Scouting in Wayne celebrating

Formal dedication of a large plaque honoring Wayne's 119 Eagle Scouts will be held Sunday, May 4 at 3 p.m. at the Community Activity Center.

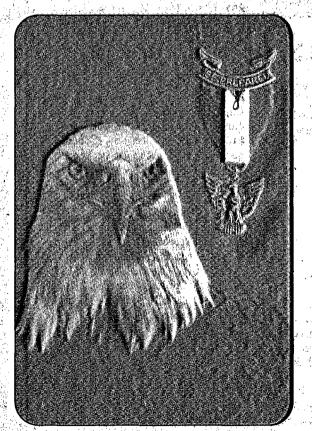

The ceremony will be held in conjunction with a Court of Honor and the 80th anniversary of Scouting in Wayne.

Local Troop 174 is considered to be one of the oldest such chartered organizations in the state. However, Scouting in Wayne began informally in 1914, just four years after the movement was founded in the United States.

Leaders of this "unofficial" local group were W.R. Ellis and Paul Mines. In 1922 Professor Arthur Gulliver. Sr. became Wayne's first Scoutmaster when the group registered as Troop 1 on Jan. 1, 1923. Gulliver served 18 years, the longest tenure of any Wayne Scoutmaster.

Dale Hanks became the city's first Eagle Scout in 1929 and Derek Loewe became the 119th Eagle Scout in 2002.

In 1929 Scouting units across the country were organized into Regions, Councils and Districts. Wayne was assigned to the Covered Wagon Council (now Mid America Council) with headquarters in Omaha and became Troop 174.

In 1925 Professor K.N. Parke and T.S. Hook organized an "unofficial" unit which registered as Troop 175 in 1929 with Walter Albert as Scoutmaster. This Troop was not registered from 1940-44 during World War II but then registered every year thereafter until it merged with Troop 174 in 1983.

Wayne's Troop 221 started in 1966 with Jewell Schock as Scoutmaster. It combined with Troop 174

Scouting for younger boys in Wayne began in 1945 with J.W. Sutherland serving as first Cubmaster of Pack 175. Pack 174 formed in 1959, followed by Pack 221 in 1968. The three different Packs have since merged into the single unit of Pack 174.

To help commemorate the dedication of the plaque and scouting's anniversary, the Troop is inviting all Wayne Eagle Scouts and all 43 past Scoutmasters to attend the ceremony.

Any of these special guests planning to attend should contact event chairman Gary Wright for more details. He may be reached by phone at 375-5434 or write to 420 West Fourth Street in Wayne.

Participating in the ribbon cutting will be Mayor Sheryl Lindau and representatives of Lindner

Citizens may notice American flags being taken down with the transition of activity from combat to peacekeeping and nation building in the Middle East. Also, some need to be cleaned and repaired. This intermittent displaying of American flags on distinct patriotic holidays and other special occasions was anticipated. We trust everyone understands that keeping them displayed indefinitely would make them susceptible to harmful weathering as well as, unfortunately, vandalism and pilferage.

Common sense needed when dealing with public health

the nation and maybe the world in tional approach to health care recthe field of improving public

There are multitudinous govern: mental departments and projects at the state and federal level aimed at getting denizens of the realm to take better care of themselves.

Whether it's pregnant mothers or those pregnant with worry, excess body fat or bad tempers, the do-gooders and up-lifters in government are encouraging them to do one thing or another.

Well, enough. It's time for practicality, for which the Great Plains are noted, to prevail.

The need for a dose of common sense was brought home recently when a study, albeit one from England, concluded that the "moderate exercise" generally recommended for one and all would not, in fact, stave off "early death from heart disease."

You need to jog or otherwise make yourself sweat and wheeze in order to prevent the old ticker from becoming a time bomb, the study said. Previous studies said moderate inconvenience, like "brisk" walking, would do the job.

Again, enough! Virtually all of the advice-givers cover their backsides with qualified recommendations. The all-time greatest is the one on tobacco products. The one that says the surgeon general has figured out that smoking may be hazardous to your health. Geez. That's like saying that a bullet passing through your cranium at a high rate of speed may interfere with your thought processes and the ability to operate heavy equipment.

What with the world having become a global village and an international economy and all that,

It is time for Nebraska to lead the time is right for an internaommendations.

The thought from here is that it's time to put warning labels on virtually every product big enough to support a label. Everything. The Nebraska Legislature should take

Main Street Focus Unfunded mandate will be costly to Nebraskans

By Attorney Gen. Jon Bruning Is there too much arsenic in your drinking water? The EPA thinks so, despite what many Nebraskans believe is little or no scientific evidence. Last Wednesday I was in Washington, D.C. to argue the point in front of the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

At issue is the EPA's new arsenic rule, set to go into effect in 2006, that would lower allowable arsenic levels in drinking water from the current 50 parts per billion to 10

The new unfunded federal mandate would cost Nebraskans roughly $110 million. Even more troubling is the fact that these costs disproportionately affect Nebraska's rural communities. since the vast majority of affected water systems serve Nebraska's smallest communities. To be more specific, the mandate will cost some Nebraskans as much as $1,700 per household, per year to adhere to the new standard.

The costs are too great for Nebraskans to sit idly by while the federal government imposes an unnecessary and unfunded mandate. Nebraskans have had naturally occurring arsenic in our drinking water for generations and there is no evidence that we've experienced health problems as a already clean.

