Allen to pursue new school By Don Schmidt,

Superintendent, Allen Consolidated Schools

The Allen Consolidated Schools' Board of Education, in special session on Aug. 28, voted to issue bonds to construct new classrooms for the district. That decision was made following a public meeting on Aug. 27. One of the concerns expressed at the public meeting was the use of Special Building Funds and some of the case reserve held by the district.

In response to those concerns and trying to keep the asked for levy as low as possible, the Board of Education is committing $250,000 of the District's funds for the project and is asking the patrons for a bond of $1,995,000 which would result in a levy of just under $.20 per hundred dollar valuation.

In a letter from the State Fire Marshal, the School Board learned that all stairs and vertical openings needed to be enclosed with construction having fire resisted rating of at least one-half hour; two approved exists needed to be provided from each occupied floor; an approved fire alarm and sprinkler system as well as manual activation and corridors should consist of construction having a fire resistance rating of at least 20 minutes with self-closing doors.

In addition, the building contains radon and asbestos and does not meet ADA (handicapped accessible) codes. At the time the district quits working on improvements to correct these viola- eling would bring the building up to tions, the building would be closed in three years.

Last October, the district formed a Steering committee to help in studying and making recommendations to the Board of Education to resolve the fire and ADA code violations.

The Board hired Carlson, West and Povondra Architects from Omaha to do a study to bring the district into compliance and discovered it would take approximately $2,000,000 to remodel the existing 1918 building. The remod-

Wayne residents travel to Tanzania

By Clara Osten Of the Herald

Five members of Our Savior Lutheran Church in Wayne recently returned from a mission trip to Tanzania.

Pastor Kevin Ruffcorn, Senior Pastor of the church, Dreama Anderson, Darrel and Byron Heier and Debbie Peschel traveled as part of a tour arranged by the Nebraska Lutheran Outdoor Ministries, Nebraska Synod.

The group left Wayne on Aug. 10. Pastor Ruffcorn and Debbie returned Aug. 25 and the other three members of the party arrived back in Wayne on Sept. 1.

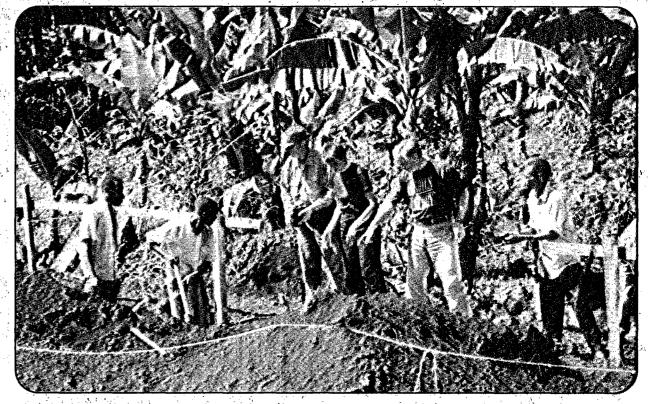

They traveled to Moshi, Tanzania, which is the city where the diocese office is located and stayed in the Uhura Hostel.

The group did a lot of touring with the diocese ministry sponsors and went to Our Savior's partner congregation in Kotela which is located on the lower slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro.

For Debbie, the part of the trip she cherishes most is "the relationships that were built. There were lots of smiles and the people were always welcoming us

The architects also gave the board a cost of $3,000,000 to construct a new classroom facility.

Following the study, the Steering Committee felt as though a building could be built for a figure less than what was being proposed by the architects. The Committee also had Dale McKinney from InVision Architecture and H.C.I. Construction review the figures and together they determined that a new building could be constructed for about the same figure that was given just to remodel the existing building.

From that information, the Steering Committee made a recommendation to the Board of Education to pursue a bond election to construct a new building.

On Aug. 27, in a meeting at the Allen Consolidated Schools Gym, citizens met to discuss the solutions to the issues brought on by the inspection of the State Fire Marshal last October.

