Wayne America's World (the theme for the 2003 Chicken Show) experienced a number of events, both pleasant and unpleasant that will be recorded in the history books for 2003.

From several renovation projects being completed to criminals being sent to jail for their crimes, from warmer than normal winter temperatures, to destructive summer storms, the only thing predictable about life in Wayne America was its unpredictability.

Campaign designed to help increase public's awareness of dairy in weight loss program

For those who are looking for some help this year in keeping their New Year's resolutions to lose weight, a trip to the dairy case for milk, cheese and yogurt may be a good start. To help dieters understand the link between dairy consumption and weight loss, Michael Zemel, Ph.D — one of the nation's leading nutrition scientists who pioneered the study of dairy's effect on weight loss — is releasing a new book, while the National Dairy Council is launching the second phase of a new public awareness campaign called "Healthy Weight with Dairy."

A growing body of research suggests a link between dairy consumption and reduced body weight, when part of a balanced, reduced-calorie diet.

The secret lies in dairy's unique combination of nutrients, including calcium and protein. Dr. Zemel's research suggests that dairy helps fat cells burn more fat and triggers fat cells to make and store less fat. This means people who enjoy milk, cheese and yogurt as part of a balanced, reducedcalorie diet don't have to sacrifice great-tasting dairy foods while keeping their New Year's resolutions to lose weight.

"Not only has Dr. Zemel documented the role of calcium in weight management, but specifically the value of obtaining calcium from dairy foods," said Beverly Benes, PhD, RD, president of the Nebraska Dietetic Association and senior lecturer for the Department of Nutrition at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"His scientific research for the role of calcium in weight management is compelling and convincing."

In "The Calcium Key," Dr. Zemel provides weight-conscious consumers with facts about dairy's effect on reducing body weight and fat. and gives tips, meal suggestions and recipes for creating a healthy, effective weight loss plan that includes dairy.

"Dairy is not a magic bullet you have to exercise and reduce your calories," Zemel said. "But, there's growing evidence that milk, cheese and yogurt as part of lic relations. a reduced-calorie diet can offer an additional boost to make weight loss efforts more effective."

The "New Year, New You," phase of the Healthy Weight with Dairy campaign is being supported by a series of national print ads, public relations and online content on healthyweightwithdairy.com. The site includes a summary of the science supporting dairy's role in healthy weight; commentary from nutrition researchers and dietitians; weight loss tips; recipes; and links to easy-to-use weight management tolls and a body mass index calculator. Dieters also can link from the site to order a copy of "The Calcium Key" (Wiley; Jan. 2004; $24.95.)

"Every year, many people attempt to lose weight as their New Year's resolution. With this exciting new research, hopefully people will see that to lose weight, they don't have to cut out great tasting foods like milk, cheese and yogurt from their diet," said Jennifer Meyer, registered dietitian, Dairy Council of Nebraska. "These foods also naturally provide other nutrients that dieters need for good health such as calcium and protein. With so many regular and low-fat dairy foods to choose from, this year's weight loss resolution may be easier to stick to."

"Healthy Weight with Dairy kicked off in October by announcing living proof that adding dairy to your diet can be a healthy, effective way to lose weight. As part of a 16-week community intervention program called "Calcium Weighs In," over 150 residents of Calcium, N.Y. adopted a healthier lifestyle that included consuming at least three servings of milk, cheese or yogurt each day as part of a healthy, reduced-calorie diet and increasing their daily physical activity. As a result, they collectively lost nearly 2,000 pounds an average of 14.34 pounds per participant.

The awareness campaign will continue with an effort in January led by the Milk Processors Education Program (MilkPEP) and the American Dietetic Association. This initiative will focus on milk's link to weight loss and also will be supported by advertising and pub-

On Wednesday, Dec. 10 I was involved in a car accident at the corner of Second and Main in

I was north bound and a vehicle, which I can only describe as a larger pickup truck, was southbound. The vehicle apparently attempted to make a left turn from their direction and struck my car. As if that wasn't enough, the vehicle then left the scene of the accident. This happened at approximately 8 a.m.

I was on my way to classes at the college where I am a criminal justice major. I reside in West Point with my husband and two young children.

