By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

A motion was made that the commissioners would serve as interim highway superintendent until someone is hired to replace Sid Saunders, who retired from that position. Advertisements will run to find an individual to replace Saunders.

Also on the agenda, was Lois Shelton, mayor of Wayne, and George Ellyson, chief inspector/ planner, asking the commissioners for a representative to be on the Steering Committee. Bob Nissen was chosen. The meetings will be held on the first Monday of each month from 6-7:30 p.m. at City Hall prior to the Planning Commission meeting.

The Steering Committee will be starting on the new comprehensive plan for the city of Wayne, which is updated every 10-12 years. The Planning Commission has chosen the firm of RDG Planning and Design from Omaha to assist in the process. A grant from the Nebraska Department of Roads has been obtained to help defray the costs. The Steering Committee will work closely with the consultants throughout the next year.

A resolution was approved to remove a short wooden bridge which recently collapsed and install a culvert on Grainland Road, Mile 574, 0.5 mile south and 1.3 miles west of Wayne, in Section 14. Learning 'the rest of the story'

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association

A longtime radio personality does a thing where he provides the audience with some information, then comes back later to tell "the rest of the story."

Attorney General Jon Bruning has presumably learned that, in his business, it's best to make sure the entire story is told the first time around.

There were headlines aplenty after Bruning said he was prosecuting a 22-year-old Falls City man who married a 13-year-old girl in Kansas - after getting her pregnant in Nebraska.

After Bruning's news conference, reporters learned both parties had been "special education" clients. That means each had some type of learning disability.

Bruning, whose use of news conferences is unrivaled, found himself the target of much, much public criticism. Lots of folk accused him of political grandstanding by picking on two disadvantaged

It didn't help when the defendant's attorney said his client was a virgin until getting together with the little girl.

Bruning made haste the next day in calling reporters to tell "the rest of the story."

The man wasn't akin to the mentally ill "Lennie" in Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men," Bruning said. The culprit in the Nebraska case led a mostly normal life and knew what he was doing. The fellow had a driver's license and a job and a criminal record, Bruning said.

"He would hang out with his buddies, drink beer and go places with the crowd," Bruning said. "He met this child and took advantage of her. He absolutely knew what he was doing when he preyed upon

After Bruning explained the situation via telephone, I suggested he would have avoided grief by putting the entire story out during his news conference.

"No kidding!" Bruning said. He probably will be making a list, and checking it at least twice, before next visiting with the press on some controversial issue.

The 2005 Legislature and Gov. Dave Heineman put a new tax incentive package into place for business. It is intended, in part, to provide a better deal for smaller companies that expand or locate in Nebraska.

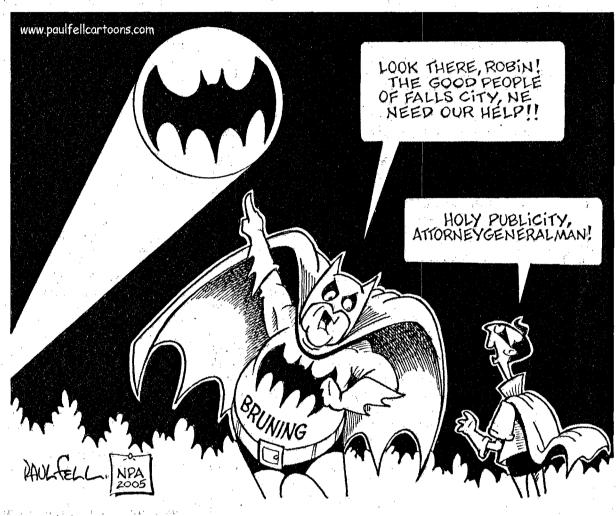

The measure, among other things, repealed the sales tax on manufacturing equipment.

As with any reduction in any tax worth the end result of the tax burden, the repeal will mean less tax revenue for some communities -143 to be exact, along with one county. The state will see reduced revenues of at least $17 million each year.

Heineman and other strong supporters of the program, in government and the private sector, said the long-term impact of the tax repeal will be to boost overall economic development.

The loss of revenues to state and local government will be wellrepeal and other incentives, they

The average home in rural Nebraska is 50 years old and nearly a quarter need major repairs, but 87 percent of residents say they like their neighborhood, the 10th annual University of Nebraska-Lincoln poll showed.

