Van was found guilty on five felony charges in July related to the holding and sexual torture of a Houston, Texas man in the basement of his floral shop last December in downtown Wayne. He faced up to 85 years in prison after being convicted of first-degree sexual assault, first and second degree assault, false imprisonment and terroristic threats.

The 55-year-old Van is now considered a fugitive from justice and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Wayne County Deputy Attorney Chris Connolly said Monday afternoon, "this was not expected or anticipated."

Van is described as a white male, 5'9, 190 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes. He may be driving a green 1998 Dodge Caravan with a dent on the left front fender, bearing Nebraska commercial license plates 27-COMM-931. For a short time Monday, officials

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

It was an ignominious defeat, but Nebraska's loss to Penn State on the football field was probably as timely as such a thing can be. Think about it.

For lots of Nebraskans, the most that can be said for 2002 is that it. will be over in something more than 90 days.

Consider the old saying: "Into each life some rain must fall."

In 2002 Nebraska, hardly any real rain fell when it was needed, And when it did, it seemed to be timed so that it made fields muddy at the wrong time, or it provided Hyatt Regency conditions for breeding mosquitoes and their gift of West Nile Virus.

It's true, it seems. The time line of Nebraska history should mark 2002 with an asterisk, next to a drawing of a fellow holding his

The state's budget is a train wreck, due mostly to injudicious planning and the overall economy. While it is true that other states suffered far worse economic wrecks, "comparative misery" is hardly therapeutic. Nebraska's economic woes run the gamut - many folk are seeing local property taxes go up as aid to education and other programs go

In many election years, campaigns at various levels can at least provide a distraction or two, regardless of one's political persuasion. Not in 2002.

One cannot say that the suspense has become bearable because there was never any susno indication there will be any.

The latest research available in thing to worry about or complain this corner indicates that, if the about, what's the point?

There is no question about it. If the mass of Husker fans are to suffer the emotional slings and arrows that follow a defeat of historic, nightmarish proportions, 2002 is the "right" time for it.

Well into the future, when Nebraska fans gather to palaver, the mortifying loss to Penn State will be mentioned. That's when an exchange of the following nature might result:

"Yeah, but that was just a lousy year, all the way around. It was just one of those times, y'know?"

"Absolutely. Geez. There was the drought, there was the economy, there was West Nile, there was Saddam, and they even stopped making the Camaro!"

When it comes to the baggage of life, 2002 should serve as a packing box - the one you put all the junk into when you're ready to move on.

"Whaddya' want me to do with this?"

"Just dump it in that box. I'm throwing away all that stuff that I never needed!"

pense this time around; and there's History of agriculture is being explored

By Dan Pries, Farmers National Company

The Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce Acre Project is a demonstration of more than just the size of an acre.

The true "measure" of an acre is more than 160 square rods. Our acre, the single acre of the Acre Project, is just one of 283,520 acres that make up Wayne County, Nebraska. These acres, and others like them throughout Nebraska and the Great Plains, are the reason this area was settled.

Agriculture ultimately was the single reason for anyone to come out to the prairie. Churches. schools, banks, stores, machinery dealers and manufacturers all came as services to the fundamental supporting activity of this area. . . Agriculture.

Not only small towns developed out here among the acres, but also larger towns developed to serve as centers of distribution and terminals for the collection of the produce of these acres. It is clear that towns like Wayne or Hartington or Pierce grew to serve their surrounding farming and ranching communities. But how about Sioux City, Omaha or Kansas City? Stockyards, Missouri River grain terminals, railroads, the Kansas City Board of Trade, banking and insurance.

This photo shows a dairy farmer in Nebraska's agricultural history. Although methods of dairy farming have changed, agriculture remains a fundamental industry in the state.

All built on the business of smaller communities, which in turn sat secure on the firm foundation of the productive acres around them. Not only business, industry and communities were built upon what an acre of American Agriculture can do, but generations of families have in turn been raised up on what an acre is.

Agriculture is unique in being one of what I call the three "fundamental industries: Agriculture, Mining and Petroleum, these industries generate products that did not exist in the marketplace before. Each bushel of corn, ton of ore or barrel of crude is a new one, never before available.

Other industries process or service these raw commodities. What is extra special about agriculture is that our acre produces something that not only did not exist in the marketplace before, it did not exist at all. Mines collect ore and wells pump oil that has laid waiting, but agriculture takes sunshine, soil, air and water and hauls bushels and beefsteaks to town, literally out of thin air. This perpetual miracre is the solid base of our community.

The boundaries of Wayne County, Nebraska were defined and its organization legalized in March of 1871. Just in time to get busy and get the corn in that year.

acle blessing of our acre and every The moral to the history of our acre is not that times have changed, but rather that the fundamental potential of our acre has not. Year after year our acre, every acre, has faithfully done its part. The "measure" of our acre is no smaller today than in any of the years gone by.

small cockpit area (I could see why the pilots and crew are fit and trim). The bulk of free space is reserved for bombs and fuel. B-52 bombers have been used by the military for more than 40 years. but only the H models are still in the Air Force inventory and used by Air Combat Command and Air Force Reserves. Able to hold 20 bombs or more, the life expectancy of the B-52s is projected to be beyond the year 2045.

The simulators at Minot A.F.B. are for pilots and missilemen to brush up on their flying and launching abilities through test missions. In the B-52 simulator, there are radar screens and instruments to simulate actual flights. Some of the equipment is so sensitive, cell phones and cameras had to be left outside the area.

