Police officers are kept busy

The Wayne Police Department responded to a fight call outside Riley's on Sept. 26 at closing time. The call involved a man who had been knocked unconscious.

Four officers responded and were faced with a crowd of up to 200 persons. Due to the unruliness of the crowd, officers called for backup and units from the Nebraska State Patrol and the Wayne County Sheriff's Office arrived to help disperse the people.

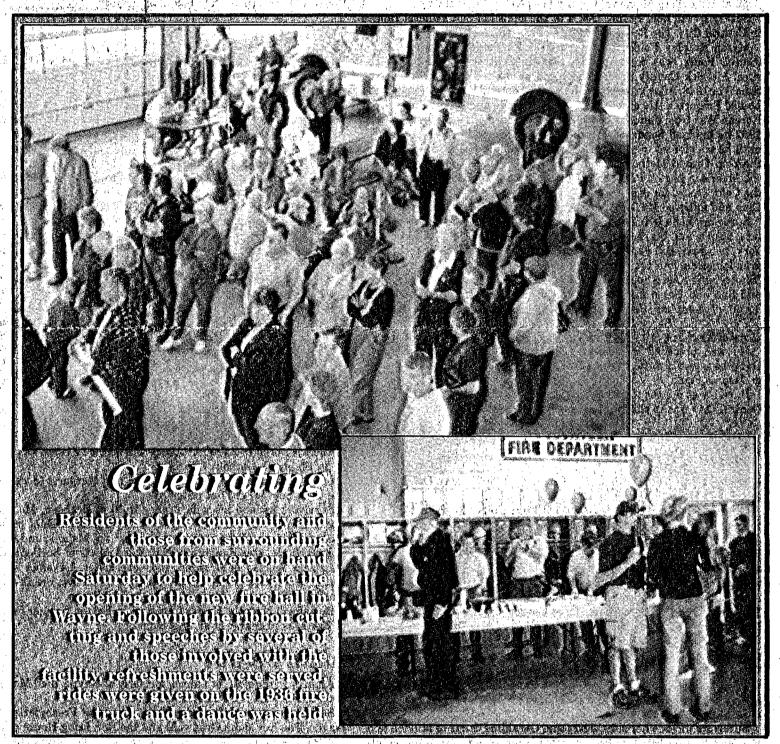

In the days following, the police department received information from several sources that persons from out of town were planning to bring weapons to the Thursday dance at Riley's. Therefore, additional officers were scheduled and members of the Nebraska State Patrol were assigned to help the officers.

In an effort to diffuse the potential for violence, the officers asked people leaving Riley's at closing time to immediately leave the lot. One man refused and was arrested.

Wayne Police Chief Lance Webster said he and his officers certainly don't want to discourage people from attending dances at Riley's, but they will take appropriate steps to make sure the people attending are safe.

In a separate incident, the police department investigated the theft of almost $500 worth of property from a car parked in the Riley's parking lot Thursday night.

Worship service becomes reality

By Clara Osten Of the Herald

What began as dream early this summer, has become a reality for a group of young people at Calvary Bible Evangelical Free Church in Wayne.

The group, headed by Jason Gangwish, has put together a Sunday evening contemporary worship service known as the ROCK. The service is held each week at 8 p.m. at Calvary Bible Evangelical Church at Fifth and Lincoln Streets.

"I got an idea for providing a service for younger adults in the community and then approached the church board with the idea. Everything just fell into place and we started the service early in September," Gangwish said.

Darwin Keeney, youth pastor at the church, has a sermon for each service that provides an application of the Bible to life and is directed toward growth.

Gangwish and Ethan Wiekamp lead the music portion of the service which includes a praise band. Members of the band include Gangwish who plays guitar in does vocals; Nick Lipp on drums; Megan Weber, vocals; Blake

Main Street Focus

By Leo Ahmann

The Annual Nebraska Lied Main Street Conference was held last week, Wednesday through Friday, in Beatrice.