A lawsuit against the federal . In some cases when these federal government is never an easy decision. While some people may not think $110 million dollars out of rural Nebraska's pocket is worth fighting about, I believe I have a duty to fight for Nebraskans even when I know the road will be difficult or the odds are long. If the EPA has its way, there will be Nebraskans who must forego food and health care to pay $1,700 annually to clean up water that is mandates arrive, we as Nebraskans need to say enough is enough. In some cases we need to draw the line in the sand. I believe this is one of those cases.

Budget puzzle fitting together

By Senator Pat Engel District #17

I was absent from the Legislature last week because of surgery and adverse reaction to medication. But I'm back at work and have a variety of items to

The state budget for the next two fiscal years is going to take center stage in the Legislature for the rest of the session. We have the immense challenge of dealing with a projected revenue shortfall of $761 million.

This week, we will consider two bills that represent important pieces of the budget puzzle. LB 759 is a Revenue Committee proposal to raise an estimated $160 million in tax revenue. LB 540 is the Education Committee's plan to deal with state aid to K-12 schools After months of study and hearthe Appropriations Committee, on which I serve, plans to present its final budget recommendations to the full body on April 25. The Appropriations Committee's proposal comes up $360 million short of balancing the budget.

Nebraska Economic The Forecasting Advisory Board is scheduled to meet April 25 to update tax revenue projections for the two-year period. The forecasting board will provide further insight on where we are headed. From my perspective, it doesn't look good, but we'll wait to see.

On another subject, the Legislature last week debated LB 1 became involved in this issue 435, a bill that would increase Nebraska's minimum wage. The federal and state minimum wages are now the same at $5.15 per hour.

The bill originally proposed increasing the state minimum wage by $1.15 in a two-stage process over a six-month period. After lengthy debate, we adopted an amendment raising the wage by 60 cents in a similar two-stage process. ANTAW TE FRANCE SO

The bill received first-round approval April 16 on a vote of 25-16. However, Sen. Chris Beutler of Lincoln, the bill's sponsor, promised that he would not try to get the bill passed until next year. He said he could sense that many senators wanted more time to consider the measure.

Supporters of the bill said the minimum wage had failed to keep pace with inflation, increasing the need for welfare and other government services. Opponents argued an increase could hurt small businesses, especially at a time when the economy is struggling.

I'm pleased to report that one of my legislative objectives was accomplished with the passage of LB 259.

The bill contains provisions that are designed to facilitate repair work on railroad crossings in villages and cities. The bill would grant the Nebraska Department of Roads authority over railroad crossings in municipalities, a move that will help municipalities solve problems in this area.

after South Sioux City experienced considerable problems with repair work and brought this matter to my attention.

On April 11; we gave final approval to LB 259 on a vote of 43-0. The governor has signed the Bills the seal of the season will be selected as

Sharing thoughts

Dr. Sheila Stearns, Wayne State College president, takes time out to ask a few questions of youngsters attending Kiddie College on campus during the "Week of the Young Child" festivities that included "Beach Day" on April 8 despite the snowfall the day before. When the youngsters were asked why they were dressed for the beach with snow outside, one responded, "Well, it's summer in here!" The purpose of "Week of the Young Child" is to focus public attention on the needs of young children and their families and to recognize early childhood programs and services like those at WSC directed by Mary Sebade, instructor within the Technology & Applied Science Department.

That is the concept behind a relatively new approach to healthcare called aromatherapy. Most often specific aromas are used to produce a calming effect. Aromatherapists use essential oils of different herbs to produce the desired outcome,

Three recent studies indicate that the scent from the oils of lemon balm and lavender when inhaled or applied to the skin, significantly benefited elderly persons with existing behavior problems such as dementia and agitation. The oils were either steamed into the room air or were applied as a hand lotion. In each study no side effects were noted and all participants were able to complete the designated treatment. The significance of these studies is that an improvement in agitation eventually could lead to decreased need for prescription-calming drugs, in

New Drug-Coated Stents

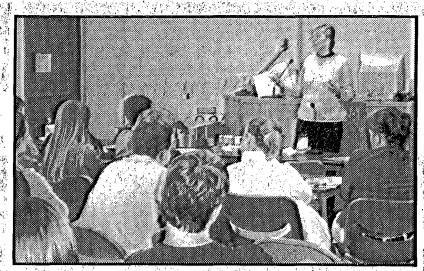

According to a new study, using a drugcoated tube (stent) to prop open a clogged artery may help reduce the risk of future problems. Using stents is not a new idea, but coating them with an immune suppressing drug is. The medication, sirolimus, currently used to prevent organ Phil Griess R.F. rejection in transplant patients, seems to reduce inflammation and scarring in the artery. Only 9% of those who received coated stents experienced reclogging compared to 36% of those who received standard stents.

Controlling mold in homes

Molds long have been recogattention to some extensive mold problems has increased awareness and questions.

Amy Topp Extension Educator 4-H & Youth

There are mold spores everywhere. They come into houses in many ways including on clothing and with air movement. There usually is food and adequate temperatures for them to grow in many parts of the home. Mold spores settle and grow in the presence of moisture.

Mold allergens can cause respiratory congestion, eye irritation, headaches and fatigue. Some molds can be triggers in people with asthma. However, it's important to realize molds haven't suddenly become more dangerous and labeling specific molds as killer molds has lead to some misunderstanding.

People often call local extension offices for information on having their homes tested for mold. If a homeowner sees a mold problem, he or she needs to find the moisture source, make needed changes to reduce or control the moisture and safely get rid of the mold. Knowing the mold genus or species is probably not necessary unless a medical professional has requested the information.