Everywhere we went, military personnel explained phases of operations and answered our questions (and we had quite a few). Everyone on the tour was anxious to learn about military procedures and personnel were eager to give explanations. While many officers went along on the trip, the highest ranking officer attending was Major General Roger Lempke, U.S.A.F., Adjutant General of the Nebraska National Guard, and Gov. Mike Johanns' Senior Military Advisor.

During a training demonstration, a two person team went through procedures step-by-step from a simulated intruder situation to launching a missile. Everything is done by the book in exact unison. In the event a missile would have to be launched, several steps must be performed at the same time ending with each turning a key simultaneously. The team works together in 24-hour shifts and is monitored through a two-way mirror. From Minot A.F.B., we re-boarded the KC-135 and flew to Vandenberg A.F.B., where we were briefed at the Missile Alert Facility and watched the launch of a Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile.

During the flight to California, I was among several were allowed to ride on the jumpseat in the cockpit. Nebraska Air National Guard Pilots Lt. Col. Gregory D. Love and Major John C. Kratt were nice enough to explain the many buttons, switches and screens (after auto pilot was turned on) found on their instrument panel. Traveling at 580 mph, we were at an altitude of around 36,000 ft. Out the window, I could see patchwork designs of the fields below and later snowcovered mountains.

True to the phrase, "It's a small world," Lt. Col. Love has ties to Wayne. His father, Donald Love, worked for the John Deere Company in Wayne up to the year 1956 when the family was re-located. Due to the fact it's rather noisy in a KC-135, we continued our conversation of sharing familiar names and places after landing in California.

Vandenberg A.F.B., north of Los Angles, is the third largest military base in the United States. At Vandenberg, we received a briefing on the launching of the Minuteman III Missile. (This missile's destination was about 4,800 miles away, near the Marshall Islands, and would reach its destination in 30 minutes). Minuteman Missiles are 60 ft. long, 5.5 ft. in diameter, weigh about 80,000 pounds, and can travel around 15,000 mph.

We lucked out and our daytime missile launch was delayed so it turned into a spectacular twilight display of color.

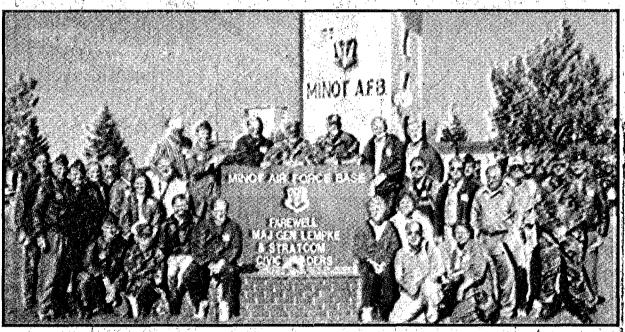

Wrapping up the trip, we were bussed to the launch site the next morning. Entering a highly restricted area, we saw the huge hole in the ground where the missile was launched from. Nearby was a 120-ton lid that fits over the hole. Everywhere were pieces of dried 'pucky' (a rubberized spray used on surfaces that come into contact with the extreme heat so the structure isn't ruined and can be used again). There was a slight smell of hydrochloric acid in the air.

Walking back to the bus, I took a good look at the land the base is located on. I saw ice plants and pampas grass and was told that wild boars and rattlesnakes inhabit the desert ground. Though I could hear the ocean nearby, I couldn't see it for the thick fog that covered the area (something common to this area every morning, I was told).

In fact, the fog (and a hydraulics problem in our plane), delayed our flight back to Nebraska. The fog finally lifted and we re-boarded the KC-135 for the return flight home. Settling into our cot-like seats, we buckled up and inserted our ear plugs (military planes aren't made for comfort but it wasn't too bad).

On the flight back, our plane was supposed be part of a refueling demonstration but because of plane problems and time constraints, it was cancelled. Out the back windows, thanks to Inflight Refueler SMSgt. Steven E. Minnick, we were able to see the boom come down as it would when refueling takes place.

Landing in Lincoln instead of Offutt so the plane could be worked on, a bus waited to take us back to Offutt. While the trip was certainly rewarding in educational benefits, there's no place like home and it was nice to be back on Nebraska soil. It's good to know our military shares our sentiments and guards our homeland.

Thirty-two university professors, high school teachers, businessmen, and media representatives, as well as military personnel, attended the Glory Trip that left from Offutt Air Force Base, Nebraska, last Thursday. The group witnessed the launch of a Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile and observed military strategic defense abilities.

Council nixes request

By Clara Osten Of the Herald

Debate over the keeping of pigeons as pets was among the agenda items that took place at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne

City Council. Dr. Steven Z. Knezevic spoke to the council, asking to keep ornamental pigeons as pets in his garage. He told council members he currently has four pair of the birds and several chicks. He also indicated that he was not aware that a permit was required to have the birds. Knezevic told the council that the pigeons live in his garage and he has built a coop on top of the garage so the pigeons can go outside but not get away. He said he has no intention of raising more than 10-15 birds and has no plans to sell them.

Brian Frevert, speaking on behalf of his mother-in-law, Lorrene Gildersleeve, told the council his mother-in-law objected to having the birds in her neighborhood for several reasons. He said she has asthma that could be aggravated by the birds. She was also concerned about the disposal of the waste and dead birds; the effect of spilled feed in bringing rodents to the area and who would be responsible for policing the numbers of birds.

Council person Lois Shelton said that if a request such as this were approved, it would be setting a precedent and "how do we say no to the next person who asks." Councilman Dennis Linster said that allowing the birds could create real problems and is a violation keeping these birds is "not being a good neighbor."

