Ford Centennial Model T Tour stops in Wayne

Taking a step back in time, Model T cars were on the streets of Wayne once more. People lined up around town to watch the caravan pass through on Thursday.

One by one, the group drove into Wayne from Norfolk where they had lunch hosted by Norfolk's Courtesy Ford and Ford Motor Company at the Jeanne and Merle Rix Residence.

In Wayne, they stopped to get gas, food, and visited Arnie's Ford-Mercury. They went downtown to visit stores; meandering their way through Wayne on their way to Sioux City, Iowa, where they stayed that evening. Forty-three Model T Fords took to the roads May 25 at an average speed of 35 mph on a trek from Lancaster, Calif. to Dearborn, Mich. to help celebrate the Ford Motor Company celebrate their 100th anniversary of being in business which is June 16. When the Ford Motor Company first began, they started using the first 19 letters of the alphabet to name their new cars. The Model T was first made in 1908. In 19 years, there were 15 million Model T's made. The Centennial Model T Tour was organized by Joss Sanderson, a retired history and geography teacher of Tucson, Ariz. and several other car buffs. The plan for the caravan was to go from Lancaster to Lone Pine, Calif. (167 miles) on May 25., This stretch would bring them across the Mojave Desert.

From Lone Pine on May 26, this route would have them climbing three 7,000 foot plus mountain passes and they would stop in an "almost ghost" town of Goldfield, Nev. to their destination of Tonapah, Nev. (188 miles).

From Tonapah, the group was to travel to Ely, Nev. (169 miles) on May 27. This is a remote stretch with only one store to gas up at along the way. On May 28, they were to go from Ely

Worried about stop sign

I am writing you in hopes that maybe someone in the pleasant City of Wayne will read and take heed to the following concern.

I am a recent and yearly visitor to Wayne and I have a great deal of concern about a safety issue concerning the corner of Dearborn and East 4th Street intersection. I have sat and watched, for days and evenings on end and counted the astounding number of vehicles that fail to STOP at the stop sign that is clearly visible. I would average that 18 out of 20 vehicles approaching that intersection from the east, which happens to be the street coming out of the softball complex, never STOP, or even attempt to STOP.

The last time I looked at any traffic or drivers instructions etc., STOP means exactly that and nothing more and nothing less. It doesn't mean slow down and look or keep on driving through.

I have also observed that 99 percent of these vehicle drivers do not wear their seatbelts nor are any of their passengers!

Now you may ask why should this be a concern. I have watched these drivers; cars loaded with children, City of Wayne employees, contractors, police officers and even a deputy sheriff fail to

I know that Wayne has a Police Department, so why aren't they doing something about this? Could it be that the officials of this fair city are far too concerned about so called "PR", worried about what the citizens of this city just might think of any official that would dare to apply laws to all citizens who break the laws? This might need some looking into. I don't care if it is the Mayor, Administrators, Police Officers, Judges, Councilmen or just the regular citizen, if you don't stop for stop signs- you should be cited for a traffic violation. Now that I have said that, how would the Police Department know if they, themselves, do not stop and are rarely anywhere to be seen? What is it going to take to get some use of public monies in this proaction? Possibly a fatality or serious injuries to wake up the good citizens of Wayne.

In reading your newspaper lately, I see that the local Police Department has received several awards lately for educating the public on various issues.

Perhaps they can also start a reading program and start with simple four-letter words like STOP!

Sincerely,

LeAnn S Dempsey, Bushnell, Fla.

Other options

Dear Editor,

It does not seem reasonable to limit the expressway study to only the narrow band via South Sioux City, Emerson, Wakefield, Wayne and Winside without giving any thought to using existing road-

At present there is U.S. Highway 275, this is slated to be an expressway, U.S. Highway 81 which will undoubtedly become four lanes from South Dakota to the Kansas border and beyond and U.S. Highway 20 that will be extended across the state of Iowa, from the Mississippi River to the Missouri River and could reasonably be extended westward to a junction with U.S. Highway 81 or southward to a junction with. Highway 275, either of which would service the Norfolk area very well. This would utilize roadways that already exist, which, in turn, would make it unnecessary to purchase nearly as much additional right-of-way agricultural land, prime land that is presently used for the growing of crops to feed the hungary nationwide as well as worldwide, adding to the economy of the State of Nebraska and the nation. Covering prime cropland with concrete does not provide raw materials that are needed to feed factories thus providing jobs for those who work the plants.