Among the presentations and awards given to Main Street communities, the banquet and awards program recognizes a Merchant of the Year and Voluntéer of the Year from each community. It is with a great deal of pleasure and with congratulations that our program recognizes Marie Mohr and Tony Kochenash of Swans as our Merchant of the Year and Sandra Bartling as our Volunteer of the Year. Sandra and Tony are past board members and were very influential in getting the Main Street program started in Wayne. Marie is currently a board member. Both Tony and Sandra have been committee chairpersons, while Marie is presently serving as a committee chairperson. Needless to say, these individuals believe in and are still yery active in the Main Street Wayne Program. (See a related article in this edition of the Wayne Herald). In the Special Event category Henoween was recognized as a runner-up. Again, we thank all the volunteers who helped make the conference was Carol Weisman, an internationally know speaker and writer. She spoke on the "Care and Feeding of "Recruiting, Volunteers," Retaining and Orientating Board Members" and "Having Fun with Fundraising." In my personal opinion, she was the most informative and entertaining facilitator I've ever had the pleasure of listening to. (Usually, you get one or the other . . . but she was informative and entertaining!).

Part of the three days included a downtown tour of Beatrice, the Cedar Creek Pottery and a breakfast and tour of the Homestead National Monument. Beatrice has some wonderful things going, but let me tell you, although we have Much More We Can Do!!! , . Wayne is in good shape. all we need to do is to keep moving forward. It's going to take effort, it's going to take vision and it's going to take all facets and entities of Wayne working together, to make it happen. If we are satisfied with what's been done, positive growth will never happen. Wayne didn't get to where we're without the vision of some "get-it-done" people. I'm looking forward to more Please start thinking and planning on participating in our Christmas Parade of Lights and Living Windows. No . . . it is not too early.

Unveiling ceremony held

Wayne State College president Sheila Stearns, Roger Hochstein and Lois Hall of Wayne unveiled the dedication plaque for the Carillon chimes on Oct. 4.

The plaque will be placed in Dr. Lvle Seymour Heritage Plaza on campus. A memorable sound to Wayne State alumni, the Carillon has been restored and its chimes are heard across campus due to generous donations to the Wayne State Foundation.

The Carillon is programmed to chime on the hour and half hour and to play songs at noon and at 5 p.m. The Carillon's computer is set to move randomly through a list of chosen songs. Hochstein and Hall were instrumental in the restoration of the Carillon.

Dealing with senseless killing

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Once upon a time it would have been called a tragedy of unimaginable proportions, a virtually unbelievable thing. Today, we don't have any trouble believing it happened, or that it happened in Norfolk, Nebraska. Four people murdered in a would-be robbery that turned a bank into a charnel house.

Indications are that the slaugh. ter began moments after the killers walked in the door.

There have been other horrendous crimes and killers in Nebraska. Duane Pope. Charles Starkweather. John Joubert. And others.

The slaughter in Norfolk, though, seemed appropo of these times.

It was botched from its evil beginnings to its preposterous end. Initial accounts indicate that the accused men began shooting almost immediately. We don't yet know what set off the pulling of triggers. We know that it senselessly ended the lives of useful, constructive members of society who were going about the most mundane of business.

In their rampage, the killers forgot to take money. They did remember, however, to steal a motor vehicle or two after the mas-

We know arrests of some of the alleged killers were made while they were standing around fast food places and convenience stores in a nearby town. Murder doesn't spoil everyone's appetite.

And then came what many will understandably see as the insult that followed an unspeakable injury.

Nebraska's death penalty law (love it or despise it) would be the target of bad jokes if circumstances were other than they are. Nebraska is the only state still clinging to the electric chair - a constitutional liability that has been obvious for years. Nebraska didn't act this year to change its sentencing procedures in death penalty cases to comply clearly with a decision last summer by the U.S. Supreme Court.

There is something of the surreal about it.

Certainly, there are those who will argue that anything which might prevent the state from inflicting the death penalty is good. There are others, however, who will be frustrated to maddening degrees by the seeming ineptness of government.

Think about it: The state doesn't know if it even has a death penalty law that is enforceable, a constitutional means for carrying out the death penalty. And if the Legislature addresses both issues, there will still be questions about whether the revised statutes could be applied to anyone convicted of murder in the Norfolk case.

