Water issues come before council

By Clara Osten Of the Herald

Providing water to several parts of the community were on the agenda when the Wayne City Council met Tuesday.

The council listened to a request from Kent Franzen, representing Wayne Industries, for water and paving of Lot 3 in the Kardell Industrial Subdivision.

He told the council that Wayne Industries is in favor of developing the 6.5 acres on the east side of Centennial Road to bring people (industries) to town, but "that takes money."

Discussion was held on funding for the project, including the benefits constructing a spec building on the site and the fact that moving forward with the development of the area would fit into the council's goals.

Following discussion, the council voted unanimously to proceed with the develop-

Also on the topic of water, Chris Connolly, representing the Muhs Acres Homeowners Association, asked to council to build a new water main to Muhs Acres. He told the council that there are concerns with water pressure and fire protection with the present service line. He also said that funding for the project would not involve any tax dollars and would be paid for instead with the double water rates that are charged to the homeowners in the Resolution 2007-62 was approved, allowing the manufacturer to repaint the decorative light poles that were installed as part of the Nebraska Department of Roads In-Wayne project. Discussion of this item has been ongoing for several months. Following a recommendation from the engineer from JEO, council members voted to have the poles repainted without remov- \(\) council chambers.

Resolution 2007-66. This resolution authorizes the allocation of property taxes to the Wayne Airport Authority. Since 2003 when the legislature mandated that the airport tax be included in the city's budget, this is done on annual basis.

Approval was given to spend up to $3,300 to evaluate two additional proposals for repair/replacement of the city's wastewater treatment plant.

Jim Condon with Olsson Associates told the council he would like to look at the options and determine if the plans would meet the state's criteria and if the state would approve of the process, which is relatively new to the area.

As the Community Development Agency, the council acted on a purchase agreement with Great Dane and approved the terms of the sale of Lot 3 of Kardell Industrial Park to Wayne Industries.

Discussion was held on options for the of approximately $200,000 from Highway Project Expense Reimbursement. Council member Doug Sturm asked whether "we are willing to commit to using all the funds (for one project) or just use some at a time?" No action was taken on the item and it will be discussed at a future meeting. The council will have a budget work ses-

Cyclists visit Wayne

Of the Herald

Summer is a time for vacations.

Most people plan a destination, make reservations and map out a route.

However, Stacey Mairs and Jack Bouba of Portland, Ore. are traveling across the United States this summer with "no set plan." They also have no car, but are, instead traveling by bicycle.

The pair happened to be in Wayne on Friday and were able to enjoy some of the festivities associated with Henoween.

Stacey, who was employed with a general contractor, and Jack, who was employed in social work, quit their respective jobs and began their trip across the country on June 1.

The two, who had known each other in college, plan to return to their home states of Virginia and New York, respectively. They plan to visit relatives and friends on the east coast and then return to Oregon.

"We have both done some traveling and love riding bikes. We are able to set our own pace," Stacey said.

