

Parking again issue of debate

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Parking was again the main issue of debate at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Ordinance 2006-2, dealing with the surface of parking areas was read for the second time at the meeting.

The amended ordinance included changes to allow property owners to use fractured or crushed rock or concrete on driveway or parking surfaces, but not gravel on these areas.

The proposed ordinance would have also included a stipulation that "driveway surfaces on the city terraces with a slope greater than four percent toward the street shall be concrete, asphalt or brick."

The ordinance was voted down on second reading by a 3-4 vote with council member Will Wiseman abstaining.

Council member Don Buryanek then re-introduced the ordinance with a 16 percent slope stipulation.

After more debate, the council voted 6-1 to move the issue forward with the sentence regarding slope removed.

Because of the changes and the fact that the original ordinance was voted down, the vote on Tuesday was the first reading approval for the ordinance and it will be brought back for second reading at the council's next meeting.

Other parking ordinances on Tuesday's agenda included the establishing of temporary handicapped parking spaces on side streets during the Main Street Improvement Project and the enforcement of three hour parking limits on side streets during the project.

The project begins

Crews began removing the old street materials on Main Street this week as the Main Street renovation project began in earnest. Machines ground up the old pavement and trucks hauled it to a storage area. It will be used again later in the project. Residents are reminded to use caution when driving in Wayne as motorists become accustomed to the changes taking place. Favorable weather has allowed the project to proceed smoothly this week as all the top layer was milled off and bricks were removed from Main Street. The project is expected to be complete this fall.

Decisions, decisions

Twenty month old Courtney Brink appears to be deciding if the egg she found during the Wayne Public Library's Easter Egg Hunt was worthy of her time. Approximately 50 youth took part in Saturday's events at the library. They included story time, the Easter Egg hunt and a craft activity. A number of other Easter-type activities took place throughout the area this week in preparation for the Easter holiday.

School board hires two staff members, approves two resignations at meeting

By Lynn Sievers
Of the Herald

Wayne Community Schools Board of Education met in regular session Monday night at the high school in Wayne. Personnel issues included the hiring and resignation of several staff members. Hired was SPED teacher Shannon Gibson and ELL paraprofessional April Heisel. Resignations included Jill Lehmkuhl (ELL paraprofessional) and Eric Henderson (second grade teacher). The board gave its approval.

Administration reports were given: High School Principal Mark Hanson noted that April is busy; they have been doing standardized testing, Prom is on the 22nd, Kiwanis banquet is on the 23rd, Scholastic Contest at Northeast Community College is on the 24th (there will be 36 students in 44 different contests from calculus to welding).

For graduation this year, they plan on having a mobilized guardsman give the graduation speech online over the Internet and projected on a screen in Rice Auditorium.

Elementary School Principal Dave Lutt: Kindergarten Round up was held Friday with 60 attending for sure and another six to contact. He noted they, too, were doing scholastic testing. Lutt said the Carnival held recently at the Middle School was great.

Middle School Principal Tim Krupicka: Testing has been going on in the Middle School too. As for the Carnival, he noted many liked it being moved from Saturday to Friday night (proceeds were double what they had been). It is busy at the Middle School, too, with fourth grade classroom tours scheduled for April 19.

SPED Director Kelly Ballinger: They have finished staff evaluations and ESL student list. She noted she has been working with staff on school improvement and curriculum.

Athletic Director Rocky Ruhl: There have been some rule changes with NSAA such as: starting day of camps from June 1 to the last day of school; there are limitations on golf (12 events), which will be more like track; there are big changes in volleyball; the schedule allows for 16 dates with a point system similar to wrestling restricting the number of individuals.

Ruhl noted the Wayne Golf Districts at the Wayne County Club will be on May 15 and the Athletic Banquet will be on May 16.

Curriculum Director Peg Lutt noted the Pearson data management system is a good one and will give them what they need to keep up with state regulations. The Pearson system also offers tech support. Lutt noted she is looking into price quotes on getting the Pearson data system for the school.

Dr. Joe Reinert, superintendent, discussed technology and software purchases

Memories abound for retired teacher

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Those attending next week's Elderfest activities at the Wayne City Auditorium will be asked to share memories from the past. These will in turn be put into a book and shared with future generations.

Recording of memories and interviews with the older generation are not something new.

In fact, Laura Fredrickson of Carroll has many recorded interviews completed by her students in the 1950's.

Fredrickson, who has lived in Carroll nearly all of her life, taught school in several locations for 49 years before retiring in 1983.