Capital View Debate over gambling continues

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Eavesdropping is rude. It is also among the fundamental tools of the reporting trade. Besides, some people talk so loud that you need not strain to hear them - it's just a matter of paying attention.

So, the other day these two fellows were looking at magazines in a store and talking about going to Las Vegas. They moved quickly to the subject of expanded gambling in Nebraska.

They were for it.

One referenced opponents of expanded gambling as "know-itall SOBs," who wanted to tell other people what to do. He had a special feeling for those in politics.

He questioned the motives of politicians (he didn't use names) who say gambling could hurt people who can least afford it. At this suggestion, the other fellow chimed in.

"Yeah! They're saying Don't spend your money gambling, the government will spend it for you on other [things]. If I didn't pay so much ... in taxes, I wouldn't need to gamble!".

Both men enjoyed a sustained chuckle over the latter comment. Then they briefly denounced income taxes and sales taxes and property taxes.

"Hell, yes," said the first fellow.

"You can't get ahead; and now you've got these [people] who're afraid you might spend something before the government can get it! That's all it is."

The two went on, briefly, and bitterly. Their collective view, it seemed, was that government's concern for "the working man" was about as sincere as a tick's concern for a fat dog's health. The comment that nearly brought me to asking them for an interview, however, came next. One of the guys noted that "Some sumbitch was saying the other day that gambling is a tax on the poor. Well, ain't they all?" Both guys laughed and so did I, at which point both turned and looked at me as though I were eavesdropping. I decided to forego the interview. But I found the con-

the issue of poverty, but added that while the group was there, they were "almost overfed." "In addition to regular meals, we

Before the group left Tanzania, they were given a unity candle holder. The diocese wanted to stress the unity of the congregations and the working together of the groups. There is a possibility that members of the Kotela parish could visit Wayne in the future to continue the efforts of unity between the congregations.

"The thing I will remember the most is how gracious the people were," Dreama said. "Whether they had anything or not, they shared with us. Also, their faith is the center of their lives."

Dreama was able to spend time in a village and while there, went to the bush area to distribute communion to the elderly.

"The huts these people lived in were made of mud and were three to four miles off the main road. We also took kilos of sugar to give to the people. I was with Pastor Shayo, who was always singing. The singing attracted others who came from other areas of the bush because it was a great honor for them to see a white person. They gave me gifts, also. One woman gave me three eggs and another, who had nothing else to give, pulled up a plant and gave it to me," Dreama said.

School budget is approved

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

A special meeting and a budget hearing were held prior to the regular meeting of the Wayne Community Schools Board of Education on Monday night.

A public hearing on exceeding the basic allowable growth rate was held from 7-7:10 p.m. During this time, Dr. Joe Reinert, superintendent, recommended to the board they approve increasing the annual growth rate from 2.5 percent to 3.1237 percent (which amounts to a $32,655 increase).

A public hearing on the proposed budget was held from 7:10-7:20 p.m. During this time, Reinert said there would be a very tight budget as he had started with a 5 percent valuation increase figured in and ended up with just under 3 percent.

Reinert noted with the loss of state aid and reduction of incoming funds (the taxpayers of the old districts 51 and 57 pay less on the bond due to a moratorium on bond payment); the school has less to operate on. Reinert said Wayne Community Schools may be able to get through this year but will be in trouble next year as there will be a shortfall.

The regular meeting followed with a power point presentation on C.R.O.P. (Cosmic Ray Observatory Project) by Britni Bethune and Brady Garvin. (See separate story).

Afterwards, a presentation was given by Wayne Elementary fourth grade teachers Peg Lutt, Lori Ruskamp, and Sharon Olson on the curriculum they put together recently and are using in their classrooms. After receiving new guidelines on state social studies standards and assessments, the teachers researched and traveled all over Nebraska to put together a segment on the state. During their presentation, teachers spoke on student accomplishments and showed some of the books students read. Among items displayed were plant books students made. Other activities for students include writing Nebraska poems, learning about native Americans, creating an Earth lodge and making tepees and covered wagons, celebrating a prairie Christmas, and making a quilt.