The issue is more than the right or wrong of the death penalty.

It is one that involves the state's governance being perceived as something that evolved when the Queen of Hearts met the Keystone

So what is ahead for Agriculture?

Great things if you ask me! Of course, the United States will continue to be a major producer and of a frustrating, slow, wet start so exporter because of our soil and clifar, and not the greatest yields to mate resource and our transportation infrastructure. But more than bushels for the future are promised from the soil.

Agriculture is where it is happening on all fronts of technology. The first applications of innovative developments have frequently been found in agriculture. Engineering, chemistry, genetics, statistics all have prominent use in agriculture going back a century or more, right straight through the present and on into the future.

career paths, Agriculture offers many opportunities. No matter what vocation or discipline a person may choose, there is apt to be a future in agriculture: a future that not only earns a living, but also contributes to the community and works to steward the earth.

Over 100 species of birds have been found to carry the virus, with members of the Corvidae family (crows, blue jays, ravens) showing the greatest mortality from the virus."

Other species of game birds that have been reported positive for WNV are sandhill cranes, mourning doves, mallards, wood ducks, Canada geese, ruffed grouse, wild turkeys, and ringnecked pheasants.

However, information gathered appeared in North America, scientists believe wild waterfowl may be immune to WNV. While mallards, wood ducks and Canada Geese have tested positive for the virus, the infected birds were all from domestic flocks living in parks, ponds and urban areas.

Annually thousands of waterfowl die from fowl avian botulism, many of these are randomly tested for WNV and to date, none of these wild waterfowl have tested positive for WNV becomes infected and can transmit the virus to humans, horses, dogs or other birds that he bites later. Three species of mosquitoes are the most common carriers. Larvae of the species are generally found in urban areas, where mosquitoes lay their eggs in stagnant water in bird baths, discarded cans, old tires, plastic bottles, and rain gutters. These mosquitoes that use containers for breeding are rarely found in healthy wetland. In healthy wetlands, fish and water movement will generally reduce mosquitoes populations.

Outdoorsmen and women don't need to panic when it comes to WNV but don't ignore it. Outdoorsmen and women should use common sense when going into an area that you could encounter mosquitoes, wear long pants, long sleeves and use insect repellent.

Listed below are some of the recommendations from Ducks Unlimited to minimize any possible risk.

• Don't harvest or handle sick game

•When cleaning game or handling live or dead birds, wear gloves in order to avoid blood to blood contact.

•Cook game birds until well

•Soak any utensils used to pre-

West Nile virus (WNV) is caus- There are some precautions According to Ducks Unlimited, from studies since the virus first infected bird, the mosquitoes pare game birds in a solution of one part household bleach and 10 parts water for 20 minutes. •Most importantly, hunters should avoid mosquitoes as they are the most likely means of acquiring WNV. Hunters participating in the early teal season hunts should apply insect repellent to clothing and skin.

•At home, look for stagnant water in bird baths, plant trays, old tires, wheel barrows and other containers around your yard. If you find standing water, pour it out and be diligent about re-checking these areas weekly.

Cases of WNV have been reported in dogs throughout the U.S., most of these did not cause severe illness in infected dogs. One dog in Illinois was the first confirmed canine death in North America. Dog owners should minimize the dogs exposure to mosquitoes when ever possible. If possible use screened kennels to protect the dog and use insects repellents approved for use on animals. Do Not Use a repellent that contains Researchers are currently developing WNV vaccines for domestic animals.

By using common sense and insect repellent, both the hunter and his dog can be protected and help to prevent the spread of WNV.

