St. Mary's School to note milestone

For 50 years, St. Mary's Elementary School has been providing a quality education for students in the community.

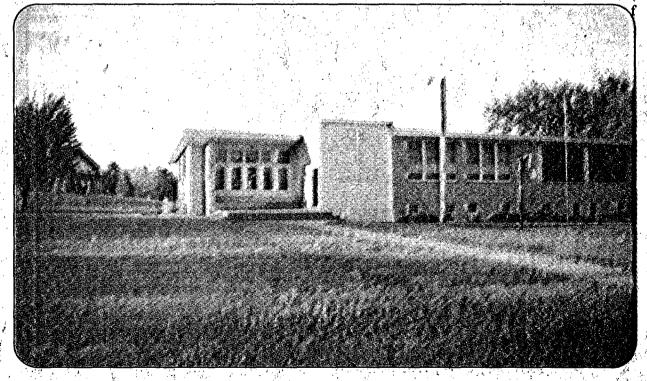

In honor of this milestone, an anniversary celebration is being planned for Saturday, June 14 at the school.

The event begins with a 5 p.m. Mass of Celebration with the Most Reverend Elden Francis Curtiss, Archbishop of the Omaha diocese. Several former priests of the parish will also be on hand.

Following the Mass, a meal will be served on the lawn of the school. Invitations for this event are being sent to alumni of the school.

A program is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Other activities are still being planned.

Under the guidance of Fr. Hupp, ground for the school was broken Sept. 8, 1952 and by June of 1953, the building was up and enclosed, the furnace was in, cement floors were laid in the kitchen and auditorium, desks for all the classrooms had arrived and a building purchased to be used as a convent by the four Missionary Benedictine Sisters who had been promised to be sent in August by Mother Consolata

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Some chickens have come home to roost at the Capitol in the form of prison inmates.

The "lock 'em up and lock 'em down" philosophy of corrections, ever so popular when the public treasury is full, has fallen out of favor. Not surprisingly, its decline has been approximately as precipitous as the fall in the state revenues.

A vote to close the Lincoln Correctional Center provided state senators with a perfect budget-cutting tool. It met two popular criteria among elected policymakers. First, closing the LCC would save a bunch of money. Second; since they wouldn't close the joint (forgive the play on words) for a couple of years, the senators have time to change their minds next year.

There is also the possibility that Gov. Mike Johanns could veto the idea, if it's in the final budget that goes to his desk. Then senators would need 30 votes to override Johanns' opposition.

Proponents of the idea, led by Sen. Dwite Pederson of Omaha, said closing the prison would put Nebraska on the right track - one leading to greater use of parole. Nebraska has one of the nation's lowest rates of parole. When you get locked up in Cornhusker country they don't throw away the key, but they are inclined to forget they have it. The pending plan could release some 500 inmates who are within six months of being paroled.

Dealing with the prison population There is no denving the political popularity of rhetoric and policies that reflect a "kick 'em in the butt" attitude toward the criminal crowd. That attitude is popular nationwide. The problem is that it also is expensive, and it keeps getting more expensive. The growing interest among policymakers in what is called "community corrections" doesn't reflect a sudden change of heart among officials here or elsewhere. It generally reflects a change in states' finances. Putting the public's money where your rhetoric is becomes increasingly difficult when the public runs short of the former.

With economic times as hard as they are, it is relatively safe for politicians to look at revising the prison population downward. If any particular constituency gets lippy about it, the Legislature can always say: "Okay, pal. We will gore your ox instead. How's that?"

3A

The most interesting aspect of this situation: If the economy should greatly improve, will lawmakers reverse themselves next year? And, if not, what's to be done with that nice compound of buildings in southwest Lincoln?

Maybe it could hold the overflow from the state's other institutions.

The cement chickens have taken over the Main Street Office! They're waiting for you to stop in, sign one (or more) out, paint or decorate it and return it to the office no later than the week of July 7th. There is no theme or special instructions (outside of good taste) - just have fun.

The chickens will be auctioned off at Henoween (July 11) to help defray our Henoween expenses.

Briefly on Henoween - everything seems to be lining up nicely. It'll be an evening of food, fun and entertainment.

The Chicken Show/ Henoween brochures are out and so are the tshirts and collectibles. The entertainment will be "For the Master" and Friends, plus a Branson type show featuring the group "Free Beer and Chicken." We have made a special effort to provide something for the entire family.

Budget bill passed

By Senator Pat Engel District 17

The Legislature on May 20 passed the main budget bill and an accompanying tax revenue bill. This is expected to lead to a confrontation with Gov. Mike Johanns, who has threatened vetoes over spending and tax issues.