Councilman Verdel Lutt said

there is a fine line when dealing with this type of issue. "Who do we say to, 'you can't have a pet?' Someone with two Dobermans, for example who bark all the time is legal, but someone who wants birds for a pet, is not legal."

Following discussion, the council voted against granting a permit to Dr. Knezevic to keep the animals.

The council spent a considerable amount of time discussing the fee structure for use of the Community Activity.

Several members of the Men's Basketball League were on hand to discuss the possibility of allowing members of the league to play basketball without becoming members of the Community Activity Center. They noted that the league is the only one of its kind in the area and that a number of players come from other towns specifically to play basketball.

Bob Keating said he felt that the Activity Center would loose revenue if these players were only allowed to participate if they were members of the Activity Center.

Following discussion, members of the Recreation Committee told the council they would put together numbers on how much of the fees being paid by league members goes toward actual league expenses and how much would be available for upkeep and other costs at the Activity Center.

Bob Keating, chairman of the Community Activity Center of city code. He also indicated that Committee, presented an update on fundraising for the facility. He said he did not see any problem in raising the remaining $14,000 needed before Sept. 30. If the goal is met, the Community Activity Center will be awarded $250,000! through a Peter Kiewit Challenge! Grant. Keating said he has had' verbal pledges for most of the $14,000 and is waiting for remaining pledge cards to come in.

The council approved the Main Street Wayne request for funding for the current year.

Bids were awarded for Community Activity Center office and athletic equipment and small appliances in the facility. The bids were considerably lower than the $122,700 that was originally estimated by the architect. A number of items, including a washer and dryer and a cover for the floor, have been donated, lowering the total cost for fitness equipment ($57,654), office equipment ($14,376) and small appliances for the Activity Center ($6,134) and Youth Center ($4,645) to just over $82,800.

Plans were approved for a diese standby generator system for the city's well No. 10. The generator will be used for emergency situations and will be permanently mounted at the site with a fence around it for protection. The engineer's estimates for the generator are $60,000.

The council voted 7-0 to author rize an additional police officer position for the city of Wayne. Funding for this position will come from federal dollars.

The council's next meeting will be Tuesday, Oct. 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Wayne wins shootout with West Point

by Mike Grosz Of the Herald

In a game of big plays, the Wayne Blue Devil football team held off West Point 34-27 last Thursday evening in a thrilling high school football game at Cunningham Field.

For every big play and score West Point had, Wayne countered with one of its own.

Wayne head coach John Murtaugh summarized the game by saying, "I was impressed with the character and heart of our kids. We were able to overcome the big play and four turnovers to win."

West Point struck first on a 50-yard pass from Eric Brockman to Sean Blocher to put the Cadets up 8-0 in the first quarter. Wayne countered late in the quarter on a Ric Volk to Jon Ehrhardt pass, covering 14 yards to pull within 8-6 after one quarter.

In the second quarter, Blocher and Brockman hooked up again, this time on a 93-yard score, putting the Cadets up 14-6. Wayne answered back, with 2.51 left in the half, when Volk hit Brady Heithold on a seven-yard strike. Dana Schuett added a two-point run and the game was tied at 14-14.

But West Point scored with 1:29 left in the half on a 31-yard pass play to take a 21-14 halftime lead.

Wayne tied the game in the third quarter on a trick play when the Blue Devils pulled off a double pass. Volk tossed the ball to wideout Ryan Schmeits, who found Jon Ehrhardt across the middle of the field for a 55-yard score with :18 left in the quarter, squaring the game at 21-21.

Wayne took its first lead of the game with 4:35 left in the fourth quarter on a Justin Davis 24-yard run, putting the Blue Devils up 28

21. Less than one minute later, the Cadets responded on a controversial 58-yard strike from Brockman to Eric Eichelberger to make the score 28-27. A flag was thrown on the play by officials against West Point, but was later waved off, allowing the score. The PAT kick was blocked by Wayne, maintaining the Blue Devils one

Wayne put iced the win on a Dana Schuett 12-yard run with 1:07 left to make the final score 34-

West Point held a slight edge in total offense over Wayne, 438-429. The Blue Devils had 269 yards rushing and 160 passing.

The Wildcats committed seven turnovers in the game, falling to Osmond 56-34.

The Tigers took advantage of four Wildcat miscues in the opening 12:00 to take a surprising 26-0 lead. Winside was moving the ball in the first quarter, only to be stopped by a turnover every time.

Osmond started the second half with a touchdown to put the Tigers up 34-6. Winside countered on Jaeger's second touchdown of the night, an 11-yard run, to make the score 34-12.

After an Osmond score, Jaeger hit paydirt again, this time from 15 yards, to pull Winside within 42-18. But Osmond hit another big pass play covering 37 yards to take a 48-18 lead after three quarters.

Wayne Denklau won the Stock/Super Stock Shootout Saturday evening at the Nebraska Motorplex in Scribner.

Denklau won four rounds of racing with his 1966 Chevy II to take home the $350 first place check. It was his second win of the season and moved him into fourth place in the Stock/Super Stock points standings.

Wakefield Trojans remain perfect

The Wakefield football team remained unbeaten last Friday evening with a 21-7 win over Ponca

The Trojans used a balanced rushing attack and a newly discovered passing game to improve to 3-0 on the season.

Ponca put up the only score of the first half, a Tyler Uthof sixyard run in the second quarter, to lead 7-0 at the intermission.

But Wakefield came storming back in the second half and scored three times to pick up the win.