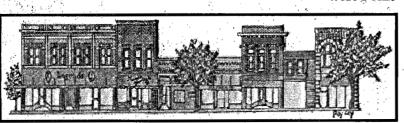

Within an hour of this accident occurring, I reported it to the police. Of course, I wasn't able to give much of a description because it happened so quickly.

Look, you know who you are that fled the scene of the accident, You left for whatever reason, maybe cause it didn't appear that you did much damage to my car. You left no license, no insurance and no proof of ownership. Why you left the scene isn't the issue right now, the issue is that I have a car with a serious amount of damage and I feel it is your responsibility to make the situation right.

Please do the right thing and turn yourself in to the police or if you are someone who knows who did it, please report it. Maybe you don't feel it is worth it; however, to my family and me it is.

Main Street Focus

Someone told me many years ago that when I got older (and I am now), that the years would fly by faster and faster. Whomever that was...they were right. Last year was a blur. I am going to break away from my usual routine in this column and use an article by an author. Before we get to that, on behalf of yours truly and everyone connected with the Main Street Program, we would like to thank everyone for their continued support of the program and wish you a very healthy, happy, and prosperous New Year!!!!!

Following are excerpts from a book written by Liz Franklin. She says if you are a person that needs 25 hours a day, she has some tips to help you get organized, Ms. Franklin has written a book entitled "How To Get Organized Without Resorting to Arson!" The following are Liz Franklin's words.

*If you are an "out of sight, out of mind" person, you just respond to strong visual cues. So use bright colors, large labels, and signs, and you'll remember where you put things.

*Ignore the saying, "If you haven't used it in six months, throw it out." That could be your

Remember that procrastination is usually a sign that you have more important things to do.

*Realize that a clean desk is a sign of a person who is on vacation, new to the job, part-time, delegating, or mentally elsewhere.

*Keep in mind that you are not obligated to return any calls made by machinery.

*Arrange your desk furniture into a U-shape and circulate your work around you. This mimics your hand, body, and arm movement, and makes jumping to conclusions much easier. *Keep everything you want to keep. Just label things according to when you'll want to use them. Instead of "Tax Stuff," call it "Open in January," or "Open or Go To Prison."

*Too many items on your to-do list? Ask yourself, "Which of these will I be sorry about tomorrow if it is not finished today?" Then prioritize according to regret. You won't regret it, you can forget all about Hopefully, this will get your 2004 off to a good start. (I know some of my board members are chuckling right now). Again, have a Happy New Year. Here's an invitation for you... come be a part of the Main Street Program.

Proposals will help protect children

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

The thought of children dying because of mistreatment or neglect is abhorrent to decent people. It is abhorrent even to marginally decent people.

The desire to do right by children is probably as close as this country ever will get to a truly bipartisan policy goal.

Note that the bipartisan reference is to "the desire to do right by children.

Writing new policies into law and committing untold dollars to implement those policies is another thing. A political and economic thing.

Gov. Mike Johanns voiced his determination last week to put proposals before the Legislature to better protect children. Those proposals will likely be based in part on recommendations from a task force he appointed, and from the state's Foster Care Review Board.

Johanns appointed the task force in the face of statistics showing that increasing numbers of children in Nebraska are dying violent deaths in domestic situations.

The recommendations Johanns made were many and varied. But no one has yet put a price tag.

on them. The moral view would be; "You can't put a price on a child's life." The political, realistic view would be: "Yes, you can. And, you have no choice. If you're going to do. things aimed at more and better services to protect children, you will need money, and it's your responsibility to know how much."

You don't have to like the political, realistic view. But if you argue that it ain't on target, you're kidding yourself, or trying to kid some-

Perhaps some things can be reor-ganized for more effective use of resources. Perhaps some sort of community-based volunteer project would be used. Then there is the ever-popular "eliminating waste, fraud n' abuse" gambit.

Sooner or later, however, that price tag will have to be addressed. Whatever the cost of better protection for children, it will have to be viewed in the light of tremendous revenue shortages, and tremendous public opposition to higher taxes.