The additional road that is being contemplated in the form of the Highway 35 expressway is a very unnecessary expenditure of tax payer's money except to serve as an ego trip for planners and road builders.

Where is the frugality with the How many acres will be taken from tax rolls? Who will pay to make that loss up?

Looking Ahead in Wayne

City Council

The next city council meeting will be Tuesday, June 24 at 7:30 p.m. when the council will meet in regular session at City Hall, 306 Pearl Street.

City Auditorium

The front doors are being refinished and the original brass hardware rebuilt. We are putting another coat of finish on the maple floors and will have the building open for a sale on July 10 and for Henoween and the Chicken Show weekend.

Lots for Sale

The city still has five residential lots for sale for new construction homes. The five lots are on the north side of Sycamore Street in front of the First Bank Card Center and are priced at $12,000 each.

Stop Sign Watch out for this change at the intersection of Fourth and Dearborn Streets. The current stop sign for traffic coming from the softball fields will be taken down and be relocated to stop the traffic coming from the north on Dearborn. Enhanced 9-1-1

The city council approved contracts for the equipment and installation of new E 911 equipment that will automatically and instantly show the address of the caller and will record calls. If the caller cannot speak, the address is already secured and emergency equipment can be dispatched.

This service will be available for the entire Wayne County area. The E 911 addresses for city residents will be house numbers and streets and for county residents, the address numbers are on the blue signs at the driveways. Wayne County crews installed all of the rural signage last year.

We are looking at options for a mapping system that will show the address of the emergency caller and also show a map with the caller's location on it. The funds for this equipment come from the $1 per month collected on our monthly Quest phone bills.

The Nebraska Legislature has approved funding for a system to locate the geographic location of cell phone calls to 911. That system will develop more slowly in Nebraska where there are voids in cell coverage. Numbers

Looking a gift horse in the mouth

By Ed Howard

Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association Some top Republicans were down on the farm a couple of weeks ago, putting on a dandy dog and pony

Business is business, and that applies to the business of politics for both political parties. Recently, though, it was Republicans who demonstrated that gift horses can be looked in the mouth, accepted and simultaneously criticized.

The stage was set when Nebraska Sen. Ben Nelson (Democrat) wrangled a whoppin' bunch of dollars (Republican)to help states cope with the costs of Medicaid.

Take a nonpartisan view of it. When a member of Congress snags millions of dollars for the home state, his or her political party naturally wants to holler: "Hey! Look what this outstanding officeholder just did!" The loyal opposition ignores it.

That wasn't the case when Democrat Nelson scooped up megabucks for Nebraska and other states via President Bush, who had recently indicated Nelson seemed to be an OK guy. (This reflected Nelson support of the Bush tax-cutting plan - a story unto itself.) Trust me and your common sense in accepting that if a Republican had wrangled that money for Nebraska, the GOP would have ballyhooed it until the cows and the voters came home. And why not? But since it was Democrat

Nelson who pried the shekels out of D.C., why, the most the GOP could say for it was that it was a mixed blessing.

Gov. Mike Johanns, currently the Republican most likely to run against Nelson, said that, darn it, this federal aid was just a tempo rary fix for a portion of the state's fiscal problems. And it might delay Nebraska and other states in making tough decisions on long-term budget matters. U.S. Sen. Chuck Hagel(Republican) said pretty much the same thing, but threw in some stuff about how the money could be better used.

As previously noted, business is business.