Luke Hoffman scored on runs of 13 and two yards in the third quarter to give the Trojans a 13-7 lead after three quarter.

A 21-yard pass from Hoffman to Aaron Lueth in the fourth quarter gave Wakefield extra insurance for the win.

"We finally found a passing game," said head coach Justin Smith after the game. "Luke was more settled and our receivers ran better routes. Defensively, we made some mistakes that we must fix in order to beat some of the teams we will face the rest of the season."

Wakefield had 308 yards in offense while holding Ponca to just 150.

The Trojans won the game despite four fumbles and one interception.

Offensively, Toan Nguyen returned from an injury earlier this year to lead the Trojans in rushing with 85 yards on 19 carries. Hoffman added 63 yards on 19 carries and two scores.

Throwing the ball, Hoffman was 6 of 14 for 149 yards and one touchdown.

Jeff Banholzer led the team in receiving with three catches for 99 yards. Aaron Lueth had two grabs for 17 yards and a score while Zach Dolen added a catch for 33 yards.

Defensively, Hoffman was in on 21 tackles from his linebacker position. Banholzer followed with nine.

Smith added, "we are coming together and will be a very solid team if we can fix our errors in technique and assignment responsibilities."

Wakefield will take a 3-0 record into Friday's homecoming game against Winnebago with kickoff set for 7 pm at Eaton Field.

Habitat and food plots ... plant them now!

Over the years, we've destroyed wildlife habitat at an alarming rate. Houses, schools, malls, and parking lots now sit on spots that at one time were some of the finest habitat and hunting spots around.

As most outdoorsmen and women know, with out habitat, there isn't any wildlife.

Planting of food and nesting plots has become very important to having and holding wildlife in an

With the help and advice of Ron Edwards of Nature's Own, I've planted several plots and nesting areas for upland game, turkey, deer and ducks and I know it makes a big difference in the number of critters that we see on these areas as compared to what we had before we planted the plots.

Recently, I talked with Ron about planting a food or nesting plot in the fall.

Ron indicated, " fall is a great time to plant a food plot! The reasons being, you've got less weed pressure, so you don't have to worry about weed control. In the fall you'll get more rain and this along with the cooler temperatures medical supplies mailed to you.

makes it perfect for starting a plot. The first thing you want to do is to get a soil sample, this will tell you what's lacking in your soil and results back.

Ground prep would be the same as it was for planting a spring plot, be sure to follow the recommendations when you get your test you'll need to work the soil up so that you have a good seed bed, put down the seed, work it into the soil with a disk and then if at all possible, compact the soil."

I think that one of the biggest plant large to attract game, not according to Ron, "food plots as small as _ acre can be very effec-

Don't make your plots too large as you won't be able to hunt the entire plot if it's to big.

Plant multiple smaller plots on your property and you'll have several places to hunt, be able to hunt different areas when wind conditions change and be able to cover the entire food plot."

In conversations with Ron and by watching game feed in our plots, I've found that good food plots should contain more than one type of plant.

Different species seem to prefer different plants, but there are certain plants that appeal to all species of wild game & birds.

Edwards indicated that, "a good food plot should contain forage grains, native grasses, legumes and forbs.

All of Natures Own food plot mixtures contain seeds to grow these essential plants plus others plants that we include to attract a specific species. Our Big Tom Turkey Mixture is set up to attract turkeys. The Grazing Trophy Buck Mixture contains seeds that will produce plants that will attract deer.

Our seed mixtures contain seeds that will produce plants that these animals not only like, they are plants that will give them the nutrients that the animal needs to become healthy strong animals and survive the rigors of mating and the changing weather conditions that make it tough for wildlife to find sufficient food to survive.

In order for deer to grow large racks, they need to have a good forage base and the right nutrients. misconceptions on food plots is that It's a good idea to also have minerhunters feel that they you need to al feeding stations along with your food plots. These mineral and vitamin supplements will give deer the extra nutrients needed to grow larger racks."

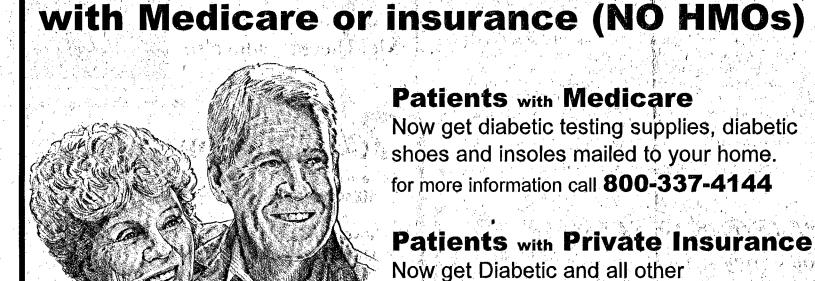

Mineral and vitamin supplements should be fed year round. This will ensure that the deer get the needed minerals throughout the year. There are several wavs that you can provide these supplements. The most popular ways are; blocks or granulated. I've tried both and find that the granulated form works best for me he granulated form is easier for deer to extract from the site than those in the block form.

Food plots and mineral feeding stations are an excellent way to help to develop healthy large racked deer and other wildlife species!

These things along with a management program that allows the smaller younger bucks to grow to trophy size and that also brings your buck to doe ratio in check will help to make your hunting area better each season.

Habitat is the key to healthy wildlife numbers and by planting food plots, adding mineral and vitamin stations you'll insure that wildlife will have a good year around food source and the supplements that the bucks will need to develop trophy racks.