Following, the board approved the increased allowable growth rate from 2.5 percent to 3.1237 percent.

Also approved was the budget for 2002-03. General fund is $3,216,850; Bond fund is $496,920; Special building fund is $165,417.80; and Total budget is $3,879,187.80.

The board also approved the contract of paraprofessional Abbie Diediker who is working 20 hours a week with two none English speaking students.

As for gifts to the school, safety vests were received from AkSarBen, and a check for $218.00 was received from Pamida Foundation for school supplies for students.

Approved, too, was the amended purchase agreement for the sale of the school building in Carroll to Ken Bethune.

Providing information on Carroll Elementary, David Lutt, elementary principal, said transition from Carroll Elementary to Wayne Elementary has gone well. Only one family did not send their children to Wayne. It was noted the pick up and drop off point for the bus route is at the auditorium in Carroll.

John McClarnen, principal at Wayne Middle School, gave an update on his building. Activities that are ongoing include Dr. Sweetland's class going to three parks in town taking samples of soil, etc. and running experiments to see how their findings can benefit the community.

He also spoke on the FRIENDS group. There are 92 members of the group and about 70 percent are from the 7th and 8th grades. McClarnen also spoke about the student news team at the Middle School. The group wants to put together a newsletter once a week. Rocky Ruhl, athletic director, spoke on a time-line for completion of the new track. He noted within 12 days there should be a running surface applied. Two days later, it should be ready for use.

Ruhl noted it is imperative to keep people off the track until it is completely finished.

Old business included resolution 2002-45 between the city of Wayne and Wayne Community Schools. The resolution states that the city will grant use of the softball fields and association parking and restroom facilities for practices and games. The school will mow and maintain the facility, restrooms, and grounds. The city will provide repairs to buildings, lighting, and fixed improvements at the softball complex, make available utilities and only charge for electricity. The board approved the resolution.

New business included discussion on AltonaEd, (part of Inventive Communications). Dr. Reinert noted records for student 'assessments, etc. are lacking and accessing this service could be very helpful. He told the board he feels they need to look into this and there may be a presentation at the second meeting of the month.

A number of school board policies were approved and they had first readings of other policies.

Agenda items for the next meeting includes second readings of Nebraska are becoming high-enerseveral policies, and a discussion of AltonaEd.

Executive session was needed, The next meeting will be Monday, Oct. 14 at 7 p.m. at Wayne High School.

Honor coffee recognizes students and teachers

An honor coffee was held prior to the Wayne Community Schools Board of Education meetings Monday night.

Recognized were Wayne High School students Britni Bethune, daughter of Ken and Pat Bethune, and Brady Garvin, son of Tim and Sharon Garvin, and their teacher Betsy Maryott, who were chosen to take part in the C.R.O.P. (Cosmic Ray Observatory Project) recently.

The Wayne High School Physics students and their teacher spent 4 weeks on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus studying high energy particle physics and cosmic rays. W.H.S is now part of an on-going cosmic ray research project.

School rooftops throughout gy physics research stations as part Astronomy at UN-L.

During their stay at UN-L, Maryott and students Bethune and Garvin, studied the physics of cosmic rays and prepared the cosmic ray detectors now being installed at the school.

Wayne High School joins 15 other Nebraska high schools currently participating in CROP. The multi-year project, managed by UNL physics professors Daniel Claes and Gregory Snow, aims to place detectors at all of the state's 314 high schools.

Cosmic rays are high speed subatomic particles which continuously bombard the earth from all directions of space. The origin of the highest energy cosmic rays is unknown, and remains one of the greatest mysteries of astrophysics.