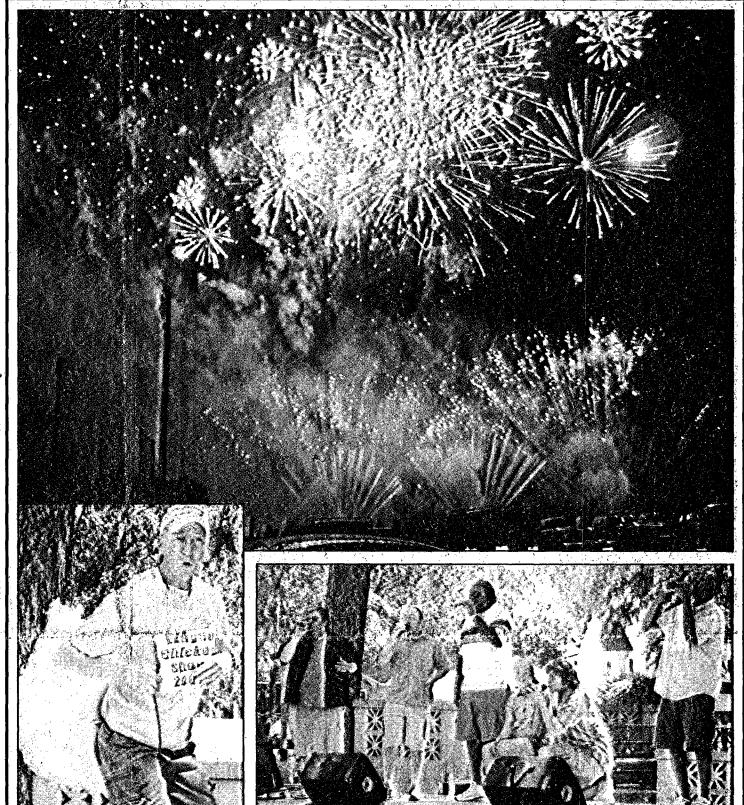

The pair is traveling "as free as possible" and spends very little. They stay in few hotels and spend little on luxuries.

"We decided approximately six months ago we would like to tour the country like this. We gave up our jobs and apartments and told ourselves we would prepare by taking bike rides. However, we really had no long rides before we began our trip," Jack said.

The two said they are aware of nutrition and eating and have eaten "tons of trail mix" on the trip.

They said Missoula, Mont. is the farthest north they have traveled and Wayne was the farthest south on their route. They anticipate heading straight east for the remainder of the trip.

Jacobs continues his trip through Ethiopia

As I boarded the Lake Tana ferry at 6 a.m. on a Sunday morning, I found myself surrounded by cows, goats, stacks of large white bags of corn, firewood, empty plastic jugs and other mystery items covered in blue plastic.

My fascination with the source of the Blue Nile prompted me to book a ticket on the slow moving ferry that bounces along the shoreline of the lake. I later learn from the captain of the ferry why the shoreline is always visible.

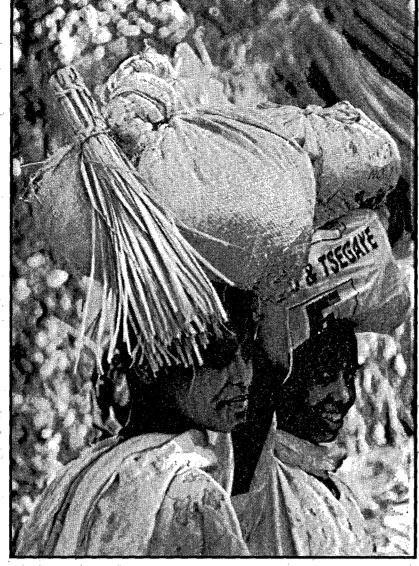

"The boat has no instruments, not even a compass to guide the boat, so I must use my eyes," said the ferry captain as he guides the boat on the largest lake in Ethiopia.

I said a short prayer that no fog appears.

My visions of a comfortable quiet ride were soon dashed; my fist class ticket bought me a space on a bench inside a large room at the front end of the boat, in a compartment that was crammed with people who all eyed me in wonder.

The horn of the ferry blared out to announce it is time to leave familiar shores, and away we went across the greenish gray water loaded to the gills.

After securing my bag with a cable and lock to my bench, I wandered the small ferry to explore and see what was to be discovered. I found a small nook where two clever girls had set up a tea shack, and found a little refuge from all the attention my presence had

After two stops and several hours of moving across the lake we pulled into the dock at Konzula where we would spend the night. Unfortunately someone forgot to tell me at first, so I sat on the boat watching everyone walk up the hill to the town. By the time I got to the village, there was one room left at the hotel, next to the toilet.

After securing my room, I walked back down to the lake to watch the sunset. I found a quiet and beautiful spot along the shore that had some boulders perfect for sitting and watched the sun mover closer to the horizon of Lake Tana. I closed my eyes to feel the cool breeze move across my face. After about 10 seconds I hear; "you, you, you," I slowly opened one eye to see a cute young girl, who then says, "are you sleeping?" Turning around I see she is not alone, but accompanied by about 25 others.

It was the end of my brief quiet moment. After a visit with my new friends, and watching the sunset over the lake together, I headed to my hotel.

My $1.50 room was small, and the dirt floors were covered with blue plastic, which was fine with me, but the small hole in the wall that connected to the toilet wasn't so nice. It allowed a constant stream of odor to fill my room so strong that when I turned my head in the night to the wrong side it would wake me up gagging. After finally falling asleep, I was awaken again to something running across my pillow and the top of my head through my hair. I told myself it was a spider and went back to sleep hoping the morning would soon follow.

