Beware of counterfeit $20 bills

The Wayne Police Department received a report of a suspicious $20 bill received at a local business over the weekend. The bill did prove to be counterfeit. The serial number of the bill was forwarded to the United States Secret Service Office in Omaha and it was confirmed that counterfeit bills like the one found here have been widely circulated.

Merchants are urged to contact the Wayne Police Department or their local banks if they suspect a counterfeit bill. The bill recovered is discolored and doesn't have a watermark or security micro printing on it. This counterfeit bill appears to have been made on a high end photocopier. Anyone who may suspect they have received a counterfeit bill similar to the one recovered can call the Wayne Police Department to compare the serial numbers of their suspect bill and the one recovered.

The U.S. Treasury Department's web page, www.ustreas.gov, outlines the following tips if you receive a suspected counterfeit bill:

- 1. Don't return it to the passer. 2. Delay the passer if possible
- 3. Observe the passers description, as

Entertainment and more can be found at 'The Barn'

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

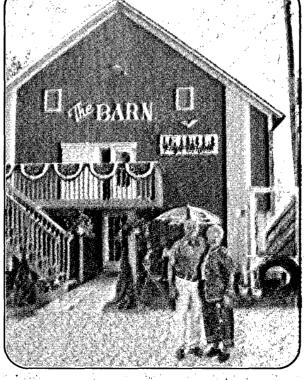

Rural Wayne couple, Merle and Donna Ring, recently had their barn remodeled so entertainment and gatherings can be held there for the community. Saturday, the swing choir, Knight Sounds, performed at "The Barn" located on their Evergreen Heights farm 4 miles east and one-half mile south of Wayne off Highway 35.

Knight Sounds, from Lincoln Southeast, is one of several groups entertaining at The Barn. The next to perform is the "Dancing Granny's & Grandpas" on Sunday, June 15 at 7 p.m. Other future bookings include the Wakefield High School 60th class reunion on July 5 and on Aug. 3, the Northeast Nebraska Antique Car Club is planning to have a catered meal there.

According to Ring, the idea of remodeling their barn into an entertainment facility began last summer when Eric Smith of Wayne, part of the gospel quartet "For the Master", mentioned to Rings that their barn would be a great place to hold their musical event "Christmas in the Country."

This, along with an article Rings had read in the magazine "Farm & Ranch" about a Minnesota couple who changed their barn into a facility for performances and events, made Rings consider the remodeling project.

Rings' daughter-in-law knew the Minnesota couple, so she gave them a call and made arrangements for Merle and Donna to visit them. Last fall, on a trip to Winnipeg, Canada, Rings' stopped by Roseau, Minn. to check out the couple's barn.

Energized by what they saw, Rings contacted Eric

Smith and he began remodeling their barn. "We first had wood chips on the lower level but during the Christmas in the Country performance (which drew between 600 to 700 people to The Barn), the chips were strewn all over so we decided to put in a new floor which was completed this spring," Merle said.

Merle noted they left some of the old original look to the barn which gives it a more rustic, nostalgic atmosphere.

Rings' barn is close to 100 years old and used to be full of horses. Rings left the stalls intact and gave them names of horses Merle's father had. Merle's father, Wallace Ring, was a horse trader and had the best of horses.

And, for the rest of the stalls, Merle and Donna

Should Nebraska have a parliament?

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association

Nebraska should give itself a morale boost by changing the structure of state government.

States are not bound to model themselves after the Congress. That's why Nebraska can do its officially nonpartisan, Unicameral thing.

The last session of the Legislature proved Nebraska would benefit mightily by switching to a parliamentary system of state government.

Nebraska could scrap the current legislative system (something that voters are often in the mood to do) and adopt a constitutional amendment creating the Nebraska Parliament.

It makes absolute sense for several reasons.

A parliamentary system could put a governor's feet to the political (usually fiscal) fire. It could do the same thing to lawmakers.