Testing for molds is expensive, why it's needed and whether a clothing that covers the whole body knowing the genus type makes a nized as allergens, but media difference in what will be done to get rid of the mold, Basements smell musty when; can give off toxins, so special filters: moisture on cold walls and floors meets warm air from outside that has cooled to the point at which the moisture in it condenses. running a dehumidifier is one way to deal with this problem.

Mold in bathrooms typically is a bigger problem in winter. Taking showers and bathing can put a lot of moisture into the air. If the walls or ceiling are cool, some of that moisture will condense on off the shower walls and tub and. drying towels elsewhere can help, Providing more ventilation to the exterior to get rid of the moisture before it can condense is the best; way to reduce mold in the bath-

Cleaning up mold used to be as simple as wiping diluted chlorine MAY CALENDAR bleach solution. Now recommendations include a strong detergent. followed by a rinse on hard surfaces. Contaminated porous materials that aren't easily cleaned should be thrown away. The bleach solution is reserved for use as a sanitizer after all evidence of mold is removed from areas that may have ben exposed to dirty water, soil and bacteria.

Professionals can be hired to clean up molds, this is recommended especially if the mold covers more than 10 square feet and if someone in the household is sensitive to mold. This recommendation is intended to make sure the mold isn't spreading through the house during the removal process.

A hot topic in housing today is the information would be used, including wearing goggles, gloves, and a mask. At the minimum level, use a HEPA filter such as an N95 or N100 to filter the particles. Molds are needed. Spreading mold spores through out the house can be reduced by carefully wrapping the moldy materials in plastic bas or tarps and sealing the plastic, Mold on surfaces that will be cut or pulled away can be held more stable by applying sheets of flypaper or contact adhesive paper to avoid spreading the spores. Larger plastic sheets also can be taped to surfaces such as these surfaces. Wiping moisture wallboard before the wallboard is removed.

WHEN TOMORROW STARTS WITHOUT ME

When tomorrow starts without me id I'm not here to see... f the sun should rise and find your Eyes filled with tears for me,

I wish so much you wouldn't cry The way you did today ... While thinking of the many things . We didn't get to say.

know how much you love me As much as I love you... And each time you think of me,

I know you'll miss me, too, .. But when tomorrow starts without me, Please try and understand. That Jesus came and ... called my name And took me by the hand.

And said my place was ready In heaven far above... And that I'd have to leave behind All those I dearly love.

So when tomorrow starts without me, Don't think we're far apart ... For every time you think of me, I'm right here in your heart.

We love and think of you each and every day!

Winside's American Legion Auxiliary plans for upcoming events

Roy Reed Unit 252 American April 14 with Vice President Marilyn Morse presiding.

The Pledge of Allegiance and Preamble to the Auxiliary Constitution were recited.

No secretary's report was available. Treasurer Greta Grubbs provided the report and was placed on record for audit.

Those attending were Marilyn Morse, Greta Grubbs, Lorraine Denklau, Evelyn Jaeger, Carol Rempfer, Henrietta Jensen, Judy Jacobsen, Kathy Jensen and Beverly Neel, Hostesses were Carol Rempfer and Evelyn Jaeger.

Helen Witt, lifelong member of the Unit, died during the month and on her behalf a monetary donation was made to the Memorial Fund and an Auxiliary grave marker will be given to the family for her gravesite. The auxiliary will hold a "Draping of the Charter" ceremony at the May meeting in her honor.

District 3 President Judy Schopke's newsletter was read advising of the Department Convention to be held at Kearney on June 26-29 and volunteers are needed to serve on various committees. Units are to submit names of volunteers they may have to the Department.

Greta Grubbs displayed three quilt squares she had made for the Department President's friendship/ memory quilt. The squares will be forwarded to Luyane Weisgerber, Department President from cousins Greta Grubbs and Nancy Bottlefson and aunt Marian Iversen. Members noted that the squares are "very beautiful and should add so much to the finished product,"

Kathy Jensen inquired as to whether or not the auxiliary could approach the town and see if an appropriate slogan could be placed on the Winside sign to honor the men and women who are in the military service and serving around the world. Greta sent. Grubbs will check with Carol Brugger, Village Clerk, to see if Monday, May 12 at 7:30 p.m. something could be placed on the board on the entrance into Winside from the west.

The 2003 Americanism Essay

Contest was concluded on the Legion Auxiliary of Winside met local level with four young ladies participating - Winside Public School seventh graders Virginia Fleer, Nicole Jensen, Michaela Staub and eighth grader Kristy Doffin. The theme for this year's essay was "What America's Future Holds for Me?" Winners include Virginia Fleer, first; Nicole Jensen, second; Michaela Staub, third and Kristy Doffin, honorable mention.

> Virginia's essay was forwarded to the Department for competi-

> Each participant will receive an award from the local Unit. A book entitled "The Celebration of America," is available at WalMart for $5.39 for future ideas of rewards for such ocassions as the essay contest.

Lorraine Denklau advised that the Girls State Committee of herself, Vera Mann, Doris Moritz, Marcella Schellenberg and Evelyn Jaeger had met with the junior girls interested in attending Girls State and selected Stacy Gnirk as the delegate and Samantha Bussey as alternate.

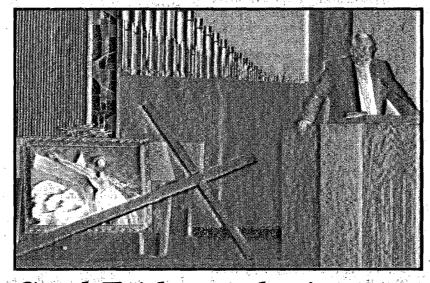

Discussion was held on the Winside Fine Arts Boosters community calendar and whether or not to combine the Legion and Auxiliary ad into one. After much discussion, it was voted to keep the Auxiliary ad as is and pay the $40 ad fee for the 2004 calendar.