When a high-energy cosmic ray enters the earth's atmosphere, successive collisions with air moleof the Cosmic Ray Observatory cules create an "extensive air Project (CROP), a statewide shower" - an avalanche of millions research effort administered by the of secondary particles which rain Department of Physics and onto the earth's surface covering areas as large as a city.

Nebraska high school teams will detect these particles with their rooftop detectors, record their data on a personal computer, and share their results with other schools over the Internet.

"Wayne High School students will be engaged in more than the cookbook style laboratory exercises usually seen in the classroom," said project co-leader Daniel Claes. "They will experience real physics research that extends beyond their classroom walls."

Project co-leader Gregory Snow says "The student findings will contribute to a growing set of worldwide data on cosmic rays. We also hope that participating in CROP will entice some students to attend UNL and consider majoring in physics or another scientific discipline.

CROP is supported by a $1.34 million grant from the National Science Foundation and additional funding from the University of Nebraska Foundation.

Wildcats fall to #16 UNK

by Mike Grosz Of the Herald

The Wayne State football team dropped to 0-2 on the season last Saturday night after a 29-3 setback at 16th-ranked Nebraska-Kearney.

The Wildcats held the Lopers to just 275 yards in total offense, one week after UNK registered 435 yards in a win at Nebraska-Omaha.

"We outplayed them in several areas," said head coach Scott Hoffman. "I was very pleased with the effort, it was kind of a moral victory. We need to find ourselves offensively, but overall made huge strides against UNK." The lone score in the game for the Wildcats came on a Nate Hale field goal of 27 yards with 8:27 left in the game, capping a 12 play, 69 yard drive early in the fourth quarter. Senior quarterback Justin Burhoop was the Wildcats' top rusher, with 15 carries for 76 yards. Zach Molackek added three carries for 34 yards. Burhoop did struggle throwing the ball, completing just 5 of 26 passes for 69 yards and one interception. Eric Kjar led the receiving corp with two catches for 49. yards.

Defensively, linebacker Bump Christensen had 10 tackles for the Wildcats, followed by Adam Long with eight.

Hoffman added, "We played smarter football overall and gained a lot of confidence. If we play that hard every game, we're going to win some games."

The Wildcats now have one week off before opening the Northern Sun Conference schedule at home against Northern

State on Sept. 21 at 7 pm.

"We're glad to have a week off," said Hoffman. "It will give us some time to fix some things we are not doing well. We need to work on the basics and see continued improvement.

Several umpires told our team that we played well enough to win the tournament, which was also gratifying. ## The Wayne Herald, Thursday, September 12, 2002 4B Dove hunters hit the fields for new season

Dove hunters in the Midwest hit the field September 1st.

Dove season is an excellent opportunity for hunters to sharpen their shooting skills and to get their dog in shape for the upland game season.

For those of you that have never had the opportunity to hunt Doves, you'd better be prepared to do some shooting.

In a national survey, the average hunter shot 5 to 7 shells per dove. This may sound like a lot of shells, but t really isn't as Doves never fly In a straight line so getting a bead on one of the little devils can be tough.

I like to scout the area I'm going to hunt prior to the season. In the evening, I'll go out and look for small ponds that might attract the birds. If the Doves are using the pond, you'll see them setting on power lines or fence lines in the l've hunted these dodging, weaving birds since the first season and found that hunting Doves can be a frustrating experience if you aren't in the right place at the right time.

Doves like to group up and fly during the late afternoon. Doves will feed heavily on weed and grain seed prior to going to roost for the night.

Once a Dove's crop is full of seeds, he'll head for water to get a drink before roosting.

I and my hunting partners like to set up around small stock ponds during this time of the day.

We look for a pond with bare ground along the waters edge as this gives the Doves a place to set and get a drink before retiring for the night.

Our most productive ponds are those that have Hemp or small grain growing near by. A pond with dead trees near by will also attract the birds. They like to set in the branches of the dead tree to rest and look over the area before going to water.