Most importantly, it could force voters to confront their own political schizophrenia. The former manifests itself when the citizenry cheers for a governor who wants budget cuts, but demands that their individual state senators bring home the bacon for their favorite, local cow of the sacred

Gov. Mike Johanns campaigned under the "No Higher Taxes" banner, twice. He won both times. Voters gave him a whopping majority the second time around. So, the electorate likes Mike, right? The statewide majority seemed very fond of his fundamental notion about running government, which is reflected almost entirely in the "No Higher Taxes" slogan.

Now, then. When the nation and the state fell upon hard economic times (or, when hard economic times fell upon them) Johanns 7 office or from any Main' Street stood by the slash and burn fiscal policy he had always ballyhooed. Lawmakers made some real, and deep, budget reductions.

A very solid legislative majority wrong-headed in demanding much greater cuts, without considering higher taxes. Some accused him of failing to provide real leadership so that he could instead maneuver for a U.S. Senate race. They shredded his proposed budget vetoes, with some critics suggesting he didn't fight very hard for them and if he did, he wasn't much of a fighter. They also enacted tax increases to augment the budget reductions that they did approve,

In a parliamentary system. Republican Johanns would be held responsible for getting things accomplished with the overwhelming Republican majority in the parliament. If he couldn't get what he wanted, he could "go to the people" after a certain period, meaning he could call new elections. No waiting around for four years to put some yokel on the political carpet. If a governor was foundering in the Legislature after, say, two years in office, he could call the people back to the ballot box. He would be asking them, in effect, "What do you want and who do you want?"

Lawmakers were clearly under pressure this year from all manner of local elected officials, and all manner of constituencies, to reject the additional, 10 percent acrossthe-board budget cuts Johanns had proposed. Johanns' plan, they argued, would have forced local governments to boost local property taxes. Senators, talking one with another, said they listened to the folk in their districts and did what seemed right. Johanns said he tried to live up to promises made to his statewide constituen-

Freshman lawmaker Mick Mines of Blair voted to override all three of Johanns' vetoes. Mines had campaigned on a less government spending' theme, but decided that it was best for the entire state if Johanns' proposals were reject-

Who was right? Whose notions best represented the will of the people and/or the best interest of the state?

Direct democracy is only a stone's throw from mob rule. Lawmakers who have studied the issues should cast their votes according to conscience. The folk back home can be wrong about things. But there is still good reason to make governors and state senators more accountable, more often, for their positions and deci-

There is at least the possibility, and a legitimate hope, that an experiment with a state parliament would make citizens feel and bear a greater share of responsibility for what is done in their collective name, with their dollars.

_egislature completes session

By State Senator Pat Engel District #17

The Legislature finished its 2003 session on May 30. Things fell into place, allowing us to complete our business on the 89th day of the session – one day early.

Last week we overrode Gov. Mike Johanns' vetoes of a spending and tax package for the next two fiscal years. The enacted budget calls for spending $5.4 billion for the next two fiscal years. Spending is set to increase by 1.3 percent for fiscal year 2003-04 and by 3.6 percent for the following fiscal year. The budget addresses a revenue shortfall of $758.9 million for the two-year period. Although we were able to address over $400 million in spending reductions and fund transfers, a tax revenue bill was necessary to close the remainder of the shortfall. The main revenue bill was LB 759, which will raise an estimated

$344.7 million during the twoyear period. Here are the main elements of the bill and the amount raised under each catego-• Extension of income, sales and cigarette tax rate increases adopted last year, $263.2 million. • Increase of alcohol taxes, $9

• Broadening of the sales tax base to include more services, $68.1 million.

The main thrust of the bill is to extend tax rates currently in reductions. place. The effects of the tax measure will be modest. For a family of four earning $50,000 a year, the sales tax rate extension will add an estimated $63 per year and the income tax rate extension will add an estimated $23 per

The budget package included a bill to make the necessary changes to reduce state aid to K-12 schools. The bill raises the school property tax lid by five percent for two years to allow school districts to make up for the reduction in state aid. This doesn't mean that school property tax levies will automatically go up; that will be a decision made by local school boards.