Early the next morning we boarded the ferry again as we made our way to Gorgora on the north end of Lake Tana. I helped load large bags of grain onto the boat much to the laughter of people who were not used to a white tourist chipping in to help.

Day two started with the sun piercing the quiet gray horizon on still waters. At each stop people got off and on, animals traded places, as the ferry slowly started to

At the last stop I helped raise the anchor with the hand crank. The crowd we left at the dock whooped with delight, and roared with approval when we finished and I gave my strong man pose.

The last leg of the ride finally gave me what I longed for; a quiet and empty spot on the boat where I could sit alone and soak up the clean breeze of Lake Tana. And for a moment, I saw the mysterious Lake Tana and all its hidden treasures. Too soon we pulled into the last dock and back on land I went for good.

Leaving the familiar shores of Lake Tana, I glanced over my shoulder one last time to view the source of the Blue Nile and the waters that one day would find the shores of Egypt.

Local departments battle house fire

The Carroll Volunteer Fire Department was dispatched to the report of a mattress fire at the Floyd Scholl residence at 85647 561st Avenue late Friday morning, July 13.

While responding, the Carroll Fire Department requested that the Winside Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department be dispatched for mutual aid.

Upon arrival at the scene, additional mutual aid was also requested from Randolph and Hoskins Volunteer Fire Departments. Due to the temperature of the day, many of the initial firefighters that were on the scene became exhausted, so the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department was also called to supply additional help to extinguish the blaze. The majority of the fire was contained to the southeast bedroom, located on the second story of the home. However, there was extensive smoke and heat damage to the entire second floor of the structure. The lower level of the house did receive some water damage.

Other agencies assisting at the scene were the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Nebraska State Fire Marshal's office and the Northeast Nebraska Chapter of the American Red Cross.

According to Lori Carollo. Chapter Manager for the Red Cross, the Red Cross provided aid to the fire personnel and later assisted four individuals with food and clothing. The residents of the home did not need shelter following the blaze.

Dan Mattison, a Red Cross Volunteer responder was on the scene to provide assistance.

The cause of the fire is under investigation by the State Fire Marshall's office.

Gavins Point Dam 50th anniversary planned the embankment was two thirds of

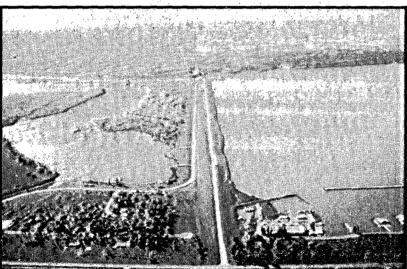

It's hard to believe nearly 50 years have gone by since the completion of Gavins Point Dam near Yankton. Many people can still remember a time when the Missouri River flowed untamed, at times reeking havoc on those who depended on it for their survival and livelihood.

Historically, the Missouri River flooded almost annually. These floods were devastating to homes, businesses, property and people. One particularly bad flood was in the spring of 1943. This flood caused an estimated $40 million in land and property damage. It was with floods like this in mind that Congress passed the Flood Control Act of 1944.

Within this act is the Pick-Sloan Plan, named for Colonel Lewis Pick with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and William Sloan with the Bureau of Land Management. This plan provided for the construction of five dams on the Missouri River downstream from Ft. Peck Dam in Montana.

Gavins Point was the third of these dams constructed. Gavins Point was named for Michael J. Gavins, a prominent farmer and business man who owned the land where the dam was originally scheduled to be built, about two miles west from its present loca-

As if to confirm the validity of the construction of the dam, the same year construction was scheduled to begin. Though the groundbreaking ceremony took place May 18, 1952, the actual construction was delayed because the flood had carved a new channel into the Nebraska shoreline.

The opening ceremony was a huge event with over, 8,000 in attendance. Dignitaries included Pick, now a Lieutenant General, Nebraska Governor Val Peterson and South Dakota Governor Sigurd Anderson. Lt. General Pick detonated the ceremonial first explosion to signify the beginning of construction.

