WSC and city enter agreement to share services

Wayne State College and the City of Wayne have reached an interlocal agreement to share law enforcement resources. The agreement, which was passed by the Wayne City Council at its December meeting, will take effect July 1, 2003.

"This agreement makes it possible for us to continue - and enhance - the current level of security coverage for our campus, which is a top priority," said Dr. Sheila Stearns, Wayne State president. "Students, their parents, WSC faculty and staff should continue to be confident that Wayne State is a safe, welcoming community."

Under the agreement, the City of Wayne will provide the following law enforcement services on the Wayne State campus:

1. continuous campus coverage from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. five days per week using the WSC campus security van. From 1 a.m. to 7 a.m. on those days, there will be a regular patrol of the campus by certified officers with a minimum of three drive-through trips per hour.

2. training and direction of student employees (paid by the college) who will work part-time to complement the certified officer time in areas such as parking enforcement, etc.

A reception will be hosted for the public from 7 to 8 p.m. prior to the Black and Gold Series performance of "Second Hand" at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 29 in the recently- renovated Ramsey Theatre in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Hall on the Wayne State College campus,

The public is encouraged to take advantage of these concurrent events by arriving early for the Black and Gold performance.

"The Second Hand" is a theatrical presentation of dance, acrobatics, comedy and audience participation. Since 1987 the dance ensemble's family-oriented performances have been enthusiastically received by children of all ages, as lighthearted, charming,

Winner of the Critics Choice Award at the Edinburgh Festival (Scotland), "The Second Hand" has performed in Ireland, Israel, France, Korea, Germany, Canada, Holland, England, Russia, Chile, Japan, and in New York City's Lincoln Center. Their antics have been featured on The Late Show with David Letterman, MTV, ShowTime, A&E's Caroline's Comedy Hour, and on television broadcasts in Spain, Japan, England, Belgium and many other television shows worldwide. Reviewers have been enthusiastic since the ensemble's creation in 1987, with performances being described as "superb," even spell-binding physical control" (The New York Times), "A top night's entertainment" (The List) (Scotland), and "the fusion of ballet training, Chinese acrobatics and martial arts, and athleticism is a triumph of wit and skill, grace and feeling". The Ramsey Theatre at WSC recently underwent a $3 million renovation project which now includes new seating, carpeting, acoustical treatments, stateof-the-art lighting and sound systems and stage equipment. The project also included a two-story, 10,800 square-foot addition that houses a scene shop, green room, design studio and loading dock on the upper level. Main Street Focus

By Leo Ahmann

In my last column, I gave you a brief history of the National and State Main Street Programs.

As promised, this week a brief history of the Main Street Wayne Program. Please keep in mind, however, that Directors change, Boards of Directors change and circumstances change.

The Main Street Wayne Program began on April 1, 1999. Looking back to 1994, the Nebraska Lied Main Street was first presented to the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. At that time, the Chamber Board did not foresee a Main Street Program in Wayne.

Interest in a Main Street Program in Wayne ebbed and flowed during the next few years, with some individuals following the Main Street principles in personal projects.

Then, in 1998, two trips by people from Wayne were made to Corning, Iowa. Corning is an award-winning Iowa Main Street. community. The Chamber Director at that time and a Board member were among those making a trip to Corning.

In April of 1998 that Chamber Director and eight business people from Wayne traveled to a Main Street Workshop in Lincoln to learn more about the process and what membership in a Main Street Program actually meant. With encouragement from state officials facilitating the workshop, the Wayne people were encouraged to make an application.

The Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce chose not to absorb a Main Street Program at that time, citing lack of available funding and support.

It was at this time a group of 10 to 14 Wayne business people began to meet once a week, to build strategies on how to best approach becoming a Main Street community. An application was made and Wayne officially became a Main Street Community in 1999. We continue to attend seminars, workshops and training sessions to maintain our standards of effort and success for the commu-

nty. Donna Trampel was selected as the first manager of the Main. Street Wayne Program. I became manager on May 1, 2000. Our offices are located in the front of the old Peoples' Natural Gas Street.