Herbs for Health Pepper Extract for Pain: Capsaicin

Many people use capsaicin for chronic pain but do not realize it is an herbal extract, Capsaicin is the active component of Capsicum annum - the common cayenne pepper. In the tropics the plant can grow as a bush to a height of feet. The pepper it produces technically is a berry. Capsaicin causes the Capsicium berry to be "hot," pungent, and irritating. Topically applied capsaicin has been studied in many types of pain, including post-herpetic neuralgia (shingles), trigeminal neuralgia (tic douloureaux), rheumatoid and osteoarthritis, and psoriasis. Typically,, creams containing less than 1 part per 1,000 capsaicin are applied to the skin up to 4 times a day, Capsaicin may relieve pain by directly affecting pain fibers. A chemical called substance P is responsible for transmitting pain impulses to the brain from the periphery (e.g., skin or joints). Capcaicin first stimulates pain fibers and then depletes them of substance P. As a result, pain "messages" cannot be sent to the brain where they otherwise would be sensed.

"I Was Blind For About Six Months..."

"I had one cataract removed by another doctor years ago and it didn't turn out so good, in fact I was blind for about six months in that eye.

Before I had my surgery at Feidler Eye Clinic my eye was foggy, real hazy. I couldn't see good at all. The eye that Dr. Feidler fixed I can see real good out of. He did a very good job!

The cataract surgery was simple and it only took 20 minutes. Recovery was also short. Now I can drive and it doesn't bother me at all.

The staff here at Feidler Eye Clinic treat you very well. I like the practice here very much."

Tickets are available for the third annual Neihardt Night, "Where Neihardt Walked," set for Sunday, Oct. 20, at Wayne State College. Co-sponsored by the John G. Neihardt Foundation and Wayne State, this year's event will begin with a reception hosted by Dr. Sheila Stearns, WSC presi-

Special guests at the reception will be Dr. Lyle Seymour, pastpresident of Wayne State, and his wifé, Ginny.

The theme, "Where Neihardt Walked," refers to the time in the mid-1890's that Neihardt spent as a student at Wayne State College, known then as Nebraska Normal College. Neihardt referred to the college as "my hill of vision."

The evening will include the Laureate's Feast, silent and live auctions featuring works of art, books, vacations, gourmet meals and many other items that have been donated to benefit the works of the Neihardt Foundation.

One of the evening's highlights will be the presentation of the Word Sender Award to an individual who has given outstanding contributions of time, talent and inspiration to the Neihardt Foundation and its mission of perpetuating the life and works of Nebraska's poet laureate, the late John G. Neihardt.

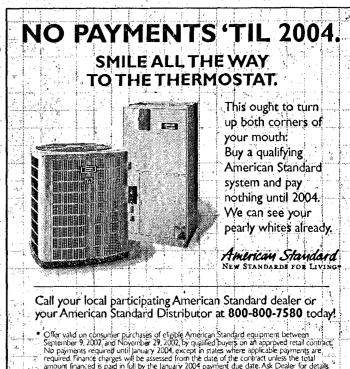

This year's recipient is Ron Hull of Lincoln, special advisor to Nebr. Educational Telecommunications and professor of broadcasting at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Hull, long-time master of ceremonies of the Neihardt Day program in Bancroft each August, met Neihardt in 1961. He produced many televised interviews with the poet for KUON-TV in Lincoln from 1961 until 1972, a year before Neihardt's death.

Tickets for the evening must be purchased in advance; no tickets. will be available at the door. ### You've Got the Power.

Nebraska is the only state totally served by a consumer-owned public power system that delivers electricity as a nonprofit service. Publicly owned power guarantees that Nebraska residents enjoy local control with some of the lowest rates in the country, and exceptional customer service. Public power is a Nebraska invention and, since 1936, a Nebraska tradition.

This year's National 4-H Week, celebrated Oct. 6-12 in Nebraska, has two special focuses. One is to conclude the national 4-H 2002 centennial celebration. The other is to look forward to a new century of an even more exciting 4-H.

The centennial opened many doors to tell people how 4-H develops life skills in youth, while they are involved with fun and interesting projects.

Workshop planned to discuss tea

A workshop will be held in the Home Economics Room of Laurel-Concord High School on Monday. Oct. 21 to inform the consumer on what tea is and what it isn't.

Those attending are urged to bring a china teacup to sample the tea. There will also be a variety of teas to sample.