Construction began with the worst flood ever recorded took building of diversion dikes tons of reinforcing steel were used. place in the spring of 1952, the upstream from the dam site to The powerhouse is the smallest of channelize the water away from the six power plants on the the construction area. The dam itself, called an earthen dam, was constructed out of rolled dirt and chalk. It took 7 million cubic yards of this fill material to make the dam embankment. To put this in perspective, if all of the fill material was placed in dump trucks lined bumper to bump they would stretch from Yankton to New York the way to the South Dakota shoreline. The next two years were spent working on the powerhouse and spillway. Powerhouse and spillway construction required the excavation of rock and earth from Calumet Bluff. Special rock-cutting tools were brought in to cut through the rock in areas that could not be blasted. This auger-like tool had huge teeth that would spin while cutting into the rock. This cleared the way for the actual construction to begin. Massive amounts of concrete and steel were used in the structures.

On the spillway alone 179,000 cubic yards of concrete and 3,250 Missouri River. It has just three generators where the others have anywhere from five to eight generators. Gavins Point currently produces enough electricity to power 6 towns the size of Yankton.

By June of 1955, the spillway was ready for use. Diversion dikes were cut to allow water to flow through the spillway gates. Then all attention was turned to closing the remaining portion of the river. Fill material was brought across the completed portion of the dam from the Nebraska side and from the South Dakota side. Over 1,000 cubic vards of earth was moved each hour.

By July 30, 1955, crowds had gathered in anticipation to watch the closure. At 4:05 AM on July 31 the wait was over. The dam was officially closed, with the water behind the dam filling to form Lewis and Clark Lake. By midmorning nearly 7,000 people had gathered to celebrate. The completed dam structure is 8,700 feet long, 45 feet tall and 850 feet wide at the base. Though the powerhouse first produced power in 1956 the actual construction was not completed until 1957. It took five years at a cost of nearly $50 mil-

The completion of Gavins Point Dam allowed the Corps of Engineers to perform its missions: flood damage reduction, hydropower generation, downstream navigation, irrigation, environmental stewardship and recreation. Gavins Point has an annual economic benefit to the area of approximately $35 million. The lake brings people to boat, fish, swim, picnic, camp and just enjoy the beautiful surroundings.

Now, nearly 50 years later, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is preparing for Gavins Point's 50th birthday. Look for a big celebration the first weekend in August 2007.

Northeast's Renewable Fuels Program earns CCPE approval

renewable fuels training program this fall semester.

Meeting in South Sioux City at Northeast's Education Center, Nebraska Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education (CCPE) unanimously approved Northeast's curriculum for an associate of applied science (AAS) degree in Renewable Fuels Technology.

With Randy Sigle as Statewide Training Project Coordinator, Northeast's first classes in the 63-credit-hour AAS Renewable Fuels Technology program will focus on curriculum that ethanol production processes. First-semester courses will include Ethanol Process Fundamentals, Pipe Instrument Diagrams (P & ID), OSHA and Safety, Fundamentals of Electricity, and Microcomputer Applications.

"Because ethanol production is designed around a biological process, the curriculum also includes general biology, microbiol ecology, and process plant chemistry," Sigle said.

Other courses in the AAS program include Pollution Control Fundamentals, Industrial Water Process Dynamics, Distillation Systems,

Evaporation, and general education courses like English or Career Composition, Behavioral Science, and Applied Math. A 4-8 credit internship at an area ethanol plant is also required for the AAS degree. Short-term training classes for workers already employed in area ethanol plants will be developed in Ethanol Process Fundamentals, Mechanical Fundamentals, Piping and Instrumentation Diagrams, Microbial Ecology, Instrumentation & Control.

"Opportunities are plentiful for those who earn a certificate or AAS Northeast Community College degree in renewable fuels from was given the green light Tuesday Northeast Community College," to begin offering the state's first Sigle said, "With 12 plants in operation and 11 under construction, there is a drastic shortage of properly trained ethanol personnel in Nebraska. Jobs are plentiful and qualified personnel short in the ethanol industry."

> Northeast Community College plans to develop a certificate program in renewable fuels at a later date. According to the webpage ethanoltraining.org, salaries for those with a training certificate range from $25,000 to $50,000 a year for positions like assistant operators, assistant boiler operators, commodity handlers, maintenance, and warehouse/receiving clerks. Those with the two-year AAS degree can expect salaries of $30,000 to $60,000 for jobs as boiler operators, electricians, grain merchandisers, human resource directors, lab assistants, maintenance managers, safety officers, and team lead operators.

> Those who eventually earn a bachelor's degree can earn between $40,000-$100,000 as accountants, commodity marketing directors, environmental health and safety managers, and corporate safety managers.