The Main Street Wayne Program is only one spoke in the wheel of those civic organizations working for the betterment of Wayne. The steel band holding all of those spokes together is the volunteers of each program. We are no more important or less important than any other group. We were not organized to compete against any other group . . . or to take away from the successes of any other group. We just do what, we've always wanted to do'. . . .

that's be successful in our committee projects and events and work, for making Wayne an even better place to live, work, shop and have

Our volunteers are doers . . . and have fun doing it. Everyone is invited to attend our weekly Tuesday meetings (8 to 9 a.m.). Find out what we're doing and how we're doing it. We appreciate the support we've continued to receive since 1999 and to that end, the Main Street Wayne Program will work very hard to be an organization that the community can be very proud of.

Budget woes continue

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Lawmakers in Nebraska and around the country face an unpleasant reality.

The oldest accounting trick in the book, robbing Peter to pay Paul, will not be available to them in 2003. Peter is broke, too, When the Nebraska Legislature convened for its 90-day session, there was nary a hint of budgetary optimism. If money problems were earthquakes, this, apparently, would be "The Big One."

Like the historic earthquake that shook down San Francisco, the current budget situation might, just might, dramatically change the face of government.

The most generic of quotes reported recently from the Tower on the Plains echoed a singular theme: "This is going to hurt," and "It's going to be painful," pretty much covered the territory.

Some very pragmatic, conservative solons have suggested that the situation cannot be remedied solely through spending reductions. Whether through higher taxes, expanded taxation (a sales tax on services) or higher fees, or a combination of those things, the state will consider going to the taxpayers to balance the budget.

Hats off to the senator who earlier summed up the situation, in part, by noting that the state spends most of its money trying to do three things: "Educate, medicate and incarcerate." That's where the money goes - and that's where much of it might be saved, for good or ill.

The budget crisis, a shortfall of more than $673 million, has to be viewed against a nasty backdrop:

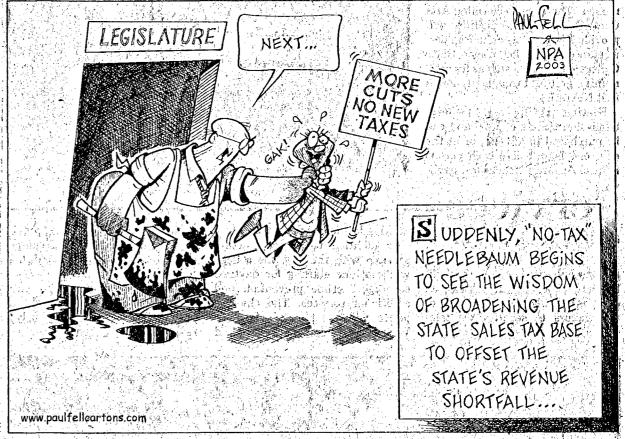

The perennial complaint of Nebraskans regarding their local property taxes.

Reduced state aid to local governments has been known to result in higher, local property tax levies.

Some states are considering plans that would cap property tax. levies on the homes of those whose fixed incomes do not exceed specified amounts.

Such a program could be politically popular. It could keep some (mostly older) people from losing their homes - and old folks vote, regularly. The devilish detail would be in finding the income level that lawmakers and a governor could agree upon.

Legislative session gets underway

The 2003 session of the Legislature got underway on Jan. 8. The 90-day session is expected to be dominated by debate on the budget as we wrestle with the state's fiscal crisis.

Personally, the session got off to a good start for me. I was fortunate to be elected chairman of the Executive Board, the Legislature's 2nd-ranking leadership position.

The Executive Board is responsible for the internal workings of the Legislature. As such, it supervises all legislative services and employees. The board also serves as the Reference Committee, which refers bills, resolutions and gubernatorial appointments to committees.