Lorraine Denklau inquired about the band uniforms the group donated money to through the Fine Arts Boosters. It was suggested that Mrs. Hansen, Band Instructor have several band members attend the next meeting and model the uniforms. The Auxiliary had made a monetary. donation which purchased a complete uniform.

Annual reports are due into Lincoln by May 1, 2003. Volunteer hours and costs need to be submitted to President Pat Miller so the reports can be compiled and

The next meeting will be Hostesses will be Shelli Keiser and Jan Topp. The group will be planning the Memorial Day dinner at the meeting as well.

Sav-Mor Pharmacy Rx and OTC Medicines for Rheumatoid Arthritis

Of the most common types of arthritis, rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is the most disabling. The body's own immune system attacks the joints. The result is joint swelling, inflammation, and pain. Typically, the smaller joints in the fingers, hands, and feet tend to become inflamed first. Rheumatoid arthritis can occur at any age but usually. begins to appear between the ages of 25 and 50.

Fortunately, prescription and over-the-counter medicines relieve RA symptoms in 3 out of 4 of those who suffer. However, 1 in 10 eventually become disabled from this condition. The primary medicines used for RA are a large group of drugs called the "NSAIDs." This group includes aspirin, ibuprofen, celecoxib (Celebrex), and rofecoxib (Vioxx). NSAIDs reduce swelling in affected joints and alleviate the pain in most people. If NSAIDs don't work in 2 to 3 months, slower acting drugs such as gold thiomalate (myochrysine) may be helpful. Penicillamine (Cuprimine) is used sometimes when gold thiomalate isn't effective. Hydroxychloroquine (Plaquenil) used in less severe RA. Once-aweek oral Methotrexate (Rheumatrex), with or without other drugs, is being used more

Easter comes and goes

Well, how was your Easter holiday? Wet and cold, I guess, but nobody was complaining about moisture. We enjoyed ham from Dan Hansen that was processed by Thies Locker in Winside and it was excellent. We had eight guests overnight and for breakfast, and just nine family members for dinner. So, it was a quiet one. Alex kept asking where his cousins were.

How did your Easter cookies turn out? Mine weren't quite hollow, but they tasted good. That will teach me to print recipes I haven't tried. You would think that, if it came from a church cookbook, it would be accurate.

We always make it to church on Maundy Thursday, and participate in a communion service. We weren't in our church last Sunday, so didn't get a schedule on the week's services. The Ashland paper, which arrives on Thursday, said that Trinity, down the road to the west, would commence at 7:30. That seemed about right to me, especially on daylight savings time, so we left here at 7:20 for our church, down the road to the east. We walked in at 7:24 and could hear the pastor speaking. Then he announced the hymn number. They were on the third hymn! The service had obviously begun at 7. We had missed the sermon and were just in time for communion. I was still blushing on the way home. We once met a couple getting to church as the service finished because they had forgotten to set their clocks forward in the spring, but we had never had that happen. I told the minister he should remember this is a farming community.

Sunrise service was at 7, a joint service with the church at the west. They have a gorgeous electronic pipe organ, and there was a brass quartet, so the music was inspiring. You may ask, why are there two Lutheran churches six miles apart on Church Road? We don't know. The old timers tell us that six miles was a long distance when the road was a dirt one Now, though, people go past the respective church buildings. There is a cemetery in between the two that belongs to the old Evangelical church that once stood there; and there was a Catholic church on east a few miles. So the road is

After all the towels and sheets were washed and dried, I put on the two hour Bob Hope special. And laughed, and cried. What a national treasure he has been. All those USO tours in all those places with strange sounding names! It made me realize again the power of Humor to counteract even wartime stress, loneliness, wounds and being homesick. When they closed with Silent Night, and the troops all joined in, my tears flowed right along with all those

Once again, it was a "sad-glad' day: the POWs arrived home; 127 men are coming home in caskets. The looting has finally slowed; the task of reconstruction has begun. We have an Internet photo of a field of corn in Tennessee that has been bushhogged to read God Bless America. Which is why the Big Farmer is no longer farming, That guy used his computer to plot the design, and downloaded it to his GPS, and followed it with his bush hog. Technology! Amazing!

There is also a map of the U.S., with all of the states delineated. I wonder if he will still be able to

Farm House both ways to their Tent caterpillar control explained

Tent caterpillars are a common site on apple, crabapple, plum, cherry, maple, hawthorn and other trees in the early spring The presence of tent caterpillars can be noticed early in the development stage through careful inspection of the tree branches before any leaves begin to emerge. The insect is best described as small hairy caterpillars with a white stripe down the back, brown and yellow lines along the sides and a row of oval blue spots on the sides. The small worms are found in the tree branch attachments where the larva will develop a web or "tent" for protection, Most often, the worms are not noticed until the webbing becomes large and the worms are up to one inch in size.

The larva will feed on the developing leaves and can completely defoliate a small tree; however, the tree will usually recover and put out a new set of leaves.

In a landscape, the worm nests become an eyesore either through removal of the foliage or the presence of the large webbing: Larvae can also become a nuisance as

These mature larva that are wandering cannot be controlled very easily with insecticides because of their size and basically are no longer damaging to a plant.

