horse."

No human cases of the West Nile Virus have been reported in Nebraska.

The National Veterinary Sciences Laboratory in Ames, Iowa, and the Kansas State University College of Veterinary Medicine in Manhattan, Kan., also have tested horses from Nebraska. The Veterinary Diagnostic Center is part of NU's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Growth success depends on careful selection

Gardeners save see for a variety of reasons. Whether it's to save money or preserve family heirloom varieties passed down for generations, saving seed can be a gratifying experience if seed is selected and saved correctly.

The growth success of next season's plants depends on what kind of seed is saved. For best results, save from self- or open-pollinated plants, such as non-hybrid tomatoes, peppers, carrots, lettuce, spinach, squash, cucumbers and melons. Zinnias, marigolds, bells of Ireland, celosia, purple coneflower, sunflower and basil also are good examples.

Seed from self-pollinated plants is easiest to save, but with a little effort, you can raise pure seed from out-crossing plants. Members of the squash family must be hand-pollinated to retain purity. Wind-pollinated plants such as lettuce and spinach should be isolated by distance or by only allowing one cultivar to flower and produce seed.

Avoid saving seed from hybrids, which are made by crossing two

When seed from the hybrid plant is saved and planted, almost anything can result. The variability of genes passed on to the next generation will produce plants very dif-

care. Dry seeds need to be mature, free of moisture and winnowed, or separated from chaff and other days. Fermentation speed depends on temperature. Good seed will sink to the bottom and a moldy scum layer will float on top. Pour off the scum, place seed into a sieve and rinse well. Rub the seeds on the mesh to remove any leftover bits of pulp. Lay seed out to dry in a dish. as it will stick to paper towels. Once dry, place in a labeled envelope or other container and store in a cool, dry place.

Wakefield Flood Control Levees

The Wakefield Flood Control Levee was dedicated in a special ceremony on September 22, 2001. This completed project has now removed the city of Wakefield from the 100year floodplain and will protect it for years to come.

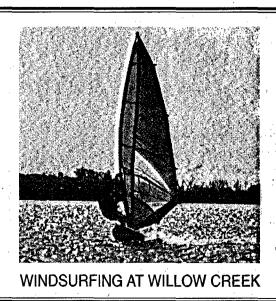

The Logan Creek Basin contains approximately 1,019 square miles in Northeast Nebraska. Wakefield sustained major damage in 1940 and 1971 from flooding of Logan Creek, which runs along the northern limits of town.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers studied the feasibility of a flood control project in 1971. The city of Wakefield applied for funding from the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission (now the Nebraska Department of Natural Resources-NDNR) in December 1997. The city applied for Hazard Mitigation funds from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) in late 1998. The application for funds was approved in January 1999. Construction began in 2000 and was completed in 2001.

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) was one of several partners involved in this project including: the city of Wakefield, FEMA, NDNR, SIMPCO, JEO Consulting Group, Inc., Porter Construction, Nebraska Department of Roads, landowners and citizens of Wakefield. The two-mile long earth fill levee is located along the north and east sides of town. The levee met the goals of the city and came in under budget.

Reading keeps us busy Livestock Market Report

The Wayne

Herald

Also, a book collector. That's me. My sis gave me a shirt once that said, "So many books. So little time. " My thoughts, exactly.

I also enjoy reading newspapers. Here's where the Big Farmer and I can agree; although he reads them more thoroughly. I've had to learn to skim just to keep up. But he reads everything, including the ones he missed, when in the hospital. At least it doesn't take much to keep us entertained.

I'm almost finished with the Bess Streeter Aldrich books. There is one more, "Spring Came on Forever", which I read as a teenager and need to re-read. I finished "A White Bird Flying," the sequel to "A Lantern In Her Hand," last week.

Mike brought home the latest Mitford book from the store on Thursday, on loan to me from one of the partners. I finished it last night, at 10 o'clock.

In case you haven't yet discovered the Mitford books, I suggest Bibliophile: a lover of books. a quick trip to the library or to the nearest book store. We Mitford lovers wait just as anxiously for the next installment as do fans of

Harry Potter.

When I was still working full time as a nurse, there were three people in the Nebraska City office who were already following the adventures of Father Tim in the village of Mitford, North Carolina. They kept telling me I needed to read them, too; I kept saying I didn't have time for fiction.

They gave me the complete set as a retirement gift. And I nearly lost my eyesight that summer staying up late to read them.