If a Republican had done what Nelson did, the line (at worst) would have been ~ 'This brilliant, stop-gap assistance will give Nebraska and other states some breathing room; time to further assess appropriate options in dealof President Bush ing with federally mandated costs. 'Any political wag could write that scenario before noon, and without a second cup of coffee. Still, nonpartisan and bipartisan and pragmatic viewpoints can be found among policymakers. Consider what State Sen. Roger Wehrbein of Plattsmouth had to say. Wehrbein (a Republican in the officially nonpartisan Unicameral) opined: "I certainly think it would be helpful. I see nothing wrong with the federal government helping rum of taxpavers that would find anything wrong with it, too. The real salt in the wound for die-with our Medicaid costs." It probably would be tough to find a quo-hard partisans, though, was represented by some other things. The president's recent Nelson-inspired visit to Omaha was one. Another was a statement from the White House on the president's tax plan: "We're working again with Senator Nelson's office to work on a plan to create jobs. Senator Nelson has kept an open mind in the process, so in the end, we hope he votes for the plan." The irony is that, while Republicans are smarting because Nelson did what just about any Republican would do, doctrinaire Democrats are annoyed that he did

This weekend in Wayne at the county fair grounds is the 11th Annual Steer and Heifer Show, brought to you by the Chamber's Agribusiness Taskforce and sanctioned by the Junior Nebraska Cattlemen, which sanctions only about 20 official events statewide.

The purpose of this Show is to showcase our young women and men and their beef animals. Winners accumulate points for vear-end statewide recognition. This year the Show is a one-day event beginning at 1 p.m. on Saturday and is free for spectators.

One of the chamber's most active taskforces, the Agribusiness Taskforce, each year conducts or coordinates several events such as the Food Check-Out Day with area grocery stores, the Pizza Project with the Wayne County extension office, the Acre Project, the Hay Bale Maze at the Wayne County Fair, and the Ag Tour of regional agribusinesses. Also, the Task force supports seminars of timely interest which this year were a Brock Associates marketing seminar for agriculture producers and the Homeland Security presentations by Dr. Ken Liska and the state health department.

The Agribusiness Taskforce is always open to new ideas and additional membership as it conducts its activities in support of the interests of Wayne area agriculture professionals. Anyone interested in the work of the taskforce may contact the taskforce chair Mark Sorensen, State National Bank, at 375-1130 or the chamber office at 375-2240.

Caution When Using Supplements & OTCs The use of nutritional supplements and over-the-counter (OTC) drugs is increasing dramatically in the United States. In 2000 alone over $19 billion was spent for QTC medicines. Caution should always be exercised when using such products. While warnings are required on all commercial medicine labels, many people don't read them. Further, the FDA does not require rigorous safety testing of health supplements. And not enough is known about potential interactions between supplements and non-prescription

We do know, however, that taking aspirin with ginkgo can cause ocular hemorrhage. Body building supplements containing ephedra have been known to cause dizziness, anxiety, and heart palpitations when taken with decongestants such as psuedoephedrine (Sudafed), Supplements containing calcium and magnesium each have been known to interact with many different prescription drugs. Always ask your pharmacist if you have questions related to the safety of any of these products.

Oil from Two Herbs Used in Aromatherapy

Research has shown that specific odors, when connected to past events, can affect behavior. For example, a burning smell or the smell of hospital disinfectants can cause feelings of anxiety in some persons. That is the concept behind a relatively new approach to healthcare called aromatherapy. Most often specific aromas are used to produce a calming effect. Aromatherapists use essential oils of different herbs to produce the desired outcome.

Three recent studies indicate that the scent from the oils of lemon balm and lavender when inhaled or applied to the skin, significantly benefited elderly persons with existing behavior problems such as dementia and agitation. The oils were either steamed into the room air or were applied as a hand lotion. In each study no side effects were noted and all participants were able to complete the designated treatment. The significance of these studies is that an improvement in agitation eventually could lead to decreased need for prescription-calming drugs, in

An application for a headstone from the Veterans Administration was submitted to Jerry Cunningham, Cedar County Veterans Service Officer. The Civil War style federal headstone was received at the city office and set by Leroy Brummels.