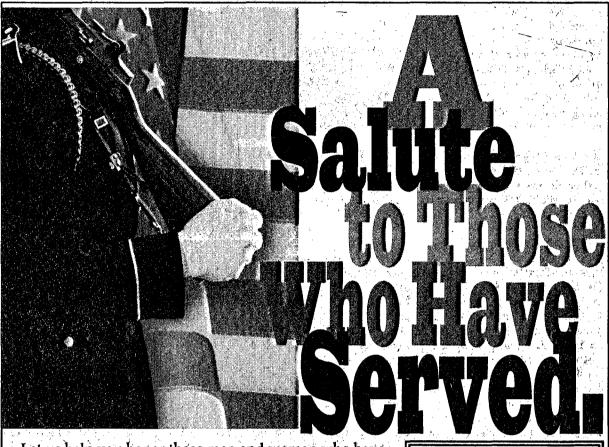

Increasingly, tea is reported to be a beverage that is good for people,

Very recently, several scientists even suggested that it be included in the USDA Food Pyramid as a required nutrient.

Unlike coffee, tea comes in many more varieties and the way it is processed results in even more variations. The consumer is left with untold choices and little to base a decision upon. In addition, some products are sold as tea but do not include real tea, resulting in more confusion for the consumer.

There is no charge to attend, but those coming are urged to call (402) 256-3731 to sign up. Bob Fritschen will be the instructor.

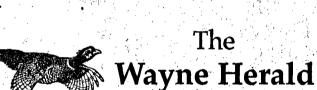

The Workshop is being sponsored by the Laurel-Concord Adult Education School -Committee.

Week full of activity

Monday afternoon and the local farmer who rents the ground around the Farm House is busy combining corn. I hear reports about low yields, but that the drought-resistant hybrids have at least made a crop. We had all kinds of nice rain last week; at least it shouldn't be dusty like it was two years ago.

This week is National Family Dinner Week. I believe it should be observed. I get a lot of e-mail reminiscing about the long-ago days when children played safely in neighborhoods from morning until dusk, and when the whole family sat down together for the evening meal.

I've even read some astonishing studies about less drug abuse and fewer teen pregnancies in those families that still eat a meal together at least three times a week. It wouldn't seem to make that much difference, but I don't think it's the meal so much as the general family atmosphere that says it is important for us to do things as a family.

I'm on the board for Lutheran Family Services and one of the activities they do annually is to put on a family day in a large park in Omaha and invite families to come for free fun and games. The hot dogs, pop, and cotton candy are all donated; there are games for all ages, and there are entertainers, like cloggers and country western bands. I went this year, as a first-aid person,

It's a cool, windy, sunny thing this summer. And I thought, as I wandered the area, what we should really sponsor is a stay at home night, the way one community I read about did.

It took months of planning; no school or church activity, no organizational meetings, nothing was to compete for any family members' time that one night of the year. All members, Mom and Dad, and all children, were to have their family meal together and engage in family activity, like puzzles, games, reading, popping corn, etc. TV was to be a last resort, as were videos.

There is a huge national movement called Remember the Sabbath, which promotes a whole day set aside like this every week. It's even the title of a book by reminded at a conference last week, even God rested on the seventh day.

The month of October is clergy appreciation month. At least three years ago, a large church in Lincoln purchased 11 gift certificates from us for all their ministers: minister of music, of education, etc. Only about half of these have been used. I think that says much about folks in the helping professions. They don't even have time to get away with their spouses for 24 hours. I know, I have a friend whose husband was a pastor and she used to complain that he counseled everyone but her!

We have been blessed with visits from friends from our past this month. One couple, Stan and Dorothy Weyhrich, worked for us 40 years ago. They now live in Arkansas, and were here for lunch a couple of weeks ago. We think that the last time we saw them was over 20 years ago. The friend who was my maid of honor was here from Houston and we went out to dinner with her and her husband. An old pal from Norfolk (we had our first children at the same time) was here from Minnesota and we had a four-hour coffee date at Barnes & Noble!