"I had two sisters who were also teaching and we all decided to retire at the same time. Between us, we had more than 100 years of teaching experience," Laura said.

She taught in several country schools, the Carroll School and Seward, in addition to the 32 years she spent in the Wayne school system.

"I started out in Wayne by teaching seventh grade and then became the librarian for the K-12 school. Later, when Wayne began to have a Middle School, we needed to have a learning center and I became the Media Coordinator," she said.

"When I started teaching in 1934, there were country schools every two or three miles. I was the only teacher in the school and taught all grades. It was a new experience for me, but I enjoyed all of it," she added.

Fredrickson recalls that the school year began after Labor Day and ran from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Sometimes the older students would miss school to help on the farm, but they still had to pass an eighth grade exam. Students had to go to school until they were 16 years old, or until they passed the exam. It was not unusual at that time for students not to go to high school," Fredrickson said.

Fredrickson recently shared a book she and her students put together in 1953.

"At that time was teaching seventh grade in what is now Wayne Middle School. The students were studying Nebraska history and they interviewed a relative or older person about memories of Nebraska," she said.

Several of those interviews and their authors are printed below.

Hattie Kern

"Mrs. Hattie Kern moved to Nebraska when she was 9 years old from Tarkio, Missouri where she was born. They came by wagons across the Missouri River. The river was just thawing, but still had ice on it. The wagon wheels sank into the soft ice but they got across without turning over. They took a train from a town in eastern Nebraska to Nora, Nebraska from which they took wagons 25 miles to a home which they bought.

Business class studies voice recognition software

The Business Communications class at Wayne Community Schools has been studying and using voice recognition software in class.

The students communicate with their computer by using a headset and dictating what they want keyed on their screen. It has been shown that a student using voice recognition software is able to key faster than they would key manually.

Miss Sara Petty, Wayne State College Student Teacher of Business Education, has been teaching the voice recognition unit to the Business Communications course. The students begin training the computer by reading two or three selections off of the screen. The computer listens to what is being read and makes adjustments based on the input. After the training, the students are able to read from a book or magazine and the computer will type what the students have read.

Over time and with practice, the students will be able to use the voice recognition software to type homework or papers with a high rate of accuracy and speed.

Here's the three "S's" of managing work zones safely. Speed, Space and Stress.

MANAGE YOUR SPEED:

- Slow Down when approaching all work zones. You will be in the work zone quicker than you think.
- Follow Posted Speed Limits, especially within construction zones, and try to maintain a consistent speed with the traffic flow.
- Don't Resume Normal Speed until you see roadway signs indicating it's safe to do so.

MANAGE YOUR SPACE:

- Leave Room. Leave adequate braking room between your vehicle and the one ahead of you. Also, keep a safe distance between your vehicle and traffic barriers, trucks, construction equipment and workers.
- Don't Pass on the Shoulder. Don't drive across the median. This creates a very dangerous situation for you, construction workers and other motorists - not to mention the steep fine.
- Leave Yourself an Out. When stopped in traffic, leave a safety zone between you and the vehicle in front of you. A good rule of thumb is that when stopped in traffic you should be able to see the bottom of the tires of the vehicle in front of you.
- Watch Out for Tailgaters. Do not force tailgaters to back off by slamming on your brakes or reducing your speed significantly. This practice can lead to road rage and increases the chances of a collision.

MANAGE YOUR STRESS:

- Keep Your Cool. Calm down and don't rush.
- Pay Attention. Avoid cell phone or radio distractions, as well as those of other stopped cars or construction.

Compensate for lack of garden space by container gardening Engagements

Finding enough space to plant a garden is a tricky task, especially in urban areas with poor soil quality. However, container gardening is becoming more popular for gardeners who enjoy home-grown flowers and produce. Suitable containers vary from clay pots and barrels to window boxes. The key is to select a container that is sturdy and heavy enough to hold itself upright in strong winds. It should hold enough soil to support the type of plant it contains and be equipped with drainage holes to prevent excess water from suffocating the plant.

Ruth Vonderohe

Soil-less potting mixes work best for container gardening. These mixes have good drainage and contain adequate moisture and air space for root development. They are also free of disease, insects and weeds that may be present in regular garden soil.

A wide variety of plants can be grown in containers, especially since many seed catalogs now offer bush and patio varieties. Crops such as cucumbers, squash and tomatoes are excellent choices, along with salad crops such as leaf lettuce, radishes and green onions.