We know Americans kill their children and other children in greater numbers than in "the old days." At least, more such deaths are being reported and recorded Blame drugs, unemployment, deterioration of the extended family, general moral decline, liberal policies, conservative policies or the advent of rock n' roll half a century ago.

Whatever its cause, violence toward children is a symptom. Treating symptoms can provide blessed, but temporary relief. At a financial cost.

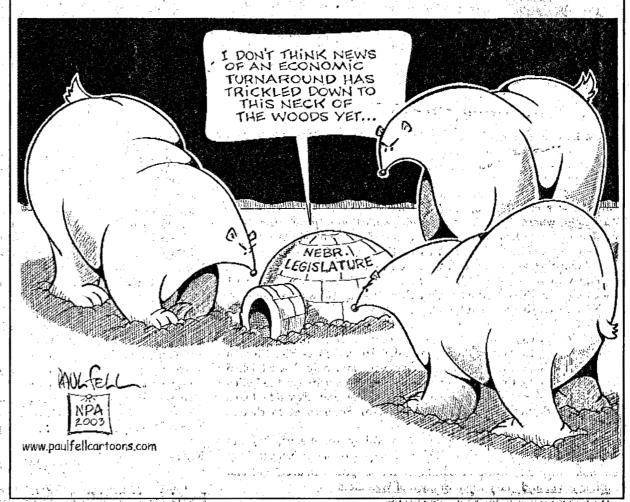

Addressing the root causes of violence against children requires programs - economic and social - far beyond the grasp of the Nebraska Legislature.

To the extent that public awareness and cooperation and volunteerism and government efficiency can help at-risk children in Nebraska, they are good things.

To the extent that the furtherance of such protection will cost a lot of money, they are still good things. But government isn't really Santa Claus — its bag of goodies has a bottom.

And when you get to the bottom of that bag, you will still be confronted with the primary question: Why, in the first place, does government need to mount a program to protect children from adult violence? How did we get here? And, most importantly, how do we get

Help for traffic delays faces its own delay: funding needed

If America's highways, buses and Horsley, executive director of the subways seem more crowded every year, it's because they are.

Distance Learning expanding training on literacy development

Literacy is the key to a child's future success in school and life," say early childhood leaders and experts in the field. "Children who enter Kindergarten from quality pre-kindergarten experiences have better reading, language, and social skills than those who lacked this preparation," said Susan Strahm, Early Childhood Professional Development at ESU

Nebraska's voluntary academic standards emphasize the importance of reading as the key to early school success. Recent brain esearch clearly indicates that birth to age three is the most critical period for child development-which means that parents, caregivers, and early childhood teachers are influential in this development. Northeast Nebraska residents can receive this state of the art, research-based information during the spring term beginning Jan. 15 in Norfolk, Dakota City, and Macy.

The 15-week course is free to participants, but is available for college credit upon request. The course will be offered on Thursday evenings from 6 - 8 p.m. CEU's and In-service hours are available.

... Heads Up! Reading has impacted teaching practices in 48 states with 20,000 participants last year. This comprehensive course is for everyone who works with young children birth through age 5 and wants to improve their school readiness. The course will transform teacher practices in Early Childhood settings to reflect current knowledge of early literacy as well as to demonstrate significant, measurable, improved outcomes of age appropriate literacy skills for young children. Free radon test kits are available to area residents

The University of Nebraska's Cooperative Extension offices in Dixon, Dakota and Thurston Counties have received a grant to provide free radon test kits to local residents.

The Radon kits have arrived at the Extension Offices. To get a testing kit, call the University of Nebraska Extension Office in Dixon County at 402-584-2234; Dakota County at 402-987-2140 or Thurston County at 402-846-5656. Local health departments also have Radon test kits available.

January is National Radon Action Month! Radon Action Month is a national campaign to educate local citizens about the dangers of exposure to radon and encourage them to identify and fix radon problems in their homes. . .

Radon is a gas that enters homes through cracks and crevices in the foundation or through crawl spaces. A by-product of uranium that was laid down in area soils long ago, it gives off radioactive particles as part of the natural "decay" process.

decay process can damage the DNA in lung tissue and potentially-over the course of a lifetime-lead to the development of lung cancer. In fact, radon has been identified as the second lead-

Prayer." Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a diamond white, strapless floor-length gown and a two-tiered, fingertip length veil with a crystal and pearl head-

. If these particles get trapped in ing cause of lung cancer (behind deaths each year may be attributed to radon.