I voted to override the governor's vetoes of the spending and tax bills. I believe our budget plan spreads the financial pain fairly among beneficiaries of government services, taxpayers and tuition payers. It represents a realistic plan to deal with tough economic times without shortchanging the state's future. We had to strike a balance; that's what legislating is always about. The action of the 2003 session follows steps taken during previous years to reduce spending. For the four years beginning with fiscal year 2001-02, we have made a total of $1.079 billion in spending

Elsewhere on the budget front, we got good news recently from Washington, D.C., with the passage of the $350 billion package of tax cuts and aid to state governments. The measure will mean $108.7 million in aid for Nebraska. The federal money comes at a most opportune time.

On another topic, a last-minute attempt to place a casino gambling measure on the ballot failed. On May 28 we debated an amendment to allow six casinos in the state and create a trust fund to spend the gambling proceeds for community betterment. The amendment failed on a vote of 19-22. I voted against the amendment, and even some of the pro-gambling senators voted against it.

It has been a tough year on everyone, and I know that many of you are opposed to how we handled the budget. But I feel that with the compromises that had to be made, we came up with the best solution possible under the circumstances.

If there is anything I can do for you, please do not hesitate to contact me at my Lincoln office: Sen. Pat Engel, District 17, State Capitol, P.O. Box 94604, Lincoln, Neb. 68509; lengel@unicam.state.ne.us; or (402) month-to-month bases. Rather than waiting for these special moments to pass without meaningful recognition, these businesses are maintaining a supply of Chamber Bucks on hand and empowering lower level supervision to make instant rewards for "a job well done." And the most popular reward amount has been $25. So, why not have a stack of 25's instead of 10's, 20's, and 5's?

Therefore, instead of waiting for Uncle Sam to show us the way, we pressed ahead with this innovation. Now, you can get the "check that will not bounce" in any denomination of $5, $10, $20, and $25, plus they can be redeemed at nearly every Chamber member location in the Wayne area for goods and services. You can even pay your utility bill at city hall. All Wayne area banks accept Chamber

While the chamber makes no commission on this program, we are pleased to administer it because it returned over $160,00 to the local economy in 2002. What a great gift for any occasion, and it

Visiting a greenhouse, you normally expect to see many different kinds of plants; not so with Steve and Connie Hall's Logan Nursery at 326 S. Main Street in Wayne.

The Halls specialize in gloxinias. There are thousands of gloxinias in many colors waiting to be hand delivered by Hall to flower shops within a 100 mile radius of Wayne.

Four years ago, Steve noticed commercial delivery of gloxinias, a relative of African Violets, was almost impossible because the delicate leaves break easily. So, he decided to work with propagation of the plant and mass produce them so he could hand deliver them to shops in the area.

Adding to his challenge, he decided to concentrate on producing plants with double flowers which are prettier and last twice as long as single ones. Single flowers last on an average about a week and the plants are lanky. The growth habit of double flowered plants is stockier, more compact and have a better shape. But, Hall admits, double flowering gloxinias are rare and a fluke of nature, which makes mass production of them difficult. Besides working with mass pro-turn the cameras on manually. Officers wear a transmitter with a small microphone that records during traffic stops or other calls for service. Webster said these tools are very valuable, especially for court cases. Most agencies that have installed In-Car Video systems have found that people generally plead guilty when they find out a videotaped record of their stop exists. This is especially true of Driving While Under the Influence cases. In the future these video images may be transmitted to the dispatch center in real time so a dispatcher can monitor a traffic stop from a remote location.