I am quite familiar with the Executive Board, having served as a member since 1997. I look forward to this great opportunity to serve the Legislature in this leadership position.

I will remain a member of the Appropriations Committee, which I have served on since I came to the Legislature in 1993. As a member of the committee, I will be in the thick of the debate over the budget.

Among other leadership posts decided on opening day, Sen. Curt Bromm of Wahoo was re-elected

Latest statistics indicate critical need for children's programs has changed dramatically through the years, according to a new report published by Voices for Children in Nebraska.

According to the "2002 Kids Count in Nebraska Report," in Nebraska the Hispanic/Latino youth population grew 81.8 percent - more than 47,000 children since the 1990 census. Other trends included an increase in other non-white populations, including blacks, Asian and Pacific Islanders, American Indian, Eskimo and Aleut populations. The white alone population and non-Hispanic/Latino youth population declined 2.1 percent.

Now in its tenth year of publication, the "2002 Kids Count in Nebraska Report" documents the number of cases involving child abuse and neglect, early care and education, juvenile arrests, out of home care and adoption. This year's report also highlights findings from the 2000 Census and the ever-increasing need for children's programs. "Census data can give us a valuable perspective on how to allocate our state resources effectively, said Janet Johnston, Research Coordinator for Voices for Children, who compiled the data for the report. "From the Census, we can track migration and immigration, find out how many children are suffering in poverty and how many parents are in the workforce, for example. This information can help us determine where we need to build new schools and roads, implement needed social programs and work to improve the

The face of children in Nebraska. The report also found that 19.6 as changed dramatically through percent of Nebraska children live in a single parent household and that 12 percent of Nebraska's children live in poverty. Thirty percent of minority children live in poverty, an improvement of about seven percent from past years.

While the 2000 Census shows an improvement in the number of children living in poverty, it is representative of income earned in 1999, a time of economic prosperity. Our current economic situation just two short years later may paint a very different picture," said Johnston.

Additional findings in the 2002 Kids count in Nebraska Report include:

*By December 2001, the State Children's' Health Insurance Program (SCHIP), known in Nebraska's Kids Connection, had grown 49.3 percent from August 1998, providing health coverage for over 131,000 children in Nebraska.

*In a special budget-cutting session of the Nebraska Legislature in August 2002, drastic changes were made to the kids Connection program, resulting in more than 15,000 Nebraska children losing health care coverage. Additional cuts are expected to be discussed during the 2003 Legislative Session. *The number of Nebraska children in foster care is at an all-time high. Over 56 percent of foster children are moved to four or more homes in their lifetimes.

*Minority children continue to be over-represented in Nebraska foster care system. Minority children make up approximately 15 percent building at 208 North Main lives of the youngest cluzens in our however, they represent more than

31 percent of children in out-ofhome care,

"Nebraska has a wonderful opportunity to make the most of our new immigrant populations, help lift families out of poverty and insure the future of our children by implementing public policies that benefit our youngest citizens. Nebraska started this decade with tragedy and budget crises, but there are many years to go. Together we can make this decade go down as history that we want repeated," said Johnston.

The Kids Count in Nebraska Report has served as a valuable resource for the public and private sectors for the past 10 years. Sponsored by the Annie E. Casey Foundation and published by Voices for Children, the publication is the only resource of its kind to track multiple issues affecting children in Nebraska over an extended period of time.

"This one-of-a-kind report combines statistical data, impact studies, personal stories and policy information to present a comprehensive picture of how Nebraska children are doing. New policy direction, as well as agency program planning, is often guided by the Kids Count in Nebraska Report,' said Kathy Bigsby Moore, Executive Director for Voices for Children. Voices for Children is a statewide, independent, nonprofit organization committed to educating the public about the needs of children and improving conditions where necessary. These goals are accomplished by working cooperatively with community groups and individuals to analyze, research, write, provide technical assistance and disseminate information to give children a voice in the classroom, the courtroom, the legislative chambers and the media.