> Figures released recently by Nebraska Health and Human Services System's Radon Program indicate that 63 percent of the homes in these counties that have been tested for radon have produced results above the recommended action level of 4 pCi/L set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. However, that just because one home comes up 'high' doesn't mean that every home in the area is also going to have elevated radon levels. In fact, radon levels fluctuate a lot. The only way to know for sure if a home has elevated radon levels is by testing.

> We're really excited that we're going to be able to provide these kits and we hope everyone will take advantage of the opportunity to test sometime soon.

They're really easy to use. You just open the package and leave it undisturbed in a home for anywhere from two to seven days-depending on the type of kit. At the end of the testing period, the kit is simply sealed up and is mailed to a laboratory for analysis. Test results are mailed directly to the homeowner and should be back within two weeks.

The testing program will offer a new feature for the first time this year. This year's grant request will allow for the purchase of long-term test kits, as well.

We never encourage homeowners to make any changes to their home on the basis of just one test. EPA says that two short-term tests are 98 percent accurate and we recommend those for homes where the radon levels first tests come back above 10 pCi/L.

But, for people whose homes are above the action level but not extremely high-say between 4 and 10 pCi/L-long-term kits can also be used. They're exposed for 90 to 365 days and these test results give a better 'picture', if you will, of radon levels averaged throughout several seasons of the year.

This more complete information allows homeowners to assess their degree of risk and make an informed decision about whether or not to take action to 'fix' their homes.

Parenting in a Difficult Situation' class to be offered

Being a good parent isn't easy.

Parenting isn't easy when the parents are in a healthy relationship with mutual love and respect. It's not easy when parents share responsibilities for parenting and other household work.

So you can imagine that it is even harder when an individual is living in an abusive partner.

Trying to function in an abusive relationship, trying to be a good parent in an abusive situation, taking care of yourself and your children, making ends meet, taking care of business, keeping yourself and your children safe - none of this will be easy.

Parenting in a Difficult Situation is a basic parenting course developed by Dr. Kathy Bosch, University of Nebraska credit card.

Extension Family Life Specialist, for those who are in difficult marriages or partner relationships, Specifically, it is targeted for moth ers who are living with abusive male partners.

Because the overwhelming majority of those abused are women, this course focuses on women and their mother role in parenting children.

The course may be accessed on the web on Jan. 12, 2004. Those interested should go to the internet address www.panhandle.unl.edu/bosch/ to register for Parenting in a Difficult Situation. Participants may register to take the course at any time during the year at their own pace. The cost of the course is $30,

Wayne Housing Authority to receive federal funds

Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has notified Congressman Doug Bereuter that Nebraska's 1st Congressional District will receive a second disbursement of Federal assistance through the Capital Fund Program (CFP).

Of the Fiscal Year 2003 CFP assistance appropriated by the U.S. Congress, formula grants totaling $362,239 will be awarded to the housing authorities of 28 communities in Nebraska's 1st Congressional District.

Among those housing authorities receiving funds is the Wayne Housing Authority in Wayne which will receive $7,926.

Under the CFP, local housing authorities may use the allocated Federal assistance for a variety of activities in accordance with Federal regulation as well as the

The U.S. Department of Annual and Five-Year Public Housing Agency Plan or Moving to Work Plan that each housing authority maintains. CFP assistance is often utilized for such activities as the modernization, management and financing of public housing.

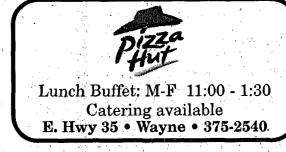

"This year Congress required through appropriations legislation that $444 million be set aside for housing authorities around the country which utilize their initial disbursement of CFP assistance in a timely manner," commented Congressman Bereuter. "I am pleased that 28 housing authorities in Nebraska's 1st Congressional District are among those housing authorities nationwide that will receive a portion of the additional CFP assistance based on their outstanding participation in this program."

