Voting yes for Stop Over Spending Dear Editor,

As a Nebraska taxpayer, I am concerned that our State's budget is projected to grow by at least 27.7 percent over four years.

Our elected officials have a welldocumented history of not being able to stop this high rate of spending growth. Taxes in Nebraska are already among the highest in the country and the burden of out-ofcontrol spending only makes it harder to keep young talent here or bring in new companies and jobs here.

In Nebraska, county government already has to live within a growth lid. I don't understand why we can't have similar fiscal responsibility at the state level. It appears to me that those opposed to strong fiscal management are the same groups who benefit from higher taxes and bigger spending. I just don't think they have the best interest of all Nebraskans in their platform for higher spending and higher taxes.

I am going to vote FOR the Stop Over Spending initiative this November because I want to see Nebraska able to compete for new jobs and lower taxes. This will put taxpayers back in charge of state expenditure growth rather than lobbyists and special interest groups.

It all comes down to money

By Ed Howard

The Nebraska Press Association A legendary Nebraska lawmaker once described the entire legislative process in a few words.

The late Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff was brilliant, irascible and to the point in a pick-axe sort of way,

"It all comes down to money!" Carpenter liked to say.

His observation will strike a chord early and often with the 2007

The latest thing that poses a need for more dollars is the embarrassing, if not shameful situations found at the developmental center in Beatrice, and at the Thomas Fitzgerald facility for veterans in. Omaha.

Lawmakers can reinstitute the panel that formerly had the job of keeping track of conditions at such places. Governor Dave Heineman says the situation doesn't call for another committee, but for continuous monitoring and accountability. Regardless of the approach, it's going to cost a few dollars. References to even "a few dollars" in government can approach the better part of $1 million in the blink of even the most honest, conservative of eyes.

For a worthwhile exercise in citizenship and understanding, try

Every candidate for governor and the Legislature takes the same fundamental approach when on the campaign pulpit. Something like: 'By making sure our tax dollars are spent efficiently, by judiciously cutting the cost of government, by making the hard decisions that must be made, we can provide (pick a group) with the quality care they deserve" and still have money left over for a Merry Christmas.

Program held to remember babies who are gone but never forgotten

"A Walk to Remember" was held Sunday at First United Methodist Church in Wayne. Anne Lambert, PA-C of Wayne Mercy Medical Clinic introduced two speakers, Amy Woerdemann and Carolyn Sinniger, who both have lost babies. The event opened with an open panel discussion with attendees introducing themselves and telling their experiences of loss and ended with a remembrance service with a live butterfly release in honor of each baby.

Woerdemann and Sinniger told their stories. Sinniger was pregnant when she and her husband, John, moved to Wayne 10 years ago. The couple already had a 3year-old son, Tony. Sinniger started with once a month checkups at the local clinic and later with once a week checkups. It was the day before Thanksgiving and the doctor wasn't finding a heartbeat and when he did, the rate was half what it should be.

Her doctor had her go to the hospital for a non-stress test. She was two weeks from her due date and so because of the abnormal stress test result, he induced her the next day. The Sinnigers called their parto rest but got a frantic call that they couldn't find a heartbeat so they rushed Carolyn into surgery. She remembers someone saying they should call the chaplain. Their baby girl, Sara, was delivered. resuscitated and lifeflighted to

"She looked great, really pretty," Carolyn said, "I'll never forget hearing the helicopter going away with my baby."

Sinnigers' parents arrived as well as their sisters. There was a call from Omaha that the baby had quit breathing so what should they do? The Sinnigers drove to Omaha and Sara was still alive but the decision was made to take her off of life support. "We saw her and she looked perfect," Carolyn said. "I remember thinking this was crazy. We all held her and then left. I don't know how I left but I had to, I had no choice.

Lots of support

The Sinnigers have a younger son, Brian, 7. Carolyn noted she had one miscarriage before Tony was born and after Sara was born, before Brian's birth.

"When I was pregnant with Brian, I was so scared that something would happen," "Carolyn said. Dr. Felber suggested we do a planned C-section. Everything went fine."