We try to find areas where there are several ponds in a section. The ponds we hunt are generally one or two acres in size and we put a hunter on both ponds in order to keep the birds moving.

It's best to hunt with another hunter on the larger ponds. Your hunting partner can act as a spotter for you, letting you know when Several hunters can hunt a pond safely, as long as you know exactly where the other hunter is and know your shooting lanes.

The shot size used by most dove hunters is 7, 81/2 or 9 shot. If you have some quail loads, they'll work just fine.

When purchasing Dove loads, don't look for the cheapest loads. The cheaper loads generally contain less powder and less shot, which puts you at a disadvantage when it comes to hunting Doves.

A Doves erratic flight requires a good shot and more importantly a good shot pattern to bring them down. Some of the cheaper loads, don't pattern well and don't have the power to reach out for the longer shots. I use Winchester 7/8 ounce shot in my 20 gauge and 1 1/8 ounce in my 12 gauge. These loads pattern well in my guns and help me to bring down more birds.

Many Dove hunters prefer the smaller faster lighter gauge shotguns. My partners hunt with 20, 28 and occasionally a 410 shotgun.

Light weight guns can be brought up a lot quicker and lighter loads won't tear up the bird.

take much for them to move south. Lower temperatures or several days of cooler damp weather will start the fall migration. When the migration begins, the birds will join together in larger flocks and the shooting can be non stop.

Once the local birds have moved south, migrating flocks will move in from up north, replenishing the bird numbers.

As long as the weather in your area doesn't turn nasty, you could have doves migrating through most of the season.

Dove season is a great opportunity for some early fall shooting. Who knows, if we bring along enough shells, we might even be able to bag a limit of these acrobatic little flyers!

Topically applied capsaicin has been studied in many types of pain, including post herpetic neuralgia (shingles), trigeminal neuralgia (tic douloureaux), rheumatoid and osteoarthritis, and psoriasis. Typically,, creams containing less than I part per 1,000 capsaicin are applied to the skin up to 4 times a day. Capsaicin may relieve pain by directly affecting pain fibers. A chemical called substance P is responsible for transmitting pain impulses to the brain from the periphery (e.g., skin or joints). Capcaicin first stimulates pain fibers and then depletes them of substance P. As a result, pain "messages" cannot be sent to the brain where they otherwise would be sensed.

AUTOMATIC DEBIT SCAMS

Scam Artists Would Like Your Bank Account Number Fraudulent telemarketers and scam artists are using new approaches to take money directly from consumers' bank accounts without a signed check, and without the consumers' permission, While automatic debiting of your checking account can be a legitimate and convenient method of payment for utilities, mortgage, or other monthly obligations, a scam artist with your checking account number can also debit your account, If a caller asks for your checking account number or requests other information printed on your check for "identification" or "verification" purposes, do not give it. The scam artist may use the telephone line in an attempt to get the numbers printed on your check that will give him access to your checking account. The caller may tell you that you have been selected to receive a sweepstakes prize and that the numbers on the bottom of your personal checks will confirm that you are the person entitled to the prize,

Once the caller has the checking account information, it is put on a "demand draft", which is processed by your bank much like a check.

Humane Society asks pet owners to do the right thing

Every year, an estimated 9 million cats and dogs in the United States are given up to animal shelters. And every year, 4.5 million cats and dogs are euthanized because no homes can be found for them. That number does not include homeless animals killed on highways or animals that starve to death or die from disease or violence.

The Northeast Nebraska Humane Society stresses that the best way to reduce tragic pet overpopulation is to spay or neuter your pet. This one-time expense can prevent hundreds of homeless animals. Contrary to popular misconception, sterilization is good for your pet. It helps cats and dogs live longer, healthier lives, and it eliminates or reduces the possibility of several types of animal cancers and diseases.