Father Tim is a 60-year-old Episcopal priest; and Mitford is a typical small town, filled with unforgettable characters. The author, Jan Karon, lives in Blowing Rock, N.C. She throws in scripture and literature liberally between word pictures of the shops, businesses, and people that make up Mitford.

Father Tim's mantra is "I can do all things through Christ, who strengthens me," and his prayer that never fails is "Thy will be done." He is constantly adopting: a scruffy black Lab, a boy from a mountain ghetto, a schizophrenic lady, an ex-con, you name it.

If I don't get the Farm House totally clean before the next visitors, due this Wednesday, it's all the fault of Mitford. And I'm not even sorry. It was worth it.

Quarter Scale Tractor Team prepares to build next tractor

Nebraska students will combine cash; time, steel and sweat to design and build its fifth quarter scale tractor this fall.

A team of University of hands-on experience, said Leonard Bashford, quarter scale tractor team adviser and Nebraska tractor test laboratory director.

said. The team usually includes students in agricultural engineering, mechanized systems management and biological systems engineering, Bashford said.

The team works all year to complete the tractor, testing its design and power at tractor pulls and other competitions. They also show off past tractors at Big Red Welcome, the Nebraska FFA convention and home football games, Bashford said.

The team puts education into practice in the real world, said Tom Person, team member `and senior in mechanized systems management.

"Students can learn a lot in the classroom but hands-on experience also is needed," Person said.

AgVenture unveils new look

Lowell Schardt, owner of The Seed Source, the firm with marketing responsibility for AgVenture seed products in the northeast/north central Nebraska area, attended management meetings in Omaha recently.

At the meeting, John Cassidy, owner of AgVenture, Incorporated, introduced the company's new logo.

"Our old look had served us well for the company's first 19 years, but as we start our 20th year and grow into the new millennium the time is right for a new look; one that better reflects the personality of the company today and our growing position in the marketplace."

Cassidy explained that a bold, more up-to-date look and improved readability were keys in the re-design. "We also wanted to leverage the equity that we had built with our previous logo," he said. "That's why we maintained key visual elements from our prior look."

The sun and emerging corn plant will continue to be used, both as an independent icon and integrated with the distinctive AgVenture typeface. This adds an element of flexibility that the old logo lacked.

The Seed Source is one of 29 family-owned companies that market AgVenture seed products. "This marketing approach is unique to AgVenture," says Schardt, "and it gives those of us who market those products two very important advantages."

Cassidy explains, "First, the marketing companies select the hybrids they sell. These folks know the weather, soil types, crop histories, herbicide selection and application rates, fertility and other pertinent growing data in their particular growing areas far better than our staff at corporate headquarters. It stands to reason that they are in a better position to make hybrid selection decisions.

"Second," says Cassidy, "if the power of entrepreneurial spirit. Each is an independent business, setting its own pricing, maintaining its own inventory, creating its own marketing strategy . . . using their business skills and resources available to them at AgVenture corporate headquarters to run the business in a way that meets the needs of their customers. How well that's done determines the success

Calcium Supplements May Not Strengthen Nails

Calcium supplements help fight osteoporosis, and many physicians recommend calcium to be taken by women throughout adult life. Nails contain some calcium – about 1/800 as much as bones – and some persons assume that taking calcium supplements will cause the nails to become stronger or less brittle. However calcium supplements do not appear to benefit nail quality. According to a report in New England Journal of Medicine, researchers in New Zealand asked 683 women if their nails had become stronger or more brittle during the past year. Some of the women had been taking calcium supplements, and some had been taking a look-alike placebo. About 60% of the women in each group said that there had been no change; 29% indicated that there had been an improvement, regardless of whether or not they were taking the calcium supplement.

Otherwise, a combination of the two courses would be required. The school has already applied for a grant. The amount of funds available however, was greatly exceeded by the number of schools that applied. We will not find out if we will actually receive the money until October 1, 2002. Next year, they are increasing the amount of money available. Lori also had other suggestions as to where we could apply for possible grants.