Woerdemann said she and her husband, Mike, have been married seven years and tried for two years to conceive. She had two miscarriages during that time and sought the help of a fertility specialist. She discovered that she had a birth defect in her uterus that didn't allow much room for babies to grow so that is why she had miscarriages. The specialist removed the majority of the defect and they had their son, Christopher, 4. There was another miscarriage in between Christopher and Jacob. They also have a son, Joseph, who

"With Jacob, it seemed it was a doomed pregnancy from the beginning," Woerdemann said. "At that Jacob's placenta had attached over my birth defect, which meant that it wasn't functioning properly. Due to this, Jacob's amniotic fluid levels were so low you could barely measure them. We were transferred to a specialist in Omaha who monitored our pregnancy until I was admitted to the hospital at 26 weeks. I was admitted on a Thursday and that is when they gave me steroids." Woerdemann continued that by that Friday night, she was having severe contractions. They administered medication to slow the contractions. When she woke up on Saturday morning, the contractions started up again; worse than the night before. She told a student intern about the contractions but her doctor never received her message. She said, "Even if she had told my doctor, the situation wouldn't have changed but at least my 2004, he was 2 pounds, 9 ounces. He registered a 9 out of 10 on the apgar scale and the doctors assured her he was okay before they took her into surgery. Jacob's placenta had grown into her uterus so she had lost a lot of blood and needed surgery to save her life. Later she found out that Jacob wasn't alright, he had pulmonary hypertension so couldn't breathe. The doctor told her he couldn't do anything for him so the family took photos and said their goodbyes.

"I held him as he took his last breath," Woerdemann "Everyone was so concerned about my health. The staff took him away and I never saw him again. I thought I would. It was a nightmare: one minute you're pregnant and the next you hold your stomach and say where is my baby?"

Woerdemann noted they recently opened their store, Jacob's Room at 202 Main in Wayne, which was an expensive way to deal with grief Center, 256-3042.

but setting it up was therapeutic for her. She added the store is not non-profit but it is a way for her to see children get and enjoy toys that Jacob will never have.

Lambert noted everyone grieves in their own way and men and women grieve different from each other. Sometimes women feel that men don't care because they typically don't talk about how they are feeling like women do but they do care very much and grieve in their own way.

She added that in asking around, she found there are women who lost their babies 20 to 30 years ago who have had grief all these years and still find it very difficult to talk about their experience. She hopes to continue to raise awareness about pregnancy loss and the unique grief and loss that is experienced.

If anyone has experienced the loss of a baby or knows someone who has and would like more information, they can call Lambert at Wayne Mercy Medical Center, 375-2500 or Laurel Mercy Medical Challenging the mind

Nebraska State Senator Ernie Chambers was the guest speaker for the President's Council for Diversity at Wayne State College, Oct. 9 in the Frey Conference Suite, Student Center on campus. Chambers presented "Embracing Diversity in Nebraska" during two sessions in the Frey Conference Suite, student center. A student-issue session was held in the afternoon and an evening session was hosted for the community. Sen. Chambers challenged students to see their education as more than the quest for a diploma, "There is a need for people to try to think more precisely and exactly" in America, Chambers said. He went on to say that real education aims to tackle concepts and ideas that challenge the mind. Chambers' talk drew on his 38 years of service in the state legislature.

Campaign signs don't belong on right-of-way

The Nebraska Department of Roads (NDOR) wishes to remind people it is against the law to place political campaign signs on state highway right-of-way.

Multi-colored, multi-shaped signs usually appear along roadsides near election time and are promptly removed.

Maintenance crews of the NDOR will remove any signs that are improperly placed within the state highway right-of-way. These signs will be stored for a brief period of time in State Roads Department maintenance yards across the state, where they can be reclaimed by the owners.

This state right-of-way reminder applies to any errant plantings or harvesting operations; parked equipment or salvage items and commercial sales or private business stands.