The Society, located just south of Wayne, is a nonprofit shelter for dogs, and would welcome donations to keep its doors open. All, pets are given full veterinary care, including vaccinations. Currently, the kennels are at maximum capacity, and more foster families and volunteer walkers are needed. Pets come to the shelter for two

Finding positive peers

How can you help your teen resist negative peer pressure? One way is to help him find positive peers! How? Encourage him to enroll in activities that have a wholesome, healthy focus. Start by Looking for Groups that Promote Personal Development

For example, sports teams teach kids self-discipline and teamwork. Clubs like Big Brothers/ Big Sisters provide teenagers with opportunities to practice community service. Photography classes or 4-H groups can teach special skills. And drama clubs or creativewriting classes give kids the chance to express themselves artistically.

Keep in Mind that the Best Groups

for Teens also have Adult Guidance.

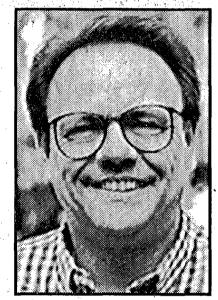

Caring, involved adults can make great role models who offer encouragement, teach skills and supervise group behavior.

Remember: If your teen is surrounded by friends who have positive attitudes and values, he is likely to pick up - and practice those values and attitudes himself,

"I Feel Better About Myself Now!"

"I came here when I was 3 years old and I got pink glasses. I was having trouble reading. My eyes got a little bit better as I got older, but I still needed glasses.

The kids at school used to tease me and call me four eyes, bug eyes, and that made me uncomfortable. I didn't like the way I looked in glasses. Dr. Jeff Klein gave me contacts and they work. I don't even know they are there. Dr. Klein is nice.

People can see my eyes now. Sometimes I forget I even have them on, and I go to push my glasses up my nose, and I'm like, where did they go? I don't think I'll ever go back to glasses. I feel better about myself now."

School year brings new set of expectations for all invovled

By Education Commissioner Doug Christensen

A new school year is here. The signs are easy when you walk the halls of any school- the hop on the faces of students, the expectations in the voices of parents. Teachers know what the anticipation on the faces and in the voices new to their classrooms means: Teach me what I need to know to make my dreams come true.

Like most years, this school year has begun rather routinely with one exception. The changes in our world are on everyone's mind. For teachers, those changes mean an even more urgent need to help students understand their world.

The responsibility is not just that of teachers. Parents and our communities must help, but, reality: Where else do our children spend six hours a day for 180 days each year?

Not to over dramatize the events of last September, as if anyone could, but 9/11 changed all of us, making children and adults question their safety and security in ways that were unimaginable a year ago. Will any of us forget where we were that day?

Our teachers always face more challenges, problems and responsibilities than most can imagine, But this year the job tougher. They must help their students understand what all this means. Who will engage our children in the search for meaning if not educators?

Who will guide them - without leading them - as they work to sort out feelings?

Who will help them restore their sense of well-being, their spirit and their identity as Americans? Who will help them understand?

While a lot of the public discussion about school and education focuses these days on accountability - accountability through learning standards and scores those standards, educators must continue to emphasize the importance of democracy, citizenship, character, responsibility, liberty and justice in our society.

Today it is not as simple as flying and honoring the American flag, asking our students to say the Pledge of Allegiance, making our patriotic symbols visible for all to see.

Teachers have a big job, one I'm confident they can and will do. They must teach that democracy is never done. Democracy is about what's inside each of us. Democracy is about our individual, and collective spirit, about how we treat people.

Our children need role models, and 9/11 has provided some of the best - American citizens, firefighters, policeman and teachers.

This year Nebraska teachers will be role models in their communities and schools, where people go about the business of teaching, demonstrating what it means to be a caring adult.

Educators will play a major role in how history judges us, in how our children and grandchildren handle these events and prepare for the future.

While they are up to the challenge, they should not be asked to do it alone: Community leaders, local business people, neighbors and parents must help.