Management for the tent caterpillars is relatively easy since. these insects are not considered a serious threat to the tree or shrub survival. The best method is to they travel on sidewalks, wander ... remove the "tent" created by the on other plants or found on patios. caterpillars by pruning off the branch and throwing the branch into the trash or burning the branch, if allowed.

There are many natural controls by parasites which accounts for the seasonal variations in populations in the tent caterpillar. A natural disease organism called Bacillus thuringeniensis can be used and is most effective on the young larva. Other commonly available insecticides can be used such as Sevin or Malathion: All chemical labels team-Jersey judging competition. should be read and followed. Any chemical used should get into the "tent webbing" as if offers good protection against the insecticides. Just remember that the hairy caterpillars will turn into butterflies as the season progresses offering the beauty of seeing those insects in their best appearance.

A similar insect infests trees in the fall but it is called the fall webworm. It creates similar physical symptoms with the webbing material usually on Mimosa and Honeylocust trees. This is usually in the fall creating some appearance problems on landscape trees and defoliation, but is not considered a serious pest most of the time. Control is similar to the tent caterpillar with insecticides or early detection on the small larva before they begin to spin the webbing material.

Nebraska is pseudorabies free

Nebraska Department of Agriculture Director Merlyn Carlson has announced that Nebraska is pseudorabies free.

"This is wonderful news for Nebraska and the swine industry to be declared pseudorabies free. Nebraska has been battling this extremely contagious swine disease for 22 years," Carlson said.

This designation means that every swine herd in Nebraska is now considered negative for Pseudorabies, an extremely contagious virus that causes reproductive and respiratory problems, including abortion, stillbirths and even occasional death losses in breeding and finishing hogs.

Pre-Scheduled Communications from

Edith Zahniser - Edith Zahniser gave the Board some information on her background and the German program at the High School. She would like to see the board reconsider eliminating the program when making cuts. Darla Munson & Joni Poutre - Darla and Joni both voiced their concerns to the board about losing their Family Health Insurance. The insurance benefits are considered a great benefit to their package. They don't want to see that benefit taken away and would like the board to reconsider.

Barb Gillan - Barb spoke in regards to the strings program. She has been teaching strings for four years and believes the program is what pulls the Wayne School a step above. the rest. Enrollment in the program has been increasing over the years. She began with 21 students four years ago and now had 34. She does not feel the cost of the program, which is only a quarter of her time, is substantial enough to eliminate the program. She also took the time to thank parents and teachers for their support and understanding in the before and after school program. She urged others to contact their senators in regards to how they feel about the budget cuts to the school system and any ideals they have. The board members agreed that it is important that the Senators hear from the public. Patty Grasshorn & Judy Poehlman - Patty commented on the possible termination of their health insurance coverage. For the kitchen staff, the insurance benefits have been considered a huge part of their wages. They feel the benefit is well deserved. They have also served increasingly more lunches throughout the years without adding extra staff. Judy added that although it is difficult being a nonprofit entity, they have always managed to come out ahead in the lunch account for need funds for kitchen projects. She feels her staff deserves the reward of having an insurance benefit and does not want to see that taken away. She is concerned she will loose some of her great staff.

Denise Fredrickson - Denise spoke on behalf of the paraprofessionals in the district, She too was concerned with the possibility of cutting their health insurance. She does understand that some cuts do need to be made but would like the board to reconsider making cuts to the health insurance benefits. Dwaine Spieker - Dwaine represented the High School English Department. They were concerned with the reassignment of Terri se to the Middle School. The current staff will have a heavy load which in turn will be reflected on the program. It will take more time to evaluate writing projects. This will mean fewer and shorter writing assignments with less quality assessments and there will be less

Cal Kroeker - Cal expressed his support for the strings program. As a parent, he feels the program broadens the curriculum and would like to see it stay.

Brittni Sprouls - Brittni is a student at the High School. She is participating in the German program and would like to see it remain part of the curriculum so her vounger siblings will have the same opportunity she has. She has relatives that speak German and the class has been beneficial in learning and understanding her heritage.

Catherine Budin - Catherine Budin spoke as a parent who has a student involved in both the Strings and the German program. They would hate to see either program eliminated. The school is one thing that the community can brag about when we have new comers to the area.

Bryan Cahagan - As a parent. Bryan voiced his opinion on the elimination of the German program. Northeast Nebraska has a large amount of German heritage and he believes it is important to understand that piece of heritage. He also thanked parents, teachers, and staff for attending the meeting. He was also pleased to see so many voicing their concerns.

The Board thanked all of those who voiced their concerns and opinions. Making cuts is never an easy decision by it is something that has to be done.

The fencing will be put up on the North and East sides of the track. After speaking with Todd Berry of WSC, it appears that the football field is in need of new lights. Since the school has games scheduled on their field throughout the season, they are looking towards us for some help with this project. Foundation may need to get involved in this matter. The board formed a committee to meet with representatives at the college in regards to this lighting project.

Mr. Mitchell - The one project that will be focused on this summer will be to raise the modular and put a foundation under it. The modular will be used as a tech area. The current space will become an office for Rocky The project will cost between $13,000 and $15,000

Beef is one of nature's best tasting multivitamins

Vitamin pills are an amazing innovation. They provide concentrated potency in one small dosage.

But while vitamin pills can provide nutrition, they can't satisfy hunger, nor can they furnish the energy you need in calories. Food can do that, and has vitamins that are more readily absorbed by the body. Furthermore, if you rely on vitamins as your nutrition source you may be missing out on yet undiscovered nutritional components naturally found in food.

Our best nutrition comes through food. Food provides the nutrients we need in the form that our bodies can use to fuel our lives and sustain us.