When determining what types of plants to grow, take the amount of available sunlight into consideration. Plants that bear fruit, such as peppers, herbs and sun-loving flowers such as geraniums and petunias need at least six hours of full sun each day. Leafy vegetables and fibrous-rooted flowers such as Impatiens are better suited for shaded areas. Keeping containers on a wheeled-platform or wagon can make it easier to move plants from place to place should sunlight require them to be moved throughout the day.

All plants need adequate soil moisture. It is especially important to monitor moisture on warm, windy days when soil is most likely to dry out. If a container garden is located on an apartment balcony above another resident's balcony or patio, be sure to place containers on some type of plate to catch the water that drains through.

Fertilizers should be applied according to label directions and individual plant needs.

Attorney General hails advancement of sex offender bill

Attorney General Jon Bruning hailed state lawmakers for advancing LB 1199, a comprehensive plan to protect children from sex offenders.

"Predators who hurt children deserve to be locked up for a long time. Today, we are one step closer to ensuring Nebraska's children are safe," Bruning said.

Bruning helped construct LB 1199, which will stiffen penalties for criminals who sexually assault children. It will also create a new mental health standard for sex offenders deemed likely to re-offend. The bill also provides lifetime monitoring of the most serious offenders, and addresses sex offender residency restrictions.

Attorney General Bruning and Governor Dave Heineman worked with Judiciary Committee Chairman, Omaha Senator Pat Bourne, on the bill. Norfolk Senator Mike Flood made LB 1199 his personal priority bill.

"Senator Bourne and Senator Flood have worked hard on this plan. I appreciate their commitment to protecting our children," Bruning said.

The bill advanced from Select File to the third and final round of voting, called Final Reading.

Meeting times given for family and friends of 189th

Making observations

The Wayne High School ninth grade Introduction to Physical Science (IPS) students have been working on separating a sludge mixture. Sludge is a combination of liquids and solids such as water isopropanol, salt, baking soda, carbon, sulfur, sand and gravel. The project is a cumulative analysis test of what the students have learned so far this year in IPS. Each pair of students was given three main tasks - separate a sludge mixture into its components, identify each component and list characteristic properties of each component.

The relay service enables speech and hearing-impaired persons to use the telecommunications network. The surcharge also funds the Commission's equipment distribution program, which provides specialized equipment necessary for impaired persons to use the relay system.

The surcharge applies to all access lines in Nebraska, whether they are landline or wireless. Nebraskans have paid a seven-cent surcharge for three years. Seven cents also was the surcharge in the relay system's first year of 1991.

In the intervening years, the surcharge has fluctuated between five cents and a high of 10 cents with the low of five cents assessed for three years from 1999 through 2001.

The Commission's vote came on the recommendation of staff analysts and the Commission's Telecommunications Relay Service Advisory Committee, both of which proposed the monthly reduction of two cents.

Commission Chairman Lowell Johnson of North Bend said the five cents per month surcharge will enable the relay service to maintain an appropriate reserve fund of about three months. Johnson indicated that projections also included such factors as growth in the number of access lines in use as well as costs to operate the system.

Getting ready for Easter

For now, I have a kitchen counter. I spent much of Saturday going through old mail, sorting and throwing. I can use the counter again. The computer desk is another story. Our friend, Don Lees, used to say we should not have so many flat surfaces, because we just put things on them. It's true.

Ordinarily, the kitchen table is the place everything accumulates. But the Big Farmer has had income tax "stuff" all over it for about a month. He says he's recapturing 13 years of depreciation, whatever that is. We meet with the accountant today, and I have hopes for having my kitchen table back by Easter.

Then there is the other counter under the china cupboard. Right now, it has a desk file, a small box of stuff, moved from the Farm House, my purse, a set of canisters, a cookie jar, a radio/CD player, and the extra coffee pot. There isn't room for much else. Whether I will get that cleared off by Sunday remains to be seen.

By: Pat Meterhenry

I did an insurance assessment with a couple last week, and we sat at the kitchen table. He looked around for something to show me and realized his wife had cleared the table before I came. "Now," he commented, "I'll never find it again." I know what he meant.

We have been intrigued by the fact that first class mail is still being forwarded, but things like magazines and charitable organizations had our new address almost immediately.

Further more, we are still getting free magazines for the Farm House, like Country Living and Organic Gardening. There is even one called Gourmet Cook, which would have been out of place wherever I live. These get stacked on the coffee table. But I'm better at giving them to the kids, or passing them on to the dentist's office. I plan to never again haul out boxes of magazines, which I did when we moved off the farm.