Those needing further information concerning the boundaries of right-of-way corridors, should contact their NDOR district office, or their nearest NDOR maintenance

With the Thanksgiving holiday or blood drives in your area, call quickly approaching, we can be thankful for many things such as friends, family and neighbors. Without the continuing support of blood donors, patients would not have a chance for another tomor-

People live such busy lives and yet taking time to give one unit of blood can make the difference between life and death to a patient in the hospital. It is essential that blood and blood products are available when necessary. Not only for treatment of accident cases, hemophiliacs and cancer patients, but for the use of routine surgeries. These occurrences do not stop or slow down during the holidays. Your friends, family, neighbors and community are depending on you to help maintain your community blood supply.

"We understand that the holiday season gets busy, however that means an increased chance for unfortunate accidents that would require blood transfusions, and during the holidays, donations aren't as consistent to be relied on. It is necessary to have the commitment of the donors to ensure that our blood supply is sufficient." said Janette Twait, CEO.

The community blood supply needs over 1500 individuals to donate blood each week with the Siouxland Community Blood Bank to keep up with the needs of the 35 area hospitals in Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota. The need for blood affects all of us. Nine out of ten of us will need blood some time in our lives, and one out of every ten hospital patients requires a transfusion. Help make a difference in the lives of others by donating today. Your next opportunity to donate in Wayne is on Monday, Oct. 30 and Tuesday, Oct. 31 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Wayne State College in the Student Center. The eDonor Drive code is 75.

To be eligible to donate blood, individuals must be at least 17 years of age; however there is no upper age limit as long as the donor is in good health. In addition donors need to weigh over 110 pounds and have not donated whole blood in the past 56 days. A photo I.D. is required at the time of registration.

Geography in action

Members of Wayne State College Professor Randy Bertolas' classes in World Regional Geography and the Geography of Recreation, Tourism, and Sports pose in front of the newly renovated United States map on the playground of the Wayne Elementary School. The map is similar to one created for St. Mary's Elementary School last May. Approximately 30 student volunteers from these geography classes participated in all facets of planning and carrying out the renovation. The project was approved by Mr. Daryl Schrunk, Wayne Elementary School principal and funded by WSC Service-Learning, directed by Dr. Jean Karlen.

A statistic that today's kindergarten students and first year 4-H

The age old question "what do you want to be when you group up?" has conditioned us to think of our purpose in life in terms of a vocation. Answers are usually, "I want to be a cowboy, fireman, teacher or doctor." In reality, you might do all of these things - and more. Today, people change jobs several times during their life, and future generations will likely change even more. Preparing today's children for the future is to educate them in terms of purpose and vocations that develop that purpose, educate them in terms of purpose, and vocations that develop that purpose. The rate of change for the next generation will be phenomenal, and personal sense of destiny must ride the waves of that constant change.

Destiny can be defined as "the power or agency that determines the course of events." Studies show that most people believe that they have a calling or destiny in life. But the same studies indicate that most don't consider themselves to be fulfilling their destiny in their current job. They feel that nowhere in their educational and life experience were they shown how to find the path of their purpose. Without a sense of destiny, a job just ends up being a job.

Members select the projects that hold their particular interest. They "learn by doing" and therefore learn to achieve, and learn to improve on their achievements. Members expand their skills by making presentations at 4-H events and by exhibiting their projects at the fair. Being a part of the 4-H program teaches life skills that begin shaping their destiny in life. Those life skills include relating to others, developing an inquiring mind, learning to make decisions and set goals, developing a concern for the community and gaining a positive self image. They learn to relate to others by making presentations at 4-H club meetings and county-wide 4-H events. They also learn parliamentary procedure skills by club meeting participation. Also, 4-Her's develop an inquiring mind by learning about a project of their choosing, whether that be woodworking, child development or aerospace. They learn decision making and goal setting by participating in livestock or consumer science judging contests, as well as deciding what project to undertake and setting goals to achieve within that project.

The many 4-H clubs teach concern for community by conducting community improvement projects. A positive self image is built by learning to make a presentation in from of a group, constructing a bookshelf or making a motion at a meeting.

By participating in 4-H activities, events, and project completions, 4-H'ers learn skills that will apply to any vocation and all aspects of life's activities, putting them on a pathway to a purpose, a

Walks not only raise funds but also humility for walkers

the Buddy walk for Down's Syndrome, the Breast Cancer Walk, the Alzheimer's Walk, etc. I hadn't done for awhile; it always seemed I had other things on my agenda. But a nurse friend has been telling me about her friend, Olinda, who has ALS, and that there would be a walk for that cause on Saturday, the 14th.

Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, is an autoimmune disorder that results in complete loss of muscle. We have had several patients with it in hospice lately; we've wondered if there is more of it or if those diagnosed are choosing hospice rather than ventilators. I don't know. I do know it is a taxing disease, to the patient, the family, and the hospice staff.

Last year, the only episode of ER I watched featured James Wood playing the part of a doctor with ALS. It was very well done. And a top of the line wheelchair and communication computer were an important part of his adapting to the situation.

Olinda Olson has been on a ventilator for many years. Her husband coaches, and is now on staff at Lincoln Northeast High. But I first learned of them when I was Olinda now lives in a long term care facility here in Lincoln. She has written a cookbook, would you believe? She wrote it with some sort of computer device and it took a very long time, but it is published and I have a copy.

So, on Saturday, the sun was shining and the wind went down. I drove over to Antelope Park and joined a bunch of other people to cancer one next Sunday. Why don't caring for Carolyn Leigh, whose walk for ALS. Olinda was there, you, too?

Other teams were the Hazelnuts and the Cliffhangers; you get the idea. One team was a fraternity from SDSU in Vermillion! And one team was there with the lady whose husband bought the sophisticated wheelchair and computer from the TV show after it was offered on E-bay as a fund raiser for ALS. They read a letter from the actor before we walked. Then she played a letter she wrote on the computer. It was awesome!

There were signs along the way commemorating or honoring other victims. It made me very glad I could move all my limbs and communicate verbally. There was music, and food donated by local pizza and sub places; and there was just a great spirit of camaderie.

Mostly, there was a sense of humility when considering what these two ladies and their families are enduring. They are truly an inspiration, and I was happy to contribute an hour and some cash and get some much needed exercise at the same time. I had such a good time, I'm signing up for the

And though we cannot see you, you're always at our side.---Thank you family, friends, Providence Medical Center, the Oaks, Hospice. ELECTION PREVIEW

EDITOR'S NOTE Nebraskans will be voting on nine issues when they go to the General Election polls on November 7. So that voters can better understand these important proposed changes to the state Constitution or state statutes, the Nebraska Press Association in cooperation with this newspaper has prepared this report. This report briefly defines the issues, explaining the purpose and finally stating the arguments for and against. This is the first in a series of three previews.

INITIATIVE 421

Initiative 421, to authorize use of video keno machines, prompts strong sentiments statewide. Sup-porters say keno has provided $250 million for community betterment projects, ranging from property tax relief to parks, police cars and libraries. Opponents cite a 1999 congres sional study which said keno offers "no measurable societal benefits." Instead of the five-minute delay between games - now required when players use individual keno cards - video machines would allow continuous play, which critics say contributes to irresponsible gambling. Opponents site studies which conclude that crime, domestic violence and bankruptcies increase when video slot machines enter a community. If enacted, the law would allow thousands of video gambling machines in cities, towns and villages.

REFERENDUM 422

legislation in 2005 with the passage of LB126. It dissolved Class I school districts, those that offered elementary-only education. Those who oppose the referendum note repealing the law would not restore the Class I districts, which were dissolved last summer and became part of larger school districts, They also note financial aid associated with the new districts would disappear with repeal of LB126. Supporters of the referendum say the law will work hardships on many students and diminish the viability of some rural communities.

INITIATIVE 423

A constitutional amendment with a formula for regulating growth in state government spending, Initiative 423 has been criticized because virtually all of the money spent by its proponents has come from one wealthy New York City businessman with no Nebraska ties. A large coalition of organizations representing farmers, state and local chambers of commerce, universities, schools, local governments and retired people oppose the proposal, saying t would greatly interfere with state government's ability to function and provide basic services. Critics allege the scheme is unworkable, and that it would force higher local property taxes, since it would limit increases in state aid to local governments. The Unicameral enacted historical Supporters say the budget formula, based on population and a cost of living index, will rein in excessive increases in state spending while promoting economic development. The mechanism for allowing spending in excess of the growth formula will work, proponents say.