Instrumentation & Control, Boiler day operations that require person- endowment of $150,000 for ethanol nel to man three different shifts per day.

"We have designed our renewable fuels program to offer some large number of nontraditional students who are currently employed," Sigle said. "We fully expect a large number of area, rural residents who want to upgrade their skills for employment in a booming, extremely well paying industry."

Northeast's renewable fuels program is partially funded with a grant of $1,999,999 through the President's Community-Based Job Training Grants (CBJT) program administered by the U.S. Department of Labor. That threeyear grant is the largest in the history of Northeast Community College or any of its predecessor It involves a institutions. statewide partnership with the other community colleges in Nebraska. Chuck Pohlman, dean of agriculture, health and sciences at Northeast, is the project director of the three-year grant.

The renewable energy training program is also funded in part by a $60,000 grant from the Nebraska Department Economic Development's Value-Added Agricultural (VAA) grant program and administered by the Rural Development Commission. Those funds will be used for curriculum development. Other funding sources for the program are the Northeast general fund and partners who have contributed cash and in-kind donations.

The Gary Kuester Memorial Scholarship, the brainchild of former Northeast Board of Governors member J. Paul McIntosh, will help eligible students pay for ethanol training. Earlier this year, McIntosh challenged ethanol promanagers, lab managers, plant ducers to contribute $100,000 to the fund. After the $100,000 is raised, the McIntosh Legacy Sigle noted that ethanol plants Scholarship program will add training education. To date, $67,500 has been donated for this scholarship fund.

Fall semester classes begin classes online as we anticipate a Monday, August 20, at Northeast Community College. Those interested in the program should contact Sigle at (402)844-7696.

"A certificate or AAS degree in renewable fuels can lead to a great career close to home," Sigle said. "Those who have any questions about our curriculum or the ethanol industry should call me. I'd love to get them started on a great career path in renewable

Cornhusker State Games to open on July 20

Eli Thompson, co-host of the Transportation Discovery Channel's "Stunt Headquarters in Balad, Iraq to Junkies" and multiple X-Games Medalist, will headline the Cornhusker State Games Opening Ceremonies on Friday, July 20. Thompson will perform a twilight skydive alongside Red Bull Air Force Teammate Jon DeVore.

The twilight skydive is just one of many elements in an actionpacked Opening Ceremonies scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at Seacrest Field, 7600 A St., in Lincoln. The Ceremonies mark the beginning of competition in 59 sports over the following eight days.

The show kicks off with the parade of athletes, led by U.S. Naval Commander Carl Lahti and his family. Lahti serves as commander of the U.S.S. Nebraska Trident Submarine, which is stationed at Kipsat Naval Base near Silverdale, Wash. Lahti's appearance in the State Games is part of a unique exchange program involving the crew of the submarine and her namesake state.

Following the parade, Nebraska Adjutant General Roger Lempke will join Lahti in a patriotic tribute to Nebraska troops serving overseas. Lempke will also present a special flag, which was flown at the hosted by former Husker Volleyball Guard's 734th

The Opening Ceremonies culminates in the revelation of the idenalways a subject of considerable speculation in the days leading up to the Games. Last year's torch-lighter was U.S. Olympic Bobsledder Curt Tomasevicz, who joined the U.S. four-man team in winning the 2006 Bobsled World Cup late last year. The torch will be presented to the mystery torchlighter by this year's opening runners, former Husker Football Captain Brandon Rigoni and nationally ranked youth boxer Kyle Gorsuch, of Dix.

Former Green Bay Packer and Husker Defensive Lineman Steve Warren will administer the CSG Oath of Athletes. Warren retired from football last season and earlier this year founded a mentoring organization called D.R.E.A.M. More than 100 youths associated with the D.R.E.A.M program will participate in the Games as guests of the Nebraska Sports Council's entry fee scholarship fund.

A men's volleyball exhibition, player Dani Busboom, will showers in the state.

Mascots, including Lil' Red, Sporty, Homer, Wylie and Half-Pint from the Community Blood Bank will provide comic relief. The show tity of the mystery torchlighter, also features a National Guard Chopper fly-in, additional skydivers from the Lincoln Sport Parachute Club and fireworks. The national anthem will be sung by Lincoln vocalist Julie Marple.