Wayne's police cars do not have laptop computers in them-yet. Chief Webster said this is a very real likelihood in the near future. The purchase of laptops for the patrol cars will certainly be dependent on financing. Webster said they bought the In-Car Video systems with Safety Training Option Program (S.T.O.P.) funds through the Wayne County Attorney's Office. The police department is already looking for grant funds to 911 system. duction of the plants, he also decidof filling tuber orders from recently being featured in the magazine ed to try to mass produce their tubers which grow under the plants "Traditional Home." None of the methods produce and are usually not available for ordering. Steve said no one in the world works with cultivating them except for a few hobbyists for their plants quickly. From a leaf, the process takes about a year and a half from a baby plant to full grown. From seed, it takes considerably longer. Every plant produces around five tubers but it is usually about a year before you can dig under the plant and find them. From an inch-sized tuber, a good sized plant can be produced in 60-90 days,

At this time, Halls have 27 different varieties of gloxinias in their greenhouse. A new type Steve has been trying to produce is a cross between the spotted Tigrena Gloxinia and a plain colored type; double-flowered, no less.

While gloxinias are in the African Violet family, they are not similar in many ways. For example, gloxinias are Brazilian natives, are much larger and need twice the light than African Violets. Also, gloxinias like the temperature to be around 70 degrees. Halls heat their greenhouse with wood and Steve notes he's always looking for more of it. They do have a gas furnace as same is true growing a plant from a . a back-up.

Wayne golfers place fifth at state

Of the Herald

The Wayne High boys golf team closed out the 2003 season with a fifth place finish at the Class B State Tournament at Lincoln's Mahoney Golf Course last Wednesday and Thursday.

Wayne's first day score of 310 had the Blue Devils in early position for a chance at the team title, sitting just eight strokes behind first place McCook at 302.

However, McCook would shoot a blistering 286 on the second day to blow away the rest of the Class B field and post an easy 15-stroke win over Gering, 588-603, and claim the state title. Wayne finished with a 321 team score on the second day and ended the two-day tournament at 631, good for fifth place.

Head coach Terry Munson said. the first day score of 310 was an excellent start to the tournament. "It was exciting for the team to be in fourth place and within eight strokes of the leader," said

Munson added that the second overall record. day was a little disappointing, citing poor putting and fewer greens in regulation for a higher team score of 321.

"On the bright side, Andy Martin competed very well by parring the back nine to shoot a 75 and earn the eighth place medal," Munson added.

Martin, a senior, led Wayne at the state tournament with a 149 two-day score (75-74) to finish in eighth place individually.

Junior Trevor Krugman followed at 160 (77-83), Tyler Anderson, a senior, finished with a 162 (77-85), senior John Jensen carded a 164 (81-83) with Brad Erickson, a senior, closing out the scoring at 166 (85-81).

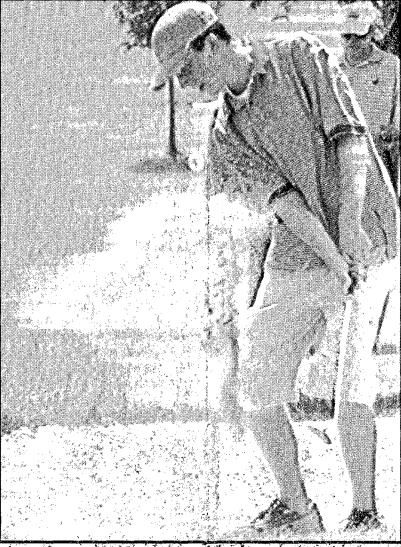

McCook's two day team total of 586 was a new Class B record for 36 holes. The individual medalist, Tyler Lawson of McCook, finished two-under par, breaking Klinton Keller's record of one-under par performance set in 1999.

Munson said the players can be very proud of their season and

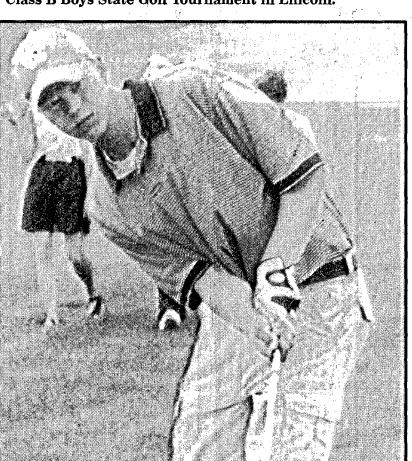

"This team posted the second lowest 18-hole tournament average (322) over the past 12 years," stated Munson. He added the varsity team faced a total of 119 teams in competition this year and defeated 107 of those teams. The JV group faced 95 teams and defeated 79-many of the teams. were varsity clubs. The Wayne varsity team won five tournaments this year while the JV squad posted one tournament win. Munson added the team achieved a great deal of success without Ric Volk, the number two returning player from last year, who missed this season with a knee injury. "We will always wonder how things may have been different if Ric Volk would have been able to play," commented Munson. "To lose your number two player for the season is a big void.'