First bird this year infected with West Nile Virus lected by Lincoln Animal Control in south central Lincoln in late May indicate the first bird in Nebraska to test positive for West Nile virus this year.

With this finding, state public health officials are reminding Nebraskans to "fight the bite" and protect themselves from mosquito

West Nile virus is now part of the Nebraska landscape," said Dr. Richard Raymond, Chief Medical Officer. It first appeared last year. It's a seasonal infection that will peak in July, August and September when people should be most careful to use common sense methods to prevent mosquito bites."

People should take extra precautions to protect themselves from exposure to mosquitoes, said Wayne Kramer, medical entomologist for the Nebraska Health and Human Services System (HHSS).

To "fight the bite":

 Avoid outdoor activities at dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.

If you are outside, cover up by wearing loose, long-sleeved shirts and pants, shoes and socks.

• Use mosquito repellent containing DEET. Heavy application is not necessary to achieve protection. Apply it to exposed skin and

Wayne Aquila employees earn DOT designation

An Aquila official announced recently that the company's Wayne area employees working on natural gas mains and service lines have completed the required training and testing to be designated Operator Qualified by the Department of Transportation (DOT).

Natural gas utilities are required by the DOT to have all employees and supervisors working directly with the gas distribution system to have training, pass tests and receive the designation to ensure safe, reliable system operation. Eight Aquila employees supporting the Wayne customers were certified by the DOT.

"Each technician and supervisor devoted on average more than 70 hours to the training modules prior to testing," said Scott Zaruba, operations supervisor Aguila in Wayne, "This training was in addition to the extensive ongoing training and safety programs that are an integral part of Aquila's operations."

Additionally, meter readers, customer service associates and other Aquila personnel were required to complete different levels of training and testing of various procedures as a part of the DOT mandate.

The DOT mandate is designed to instruct operation personnel on the characterists of natural gas products, system components, general system operations and specific emergency procedures. Natural gas is one of the safest and environmentally positive forms of energy, this training is an additional preventative measure to ensure safety for customers and employees.

"Across Nebraska, over 200 employees participated in the certification process," added Zaruba. "Completing this training fits directly with Aquila's goal of operating a safe, reliable system."

Aquila Networks serves approximately 188,000 natural gas customers in Nebraska and has state headquarters in Lincoln.

sites, such as standing water in garbage cans, gutters, ditches, wading pools, tires, plastic containers, flowerpots, or similar water-holding containers. Change water in bird baths on a weekly basis.

• Add larvicides, which can be purchased at most hardware stores, to animal drinking troughs, water gardens, ornamental fountains, ditches, and ponds. Ensure that window and door screens are in good repair. Clean out clogged rain gutters to avoid collecting water where mosquitoes can lay eggs.

· Replace outdoor lights with yellow 'bug lights'.

Kramer said that he controls mosquitoes in his horses? water tanks with goldfish. Goldfish and minnows eat mosquito larvae.

Birds are tested by the University of Nebraska Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory. Approx-imately 35 birds have been tested so far and tests on approximately 40 are pending.

Infected birds are an important indicator that alerts people to the presence of the virus, Kramer said. Monitoring the virus by testing bird populations has been proven effective in other states.

West Nile is transmitted through the bite of a mosquito that has picked up the virus by feeding on an infected bird. In turn, the mosquito can pass the virus to humans. The illness is not spread person-to-person.

The toll-free number for people with questions about West Nile is 1-877-220-1237.

Citizens who see sick or dying crows, blue jays, magpies, or raptors like owls and hawks should contact their local health departments. HHSS will work with local health departments to pick them

Only crows, blue jays, magpies, and raptors are being collected because they are likely to die from being infected with West Nile. Birds must be in good condition, dead less than 24 hours, and refrigerated to prevent decomposition.

Arrangements can be made to pick up birds and deliver them to the laboratory for testing.

Kramer said the greatest risk for infection is during late summer and early fall because the mosquitoes that transmit the virus increase during the summer.