Lastly, the former roommate who lives in Downey, Calf., was here and eight of us graced the Art Chicks Girl Friends Gallery with our presence on Saturday. We dressed up, ate lunch, and did the Hokey Pokey! That's where the eight women who stayed here on Friday night were too. It continues to be a very popular thing for women; even the Big Farmer and his cousin Paul tried it out in September. Now he knows why their guests are always "high" when they arrive at the antique shop; and it does not involve drugs of any kind. Just FUN! All for now;

CARC urges cooperation in using field residue

As harvest swings into full gear, the Climate Assessment Response Committee (CARC) is encouraging cooperation between Nebraska's commodity crop growers and livestock producers is addressing drought-related forage needs and soil and conservation. Following a meeting of CARC on Monday, Chairman Greg Ibach forwarded letters to Nebraska commodity organizations asking the groups' leaders to communicate to their constituencies a number of drought-related messages. In the letter, Ibach, who serves as the Assistant Director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, notes over from harvest could serve as an alternative feed source prior to the winter season. "We actually have had a couple contacts to the Department from people in search of a place to graze their cattle in Nebraska. They were looking for anything available, from hay to corn stubble. That made us think about the need to re-publicize the availability of the Hay Hotline, and encourage crop growers and livestock producers to work together," Ibach said

Operation Hay and Grain Lift also is still accepting a donated forage and grain to be distributed to needy producers. The number for the Operation is (402) 640-5528. "Drought seems more real when temperatures are in the 90-to 100-degree range," Ibach said. "We need to remember that cooler temperatures and some spotty rain doesn't automatically answer the needs of producers who have been struggling all season. My hope is that corn and soybean growers, who do not need the crop residue for their own needs, can help out a neighbor who has livestock to feed."

Also in his letter to agriculture organizations, Ibach reminded producers that removing stubble completely through processes such as discing has a negative effort on soil moisture and conservation, an important consideration given the extremely low levels of topsoil and subsoil moisture. "While sharing field crop stubble for livestock forage is encouraged, producers also are reminded of the benefits of leaving some level of stubble for moisture and soil retention purposes." Ibach wrote.

Elbert Dickey, Dean and Director of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension and a CARC member, told the group on Monday that Cooperative Extension faculty and staff have been, and will continue, to publicize crop and livestock drought management information. Tips on issues such as feeding crop residue to livestock and fall tillage can be found on IANR's drought page at http:/ianrhome.unl.edu/drought/.

ELECT MEMBERS

Voters re-elected LaVern Lundahl, along with Dallas Roberts and Jim Lunz to the Wakefield Health Care Center Board of Directors during the annual meeting on Thursday, Sept. 26.

Approximately 30 interested persons attended the meeting.

Following the annual meeting, the nine member board met briefly to reorganize and elect officers. The same slate of officers were retained in office. They include Alvin Sundell as president; Ken Thomsen as vice president and Tom Anderson as secretary. Other board members are Betty Schwarten, Karen Blohm and Allen Trube.

During the meeting Administrator Terry Hoffman stated that census at the Center had been down a little during the past year, especially for nursing home residents. He said the winter months were particularly tough with a number of deaths occurring. He said the facility lost about $26,000 for the year but that Wakefield Health Care Center cash on hand went up, so the operation is financially sound.

He said one of the things that helps the facility is the tremendous support from the community. He said that financial support makes it easier to do capital projects. He mentioned the fundraising efforts of the Wakefield Health Care Center Auxiliary in addition to the Gardner Foundation which had assisted with a number of projects.

He also mentioned that an area where revenue increased the past year was in the skilled care being provided for services such as therapy and the reimbursement received from Medicare for these services.

EXCHANGE STUDENTS

The Wakefield Community School has two foreign exchange students this year. They are both girls.

One of them is Vera Benenson from Dortmund, Germany, She was born in the Ukraine and moved to Germany in 1997. She has noticed a lot of differences between the U.S. and her home country. The legal age of drinking in Germany is 16 and people can smoke at any age. Most people there can speak English and the two main cultures are German and Russian, but there are some

There are four different schools years of elementary. The highest is for the most intelligent and after that, students can attend college.