Soldier's wish is fulfilled in Nebraska with Grandma's special Christmas dinner

Major Randall L. "Randy" Koehlmoos, U.S. Army, originally from Pilger, has recently returned from a deployment to Camp Sayliyah, Qatar with the U.S. Central Command.

During his deployment, Major Koehlmoos told his grandmother, MaryAnn Oetken that what he would miss most were his memories of eating chili soup and oyster stew on Christmas Eve with his extended family. This has been a tradition on Christmas Eve at the Oetken home since Major Koehlmoos was a very small boy.

As luck would have it, Randy, a 1983 graduate of Wisner-Pilger High School, has recently returned to his home station at Mac Dill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla. and was able to return to Nebraska with his wife, Tracey-Lynn and his three sons, Robert, Michael and David, just in time to attend his 20-year high school reunion.

As a treat on May 24, Randy's grandparents, Herman and MaryAnn Oetken, delivered a LEON (NOEL spelled backwards) party to Randy by cooking up a full Christmas Eve meal will all of the traditional memory foods, down to the chocolate covered

Also joining the group for the meal were Randy's parents, Larry and Karen Koehlmoos of Norfolk and Scott, Melissa and Kelsee Obermeyer of Wakefield.

Major Koehlmoos has just completed a three-year tour, serving on the staff of General Tommy Tranks, and will be moving to his new posting at the U.S. Embassy in Kathmandu, Nepal during the first week in June. Major Koehlmoos has served in the Army for 16 years.

In presenting the CPR unit, which is essential for cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training, Carollo said, "If the right kind of treatment can be given to a heart attack victim within seconds after he or she is stricken, the chances are good that the life can be saved. CPR training teaches a person how to keep the heart beating while professional help is

Oil from Two Herbs Used in Aromatherapy

Research has shown that specific odors, when connected to past events, can affect behavior. For example, a burning smell or the smell of hospital disinfectants can cause feelings of anxiety in some persons. That is the concept behind a relatively new approach to healthcare called aromatherapy. Most often specific aromas are used to produce a calming effect. Aromatherapists use essential oils of different herbs to produce

Food safety critical for food fund-raisers and bake sales

By Sandy Preston

Dixon County Extension Educator Food fund-raising events are a great way for communities and organizations to earn extra cash. However, proper food handling is essential to make sure participants don't get more than they bargained for.

Food safety is critical at these food events because so many hands are working in an unfamiliar kitchen serving food to many people over an extended time. Warmer weather makes proper handling even more important. Foods must be safely handled before, during and after the event.

Any event where food is involved should be in a location with hand-washing facilities. Produce and ready-to-eat foods that touch cutting boards, utensils, surfaces or hands that have held raw meat or poultry could become cross contaminated. The potentially harmful bacteria in meat and poultry then cause foodborne illness. Contaminated food usually does not necessarily taste bad, smell bad or look bad.

Cross contamination can be a big problem at these events. One of the easiest ways to prevent this is hand washing.

Food events also should be free of rodents and insects. Organizers should wash and sanitize all surfaces with a 10 percent bleach water solution. It's also important to only allow food workers in the food preparation area,

If you are organizing a food fund-raisers, plan the event carefully. Potentially hazardous foods such as meats, poultry, seafood, eggs, dairy, cooked potatoes or rice, cooked beans and cut melon need to be prepared and served at appropriate temperatures.