Only 1 out of 140 people who are bitten by an infected mosquito will have symptoms. Symptoms usually occur within three to 15 days after being bitten.

Last year there were 174 cases of human infection in Nebraska, with eight deaths. About half of the infected people last year displayed mild-to-moderate symptoms, such as fever and headache. The other half had complications such as encephalitis or meningitis (inflammation of the brain or its lining), convulsions or paralysis. Seven of the eight fatalities were above age

50 but one was a 19-year-old, the youngest fatality in the nation. People above 50 are especially vulnerable to the disease. Out of Nebraska's 93 counties, 48 reported human West Nile infection and the virus was found in all counties, either in infected humans, birds, horses or mosquito pools. The central part of the state was

Questions answered about retirement plans

Provided by Rod Hunke, Investment Centers

of America, Inc. In today's economy we find many employees are losing their jobs, changing employers, being offered early retirement incentives or simply retiring, If their employer had a retire ment plan for their employees, there are important decisions that employees should consider.

Having answered numerous questions over the past 16+ year on what options these departing employees have with their retirement plan distributions, we have summarized the top 10 most frequently asked questions for this article.

This information is general in nature and should not be construed as tax or legal advice. Investment Centers of America does not provide tax or legal advice. Please consult a tax or legal advisor for guidance regarding a particular situation.

1. What are the distribution options from my company's retirement plan?

Although plans can have some discretion as to the options an employer has when leaving them, the IRS does specify the overall ground rules, these five options are (1). to leave your funds with your prior employer's plan if the vested amount is more than $5,000. the employer has the right to force distribution if your benefits are under $5,000 and they canroll the funds to an IRA on your behalf if it is between $1,000 and $5,000 without your permission. (2). If it is an "eligible rollover distribution" then roll your vested benefits over as a direct rollover to IRA. This method will avoid taxes and any penalties. (3). Also, if it is an "eligible rollover distribution," do a direct rollover to your new employer's retirement plan. However, an employer has the flexibility to write their plan not to accept rollovers from other plans (4). Take a partial distribution in cash and do a direct rollover if you. need part of the funds for an immediate expense, especially if you are under age 59 1/2, but at least age 55. Withdrawals prior to age 55 are subject to income tax and a 10 percent penalty may apply. Lastly, (5) is to elect a lump sum distribution of the entire account.

2. What is an "Eligible Rollover" Distribution?"

When you receive a distribution from your retirement plan, your employer will provide you with a written notice advising you about to another qualified retirement plan. Generally, distributions from a retirement plan are eligible for rollover except: 1. A series of distributions for a specified period of 10 years or

2. A required minimum distribution after you have attained age 70 3. Any distribution made under any hardship provision is not eligible for rollover, 4. Corrective distributions (distributions required due to the plan's failure of discrimination testing or to correct excess plan contributions). there are other exceptions such as: 1. Loans treated as distributions - for example, defaulted foans; 2. Employer security dividends; 3. P.S. 58 costs (the cost of life insurance)

3. What are the advantages and disadvantages of leaving my funds with my old employer?

If an employee elects to leave their retirement funds at their old employer, you generally will have minimal paperwork to worry about and you stay invested in funds that you are familiar with.

Obviously, your funds will not be taxed and will continue to grow tax-deferred. However, your old plan may have limited or poor fund options. Also, the plan my restrict your ability to withdraw funds when you need them. And if your old employer gets bought out or merged into another company, you may be stuck in a plan that is not as good as you had.

4. What are the Pros & cons of doing a direct rollover to an IRA? By doing a direct rollover to an IRA, the distribution defers all taxes and avoids federal income tax withholding which the employer is required to do. There is much broader investment flexibility in IRAs where you can buy stocks, bonds, mutual funds, annuities, bank certificates of deposit and other products.