The fact is, there is no "perfect food" that if we eat it, and only it, all the time, we'll be healthy. We need more than 40 essential nutrients every day. Every food has something to offer, and every food is lack-

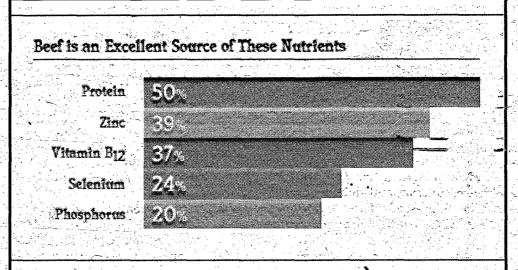

If you're looking for a good food that can be considered a "multivitamin," though, you need look no further than beef.

Beef is an excellent or good source of many nutrients that our body needs to keep going. Three of the key ones are Zinc, Iron and Protein - or ZIP

These nutrients are critical for good performance in our daily lives. And according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, a 3ounce serving of beef supplies 50 percent of the daily recommendation for protein, 14 percent of the iron and 39 percent of the zinc - all for just 10 percent of a 2,000 calo-

Beef doesn't stop there. In the same serving it provides 37 percent of the daily recommendation of vitamin B-12, along with 16 percent of vitamin B-6, 18 percent of Niacin, 12 percent of Riboflavin and significant amounts of key trace minerals.

All that in a package that a vitamin pill would find hard to beat. Nature's best tasting multivitamin? Mine is beef,

Not only does it taste good, beef is also a great way to fuel your body. In the American diet, beef is the number one contributor of protein, zinc and vitamin B12, number two of vitamin B6, and number three of iron and niacin. By supplying a nutrient bundle in every bite, eating beef is a great way to make your calories count. A 3 oz. serving of lean beef contributes less than 10% of the calories in a 2,000-calorie diet. At the same time, it supplies more than 10% of the Daily Value for these

It's one thing to go around telling everyone how good you are, but quite another to be in business and not take the opportunity to tell your customers about the outstanding services you offer ... So we are tooting our horn!

We have two of the area's finest, most experienced meat cutters you will find, with over 50 years of combined experience. Curt and Gary are up to the challenge.

So whether it's a pound of fresh ground beef for supper, or 10 lbs. of our seasoned prime rib for your holiday feast, we trust you'll find our meat department a cut above the rest. Enjoy!!

Feedlot internship program preparing students for beef industry careers internship is an intensive seven-month course. It's designed for students who have completed their other undergraduate studies and can be taken for up to eight hours of undergraduate credit through UNL's College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

The internship is geared for students pursuing a career in beef feedlot management or related agribusiness fields. Between classroom discussions with industry experts and four months working at a feedlot, students learn all facets of feedlot management.

Terry Klopfenstein, a professor of animal science, started the internship in 1988 after recognizing an urgent need for more well-trained people to fill management positions in the beef industry. Since then more than 70 students have taken the internship. About five students per year sign up for the intensive program.

The internship begins in May and concludes in December and has three phases. The first eight weeks are spent in the classroom in fast-paced discussions where students build basic knowledge of feedlot operations. UNL faculty and industry experts discuss feedlot management, nutrition, economics, animal health, and personnel management. From mid-July through late November, students intern at feedlots mostly in Nebraska, although a few students work out-of-state. In December, students return to campus to discuss and compare their experiences with the group and the experts they worked with earlier.

need the basics to be successful in the real world," Klopfenstein said. "Sitting down and talking about what the interns experienced on the feedlot just reinforces everything they learned in the classroom."

The internship is open to agricultural graduates from UNL and other universities who have completed the prerequisite courses. Klopfenstein recommends students apply by December for admission the following May.

Students perform a variety of roles at the feedlots and are paid for their work.

"They do everything possible from driving the feed truck, assisting with animal health, identifying sick cattle, washing water tanks, processing cattle, harvesting silage and working in the office," Klopfenstein said.

"Most of the students have a farm background, but only a small percentage are from feedlot operations," Klopfenstein said.

Josh Benton, an animal science graduate from the University of Tennessee, participated in the internship program last summer and worked at a 15,000-head feedlot near Broadwater, Neb. He has a dairy background and hadn't worked in feedlots. He signed up for the opportunity "to see all the ins and outs of a feedlot for six

"This opportunity exposed me to everything about a feedlot including management, riding pens, doctoring cattle and driving a feed truck," Benton said.

Students are matched to feedlots based on their interests. About 25 to 30 feedlots ranging from 1,000 to more than 100,000 head of cattle have hosted UNL interns.

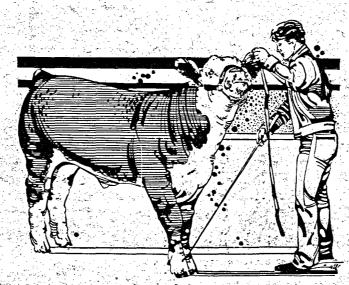

Feedlots are very supportive of the program, Klopfenstein said, because "they believe there is a tremendous need to develop young managers in the feedlot industry.

Bill Rhea II, manager of Rhea Cattle Co. of Arlington, Neb., took the internship training about 10 years ago and now works with interns in his operation.

"There are many different ways to do things in this industry and it is beneficial to see how others put together a system that works for them," he said. "My experience in the internship built contacts in the industry that I still use. Since that time, we have hosted several interns because we feel it is a valuable experience for everyone involved.'

energy diets metabolic heat load will tend to elevate body temperature, particularly during period of climatic heat stress. Mader's research on heat stress and body temperature indicates that even during normal warm summer days body temperatures can easily reach 103.5 degree F, however, these conditions usually cause no adverse problems in feedlot cattle. During hotter more humid periods, cattle temperatures may increase to 104 degrees F or more.