Food at fund-raisers tends to sit at room temperature for long periods. This can be dangerous. Hot foods such as casseroles and soups often are placed directly on serving tables instead of on warming units. Cold foods such as salads and cream desserts often are placed directly on serving tables without first being placed in a larger bowl of ice to maintain proper temperatures.

Food can quickly enter the danger zone temperature range of 40-140 degrees causing bacteria to multiply fast, leading to foodborne illness. Hot foods must be kept steaming hot - 140 degrees or higher - and cold food very cold -40 degrees or lower,

Use a food thermometer to check that proper cooking temperatures have been reached. Organizers also should make sure there are plenty of warming trays, chafing dishes, crock pots and crushed ice available so hot food stays hot and cold food stays cold during service.

Any potentially hazardous food that has been at room temperature for two hours or more should be thrown away.

Normally bake sales involve low-risk foods such as cakes, cookies, fruit pies. However, potentially hazardous foods, such as creamfilled pastries, custards and meatcontaining foods, should not be sold without proper temperature

Foods should be individually wrapped if possible so they are not contaminated when transported, displayed or served. Tongs, utensils or tissues should be used for serving items that are not individually wrapped. For more information regarding food safety at food service events, consult NU Cooperative Extension NebFact NF92-57, Food Safety for Temporary Food Service Establishments, available at a local extension office or on the Web or consult the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service guide, Cooking for Groups: A Volunteer's Guide to Food Safety.

Pilger church completes remodeling project

The completion of a year-long remodeling project at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Pilger will be observed with a service of celebration and dedication on Saturday, June 14.

The public is invited to the ribbon cutting and program at 2 p.m. with an open house to follow until Former pastors and their spouses have been asked to return for the day and special music will be provided by former Pastor Scot McVey-McCluskey of Crookston, Minn. and local talent. The afternoon program will be led by current supply pastor, the Rev. Don Olson of Pender.

An extensive remodeling project has been undertaken by the nearly 200-member congregation to make the chancel and its basement social hall handicapped accessible. The new, 800 sq. ft. addition allows for extra seating in conjunction with the church sanctuary and features an octagon-shaped stained glass window and vaulted ceiling. To complete the project, the church's bell was rehung in a bell tower made from three, free-standing, steel beamed

Vacation Bible School Expedition held

A total of 74 four-year olds through sixth grade students explored some of the mysteries of ancient Egypt at the Vacation Bible School Expedition held at Our Savior Lutheran Church in

The theme of this year's event was "Treasure of the Nile: On An Expedition to Jesus."

Those in attendance found real treasure when they unearthed the awesome Bible stories which took place in ancient Egypt. Most importantly, they discovered in every story that God was preparing for the coming of Jesus, the greatest treasure of all.

Along with unearthing the awesome Bible stories, activities during the week included music, crafts, games and snacks.

"It was a great time to see so many children excited for Jesus as they heard stories, sang the songs and made the crafts. God has blessed us with some wonderful children to share the Gospel with and a great VBS staff to carry it out," said Larry Wilson, Director of Youth and Family Ministries at Our Savior.

Families brought sack lunches and gathered with the children on the south lawn for a closing picnic and program on May 30. The VBS participants shared songs learned in VBS with the congregation at the 10:30 a.m. worship service on June 1.

another cloudy, gloomy day. But, hey, I'm not complaining about rain! And, if my neighbors don't have all their beans in, I can't help it. It is different when they aren't your acres. I can attest to that. I still worry about it, but it doesn't keep me awake at night. Plenty of other things do, though!

Like this week, when I've committed to cover for a nurse on an Alaskan cruise, while having guests almost every night. I'm still not sure how I'm going to get two rooms clean on Thursday morning and get to Lincoln at a decent hour. All depends on when they want breakfast. Guess I should establish a time for breakfast and be done with it.

Anyway, we survived Cousin Camp with no major happenings. Thanks to oldest grandchild Thomas, I found a marvelous place to get out of the heat and let Butcher hog head count at the Is It Fall Already?

Walking along the streets in town, it looks like it is fall already with all the leaves falling off the trees. Is it drought? Insects? Hail?