The colder weather has shifted some outdoor enthusiasts into the charm of ice fishing. This outdoor activity can be an enjoyable experience or it can be a tragic one. Here are some suggested guidetaken from Nebraskaland magazine on ice fishing.

Thickness of ice - the first consideration of whether or not to go ice fishing is ice thickness. There should be at least 3 inches of blue ice for one person to be supported by the ice. If more than one person is in one area, 4 inches of ice is required. Ice over moving water creates a greater hazard and more caution is needed. It is difficult to predict the thickness of ice in those situations. Continually check the ice thickness when moving from one area to the next. Clothing - the first thing that is required for a safe trip onto the ice is adequate clothing. The feet are cold or government surplus arctic boots with air chambers for insulation are best. Snowmobile boots with felt liners are often adequate, as are lightweight, inexpensive

"moon boots.' Wear wool socks as the wool will keep the feet dry. Never wear cotton socks next to the skin. Thinsulate insulation provides excellent protection from the cold. Above the boots, several layers of clothing should be worn to allow shedding of the layers as the temperature changes. Sweating in cold weather is a danger because the body losses heat in an attempt to dry out the wet garments.

Headgear must be worn as 75 percent of the body heat is lost from the head area. A wool cap and a hooded sweatshirt will offer some layering to protect against sweating. The ears and neck must be protected with the headgear. Another selection is a large parka type coat offers protection from the wind. Gloves should be worn inside of mittens or have pockets inside the outer garments in order to get your hands away from the wind.

Shelters - simple, lightweight shelters offer good protection from the wind. These are portable and easy to handle as opposed to the more sturdy, permanent structures. Permanent structures are not permitted on most areas in Nebraska unless they have a permit to remain on the ice. Wind can make ice fishing a very cold experience, discouraging one from finding the fishing an enjoyable time.

Good weather made it possible to attend many Christmas events

What a wonderful Christmas week! If you can't have a white one, you may as well have a nice one. We could make it to all events without worrying about the roads. And we are still having company today; three people just left the breakfast table and three more are coming for lunch.

We have a friend from church who sings in choir with us and always composes a poem for her Christmas cards. One year, for instance, it featured Maxine and what she might have said. This year, she enlarged on the sign that ways "Three wise women would have brought a casserole. cleaned the stable, and presented practical gifts." It goes like this:

If there would have been three wise women on that first Christmas day

The world might just have turned out in a very different way. For three wise women would never have been quite so late

They would have stopped and asked directions for this very important date.

They would not have chosen plodding camels to carry them across the desert sand

They would have borrowed the king's fastest horses and raced across the land. They would have tidied up the stable, brushed the floor 'till it was clean Northeast Equipment of Wayne will hold its annual John Deere Day celebration on Monday, Jan. 5 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The event will be held at the dealership on East Highway 35.

"This year's event will highlight incredible product advancements and change," said Dave Olson, Corporate Sales Manager.

"Changes in the tax laws." Greater machine productivity. Changes in the rural landscape, All of these are reshaping the horizons of agriculture," Olson said. "Hosting a John Deere Day gives us the opportunity to bring together those directly, or indirectly, affected by these changes and share ideas, present solutions and show our appreciation."

Each year, John Deere Day at Northeast Nebraska Equipment gives area producers and their families the chance to see old friends, meet new neighbors, learn about the latest agricultural techniques and ideas and get a good look at the new equipment being offered by John Deere.

"This year we'll be showing the new 7000-20 series tractors featuring the 7920 and the 1690 CCS "Soybean Special" seeding attachment. Colonel John will be doing live market reports, an A.M.S. meeting at 2:30 in the afternoon, sanctioned pedal tractor pull and the world famous John Deere Day video will be playing all day. We will also have factory representatives from Deere and Co., Reinke Irrigation, Sioux Bin Co. and Hardi Sprayers," Olson said,

Livestock Market Report

Top quality fresh and springing heifers were $950 to $1,250. Medium quality fresh and springing heifers were $750 to $950. Common heifers and older cows were $500 to $750; 300 to 500 lb. heifers were $300 to $500; 500 to 700 lb. heifers were $475 to $700.