Since 1948, the Annie E. Casey Foundation has worked to build better futures for disadvantaged children and their families in the United States. Kids Count, a project of the Foundation, is a nation-the status of children in the United States. By providing policy makers and citizens with benchmarks of child well-being, Kids Count seeks to enrich local, state, and national discussions concerning ways to secure better futures for all children.

Ice fishing has changed dramatically over the years

I've ice fished ever since I was a . The spud bar was borrowed youngster growing up in Water- from our neighbor Glen Matteson town, SD.

We'd load our gear on our snow sled and follow the Sioux River out to Lake Pelican. Our gear was pretty uptown! It consisted of a spud bar, broom handle rods, heavy line, a few bobbers, small hooks and a few minnows.

Our depth finder or locator was an old spark plug we slipped over exhausted from using the heavy bar to chip away at the ice.

The finished product looked like a funnel, with a hole that was just big enough to get a small perch or pike through. I don't know what we'd done if we'd caught a big fish.

Our rods were made from broken broom handles with a couple of nails pounded into them that we used to wrap our line around.

Fishing line back then was either a heavy black Dacron or heavier primitive monofilament. The heavy Dacron would freeze stiff once it got wet and the mono would kink where it wrapped around the nails and wouldn't straighten out no matter what you did.

The bobbers we used were big to say the least, way too large for the fish we were after and too large for our funnel shaped holes we'd chipped out with the spud

Hooks were also too large as there really wasn't a choice of hook size. It was a one size fits all deal.

Since we were told or read that the fish always moved deep in the winter, we used our super duper depth locater (spark plug) to get an idea on the depth.

Then we'd attach a bobber so that the minnow was just off the bottom and set there all day waitfishing like Fireline Micro-ice or Cold Weather line.

Ice anglers still use plain hooks, many are colored and come in all sizes, some so small that they are hard to see.

They're hundreds of different micro ice jigs in numerous colors, jigs for walleyes, panfish and special pike rigs.

We still use a type of bottom locator, one that clips on the lure, but the thing that has really changed ice fishing is the knowledge we've gained by using good fish (Sonar) locators' like the

No longer do we simply set our bait just off the bottom and call it good!

We now know that fish like the perch, crappie and walleye move both vertical and horizontal. They locate where their food source is and where they can be comfort-

With a good locator, you can see a walleye lying on the bottom. If a fish comes in under your hole, a good locator will show you the depth the fish is located.

Then you can bring your bait up to that depth and entice the fish to feet in 25 foot of water. Larry Myhre, Sioux City IA. brought his bait up to 10 foot and worked the bait at the same depth as the blip. It took less than a minute and Larry hooked a good walleye, one that was 15 feet off the bottom. Perch and crappies are famous for this vertical movement. You just never know at what depth they might be cruising. Recently on a trip to one of the many sloughs in the Glacial Lakes area South Dakota with Don Fjerstad of Watertown, the perch were scattered from the bottom to just a few feet below the ice.

With out a good locator, we'd have wasted a lot of time waiting for the fish that roamed the deeper water to find our baits.

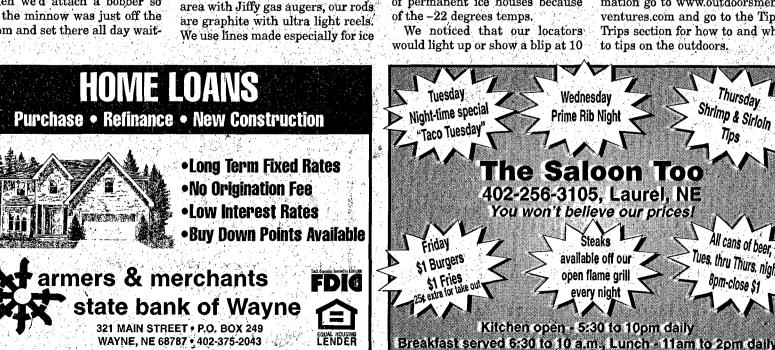

Things have changed a lot since the days of spud bars and broom rods!