The actual cause of the leaf drop is a disease called "anthracnose" that affects many popular shade trees. Sycamore, ash, oak, maple, and walnut commonly exhibit symptoms each spring.

Although the symptoms may appear serious, anthracnose diseases rarely kill trees. In most cases, healthy trees quickly recover from anthracnose infection with little damage to their long-term health. Infected leaves will show signs of water-soaked spots on expanding shoots and new leaves. The spots enlarge and develop into brownish green to brown lesions. The leaves may grow in a twisted fashion and appear wrinkled. The tree will drop the diseased leaves and grow new leaves from another set of buds.

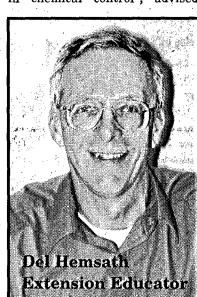

"The wet and cool spring has been ideal for the disease to develop and infect just about every susceptible tree in an urban setting", said Del Hemsath, extension educator for Dakota, Dixon and Thurston counties. "There is no need to spray for the disease as it is too late to do anything at this point, just allow nature to take care of the problem."

"Another interesting disease that is commonly seen in the spring is Cedar Apple Rust," Hemsath stated. The disease requires two species of trees for survival, the cedar and the apple

In the early spring, after warm rains, the galls on the cedar tree begin to grow and form an orange gelatinous tendrils or "fingers" like structure on the outer branches. The growth almost looks something like a flower but it is a spore producing structure that releases spores to travel with the wind and infect apple trees. The disease on an apple tree can cause fruit drop, deformed apples and leave drop, so it is a serious disease on apples. The symptoms on apple trees are yellowish-orange spots on the leaves. As the disease develops, the bottom of the leaves will grow _ inch tendrils that produce spores,

Control is both cultural and chemical for the apple, crabapple, hawthorn and juniper. "It is always advisable to plant a resistant variety since doing so will reduce time and money invested in chemical control", advised Hemsath. There are fungicides available to help control the level of disease in apples but it must begin at the pink stage in flowering and continue until petal drop. Control of the disease on cedars is usually not needed except for visual appearances.

Consult your local county extension office for more information.

Norfolk Livestock Market on Tuesday totaled 600. Butchers were 50¢ lower and sows were steady to $1 higher.

U.S. 1's + 2's, 230 to 260 lbs., $45 to $45.70; 2's + 3's, 230 to 260 lbs., $44.50 to $45; 2's + 3's, 260 to 280 lbs., $44 to $45; 2's + 3's, 280 to 300 lbs., $41 to $44; 3's + 4's, 300 lbs and up, $32 to $41.

Noxious Weed Awareness Month is being observed

As the state begins to grow green, some of Nebraska's pesky weeds area starting too.

That's why Governor Mike Johanns signed a proclamation recognizing the potential noxious weeds have for reducing crop yield. June will be recognized as Noxious Weed Awareness Month.

"Noxious weed control is essential to Nebraska's number one industry-agriculture," said Merlyn Carlson, Nebraska Director of Agriculture. "It protects agriculture and our natural resources from profit-robbing pest weeds."

Spring marks the start of growing season for noxious weed, which compete with pastures and crops, reducing yields considerably. Some noxious weeds can be poisonous or injurious to humans, livestock and

By law, it is the duty of each person who owns or controls land to effectively control noxious weeds on their property.

The Nebraska Department of Agriculture (NDA) encourages the public to report noxious weed infestations to their county weed control authority. The county weed superintendent identifies each noxious weed and assists with control recommendations.

If infestations go uncontrolled, legal action is set in motion by the county weed control authority.

Seven weeds are designated noxious in Nebraska including musk thistle, Canada thistle, plumeless thistle, spotted knapweed, diffuse knapweed, leafy spurge and purple loosestrife.

For more information on Nebraska's noxious weed program, contact the county weed superintendent or Mitch Coffin at NDA's Bureau of Plant Industry at (402) 471-2394.