Terry Luhr- Terry Luhr and Ray Nelson spoke on behalf of a large number of parents concerned with the increasing drug and alcohol problems in the community of Wayne. They will be holding a meeting on Thursday, August 15, 2002 for parents and teachers to come and address their concerns. They will also have educated individuals available to provide factual information. They hope to see the school back them in their efforts to cut down on the drug and alcohol use and if nothing else to educate parents and community members. They do not want the Wayne Community to be known for it's availability and increasing ratios when it comes drug and alcohol use. Denying that your kids will never get involved is the wrong way to go about it. Parents need to educate their children, recognize the signs, and get their children help if needed. Although it starts at home, kids spend the majority of their day in school. This is why the group wants the school to support them in their efforts. The hope is that kids will be steered in the right direction.

Faculty-Administration-

Building Principals-Dr. Zeiss- Dr. Zeiss presented the board with information on a rotary youth exchange. His name is Yun-Pei Hsiung. He will go by the name of David. Motion to approve the tuition waiver of Yun-Pei Hsiung for the 2002-2003 school year. Motion carried. Dr. Zeiss also presented the board with the summary of his survey done in the spring by all staff members, The surveys are done every year by each school. Mr. Lutt and Mr. McClarnen will have their summaries ready for the board retreat. Mr. Lutt- Enrollment is up this year. They will have around 310 kids to begin the school year. They will average about 60 kids per homeroom. Kindergarten has a total of 63,

First grade-66, second grade-66, third grade-57, and Fourth grade-58. In the past the lunch periods took up an hour time span. This year, because of increased number of kids, the elementary school will be adding a lunch period making the total servicing time an hour and a

Mr. McClarnen- As of the 1* day, a closed campus policy will be in effect. Kids will have to get permission from the principal and parents before leaving campus for lunch. Permission will only be given to the child whose parent gave permission. Meaning no friends will be going home with them, Friday, August 16, 2002, the Middle School will be hosting the Chamber coffee in the Commons area at 10 a.m. Mr. McClarnen thanked Dennis and custodial staff for doing an excellent job cleaning this summer. They received several comments on how clean the building looked.

Mr. Lofquist-SPED Status Report- Mr. Lofquist announced that Tuesday, August 13, 2002, an FBI agent would be giving a speech to the teachers and staff at 9:30 a.m. in the Middle School. He will be discussing items of concern on the Internet. Administrator days went well. After talking with other administrators however, he feels there is a need to address the legislature to alleviate the con-cerns about kids with disabilities being placed in the school system. The summer school-Jumpstart program went well. They were about 64 kids. The Title I grant funded the summer school program this year. Mr. Ruhl- Track renovation in underway. The rain has delayed them a little so the finish date has been pushed back. They ran into some complications near the starting lines when tearing up the old track. The equipment fell through a drainage hole that was not on any records. Luckily, it has been fixed and the sewer line was capped. There is still a need for funding. Cards will be given to teachers and staff for possible donations to the foundation. Superintendent Report: Budget Considerations: In listening to legislature, it looks as if the money the state pays to schools will not be paid from September 2002-December 2002. This nonpayment will create a cash flow problem. We may have to borrow money to pay salaries and bills. It also appears that the grant from the 'No Child Left Behind' grants will be less than from federal grant monies received last year. One of the stipulations in receiving the grant is to submit a school improvement plan. They have dictated the areas, but if you do not have money that can be allocated to these same areas, you obviously won't get the money. Census Report: Informational only. Adult Lunch Prices: Adult lunch prices for the 2002-2003 school year were raised by $.05. The student's prices staved the same Motion to approve the lunch prices for the 02-03 school year. Representatives for the American Red Cross presented information regarding Delibrillators (AEDs). Many of the larger companies have already purchased an AED and continually train staff to be able to use them. They hope to see many more places using them. The American Red Cross would provide the training, if the school would purchase such a machine. For staff alleady certified in CPR, a 2 hour AED course would be all that is needed.

New Business:

Early Start- Several people have heard complaints on how early we are starting. The schedule had to be this way in order to finish the semester before Christmas break. The only thing that could have been changed was to alleviate the Fridays off for tournaments. This would not have pushed school back very far and if you alleviate those days in the fal you would also have to do the same for the sports in the spring. Next year should back up some due to the calendar dates and where things fall. All teachers and staff were given the opportunity to voice there input at the time. Levy exclusion - The levy is money that was actually lost last year. The levy allows us to take an exclusion and raise income by that much this year. Motion to approve the exclusion to the levy limit of $73,693.42. Motion car ied.

The auditors moved the capital expenditures for the Community Activity Center from the CAC fund to the Capital Projects Fund. We called the Water and Sewer bonds resulting in debt service savings and a reduction in our required reserves in these funds. It also necessitated the reduction in our funded depreciation line item. We called the Series 1995 and 1998 bonds and did a partial call on our 1997 bonds. With the issuance of the Series 2002 bonds we needed to add the debt service line item.