Calcium Supplements May Not Strengthen Nails

Calcium supplements help fight osteoporosis, and many physicians recommend calcium to be taken by women throughout adult life. Nails contain some calcium - about 1/800 as much as bones - and some persons assume that taking calcium supplements will cause the nails to become stronger or less brittle. However calcium supplements do not appear to benefit nail quality.

According to a report in New England Journal of Medicine, researchers in New Zealand asked 683 women if their nails had become stronger or more brittle during the past year. Some of the women had been taking calcium supplements, and some had been taking a look-alike placebo. About 60% of the women in each group said that there had been no change; 29% indicated that there had been an improvement, regardless of whether or not they were taking the calcium supple-

Seventy-seven WSC students participate in the project. NENTA is the first and only of its kind in the nation. ## School lunches need variety

Add variety to sack lunches while keeping them safe and healthy.

Pack a variety of foods, watch calories, limit high-fat foods and choose foods with dietary fiber and low sodium.

Spice up ordinary sandwiches with different bread and toppings. Try raisin, pumpernickel, rye or cheese bread. Bagels, pita pockets, tortillas or rice cakes also add variety. Choose bread with more fiber and less sodium and fat.

Go easy on salad dressing, mayonnaise and higher fat spreads. Include some low-sodium, low-fat add-ons such as sliced tomatoes, cucumbers or salad greens. to keep sandwiches from getting soggy, pack add ons in a separate container and add them at lunchtime.

For a change, try a raw veg-, etable salad with strips of lean, cooked meat; fresh fruits and cheese, brown rice salad with chicken; low-sodium tuna fish salad; or vegetables marinated in Italian or herb dressing with Swiss cheese cubes.

Hot lunches also add variety. Use a wide-mouth vacuum bottle to pack soup, chowder, stew, chili, baked beans or casserole. These foods are healthiest when made with low-fat dairy products, whole-grain pasta or rice and limited fat and salt. Add flavor without salt by seasoning with onions, herbs and spices.

Compliment a sandwich or hot main course with at least one since they're low in fat, sodium and calories and also provide vitamins, minerals, energy and fiber.

Go easy on desserts and snacks that are low in fiber and high in fat, sodium, sugars and calories.

Amy Topp tension Educator 4-H & Youth

Try fresh fruits; low-fat cookies and crackers; plain popcorn substituted for chips; or homemade sweets made with less sugar and fat. Homemade goods can include whole-grain flours and oatmeal, shredded vegetables or chopped dried fruits for extra fiber.

Choose beverages such as lowfat or skim milk or 100 percent fruit juices. Vegetable juices may balanced with low-sodium foods. Avoid sugary drinks such as sodas, fruit drinks, punches and ades, which usually have very low juice contents.

Food safety is important in packing a sack lunch. Keep cold foods cold. Refrigerate foods such as hard-cooked eggs, salads, meat, milk and milk products until just before leaving home. Pack cold food in a chilled vacuum bottle or an insulated lunch container with an ice or gel freezer pack. Make sandwiches with cold ingredients. Refrigerate food until lunchtime if it can't be stored in containers that keep it cold.

Keep hot foods above 140 degrees and hot to the touch. Stainless steel or glass-lined vacuum bottles keep food safer than plastic-lined bottles. Follow bottle instructions for appropriate temperatures for storing foods. Preheat the bottle by filling with hot water for a few minutes. Empty and fill promptly with hot food.

Signup deadline approaching

The deadline to apply for 2003 coverage under the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) is fast approaching for certain crops, according to Brian Wolford, executive director for the Nebraska Farm Service Agency.

The NAP provides risk management protection to producers that may be affected by natural disasters. Eligible crops include commercial crops and other agricultural commodities produced for crop insurance is unavailable. Crops eligible include fruits and vegetables, aquaculture, turfgrass sod and forage crops.

"The final date to apply for 2003 coverage for turfgrass sod, Christmas trees and value-loss crops was Sept. 3, 2002. The deadline date to apply for 2003 forage crops, including alfalfa, hay crops, perennial forages, pastures and other grazed forage is Sept. 30, 2002, The 2003 application deadline is March 15, 2003 for most of the other NAP crops. It is important to contact your local FSA office for the exact deadline date for the crop you want to elect NAP coverage on," Wolford.