If you'd like more information on planting food plots and establishing mineral supplements go to Nature's Own web page at www.habitatseeds.com

Herbs for Health Pepper Extract for Pain: Capsaicin

Many people use capsaicin for chronic pain but do not realize it is an herbal extract. Capsaicin is the active component of Capsicum annum - the common cayenne pepper. In the tropics the plant can grow as a bush to a height of 3 feet. The pepper it produces technically is a berry. Capsaicin causes the Capsicum berry to be "hot," pungent, and irritating.

Topically applied capsaicin has been studied in many types of pain, including post-herpetic neuralgia (shingles), trigeminal neuralgia (tic douloureaux), rheumatoid and osteoarthritis, and psoriasis. Typically,, creams containing less than 1 part per 1,000 capsaicin are applied to the skin up to 4 times a day. Capsaicin may relieve pain by directly affecting pain fibers. A chemical called substance P is responsible for transmitting pain impulses to the brain from the periphery (e.g., skin or joints). Capcaicin first stimulates pain fibers and then depletes them of substance P. As a result, pain "messages" cannot be sent

The Kinder Morgan Foundation has donated over $1 million to youth programs in Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado since it began the KM For Kids Program in 1996.

"We have firmly established KM For Kids as a vital program in support of youth throughout our retail service territory because we believe children are our most valuable natural resource. Our recent contribution to Winside is a good fit with the program and we are extremely pleased to be able to help, Jeff Gubbels said.

The Kinder Morgan Foundation also receives strong support from the program's Community Advisory Committees in each town. These committees help the Foundation determine which programs to fund through KM For Kids. Committee members, who generally serve two-year terms, make recommendations on donations for programs in their communities.

The Kinder Morgan foundation designed the program to be flexible to meet the different needs of each community. Donations can be made to a variety of programs benefiting youth such as summer reading programs, safety fairs and art programs.