I used to be able to prepare for a holiday in a day; now, it takes me a week. There is definitely something going on here. And I don't like it. But the alternative isn't so good, either!

Regardless, Easter will soon be here, whether I think I'm ready or not. The Redbud tree outside the kitchen window is full of buds, there are forsythia everywhere, and the pear trees for which this city is famous are almost in full bloom. Daffodils and hyacinths have sprung up, seemingly overnight. My neighbors are trimming hedges and cleaning out trash. I have that to do yet. I still don't do well on my hands and knees.

The choir I sing in has its concert scheduled for the week after Easter. We are doing the Passion According to St. Matthew, by Schuetz. It's a powerful work, needing a very strong tenor soloist. We have that, and it's shaping up to be very beautiful. There is also a Latin Sanctus that moves me to tears every time we rehearse it. Holy Week for me is full of flowers, music, food, and family. I hope it is for you, too. Happy Easter!

Is there a nest egg in trees?

Woodlands in Nebraska are commonly treated as a place for wildlife enjoyment, a place to walk and to enjoy hearing the sounds of nature or as a nuisance to get rid of and convert into housing development or farmland.

But wait! Is there a golden egg in those woods that could help you pay off debt or contribute to your retirement? Well, maybe. One of the unknown and seldom heard about resources that Nebraska can grow is lumber.

Cottonwoods have been harvested for many years as a source of lumber for pallet manufacturing. Cedar trees have been harvested for posts and furniture use while pine has been harvested from the Pine Ridge area for years. Some innovative growers have plants stands of black walnut that were planted many years ago for lumber harvest and even for nut production and harvest. Trees are not new, just a niche in Nebraska's well known agricultural industry.

Native woodlands offer an economic benefit as well especially if the area has never been cut. There are several steps involved in woodland management with the first step being an inventory of what is growing. The inventory will determine the tree type, tree value and future lumber harvesting.

Steps after the inventory include marketing, sales contract, monitoring the site during harvest, surveying the property boundaries plus other negotiable items. This whole process takes time and should not be approached lightly. Luckily, the Nebraska Forest Service can assist tree owners in a majority of the steps and help them have a more enjoyable experience in dealing with lumber sales.

Del Hemsath
Extension Educator

Northeast Nebraska has quite a few native woodland stands that hold great potential for lumber harvest. If you think you have enough woodland that contains black walnut for example, you might have a golden egg just waiting for you. A phone call to the Forest Service is the first step that could lead to many benefits for you.

LEAD Fellowship applications available

Fellowship applications for Nebraska LEAD (Leadership Education/ Action Development) Group XXVI are now available for men and women involved in production agriculture or agribusiness.

Up to 30 individuals will be selected from production agriculture and agribusiness with preference given to individuals ages 25 through 50 who have "demonstrated leadership potential," according to Allen G. Blezek, Nebraska LEAD Program director.

In addition to monthly three-day seminars, throughout Nebraska (September through April) every year, Nebraska LEAD "Fellows" also participate in a 10-day National Study/Travel Seminar and a two-to-three week International Study/ Travel Seminar. Seminar themes include economics, foreign cultures, government, communications, international trade, politics, business, labor, environment, finance and industry, as well as agriculture, Blezek said.

The program is designed to prepare the spokespersons, problem-solvers and decision makers for Nebraska and its agricultural industry, Blezek said. Now in its 25th year, the program is operated with Nebraska colleges and universities, business and industry and individuals throughout the state.

Child care items needed for Red Cross training course

As spring approaches and people get ready to have garage sales, the Red Cross is in need of some items to use in their Babysitter Training course. This course is offered every spring and fall for youth ages 11 and above. It is a 6-hour course and the students are taught skills to provide safe, quality childcare in a fun, interactive environment that promotes confidence and competence.

Because the babysitting class has many hands-on learning activities, they have a need for some new items to replace some that have aged. All skills are taught on infant-sized manikins. Please remember that the chapter does not have a lot of storage size, so they don't need an abundance of these items.

If you have something from the list below that is in good quality, or if you would like to purchase one or more of the items, please call the Red Cross office at 402-375-5209 to confirm what the need is and what you can donate to them.

- Items:
- Diapers (size 2)
 - Diaper changing pads
 - Wet Ones
 - Onesies (t-shirt w/snaps - 12 mo. size)
 - Infant size blankets
 - Small bibs
 - Bottles (all shapes, sizes and various nipples)
 - Toys (infant to age 5/6)
 - Clothes (both boys & girls; newborn - 6 mos.)
 - Socks & Shoes (newborn)