IRAs have more flexibility on naming beneficiaries and access to the funds for income. The account can also be "stretched" across multiple generations. And the IRA owner may even wish to convert the account to a ROTH IRA. Other considerations that may be reasons not to roll retirement distributions to an IRA are you do not have the ability to take a loan or possibly continue repayment of a loan that you had in your prior employer's plan. If employer stock is part of the distribution, the 'basis' in the stock is lost and there are no capital gains tax opportunithe tax treatment of your distribu- ties once the stock is inside an tion and whether or not it is eligi- IRA, Additionally, the 10 percent and their spouse. where the company retirement plan distribution avoids the 10 percent penalty if your are age 55

5. What are considerations to be aware of when rolling funds into a new employer's retirement plan?

First of all, the new employer's plan may not accept rollovers. If this is the case, your only rollover choice is to go to an IRA. Your new employer's plan may also have poor investment choices and limited distribution opportunities. The plan may also require spousal consent before taking any distributions. But this strategy does continue to defer taxation, simplifies keeping track of your retirement dollars and the new plan may offer participant loans.

6. What are the advantages and disadvantages of taking the cash and paying taxes? It is very tempting to take the money and run, but there may be serious tax consequences by taking this approach.

You will have the funds available to use for an immediate need such as paying off bills, the mortgage, etc., but your ex-employers is required to withhold 20 percent of the taxable amount as a prepayment for Federal income taxes. You may owe more than what is withheld. Also, you may have to a pay a 10 percent penalty tax if you are under age 55. This is in addition to paying ordinary income taxes, If you are planning to save thee funds for retirement, you will have less money working for you.

7. What should I consider when my distribution includes company stock? A lump-sum distribution from a company retirement plan that includes employer stock gives you the unique opportunity to convert taxable income into a longterm capital gain. If you rollover the stock into an IRA you loose 'basis' in the employer stock and all distributions are taxed as ordinary income. If you retrain the stock you will pay ordinary income tax on the basis. When you sell shares, the net unrealized appreciation will be taxed at long-term capital gains rate, which is currently a maximum of 20 percent. For those individuals in the 15 percent tax bracket, a 10 percent capital gains rate will apply. The 20 percent rate is reduced to 18 percent and the 10 percent rate is reduced to eight percent if the shares are held for more than five

8. What are the Pros and Cons of taking a monthly annuity distribution? A monthly annuity income guarantees a payment for life of the participant or the participant age you begin the pension income:

tions to someone under age $59\ 1/2$ you are not subject to the 10 percent penalty on the monthly income. However, the participant doesn't have any control or flexibility in changing the distribution once it is elected. At death, the benefits cease and there are no assets to transfer to heirs. If you haven't withdrawn all your benefits, you lose them. 9. What are the Pros and Cons of taking a lump sum distribution? The advantages of receiving a lump sum distribution include having the funds available for immediate needs. If you meet the requirements, you may be able to take advantage of 10-year forward averaging, which can drastically reduce the amount of taxes you pay. Also, you do have the direct rollover option when you elect to take a lump sum versus annuity payments.

10. I am under age 59 1/2 and retiring. Can I take income from my IRA without paying the 10 percent penalty? People who roll their benefits over into an IRA have additional exceptions to the 10 percent penalty if they are under age 59 1/2. They include distributions for qualified education expenses for you or one of your family, deductible medical expenses; medical insurance premiums during periods of unemployment. first time home purchases (with a lifetime maximum of $10,000) and substantially equal payments based on life expectancy.

There are exceptions to the 10 percent penalty for people taking a distribution from their employer's retirement plan if they are under age 55. Distributions to an employee who is separated from service and attained age 55 or older avoid the 10 percent penalty. Additionally, distributions due to death or disability or taking substantially equal payments based on life expectancy are exempt from the penalty.

Creating a strong family positive communication

Communication is on everyone's list of the qualities of strong families - open, honest, straightforward and clear communication. But positive communication is the key to success.

One family therapist recalled a family she has worked with. "When I asked them if they felt their communication with each other was open, honest and straightforward and clear, they all agreed it was. Yelling at each other all the time may have all of the above qualities, but it still doesn't work," she said, smiling.