Cattlemen are confident about safety of beef

In response to the USDA announcement that a suspected case of BSE (bovine spongiform encephalopathy) in a Washington dairy cow is being investigated, Nebraska Cattlemen leaders are telling reporters and consumers why they remain confident about the safety of U.S. beef.

"We want to assure consumers that we remain confident about the safety of U.S. beef," Nebraska Cattlemen Executive President said, "because of the triple firewall the U.S. government and our industry have implemented since 1989.'

The measures include: • The U.S. began a surveillance program for BSE in 1990 and was the first country without the disease to test cattle for BSE. The surveillance system targets all cattle with any signs of neurological disorder as well as those over 30 months of age and animals that are non-ambulatory.

• The U.S. banned imports of cattle and bovine products from countries with BSE beginning in

• The only way BSE spreads is through contaminated feed. The U.S. Food & Drug Administration in 1997 instituted a ban on feeding ruminant-derived meat and bone meal supplements to cattle. (Producers initiated a voluntary ban in 1996.) This is a firewall that prevents the spread of BSE to other animals if it were present in

"Consumers need to know that pertain to how the U.S. food safety system operates," Ruehle said.

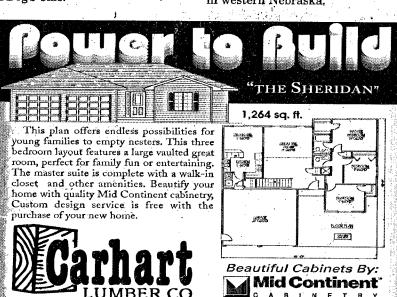

"First, current science indicates BSE is not found in muscle meats like steaks and roasts. Rather, in rare cows which contract the disease, BSE is only found in central nervous system tissue such as the brain and spinal cord. Tissue at risk from the suspected dairy cow did not enter the food chain.

"Second, the surveillance and prevention system is designed to identify and contain affected animals so outbreaks that have occurred in Europe do not occur here. Our confidence remains strong in part because of the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis multi-year assessment of the risk of BSE in the U.S. It concluded that while there was some level of risk, 'In summary, measures taken by the U.S. government and industry make the U.S. robust against the spread of BSE to animals or humans should it be introduced into this country.'

"Third, we support the aggressive USDA investigation of this Building a child's vocabulary

Jean Grove, Northeast Nebraska Child Care Resource & Referral Agency

Why do we need to increase a child's vocabulary? A child's reading skills in school are directly proportionate to his/her vocabulary. Going to the grocery store, park, farm, or zoo adds new experiences to life thus add new words, thoughts and feelings to express. Not all children have access to zoos, farms, skyscrapers, jungles, oceans, and desserts.

Learning about different places and all of the experiences that occur at these places can be taught to children through reading and talking about books with them. Teaching new words add to visualizing the places in the books, thus add to their vocabulary. Encouraging children to tell the story to you will strengthen the memory of the new experiadds a new dimension. When a toddler points and says "truck," say "red truck." When he/she says "red truck," say big red truck" or "fast red truck." Be casual as you expand on what is said, it will be understood by he child when you repeat it on several occasions.

Let a child talk. Many times adults guess what the child is trying to say without letting the child totally express himself. Count five seconds to yourself to give the child time to put their thoughts into words before you speak or answer the request. Encourage them to talk about what they are doing, what they did at grandma's, or what they saw outside. As speaking increases, vocabulary increases

There are also several ways to delay a child's vocabulary.

Pacifiers, bottles, and sippy cups delay a child's vocabulary if the child is allowed to have these items throughout the day instead of only at designated times. These items occupy the child's mouth and block any speech that the child wants to develop. Children are free to express their thoughts, needs and feelings at an earlier age when the mouth is unobstructed.

Parents and caregivers need to take time to listen to a child and to communicate with him/her several times each day if not continually during the day. Many times, schedules are busy and time isn't set aside to help a child develop a growing vocabulary.

Older siblings tend to speak for a toddler (they seem to understand them and want to help). Stress the importance of letting the toddler speak.

Helping school-age children is also important. A great way to support school children is to let them read to you. It increases their reading skills which increases their confidence in their abilities. Reading and developing a good vocabulary are skills that children will use throughout their