Calcium Supplements May Not Strengthen Nails

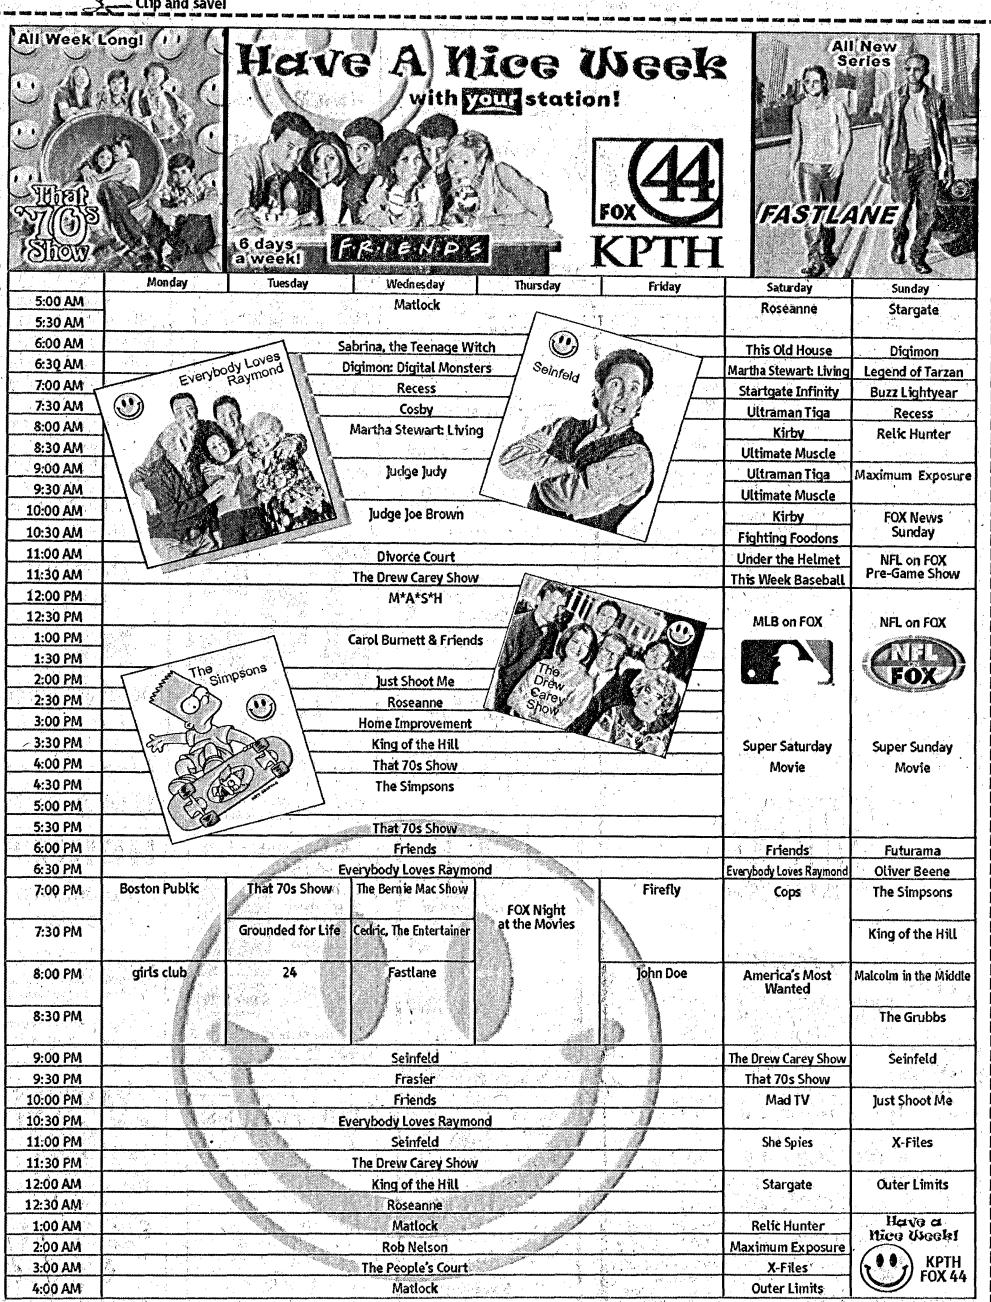

Calcium supplements help fight osteoporosis, and many physicians recommend calcium to be taken by women throughout adult life. Nails contain some calcium – about 1/800 as much as bones – and some persons assume that taking calcium supplements will cause the nails to become stronger or less brittle. However calcium supplements do not appear to benefit nail quali-

According to a report in New England Journal of Medicine, researchers in New Zealand asked 683 women if their nails had become stronger or more brittle during the past year. Some of the women had been taking calcium supplements, and some had been taking a look-alike placebo. About 60% of the women in each group said that there had been no change; 29% indicated that there had been an improvement, regardless of whether or not they were taking the calcium supplement.

4-H teaches communication

Successful families communicate about topics common to everyone, by identifying problems and discussing how to solve them together.

ject their child from every disappointment, the child has not learned an important life skill and things could be very difficult for them later on when they face life's

Strong families also spend time talking with and listening to one another just to stay connected. Most importantly, families talk about everyday happenings in their lives, problems they may have encountered and successful moments. these conversations can reveal important information which helps smooth out the bumps of family living.

With today's busy lifestyles, these conversations don't just happen. We must work at making them happen. When 4-H is part of family life, there is a common thread that every family member can talk about. In 4-H, there are opportunities to practice communication skills.

communication occurs in many different ways, some of which need to be learned. 4-H provides families with opportunities to practice this life skill in a learning environment. Following are some important communication skills and some 4-H examples or senerios that can help families grow, learn and practice positive communication skills:

1. Share feelings: For some, it isn't easy to share feelings, but sometimes when we keep our feelings bottle up, they explode later on. Sometimes, people just explode first and think later. Neither is a good idea. 4-H families can communicate with each other and avoid either extreme.

When parents see a ribbon placing that is lower than anticipated, their first reaction is to get upset. 4-H'ers can manage disappointment better if they don't also feel that they have disappointed their parent. If you get a low placing when you show your rabbit and Mom ridicules the judge or snaps at you for forgetting the name of the breed, it can be pretty rough. a more positive way to communicate disappointment is if, instead, parents would say, "We were expecting a higher placing, weren't we. Are you okay? Let's work a little more on that showmanship next

2. Being Able to Compromise. Sometimes we get so involved in what we're working on that we think that others should change to accommodate us. but being able to make choices based on compromise is an important skill for everyone to learn. Part of compromise is learning to deal with disappointment. If adults try to pro-pointment, the child has not learned an important life skill and things could be very difficult for them later on when they face life's disappointment. In 4-H we can practice handling disappointments as a family. An example might be: If the bunnies are sick, you can't take them to the fair. It's not fair either to the bunnies or to the other 4-H'ers bunnies. A compromise would be to help the 4-H member understand "I can't be in the rabbit show, but that will give me a chance to watch the dog show."

3. Playfulness. Humor works wonders when stress builds up. Sometimes we are all serious and concentrate so hard that the job seems harder. Parents play an important roll in helping their 4-Hers learn to take things in stride and to see the lighter side. 4-H is a journey and a playful approach to communication can help families enjoy the trip and not dwell on the pot holes of life and learning.

An example of how this works in 4-H. "Oh, I can't clip this part. I'll never learn. The clippers are hard to handle. My hand hurts. Oh, no. I cut too much." Or, by using the more playful approach, "Well, Princess, I'm not too good at this yet. You may be the shaggiest calf at the show."

4. Agreeing to disagree. Sometimes we just can't reach an agreement with someone. Believing that we have to agree can lead to lots of hard feelings. But recognizing that we sometimes won't see things the same can really help. Mom loves style revue and wants daughter to participate. But daughter just wants to show hogs. Use compromise, playfulness and other skills, but eventually you will need to just agree to disagree.

5. Avoid blame. Is it anyone' fault that the things listed above happened? Even if it is, is it going to do any good to lash out? Which type of communication works better? "Mom, if, you hadn't gotten home from work so late last night, we could have hemmed my dress then. It's all your fault." Or, what about "Mom, I am so tired. I wish my dress was done. Is there any easier way to hem?" This is much more likely to result in a hemmed dress and a better learning experience.

4-H is about learning the lessons in life as a family. And throughout the process, we can learn to communicate well, and in a manner which will lead to good experiences and fond memories for everyone.

Communication is also about expressing ourselves and sharing our ideas and knowledge of others. In 4-H, youths have the opportunity to practice public speaking skills, give presentations and to creatively express their ideas with the things they create. A good communicator is also a good listener.

Wayne to join CROP Walk

Come rain or shine, many residents are gearing up to join the Wayne CROP Walk to be held Sunday, Oct. 13 at 1:30 p.m.

the one, three or six mile walk will begin and end at The First Church of Christ with registration beginning at 1:15 p.m.