The biggest change is the locators that are now available. They're portable, equipped with rechargeable batteries, special carrying cases and floating transducers.

The transducers are made especially for peering down through small holes into the depths of the lakes, ponds and sloughs to locate the vertical moving fish.

St. John's wort (Hypericum perforatum) has been used to treat depression and has been popularized by the media - including coverage in Newsweek and 20/20. This herb has three main actions - antidepressant, antiviral and antibacterial. The mechanism of action has been shown to be through inhibition of the reuptake of serotoni

"We are especially proud of this achievement because it is, in large part, the result of how associates view Edward Jones. Except for our clients, there is no group whose approval matters more."

The remainder of the score is based on an indepth analysis of the companies benefits and practices. The pieces in this exhibit are from an installation in progress. The entire project will be ready for exhibition later this year and will be a multimedia installation including 30 to 40 ironing board sculptures, their covers and a book of drawings. The installation will be supported by sound, music and

Herring creates her work by recycling ironing boards to stain; paint, draw or burn with an iron. Found objects are added to the boards along with distressed copper sheeting, gold or silver leaf. She incorporates natural materials in her work such as rocks and bones or letters and plexiglass. Design elements on the boards elude to the human form,

First inspired by the gothic church window, I chose the ironing board because of its shape. My initial thought was to project the stories of nature on the boards, but as the project has progressed I have discovered other connections other stories. Not only is there a connection to nature, but to culture, myth, spirit, and women, and I am continually discovering new meaning from the pieces," Herring said.

Herring has a masters of fine arts degree in sculpture from the University of South Dakota in Vermillion. She earned a bachelor of arts degree from Chadron State College,

A full-time artist since 1990, Herring teaches workshops for all ages. She has served as artist in residence for the Sioux City Art Center where she also led high school students in the creation of an installation in the atrium.

Until 1990 she worked as assistant professor at Dakota State University in Madison, S.D. Her work has been exhibited in North and South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Nebraska,

Wire crafts to be on display

Carroll and Arlyce Douglass of Randolph will have a variety of their miniature wire clothes hangers and windmills on display during January and February at the Northeast Nebraska RC&D office in Plainview.

Their shop and retail business Douglass Wire Craft is located on mainstreet Randolph, however most of the orders placed are done through mail order. Carroll has a background in sheet-metal work and created his first set of hangers about 11 years ago. He fashioned a wire-bending jig and developed an original design that has an open heart between the hanger body and hook.

Using different gauges and types of wire, Douglass has been able to construct many types of hangers for other applications. Several years ago, he expanded beyond the doll hangers to make other items such as plate/cup holders, woodcraft and basket hangers and windmills. The windmills are constructed of metal and are available in different sizes and are sold in a number of museum gift shops.

Arlyce besides helping her husband with the wire crafts, knits baby blankets, hot pads, and stocking caps and does counter cross stitching. The couple is also making miniature George Shannon metal statues to commemorate the Lewis and Clark bicentennial. Back in 1804 the Lewis & Clark journals relate the story of Pvt. George Shannon, the youngest member of the Corps of Discovery Expedition, as being lost for 12-15 days near Sioux City and being found half starved west of Niobrara,

The public is invited to stop by to see the display in the conference room at the Northeast RC&D office in Plainview, which is located on east Highway 20, 702 East Park Ave. Office hours are 8:00 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A program about radon, biologicals and mold which has been approved by the Nebraska Real Estate Commission, will be pre-sented in West Point on Wednesday, Jan. 29.

Offered by the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension, the three-hour session will begin 3 p.m.

"The radon issue is cropping up in real estate transactions more and more," explained Extension Educator Debra Schroeder.