We gave final approval to LB 407, the main budget bill, on a vote of 37-11. The budget calls for spending $5.4 billion for the next two fiscal years. We started the process with a revenue shortfall of $759 million and made $426 million in reductions, leaving a deficit of $333 million.

To get the budget balanced, we gave final approval on a vote of 36-13 to LB 759, a comprehensive tax measure that raises an estimated $348 million over the two-year period. The surplus figure would go into the cash reserve fund, the state's savings account. LB 759 would indefinitely extend income, sales and cigarette tax rate increases adopted last year as well as increase alcohol taxes and broaden the sales tax base to include more services.

I voted for LB 407 and LB 759. I believe the budget, which contains significant spending cuts to agencies and services, is realistic considering the tough economic times facing the state. The tax revenue bill is necessary to avoid further harmful cuts. Overall, I think the package represents a good compromise.

The spending and tax package now goes to Gov. Johanns for his consideration. If the governor exercises vetoes as expected, we will have to override them to avoid a special session. Any veto by the governor would require 30 votes to override cent of the regular cost. Second, any member in good standing with the chamber can now sponsor a new member and receive a credit to their annual investment. Both of these initiatives are fully explained in the June issue of the chamber newsletter.

The decision should be thought out carefully and all options considered.

A young adult may be added as an approved user on their parents' traditional credit card account. The bills are sent directly to the parents, since they are the primary card holder. This allows parents to monitor the charges being made.

"Teen" or "smart" cards are not truly credit cards, but are a much safer alternative. Money is deposited into an account by the parent and each time the young adult makes a purchase using the card, the amount of the purchase is deducted from the account. When the funds in the account have been used, the account must either be replenished or the card can't be used anymore.

Whatever, the option, the thing to remember is to use credit cards wisely.

Even as this is not a recipe column, it is also not a restaurant review. But with Memorial Day and summer coming up, I thought some of you might be contemplating visits to metropolitan Nebraska. We stumbled on to a couple of great new spots recently. A couple of weeks ago, the greater Omaha tourism office had an official proclamation for Tourism Week. It took place on the River City Star, a river boat, and Mayor Fahey did the honors. We had a terrible time finding it, and got there late, but were in time for the breakfast cruise and visited with some of the guests, who represented mostly catering services and hotels in the downtown area.

Mike had an appointment with the orthopedic surgeon in Council Bluffs, so we decided to have lunch at the new cafe' right on the river. It's called Rick's Boatyard Cafe', and has been open since October (which we figured was long enough to get the kinks worked out), and wasn't quite as hard to find. A few days later, I was in southwest Lincoln. Not South Pointe, but about 27th and Nebraska Highway 2. I saw an Arby's and a Valentino's but was looking for something new. I spied a sign saying "Bob's Gridiron Grille." There were cars all around and a small sidewalk section. I took a chance and went in. Wow!

It houses the greatest collection of Husker memorabilia I think I have ever seen. There are photos and prints on all the walls, and there are a lot of walls. There are glass cases of helmets, shirts, trophies, autographs, and footballs. I was there an hour and no way could I see it all.

Before I left, I headed to the restrooms. Here, there hang clippings from many years ago. When we played, and lost, to Pitt, who was rated #1. When the first ever football game was played at NU. When we were the Bugeaters.

Here, too, I recommend the service, the food, and the prices. In fact, I went home with a box of Taco salad which is called Fiesta Bowl salad on the menu. Try it!

Fertilizing a newly planted tree

One of the frequently asked questions about newly planted trees is." Should I apply fertilizer to help the tree during the early years of growth?"

Research has shown that in Nebraska, the soil has adequate nutrients for the young tree to establish a healthy root system. This assumes that the tree is the plant to grow requires more water and energy which in turn causes more stress to the tree. This sounds like double talk, but trees can be stimulated to grow to fast and that results in death of the tree. A healthy tree is able to develop a root system to seek out nutrients from the soil and normally not need any extra nutrients. One exception to this general rule is to correct visual nutrient deficiencies that develop. One common nutrient deficiency for some species of trees is iron deficiency. This shortage is referred to a "iron chlorosis" which means the tree leaves turn yellow and is commonly found on maple trees. This family of trees are adapted to soils that have more iron available than most Nebraska sites and additional iron is required to be added. The iron can be applied the nutrients before they get to the tree root. The major concern for trees and lawns is competition for water. Often, the stress caused by the grass competition is too much for the young tree resulting in death of the tree", Hemsath stressed.