NAP coverage requires a service fee of $100 per crop, per producer, with a $300 cap per county, not to exceed a total of $900 per producer for all counties. Service fees may be waived for eligible limited resource producers.

"The window of opportunity for NAP coverage for 2003 is getting smaller. I would encourage interested producers to timely submit applications for coverage prior to the deadline date," Wolford said.

For more information about NAP and other FSA administered programs, contact the local USDA Service Center or county FSA office or website at www.fsa.usda.gov/ne

Remembering in many ways!

The Wayne

Herald

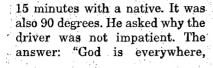

This morning, Tuesday, it is finally cool and cloudy. I've turned off the AC. Hopefully, I won't have to turn it on again this year. I may even be able to put the shorts away and get out the jeans.

SERENCE.

I know it seems we are coddling the youngsters when we dismiss school early. But I was in one of the local buildings 15 minutes before they were dismissed at 1:30 last week. And it was stifling in there. Plus, the BO could knock you over. How did we tolerate each other years ago? Of course, no one had air conditioning; and we were all in the same boat, I guess. I don't remember it was such a problem then.

The Sunday paper was full of news about September 11. And I read it all, especially the stories of heroism and kindness, I appreciated an article in the Parade magazine about an Afghan man who has lived in the U.S. for years. He went back this summer, and found what we have been reading about: bombed out rubble. He made it clear it was from the war with Russia.

And, he emphasized that the Afghan people are cheerful in the face of adversity. He calls it "cheerful serenity" and tells about being stalled in traffic for a good brother, enjoy life." What a philosophy. I wish I could adopt it.

Anyway, there are solemn church services and memorials planned, all kinds of activities; including all day prayer vigils. One I am especially intrigued with is the "Rolling Requiem," 150 choirs and orchestras doing Mozart's Requiem across the world at the same time. What an amazing feat. Music is still the healer. I think what the Big Farmer's cousin is doing in Tucson is the best plan. He's retired, and involved in Habitat for Humanity. They are going to build 11 houses tomorrow! Some of them worked all last weekend, framing and preparing for one big building day. I like doing something that will benefit others. We need more of that.

Here at the Farm House, the flag will be flying, as always. There will be prayers, as always. Mike will be at the antique shop, and I will take advantage of the day at home to clean!

But our thoughts will continue to be with the survivors.. I still get tears. I guess I always will. And the prayers will be for protection of our armed forces, our police and firemen, the airplane pilots and stewards, the FBI and CIA, the security forces of all nations, and especially, for our president and the Congress.

A presidential prayer committee was formed in the aftermath last year, and there are at least a million people praying for President Bush every day. He has been quoted as saying that he can feel those prayers. Let's bathe him in them tomorrow.

As harvest approaches, farmers will be working longer hours around heavy machinery. Unless safety precautions are taken, serious injury or even death can result.

Machine-related injuries are the number one cause of fatal farm accidents in Nebraska. Each year an average of 34 people die from overturned tractors. October is one of the most dangerous months because of the increased use of machinery during harvest and the distractions that many producers face.

During harvest, farmers can spend 12 to 18 hours or more a day working with machines. They are worried about deadlines and contracts and often are working without much sleep. Overturning a tractor, falling off the combine or driving a machine into a ditch are much more likely under such circumstances.

come, it is best for producers to take a step back and examine their situation to determine not only how they're going to ensure the safety of their crops, but how they are going to ensure the safety of themselves and those around them,

The following are a few suggestions on how to avoid or minimize harvest-related accidents:

• Get machinery ready for harvest as early in the season as possible to avoid late-season stresses and long days;

• Get as much rest as possible. If tired while working, take a 5-15 minute break.