Surveys were mailed in March to 6,250 randomly selected households in Nebraska's 84 rural counties. Results are based on 2.851

Poll results confirm nationwide U.S. Census data showing home metropolitan areas. Nationwide, 76 percent of housing in rural areas is owner occupied. Overall, 66 percent of U.S. households are homeowners. Poll researchers said this poll's numbers probably are slightly higher than Census figures because the survey is mailed and homeowners change addresses less frequently than renters.

"Rural Nebraskans feel strongly about home ownership. It's very important," said Randy Cantrell, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources rural sociologist who works on the poll. Eighty-two percent of respondents said owning their home is very important while 12 percent said it's somewhat

"Nebraska sits on some of the oldest housing in the country in the rural areas. The Great Plains in general has old housing stock," Cantrell said.

About a quarter of respondents said the size of their house doesn't meet their needs, the same proportion said their home needs major repairs and 37 percent agreed that their home needs lots of routine maintenance.

"It's older housing, but people seem satisfied with it." Cantrell ownership is higher in rural than said. "We don't see people complaining about the age or need for repairs."

Renters were less satisfied with their housing, according to the poll. Thirty-five percent said their housing didn't meet their needs and 39 percent said it needs major repairs. That's a problem for communities trying to draw or keep young people, who may need or want to rent before buying a house, said Becky Vogt, the poll project manager.

"If you want to attract young people, you need to have decent rental housing available," she said.

Community size influences the age and condition of housing. Smaller communities tend to have more older homes and houses needing major repair. The poll found 35 percent of homes in and around ties under 500 need major repairs compared with 19 percent in towns of at least 5,000.

Community size also influenced respondents' views about their community. Overall, 28 percent said their community has changed for the better in the past year, 52 percent said it stayed the same and 20 percent said it got worse. Those numbers are similar to recent years. While 39 percent of people in communities of at least 10,000 said their town had improved, only 15 percent of respondents from towns under 500 agreed, 60 percent said it was the same and 25 percent said it was worse.

Rural Nebraskans' opinions were mixed about their community's future. Overall, 44 percent agreed their community's future looks bright, 42 percent disagreed and 14 percent had no opinion. Prospects are dimmer in small communities. In communities under 500 people, 25 percent of respondents agreed the future looks bright and 61 per-10,000 said their town's future Agricultural Research Division.

"The smaller the community in Nebraska right now, the more likely it is to be struggling unless it's in commuting distance to a larger town," Cantrell said.

People in the smallest communities also were most likely to agree that their community is good enough as it without trying to change it. Twenty-two percent of respondents from communities under 500 agreed compared with 15 percent or less agreement among respondents from all other town sizes.

"It appears that people in smaller communities are more willing to be satisfied with things as they are," Vogt said. "Unfortunately, maintaining the status quo won't help things improve."

The national site provides a single focal point for citizens to search public sex offender information beyond their own neighborhood or state registry. By logging on to www.nsopr.gov., a person can gain access to public sex offender information nationwide.

"The Nebraska State Patrol is excited to be a part of this important public service effort," said Investigative Services Major Don Blausey. The national site does not change the way in which the Nebraska State Patrol Sex Offender Registry gathers or releases information. Each participating state retains control over its own data and search processes.

McAfee said she has experienced a growing need

Kaye McAfee stands beside the merchandise in her store located at 316 Main Street.

Hours will be: Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and Sunday, closed. In the fall, she plans to extend hours to Wednesday and Thursday nights and longer hours on Saturday.

McAfee will carry a variety of Christian oriented items in her store. Besides a huge display of books, she will have music CDs, cards, jewelry, framed pictures, photo albums, coffee mugs, and small gift items. If customers can't find what they are looking for, she will special order items. Her goal is offer discounts to churches on their supplies.

A feature at Inspirations that can be helpful to parents, is the Audio Select Music System. With the help of computer software, parents who are unhappy with their child's choice of music, can choose Christian CDs that are comparable to secular CDs.

McAfee noted she remembers exactly when and why she decided to open her business. It was Jan. 3, 2004, and she was shopping with her husband at a over the years to provide a service in ministry and felt that this will be a great way for her to do just that, by promoting the word of Jesus Christ to Wayne and the surrounding areas.

McAfees' bought the building from Keith Jech, who had Keith Jech Insurance (and tax service). They didn't take possession of the building until April 29, 2005 so that Jech could stay until the end of the tax season.

Excited about the opening of her store, "I want to offer people to shop locally, to get their Christian needs here," McAfee said.