The second highest school is comprehensive school and then students can either attend college, vocational school or work, The main school is for average students. The lowest level of high school is a special school for under privileged students. The students must attend one of the schools before they can quit at 16 years of

In Germany, there are not as many rules in the schools. There is no dress code and no punishment for being late. Students have to take two foreign languages to graduate. Most students take Latin and English. There is also no fee to go to college.

Vera says Dortmund is much bigger than Wakefield. There are 200 schools in her hometown and lots of apartment buildings and clubs. She says people don't know each other as well as people do here. She has one sister and a dog at home. She noted that there is a law in Germany that you have to recycle, whereas her people have a choice.

Wakefield is happy to have Vera here. She is staying with Lynda and Tom Turney and she says she enjoys it there.

Yessica Schrader is also from Germany. She was not only anxious, she was also afraid of what people might think and if she would be accepted.

She really thinks highly of the students at Wakefield because they ask questions, are happy to invite her out, talk to her and are very friendly.

Yessica seems extremely energetic and is very active. One thing she likes to do in Germany is dance. She loves to dance. She goes to a dance school called "Klahn." She also enjoys singing, in-line skating, swimming, movies, talking on the phone and being with her friends. Her favorite class at Wakefield is Art.

When asked what her favorite part of being in the United States was, she answered, "meeting new people with a different culture." While here, she would really like to get a driver's license, because in Germany you have to be 18 and it costs $2,000. She is staying with Jerald and LeAnn Schroeder.

COMPETES IN GYMNASTICS Sydney Rose, seven year old daughter of Julie and Jeff Rose, has been selected to compete with Siouxland Gymnastics Academy level 4 Junior Olympic Team. She has been learning gymnastics at the Academy and this will be her first opportunity to compete. She is part of a seven to 13-year old, 17-member team representing the Sioux City School. The team is scheduled to participate at meets in Ankeny, Iowa; Sioux Falls, S.D. and Omaha and Lincoln this fall. The Iowa State Meet will be held in early December.

Sydney goes to the Academy twice a week and practices at least three hours. According to her mom, Sydney is looking forward to her first competition this month and really likes gymnastics.

The team will compete on the balance beam, bars, vault and floor exercises.

"Top 10" Ways To Monitor Your Workstation Health

- 1. Keep feet on the ground. Make sure that your feet are touching the floor or a footrest when seated. Knees should be at a 90-degree angle. This distributes weight better and takes pressure off the upper body. Consider investing in a height-adjustable chair, or use a stool.
- 2. Sit up straight. Make sure that you sit up tall with weight on the buttocks and feet. The pelvis should be straight up and down. Chairs with adjustable backs and arms aid in proper sitting posture.
- 3. Eyes level with screen. A good rule of thumb is to make sure the top of your head is parallel with the top of the screen, top-to-top. Anything less could lead to neck
- 4. Forearms parallel. Make sure that your forearms are parallel to the floor and the elbows are at a 90-degree angle. Your forearms should rest on chair arms or on your desk to bear your upper body weight.
- 5. Shoulder blades settled. Shoulder blades should be settled on the back of the ribs, not in an arched position. This includes while talking on the telephone. Use a speakerphone, telephone headset, or cradle/shoulder rest for the telephone handset. These will help prevent unnecessary neck strain.

- 6. Correct mouse positioning. Place your mouse near the keyboard so you do not have to reach for it. Reaching for the mouse can over stretch and fatigue you muscles.
- 7. Rest the eyes. Look away from the computer as often as possible and focus on distant objects. Staring uninterrupted at a computer screen for long periods of time can cause eve-strain and headaches. An anti-glare screen can help prevent eyestrain.
- 8. Take a break. Take a break from the computer at least every 20 minutes.
- 9. Stretch and move. Do stretches such as head turns, shoulder rolls, and marching in place while seated.
- 10. Watch for problems. Pay attention to warning signs such as headaches, fatigue, muscle pain, or cramping and make adjustments

These tips are not intended as a substitute for professional health care.