"We find that if someone has been asked by a buyer or a re-location company to mitigate a home prior to a sale, they're especially careful to be sure that the next home they buy doesn't also have high radon levels. It is sort of a chain-reaction kind of thing."

And, yet, she said, this topic is new enough that there's still a lot of misinformation out there - what it is, where it comes from, how to test for it and what to do about it.

Over half of the homes in Cuming County that have been tested for radon have produced results above the recommended action level of 4 pCi/L set by the United States Environmental Protection Agency, Schroeder said, so it is not uncommon to encounter people in this area who are interested in knowing radon levels in a home before they become involved in a purchase.

The situation is even more severe in the northeastern counties of the state. According to Nebraska Health and Human Services, Cedar, Wayne, Dixon and Dakota counties have the recorded the highest average radon levels in the state. Seventy-seven percent of homes in those four couns ties tested above the EPA guide?

real estates professionals know the correct procedures to follow if radon does come up as an issue in a, transaction," Schröeder explained "We talk about testing guidelines, disclosure require ments, possible ways to handle a mitigation situation . I've had several course graduates tell me nev didn't knov should be conducted before any mitigation so it's apparent that we need to get accurate information out there:"🤾 Schroeder said she expects the second half of the course dealing with biologicals and mold to be of interest to local Realtors, too.

"We've heard a lot in the news recently - some of it very close to home - about mold problems and its impact on health. The link between mold and asthma is a serious concern. I think there will be a lot of questions for Dr. Niemeyer. This is a very timely topic."

For complete details about the program or to pre-register, contact University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension in Cuming County at (402) 372-6006. Paid pre-registrations are requested by Monday, Jan. 27.

According to a recent report in the medical journal Pediatrics, iron deficiency may be responsible for girls not keeping up with boys in solving math problems by the time they reach high school. Iron is required for red blood cell production. Having too few red cells is termed Anemia, Researchers at the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry studied more than 5 thousand children aged 6 to 16 years. They found that iron deficient children were twice as likely to have below average standardized math test scored as compared to children who had adequate amounts of iron in their blood.

In this study 3% of children overall were found to be iron deficient. However, 9% of teenage girls were iron deficient. Test scores were lower even if iron deficiency was not so serious as. to cause anemia.

Character begins at home

Being a parent is the hardest and most important job you will ever have. If you are like most parents, the only training you ever get is on the job. Many parents don't realize that developing children's character is as vital as their health and education.

Six essentials words, called the six pillars of character, are, the focus of this article, trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fair ness, caring and citizenship. The TEAM approach (teach, enforce, advocate and model) will be discussed, as well as ways to make those six words a meaningful part of your adolescent's life.

Character is who we really are. It's what we do when no one is looking. It's the accumulation of thoughts, values, words and actions that become the habits that comprise our character. Parents shouldn't be intimidated.

by changes taking place in their adolescent and by the increasing importance of peer influence. The family is the primary characterbuilding force in a child's life and although kids never want to admit it, they really want their parents' help in entering the world with as much trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring and

Trustworthiness is being honest, telling the truth and the whole truth, keeping promises and being loyal so people can trust you. Trustworthy people have integrity and the moral courage to do the right thing and stand up for their benefits, even when it is hard to do.

4-H & Youth

Respect means showing others that they are valued for who they are - for their character - not how they look or what they have. It means treating others the way you want to be treated. A respect, the environment and respect the ful person is polite, does not use hurtful language and never uses violence.

Responsibility is doing what you are supposed to do. Responsible people think ahead, set reasonable goals and always do their best. They are accountable for the consequences of their choices and they don't blame others for their mistakes.

Fairness is playing by the rules. taking turns, sharing and listening. Fair people do not take advantage of others. They consider all sides before they decide and don't blame other unjustly.

Caring is being kind, helpful and generous to everyone. Caring people are not selfish. They have compassion and empathy, they care how others feel and they are charitable and forgiving. They do good deeds without thought of reward.