Prior to opening her store, McAfee worked with her husband, Stan, at Farm Bureau Insurance both in Wakefield and Wayne. The couple has a daughter, three sons, and three grandchildren.

McAfee invites everyone to stop in and visit, as well as see what she has to offer. Anyone with questions can call her at 833-5156.

they need.

A pitfall that some busy parents fall into is to use money to buy love, or substitute money for companionship. The growth of a child's emotional stability and ability to manage money are hindered with this kind of situation. There is no subpanionship. So set aside some time in that busy schedule for each child and that child alone.

There is no set recipe or formula for teaching children to become responsible money managers. Parents can do a great deal to help their children develop healthy attitudes about money, its purpose and limits if they remember actions and examples speak louder than words. Parents can examine their own money attitudes and practices

Harvesting oats

On a hot summer day six miles north of Pilger in Wayne County. Everett Minds was observed on the Ted Reeg, Jr, farm harvesting a 20 acre field of oats. Minds was using a 1954 Super MTA International tractor pulling a IHC 82 combine made in the early 60's. The oats was so good that Everett had to unload the combine's bin every half round.

When she died on July 14, there were no headlines in the international newspapers. In fact, I'm not sure I even saw a notice in our daily paper. I learned about her death from the weekly e-mail updates from the Nebraska Hospice and Palliative Care Association.

Her name was Dame Cicely Saunders. She was awarded the title of Dame by Queen Elizabeth in 1980. I'm not sure about the significance, but I'm sure it is an honor, somewhat like being knighted would be. And I'm sure she deserved the recognition.

Cicely Saunders went to St. Thomas Hospital Nightingale School of Nursing in the 40s and later became a social worker, too. She was discovering the poor care terminally ill patients in Britain were getting about the same time Kubler Ross wrote a ground-break- London for me.

in these institutions. At St. Christopher's, there were no visiting hours; friends and family could be with the patient as much or as long as they wanted. Family pets were welcome. The patient could eat what he wanted, when he wanted; or not eat, if he didn't care to.

Most importantly, every effort to control pain and other symptoms was made, no matter how much narcotic was needed. The care at St. Christopher's has become the standard for hospice care all over the world. It embodies physical, mental, and spiritual care, and it has proven that hospice is not about dying, but about living until Dame Cicely was 87 years old, and died at St. Christopher's. How fitting. for all your care and encouragement. The medical staffs at Providence Hospital and Mercy Hospital in Sioux City were the best. We are indeed fortunate in our community to have these caring medical professionals. Thank you Father Mark and the parishioners of St. Mary's for your support and prayers. All the cards, visits, and help from dear friends have made the days of recovery pass quickly, and the assistance and support given to me by my children and grandchildren especially my granddaughter, Lindsey, I deeply cherish. God bless you all. Betty Garvin

To all who helped and supported me during my recent illness, thank you

THANK YOU

In Loving Memory

God saw you getting tired, a cure was not to be. He put his arms around you and whispered, "come to me". With tearful eyes we watched you suffer and slowly fade away, even though we loved you deeply, we could not make you stay. A heart of gold stopped beating, working hands were put to rest. God broke our hearts to prove to us He only takes the best,

We miss you more than words can say, our hearts still ache with sorrow, without you in our lives today what becomes of our tomorrow? Your life was full, you had so much, good times, good friends, a loving touch. Your memory is a treasure, with which we'll never part, until we meet again you're safe within our hearts.

A sincere thank you to each and every one of you for all the prayers, visits, food, cards, flowers, plants and memorials. May God bless each and every one of you.

> You are forever in our hearts. The family of LaVerle "Curly" McDonald

THANK YOU from Dr. Wayne and Annamae Wessel.

We thank all who sent cards, helped us to celebrate at the retirement open house, and have expressed good wishes for the two of us in retirement. Your good wishes are a light in our lives.

A special thank you also to all who have supported me in my practice over the 42 year period. You have trusted me with your dental health and that of your families. I have enjoyed having you as patients and friends.

Thank you also to Dr. Rob Burrows and his staff, for planning and hosting the lovely retirement open house.

Dr. Burrows has purchased the practice and will continue to serve you with his wonderfully caring staff.

Thanks to all and may God bless you in all that you do!

Dr. Wagne E. Wessel DDS.

A sincere thank you to everyone that remembered me in any way since my surgery and at home. The thoughts, prayers, cards, calls, gifts and flowers were very much appreciated and