Generally this is the point cattle begin to show signs of heat stress. Most cattle start to go off feed when body temperatures rise above 104 F. Cattle will usually die when body temperature approaches 108 F. Cattle, which are close to being finished tend to be most prone to heat stress. Also, during hot environmental conditions, temperature of black-hided cattle from mid to late afternoon can be as much as 1 degrees F greater than white-hided cattle.

"A part of the survival and acclimation process, when animals or humans have a variety of ways in which they try to dissipate heat. Mader says cattle that are beginning to get hot will stand to dissipate more heat, align themselves parallel to the sun rays, seek shade from other animals or shelter, and show elevated respiration rates. Behavioral signs of heat stress also include restlessness, grouping of the cattle versus spreading out in the pen, and crowding at the water tank. Extra waterers or more waterer space/animal will minimize heat stress. Processing or working cattle during these periods is discouraged.

Mader's research has shown that moving cattle through processing facilities can easily raise body temperature .5 degrees F. In addition, body temperature can be elevated up to 2 degree F if cattle are moved several hundred yards and/or have a nervous disposition. "Do everything to keep cattle calm; processing and shipping cattle by 8 a.m. is preferred.

"Heat stress studies suggest manipulation of feeding time and/or amount of feed consumed can effectively improve an animal's heat balance under periods of heat stress resulting n enhanced animal comfort," says latter. "Also, during hot dry summer lays feedlot surfaces can reach 140 degree F. Cooling or wetting the suranimal by letting the animal dissipate heat to the cooler feedlot surface.

In-store promotion program and project ag-venture highlighted

The Nebraska CattleWomen's In-Store Promotion Program entered its 14th year in 2003, with 40 CattleWomen participating along with 22 stores from Scottsbluff to Omaha.

CattleWomen are committed to continue with their efforts to educate consumers about the nutritional merits that Beef Last year 240 in-store promotions were offers along with relaying messages that held and over 62,000 consumers were pertain to food safety issues.

In- Store Promotions Coordinator, Bonita Lederer, reports, "It's an exciting time to be involved in the beef industry. For the first time in 20 years consumer demand for beef has increased. The Heat & Serve prepared beef products have contributed significantly to this increase. Nebraska CattleWomen added "Prepared Beef" recipes to our selection that will be used during our In-Store Promotions that are held once a month in grocery stores across the state.

Last year 240 in-store promotions were held and over 62,000 consumers were reached. In-store promoters prepare and sample on the average 97 lbs of beef a month. With more than 80 percent of the total U.S. beef volume being sold at the retail level, it is vital that we are in those grocery stores handing out samples, increasing beef sales, answering consumer's questions and relaying Food Safety messages.

There is no one more effective than the producer themselves to sell their product. As producers of the nation's beef supply. Nebraska CattleWomen are committed to providing a wholesome, nutritious food and to communicate accurate information about beef's nutritional qualities and the role beef has in a healthy diet."

Agriculture is the economic engine that drives Nebraska's economy. And educating children at a young age about the role agriculture plays in their daily lives allows them to have a better understanding. This is the goal that Nebraska CattleWomen strive to achieve through Project Ag-Venture. Nebraska CattleWomen have developed this program that is specifically geared towards Nebraska fourth-graders. It's designed to increase students' awareness of agriculture and to create an understanding of how important beef is to this industry. As producers, it's vital to educate young children about the importance of what farmers and ranchers do.

By the end of the presentation the children realize "there is no way to have an agless day". Agriculture affects us all. They learn about the importance of Beef By-Products. 99% of the beef animal is utilized through meat or the by-products. They learn that if they use soap, chew gum, eat marshmallows and like gummy worms; they have used a beef by-product.

Kim Schneider, one of the Project Ag-Venture presenter's reports, "There are so many kids leaving the farm and ranch and not coming back. We show the kids tha there are other job opportunities involving agriculture. If you can't be a farmer or rancher, there are other ways to be involved, such as Processing, Marketing and Distribution of the food and fiber system."

Nebraska CattleWomen reach over 3,000 students a year with Project Ag-Venture. They participate in the annual Ag Day program in Grand Island, Lexington and Broken Bow. National Ag-Day presentations were held in the following Sale Barns: Ogallala, McCook, Valentine and Gordon, also with Farm City Week in North Platte.

Safety remains highest priority for researchers, U.S. beef industry

Throwing a burger on the grill is one of the true joys of summer. It shouldn't be clouded by consumer doubts about food

That's one of the thoughts behind a concentrated beef industry effort over the past decade to find, reduce and eventually eliminate E. coli O157:H7 from the beef supply. Tremendous strides have been made in this effort, according to J.O. "Bo" Reagan. Ph.D., vice president of research and knowledge management for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), a contractor to the Cattlemen's Beef Board.

"While it will be a huge task to eventually eliminate this pathogen from nature completely," says Reagan. "It's our intention to first put up so many hurdles from pasture to plate that it will be very, very hard for the pathogen to get around. The goal is elimination, but the immediate objective is reduction."

Reagan says it's a goal that the entire industry has embraced, through the Beef Board. In January the industry, with funding from the $1-per-head beef checkoff, conducted a two-day working summit attended by 200 leaders, representing each link in the beef production chain. These individuals committed to a series of industry-wide action steps to move them to toward the goal of eliminating E. coli O157:H7 from the beef supply.