My friend Nick Stinnet, professor of Human Development and Family Studies at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, likes to say that, "In the world of words, there is a way to say precisely what we would like to say, but in a positive manner that ensures that we will make progress in our relationships with each other."

In short, stop and think for a few seconds how to re-state your feeling in a way that is not hurtful to the other family member and will help build your love for each other, rather than tear it down.

Of course, the most important talk in families often tends to be spontaneous talk. This is communication when no one is really working at communication, but simply enjoying talking and listening for talking and listening sake. How does this young person in your family feel about their

Communication in strong families does not always produce agreement on important issues. Family members are each individuals and have unique ways of looking at the world. Communication works best if they all can speak directly with each other without blaming or condemning. Even in strong families, some disagreements simply don't get resolved. People can still love each other and remain friends and loyal family members while agreeing to disagree on various issues. Religion and politics are two in the family so we all can feel lovperennially hot topics, and the strongest of families can have members diametrically opposed in their world views. Recap of busy week

(or third) cup of coffee to the new porch and write some thank you notes when I remembered it was Tuesday morning. Tuesday morning means it's time to write this thing and get it faxed to the Herald. We had another half inch of rain last night, but according to the weather man, Wayne county had flood warnings, thunderstorm and tornado warnings, and too much of a good thing.

As I've been saying, we don't want to complain about rain, And the way all growing things look compared to last year, we just have to be grateful. But enough is enough; my neighbor Ross says he needs to spray his corn. Because, of course, the weeds love this weather, too.

I have trouble believing it's only been a week since I wrote last. What a week it was! I think, in fact, that I wrote last week's column on Sunday eve because I knew what I was in for. Tabitha, besides providing home health and hospice, has a private agency. This agency employs about 70 home health aides and sees a bunch of clients who need help with bathing, housekeeping, etc. and there is no third party payer.

Some of these folks have lovely apartments in assisted living facilities but can no longer be independent without more assistance than is provided there. Others are in their own homes and will pay for all kinds of help, including lawn care, rather than move from them. Several have around the clock care.

In Lincoln, there is a full-time nurse coordinator. And it is more than a full-time job. The patients all need to be visited every two weeks to make sure things are being done as planned. Visit slips need to be scanned for accuracy, and care plans changed as needs change. Right now, she has been training, orienting and skill test- at 6 p.m. and was first aid for that

Research has indicated that the best yield potential is having the beans planted by mid-May to early June. Once the June time has been reached, it is time to switch to mid-season varieties of soybeans. In the northeast part of Nebraska, this means switching to the mid-season, 2.5 maturity group of beans. Yield potential has already been reduced by about 12 percent as compared to the planting of soybeans in May. "Mid-season varieties of soybeans are also well suited to double cropping situations", indicated Del Hemsath, extension educator for Dakota, Dixon and Thurston counties. "Soybeans are regulated in growth by the length of day, so the later planted soybeans will usually be shorter than normal and a reduced yield as a result"; said Del.

"Another concern this year is going to be the bean leaf beetle infestations", Hamsath said.

Bean leaf beetles over winter in this time of year to avoid a signifi- il Nebraska in soybean residue or leaf residue in woodlots. They become active early in the year and are found in alfalfa prior to soybean emergence. There are two generations of beetles per year with one generation emerging in late June to early July. The second generation emerges in mid The pod feeding beetles are most likely to cause economic damage. Early planted soybeans often have the highest population of beetles and suffer the most damage. Economic damage is based upon defoliation percent, the younger the plant and more severe the defoliation, the greater the possible reduction in yield.

One can also use the number of beetles per plant as a guideline for control. Decisions are based upon the value of the beans and cost to treat. Tables are available to determine whether or not control is economical.

Another reason to monitor the beetles is because they carry the bean pod mottle virus that has been a serious problem in Iowa.

Guidelines for Nebraska producers are still being evaluated for determining the economic level for control. More testing will be done in 2003 to establish guide-