The budget details current and previously adopted, is available at the Office of the City Treasurer. Citizens will have the opportunity to give written or oral comment.

NEW SCHOOL YEAR

The Wakefield Community School opened Monday, Aug. 19 with their annual flag raising ceremony. It was held at 8:15 a.m. on the east side of the elementary building,

Rev. Susan Banholzer of the Presbyterian Church delivered a special back-to-school message to the students, staff, family and community. The Veterans of Foreign Wars Post and Auxiliary also took part in the ceremony. Commander Alvin Sandell welcomed everyone. A flag was presented to the school by the auxiliary.

The Scouts and the Trojan Band also took part in the opening activities, and the students in the sixth grade rang the old school bell marking the opening day.

Following the flag raising there was an assembly for secondary grades and class meetings. Casey McIntyre is the only new face joining the teaching staff. She will be a full time Special Education instructor of students in grades 7-12. She student taught during the spring semester. She received her degree from Wayne State College in special education mildly/moderately handicapped K-12. She graduated from Central High School in 1998.

At Wayne State, Casey was active in the Student Council for Exceptional Children and in the intramural program. GOOD NEIGHBORS

During Sunday evening's August 11 events at the Dixon County Fair, three sets of good were honored. neighbors Recognized for their neighborly deeds were Alice Johnson of Wakefield, Densil and Mureil Moseman of rural Emerson and Marge and Faye Bock of Allen.

Alice was nominated for all her hard work in the flower gardens on Main Street in Wakefield, at the school, the Senior Center and the park.

In keeping with her career in teaching, Alice's garden at the school is not only designed for beauty, but also to expose the students to a variety of plants to learn from. Each spring in recent years Alice has accompanied sixth grade students to plant the flower boxes surrounding Eaton Field. Alice also lends a helping hand and enlists volunteers to do likewise to help keep up the numerous gardens surrounding the Haskell House. Her most visible projects are the Main Street gardens, next to the post office and across the street between The Fair Store and the theatre. The past two summers she has spent many hours planting and caring for the two sites.

Densil and Muriel Moseman were nominated for the good neighbor award for all the assistance they provide at the Allen Senior Center. These tasks include delivering meals-on-wheels, making coffee, preparing the tables for dinner and being handy with a hammer and screwdriver, and they don't shy away from cleaning tasks.

The nomination said, "The Allen Senior Center would not be the same without Densil and Muriel coming to the center."

Faye and Marge Bock were recognized for the assistance that they gave to an ill neighbor and also for volunteer work at the Allen Senior Center.

The nomination described the Bocks as "special people always reading to help and support organization and events taking place in Allen."

When a neighbor became ill during the night, the Bocks spent the night as reassurance for someone who lives alone.

Each good neighbor was presented a certificate in recognition of their unselfish deeds and a Good Neighbor Lapel Pin by Ak-Sar-Ben Ambassador, Steve Luhr or Wakefield.

HAND STITCHED QUILT Helen Muller, a resident at the Wakefield Health Care Center Assisted Living Apartments, recently asked family and friends to celebrate with her the completion of a quilting project for her great-grandson, Jaren Muller.

Jaren, who was two years old on July 11, is the son of Andy and Mindy Muller of Overland Park, KS.

Helen spent nearly two years on the project of love, overcoming several obstacles such as being hospitalized three times, moving from her home to the care center, and then moving to three different, rooms at the center.

The quilt was actually a family project: Eileen Krumbach, Helen's daughter and Jaren's great-aunt. selected millennium fabrics to be used in the quilt since Jaren was born in 2000. Eileen sewed the quilt pieces together and then asked her mother if she would be willing to hand quilt it.

Helen learned to sew from her mother, Hilma Oberg and also through 4-H sewing projects. She later shared her skills through work as a 4-H leader.

Her first experience with hand quilting was working with the Salem Quilt Group. Helen's first quilt project on her own was to hand stitch a quilt for her granddaughter, Heidi. The quilt pieces were assembled by Heidi's maternal great-grandmother, Anna Moller.

It is also noteworthy that at the age of 85, Helen also continues her interest in the Dixon County Fair. At the 2002 fair, she displayed a cross stitched bell pull. COMMUNITY CALENDAR