Normally, trees and grass do not mix. The tree needs to be mulched around the base of the tree at a distance of at least a four foot circle for young tree and more as the tree matures. The tree has its' own area for water and nutrients without grass competition and more success will be noticed in tree survival. in a state in the second s planted in a good soil and not in soil that has been disturbed or moved and the topsoil is no longer present. "Nebraska topsoil is well supplied with nutrients for young trees to become established", said

Del Hemsath, extension educator for Dakota, Dixon and Thurston counties.

"Soils in Nebraska are relative young soils and contain nutrients that soils in other states are many times lacking. Reading articles in magazines that suggest adding fertilizers to newly planted trees is not a recommended practice for the good soils in Nebraska.", Hemsath emphasized.

A newly planted tree is under stress for many reasons and adding another stimulant to cause as a dry iron sulfate material or injected into the tree. Iron does not move very rapidly in the soil, therefore, it takes many years for the roots to contact and absorb adequate amounts of iron to prevent the yellowing on the tree leaves. In this particular case, adequate site preparation and proper tree species selection is a key to management of the "iron chlorosis".

"Another commonly asked question concerns fertilizing trees in lawns when the lawn is fertilized with a lawn fertilizer that contains iron and how that affects the tree", said Hemsath.

"Grass in lawns have a shallow root system and that root system will normally intercept most of

In terms of the EBI, the single most important factor that producers can control during sign-up is the wildlife habitat enrolled or planted on the property. The planting mixtures that provide the most wildlife points in the EBI also provide the best wildlife habitat, Plantings of diverse mixtures that include warm-season native grasses, and forbs or legumes can maximize both the wildlife value and EBI points of CRP offers.

Another way to increase the points of a CRP offer is to only offer the steeper and more erodible portions of a tract. This may increase the points given for soil erosion, water, and air-quality that are based on soil types and slopes. This will also allow the producer to continue to farm the best ground.

If they choose, producers can also get additional EBI points for reducing the rental rate of their CRP offer below the county maximum rate and by not taking cost share for vegetation establishment.

The current sign-up is a great opportunity for landowners and producers to retire marginal or difficult to farm cropland for 10 to 15 years. Annual rental payments are paid throughout the life of CRP contracts in exchange for the wildlife, soil, and water benefits provided.

Landowners can receive an additional $3 per acre by enrolling in CRP-MAP, a hunting access and habitat improvement partnership between the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission (NGPC) and Pheasant's Forever. For more information on CRP-MAP and questions regarding wildlife habitat contact Clayton Stalling or Scott Wessel at the Norfolk Game and Parks Commission office at 402-370-3374.

To offer land for CRP enrollment, contact the local FSA office before May 30.

Learning to march

Richard Metteer, former Middle School Principal, visited Phylis Trenhaile's fifth grade Social Studies class this week to teach the students how to march as soldiers. The visit was in conjunction with the study of the Civil War by the classes. Metteer also related a number of other bits of information about the Civil War to the students.

A clean sprayer is critical

"Homeowners and ag producers who are using the same sprayer for different types of herbicides and insecticides need to be careful." said Del Hemsath, extension educator. It is not uncommon for the same small hand sprayer or larger farm sprayer to be used for a wide range of weed control in crops using different types of herbicides. The larger sprayers can be rinsed in the field with several gallons of fresh water that is carried on the sprayer for such a purpose. The rinsate can be applied in the same field reducing any disposal problems. If the producer is switching to another crop and changing herbicides, more precaution is needed. The new types of herbicides often can harm sensitive crops with just the residue left in the hoses from the last application or the residue left in the tank when it is not rinsed. The pesticide label will give directions on cleaning but a common material to use is ammonia and water. Occasionally, detergent will need, to be added to help remove the, residue.

Home sprayers can be just as much or more of a problem as the small sprayer is used for lawn weeds and perhaps to spray the garden or flowers for insects.