Organized locally, the Wayne Community City Wide CROP Walk has set a goal of 100 walkers and hopes to raise $3,000 to help stop hunger in the community and around the world, through selfhelp development initiatives. A portion of the funds raised here in Wayne will go to the Church World Service to help the hungry overseas and also to our local food pantry in Wayne.

The Wayne CROP Walk is one of some 2,000 interfaith, community CROP Walks taking place around the country this year under the theme "Our numbers make a difference."

Africa is one part of the world where CROP Walks are making a big difference - in helping people grow food for their families, in providing clean water to villages, in the struggle against the AIDS epidemic and in countless other ways.

- Many CROP Walkers this year will be wearing T-shirts depicting people in Africa carrying water. This image symbolizes CWS-supported water resource development efforts across Africa. In Madagascar, for example, this year some 25,000 people are benefitting from 40 new clean water systems constructed with the help of CWS and our partner, FIKRIFAMA, the Christian Rural Development and Water Resources Program.

For more information about the Wayne Community City Wide CROP Walk, contact Deb Hammer at (402) 375-2837.

This vision blossomed into a ministry, which has sent more than 560 semi-loads of supplies to needy people worldwide.

Quality schools and jobs, personal safety and affordable medical services top the list of community characteristics Nebraskans say are essential to their quality of life, according to the Nebraska Rural Poll.

The seventh annual University of Nebraska poll revealed some large differences between what rural residents consider absolutely essential to their quality of life and what's available in their communities.

The broadest gap was in quality jobs and economic opportunities. While 63 percent of respondents rated quality jobs and economic opportunities as absolutely essential, only 6 percent said they were currently present to a great extent in their communities.

A mix of economic, social and environmental issues led the list of essential characteristics. The on if we're going to maintain comfollowing characteristics were munity viability and quality of ranked as absolutely essential by life," said John Allen, the NU

Those in larger communities were more likely to say specialized services were available such as college classes, senior citizen programs and affordable medical services.

Pender Flood Control Levee

The LENRD also cooperated with the village of Pender to construct a flood control levee. Major flooding occurred in Pender in 1906, 1940, 1954 and 1971.

Pender entered into an agreement with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in February 1994 for a feasibility study. The final study was completed in March of 1996 and approved in September of 1996. Construction for the Corps of Engineers levee began in 1998 and was completed ahead of schedule in 1999.

The project includes earthen levees and concrete floodwalls. Total length of the levee/floodwall project is 14,820 feet. A large detention pond is included to accommodate interior drainage during floods.

Funding for the $5.2 million project was shared by the U.S. Corps of Engineers, the village of Pender, the NRC development fund, and the LENRD.

Dislikes automated calls

automatic voice messaging. You all probably have the same opinions, but they can't be printed in a family newspaper. This morning, I tried calling our current Master Card service line.

When we acquired this card, it was through Bank of Norfolk, whose service bank was Bank of Commerce in Lincoln. The Big Farmer and I had banked there during our college days, it was locally owned, had a good reputation, and we were pleased with the service. I had a household account at Bank of Norfolk because I was working in Norfolk, and folks there knew my face. You know, the way it used to be.

When we moved 11 years ago, I tried out all the local banks. The one in Weeping Water did not charge me a buck to cash my check and our office for Tabitha was there then. That's where I opened our household account. It's owned by a small town cooperative, with a good reputation and the people there are friendly and accommodating.

In those 11 years, we have watched national banks buy up the large banks in Lincoln and Omaha. We still had our Master Card with Bank of Commerce, and it was still locally owned. Until about 2 years ago. It is now a Wells Fargo bank. We don't mail payments to Lincoln, they go to Des Moines. We don't call a Lincoln number for information, we call an 800 number that goes who knows where.

Early this spring, I called that 800 number regarding a cash advance for an emergency repair bill at the FarmHouse. The gal I spoke to was in the state of Washington. But she said a check was on its way. It didn't come, and didn't come; and fortunately,

You all know how I feel about another check we were expecting arrived, and we could pay for the repair with that. But we didn't want the Wells Fargo check to maybe be lost in the mail, or stolen, so we called that number

After numerous instructions to press one, two, three, or four, we got someone who checked on that check. Seems it was never issued. Someone "forgot." We were relieved that we weren't going to be expected to pay it back, so forgot about it.

Recently, I paid for some airline tickets with the Master Card. Initially, we had flight insurance automatically if we used our card. I decided this morning to find out if that was still true. I called the 800 number. After getting messages in English and Spanish, I pressed 1 for English. An automatic voice asked for my card number, which is 16 digits. I punched them in.

Then it asked for the last four numbers of my social security number. I punched those in. The voice said it was an invalid number. I tried again; same story. I finally realized it wanted Mike's number, and I didn't have that, He's at the antique shop today. I waited and waited, and finally, a live voice came on. I asked about flight insurance with the card. He said he couldn't answer that and gave me another 800 number.

After the same rigamarole, and punching in the account number, this voice informed me that was a Visa service agency and gave me an 800 number for Master Card. I called it, went through the whole automated bit again, and finally got a real voice that informed me that they do not provide that insurance, but that my local bank might. I hung up and called the MC number in the yellow pages in Lincoln. A message informed me that the number had been discontinued.

So, I looked up Wells Fargo "directory for all bank services" in Lincoln and called it. A lovely lady answered, and I asked her if she could tell me if I automatically had flight insurance if I paid for my tickets with my card. She responded that she did not know, but would connect me to someone who did. The next thing I knew, I was hearing the same automated voice message I had had in the first place!