Citizenship is doing your share to help your family and to make your community a better place. Good citizens cooperate with others, obey laws and rules, protect authority of parents, teachers and others.

Utilizing the TEAM approach is helpful for parents in developing their child's character. They need to teach by explaining things, discussing rules, requirements and consequences and giving lots of praise, appreciation and corrections, as well as positive and negative feedback.

Parents enforce by providing the boundaries that teens want and need. They advocate by encouraging teens to live up to the six pillars of character and providing consequences for improper con-

The final step is the toughest - to model good character, Parents need to be careful about setting a good example in everything they say and do. And when they mess up - something humans tend to do they need to own up to their mis-degrees last week. We were out watering trees, for pete's sake! I've never watered any growing thing outdoors in January before, I'm sure. There had been shallow holes dug beside each one of the 120 trees during the dry summer.

Then, finally, in the fall, we had rain and those areas had silted in. Now, to boot, several were filled with the dry leaves we had applied for mulch. So, it befell you know who to dig out the holes again. I'm not used to that kind of labor. Cleaning bedrooms and bathrooms doesn't quite match up with digging in dirt.

I've also resurfaced the old pedestal tub this month. It was really showing its age and wear. I. bought something called tub & tile sealer. I had to apply three coats, but it looks much better. Thankfully, I was able to do that on a decent day, weatherwise, as the window had to be open. The smell was awful! Now, all I have to do is sand and seal the new wood on the new enclosed back

Today is National Clean Desk day. Ha! I've been trying the past weekend. But it's an impossible task. For one think, I don't just have one desk. There is my Grandpa's old one in the living room. It doesn't get used much, so-I just leave as is. Then, there is another one in our bedroom with

It's kind of hard to deal with three drawers, which are actually this cold weather after hitting 70 used for clothing storage. But the top, fold-down part does have some little-used items, like old photos, baby books that need to be finished, etc. No sense touching that this week.

In the kitchen is a reproduction dry sink that houses the record turn table. Yes, I do still play old 78s. And I do get good sound. But the top part is flat, and just too handy as a collection spot. I worked on it first; and found some third-class mail from August! And, some other items I had been missjust didn't know where.

One drawer is full of photo negatives, and still another one holds these columns as they are clipped from the paper. They need to go into an album; I just don't seem to get that done. Originally, I carefully clipped and trimmed and placed behind plastic sheets. There must. be half a dozen of those on the bookcase shelves. Then, my Mom did one for me. She offered to; but she hasn't asked again! In 20 years, these things accumulate! Lastly, is the big old roll-top desk the Big Farmer surprised me with a couple of years ago. It's great because I can always roll the top down and cover the mess. It's the one I've been working on. Somehow, it's easier to throw paper out six months after it arrives; I don't understand how that works. But, even doing that, there are still three medium-sized piles of stuff on it. And the drawers are getting full. I do use file folders, they just haven't been filed yet. As Ann keeps telling me, I need someone to organize my

Farmers encouraged to sign up for farm programs

With winter upon us and farmland in most of the country idle until spring, Farm Service Agency officials are recommending that farmers and ranchers act quickly to sign up for programs created under the 2002 Farm Bill.

It provides for payments to eligible producers of covered commodities, including feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, other oilseeds and peanuts, for the 2002 through 2007 crop years. A major feature of the new law allows farm owners the option of updating their acreage bases and crop yields. These bases and yields will be used to determine program benefits for the

Pieper is expecting her office to be very busy in the coming months, appointments to update their base and yield numbers and sign up for the Direct and Counter -cyclical Program.

Pieper said she and her counterparts across the state are bracing for a brisk sign-up pace in the spring and are urging farmers to contact their county offices as soon as possible, "We just want people to understand that there's a lot of information to digest, and the earas producers call to schedule lier they contact us, the more help we can be to them," she said.