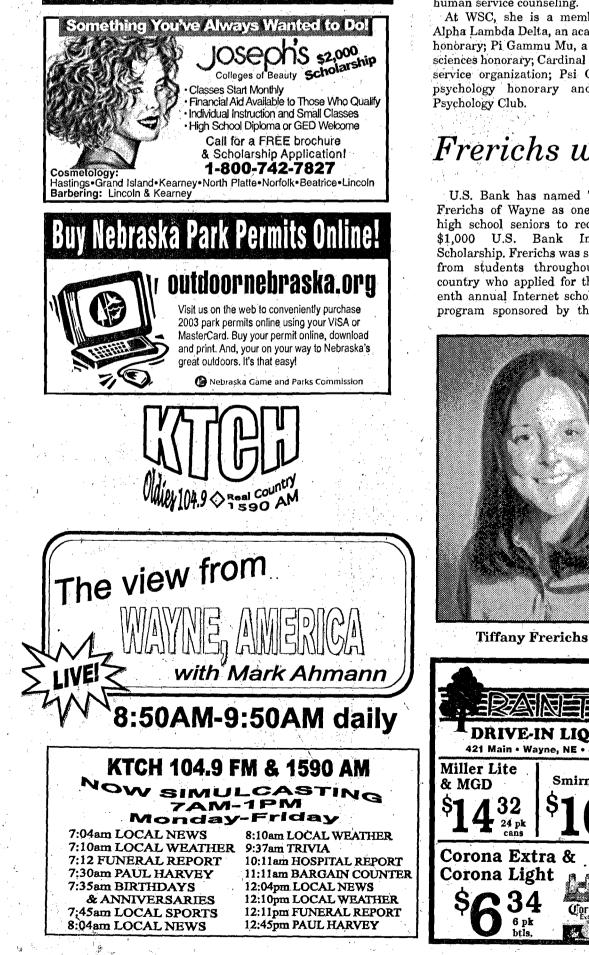

occur on the sensitive plants. In the lawn application, it is better to have a separate sprayer for the herbicide and another sprayer for the insecticide. Be sure to label the sprayer for the intended use. Even cleaning the hand sprayer is not effective as a little bit of residue can be very damaging to the sensitive plant. Large sprayers need to be cleaned between application jobs to prevent damage to crops. Del Hemsath, extension educator for

Dakota, Dixon, and Thurston

counties, said "I have seen fields damaged from a spraying applica> tion just from the residue left in the tank from the previous field and taking the sprayer onto a sensitive crop. Occasionally, poor mixing of the material in the tank can cause problems for a sensitive crop also." A few minutes of extra care can be a huge money saver later. Consult the "Guide for Weed Management in Nebraska" for a more complete list of cleaning solvents.

Often times this is a disaster waiting to happen especially if the sprayer is not cleaned between uses. 2,4-D or formulations containing 2,4-D are used for dandelion or other broadleaf control. This herbicide is hard to remove from the sprayers and damage can

Meeting friends

Juniors from Wayne High School recently met their third grade pen pals at Wayne Elementary. The students have been writing to each other, as well as sends cards, picture and other articles relating to their lives throughout the school year. During the meeting, the students talked about activities they enjoyed. The juniors are taught by Sylvia Ruhl and the third grade teachers are Liz Garvin, Sandy Spethman and Joan Hansen.

Host families needed in Wayne area

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive soon for academic semester program homestays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According Pacific to Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director John Doty, the students are all between the ages' of 15 and 18 years, are Englishspeaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P.I.E currently has programs to match most every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

P.I.E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal inhome meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, childless couple, a retired couple or a large family. Families who host for P.I.E. are month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student. For the upcoming programs,

P.I.E. has students from Germany, former Soviet Union, the Venezuela, Argentina, Brazil, Finland, Hungary, Korea, Switzerland, Mexico, Italy, Paraguay, Australia, Yugoslavia, China, Belgium, Vietnam, and many other countries. P.I.E. has also been invited to participate in Soviet Union to the United States.

P.I.E. is a non-profit educational organization that has sponsored more than 20,000 students from 40 countries since its founding in 1975. The organization is designated by the United States Department of State and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel whether it be a single parent, a r (CSIET), certifying that the organization complies with the standards set forth in CSIET's Standards for International also eligible to claim a $50 per Educational Travel Programs. Doty encourages families to contact the program immediately, as it will allow the proper time for the students and hosts to get to know one another before they actually meet for the first time. Wayne area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative may call PI.E. toll free at 1-800-631-1818. The agency also has travel/study program opportunities available for American high school students as well as possibilities for community volunteers to assist and work with area host families, students, and schools.

Brittany Burke

Brittany Burke is national award winner

The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Brittany Burke has been named a United States National Award Winner in Journalism.

The Academy recognizes fewer than 10 percent of all American students.

Brittany, who attends Wayne High School, was nominated for this national award by Lauren Walton, an English and Journalism teacher at the school. Her name will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, which is published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. United States Certainly, Achievement Academy winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors and other qualified sponsors and upon the Standards of Selection set forth by the Academy. The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability and recommendation from a teacher or director. Brittany is the daughter of Bob. and Kathy Burke of Wayne.