Among those attending were cattle producers, beef fabricators and processors. retailers and foodservice executives. Specific action steps identified included:

* expanding research and fast-track approval of interventions such as cattle vaccines and feed additives:

standardization of safety testing and verification at packing plants; uniform practice of sampling, testing and negative confirmation before meat processing; and

* microbial control systems for foodservice suppliers; and

* consumer information about cooking temperatures and thermometer use at the point of purchase.

"Safety has always been a top priority for our industry," says Reagan. "That's why our product is one of the safest in the world. But we can, and will, do better. The farm-to-table solutions identified at the summit will really help."

Building on Past Efforts

The industry's efforts to address E. coli O157:H7 didn't start at this summit. Even before a deadly outbreak of E. coli O157:H7 on the West Coast in 1993, the industry had been researching ways it could reduce pathogens and improve the safety of the beef supply overall.

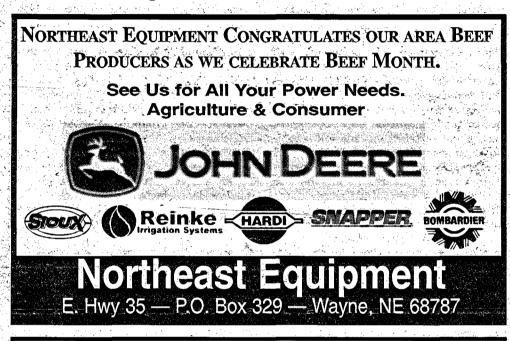

That event, though, spurred the industry to form the Blue Ribbon Task Force, which developed a blueprint for addressing the problems the pathogen raised. It helped sharpen the focus on the challenge and provided greater urgency to the problem.

For example, natural food acids had been studied since the early 1990s as a way to remove pathogenic organisms from beef carcasses. And, more than 25 different methods in combination with washing and trimming to reduce pathogens had been evaluated. Many procedures were found to be effective, and are in use today.

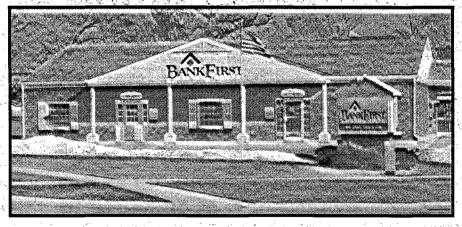

During the last 10 years thermal pasteurization and carcass washing were also approved and adopted by many harvest facilities to reduce the presence of pathogens. Irradiation has also been approved for beef, and processing facilities. in many parts of the country are using the technology.

The battle isn't over, but successes have been found and even more are on the horizon, Reagan says. An April 2002 report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention showed an overall 23 percent decline in illnesses from the top four bacterial pathogens since 1996. E. coli infections alone had dropped 21 percent since

"We've got a ways to go, but the motivation and momentum are there," according to Reagan. "The nation's beef producers have dedicated millions of their checkoff dollars to finding ways of further improving the safety of the end product, and harvest companies have spent even more implementing the technology from research that's been done.

Nebraska is beef state

Nebraska is the beef state, in part, because it produces more than one of every live steaks and hamburgers in the U.S. Nebraska has the top three beef cow counties in the U.S., including the nation's No. 1 cow county - Cherry County, with nearly 170,000 cows.

In addition, Nebraska ranks first in commercial cattle harvest with 7.9 million head (22% of U.S.) and first in live animal and meat exports ($894 million).

January 2003 figures illustrate that Nebraska continues to have far more cattle than people. Cattle outnumber Nebraskans 4 to 1. Cows number 1.93 million, versus Nebraska residents who number just 1.7 million. The cows and the 4.9 million head that are annually fed in Nebraska total nearly 6.8 million cattle.

Just as Washington is known for apples and Florida for oranges, Nebraska produces beef.

Nebraska is a microcosm of the U.S. cattle industry. As with the cattle industry in the U.S., Nebraska has smaller ranches and feedlots in the east and larger ones in the west. This parallel is also true of geography and climate as well - more precipitation in the east and more arid in the west. This is another reason Nebraska is referred to as the Beef State.

Why so much beef in Nebraska? Nebraska has a unique mix of natural resources. Cattle turn grass from 25 million acres of rangeland and pasture, more than one-half of Nebraska's land mass, into protein and many other products for humans. The land grazed by cattle allows more people to be fed than would otherwise be possible.

One billion bushels of corn are produced here each year, 40% of which is fed to live-stock in the state. Cattle producing families, who make their living from the land, have a strong incentive to protect their animals and the environment.

The Nebraska beef cattle industry is the state's single largest industry and the engine that powers the state's economy. The multiplied impact of the $5.1 billion in towns and cities across the state... In short, the beef cattle industry has an unmistakable impact on other economies in Nebraska.

Nebraska is unique. The importance of cattle feeding to Nebraska's economy runs deeper than in other states. Nearly 5 million head are finished and marketed in Nebraska, a state with a population of 1.7 million residents. Texas markets a third more cattle than Nebraska, but its population of 20.1 million residents is nearly 12 times larger.

Iowa markets less than 2 million cattle and has 1.1 million more residents than Nebraska. This means such states depend on other industries. Their standard of living isn't nearly as dependent on cattle feeding as Nebraska's.

The Nebraska Cattlemen association serves as the spokesman for the state's beef cattle industry and represents 5,000 professional cattle breeders, ranchers and feeders, as well as 48 county and local cattlemen's associations.

Its headquarters are in Lincoln, and second office in Alliance serves cattlemen in western Nebraska.