Obviously, I no longer have automatic flight insurance. It has taken about 30 minutes to determine this. And I will probably be fuming the rest of the morning. Thank goodness for AAA. Of course, they have already charged me a great plenty for getting me the tickets. At least, I get a real voice when I call there; and the agent recognizes me. So, I will get my flight insurance from them. And my rental car insurance, too, which Wells Fargo does have, for a price. Forgeddaboudit!

As an exchange student from Germany 1 have never had the opportunity to take band as a school subject. I am sure I will never forget the first time here I was in band - my first lesson in. an High American School. The huge practice room filled within minutes with many incredible students while I remembered the small village band of almost 20 people I was used to. When they started playing the pieces I was fascinated by the sound. I could hardly believe they had practiced them for only about two weeks. I think I had never heard such a big band playing so good before!

During the first weeks I was very surprised by the high motivation and ambition of those students. That students come to school an hour earlier to practice than officially required was for me, something new.

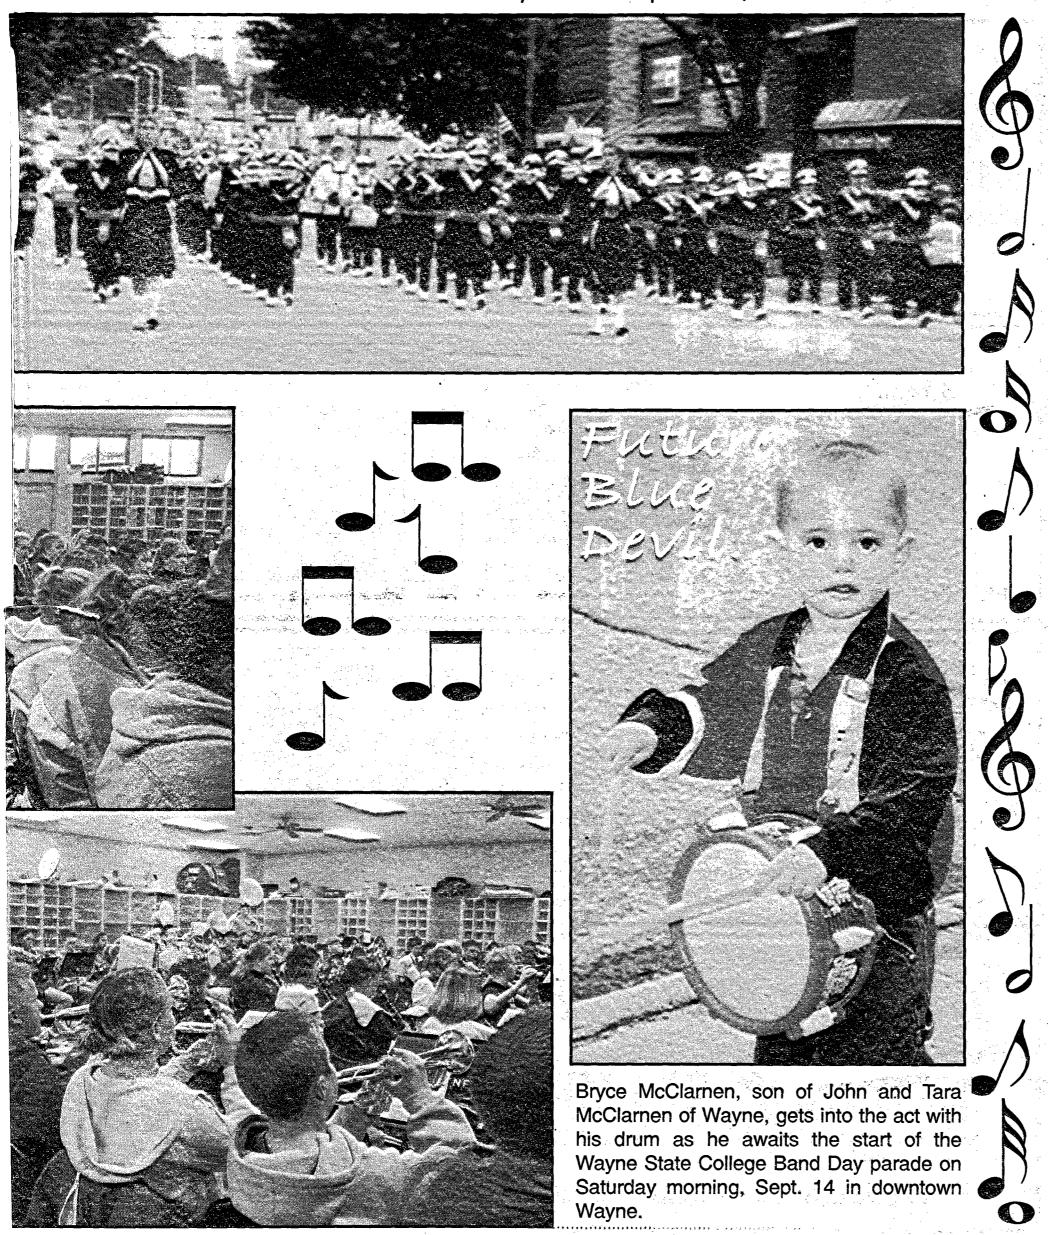

Field marching was a new experience for me as I have never been in a band doing field marching in Germany. At first I was very confused. I didn't understand the abbreviations of what I was supposed to do or where I had to start, but everyone helped me a lot. Luckily Charity never gave up explaining me all kinds of things!

I am very impressed what students can do with the right attitude and the right teacher. I am glad to have the opportunity to be in the Wayne High Band and I am enjoying my time very much.