The Opening Ceremonies is preceded by SportFest, featuring free food and drink for registered athletes, inflatable games and interactive displays, including a hands-on archery display from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. Help wanted Dear Editor:

As I have in the past, I would like to ask the folks in our community for a bit of information about our community history. I have always gotten results and will try one more time. Somebody out there always has just a little more information to complete a story.

I am looking for information about Mrs. Emma Baker, who died at the age of 97, in 1954. She was the oldest resident of the County at that time. Emma was born in Billigheim, Germany on Aug. 10, 1856 and came to this country at the age of 14 with her sister, Mrs. Peter Baker.

After farming south of Wayne, she and her husband, Wendell, moved to Wayne in 1912. Wendell died in 1914. The couple raised nice children. She was a member of the Catholic Church for 50 years.

Mrs. Baker donated the large and beautiful cross, located at the west end of the Catholic block of Greenwood Cemetery. I feel there Committee must be an interesting "story" about that cross and I would like to add that information to the history of Greenwood Cemetery. It is certainly a lasting tribute to the Emma and Wendell Baker family and a beautiful memorial in the cemetery.

> Anyone with any information can contact me at 375-4245. I will truly be appreciative.

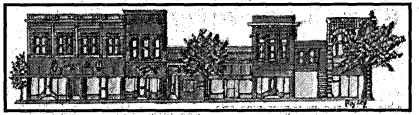

Steve Gross, Wayne

off to Chadd Frideres, Chicken food vendors and the carnival Show Chair; Nana Peterson, Henoween Chair and Wes and Irene at the WAEDI office for pulling these activities together Fair Board and a group of Wayne and to the many volunteers who gave of their time and energy to make all the activities work.

Special thanks go out to all those who attended and participated in the activities. It was great to see you there.

The special insert on the Chicken Show by the Wayne Herald, the television and radio advertising and the pamphlet that included the "Schedule of Events for the 27th annual Chicken Show" did much to help people understand what the activities were, and where and when they were being held. The parade on Saturday morning was spectacular, but unfortunately, there was an exodus of traffic heading out of town after the parade. Anyone have any ideas on how we can keep them in town for a few more hours?

The Flea Market/ Sidewalk Sale was a first time egg-travaganza and it appeared to go over very well. Many of the organizers were wondering how this would go over and who would be there since most the hours it was held. Apparently, that feeling had little or no effect on the crowds that were downtown from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. The crowd started to arrive before 7 a.m. and it was busy throughout the day. Most vendors were pleased with their results and it appears that the Flea Market will be continued in future years.

What a great weekend it was in Soon after the morning vendors Wayne with Henoween and the could clear the sidewalks, the Chicken Show taking place. Hats evening arts and crafts, fun and games moved in and took their place on Main Street. The stage was set up courtesv of the Countv State College athletes set up the benches so the audience would have a place to sit. More benches were set up than ever before and they were needed for the shows that followed.

At 6 p.m. the "World's Largest Chicken Dance," sponsored by KTCH/NRG Media and the Wayne State College Cheerleaders got the action started. The hilarious WSO Show Reprise followed and had the audience in stitches. This was followed by the concrete Chicken Auction which was very successful and grossed over $2,000. This will help defray Main Street Wayne's expenses for Henoween. The most popular chicken was painted by an 11 year old sixth grader, Molly Burbach. She named her chicken "Rosco the Rooster." The bidding stopped at $210 and Molly became our superstar among the great group of artists we had this year. We had seven chickens that sold for $100 or more. This was great community participation from both the artists and the buyers. Thank you people would be working during so much for your efforts. Thanks also goes out to the WSC football players who carried the chickens, to Randy and Cindy Bargholz for auctioneering and collecting money and to Reggie Yates for being the evening's MC.

The stage shows wrapped up with Sidetraked to Elsewhere and No Better Cause, two fine groups that entertained our Henoween crowd. The fireworks sponsored by the Jaycees and the Teen Dance wrapped up a great evening. The fireworks were spectacular and the Teen Dance had a large turnout of teens. We needed more help to tear down the seating for the Main Stage, but we worked it out thanks to some great community people.

At our next Main Street Wayne All-Hands meeting to be held Tuesday morning, July 24 at the Main Street office, we will be reviewing the activities of Henoween. If anyone out there has any suggestions, please attend our meeting at this time. We look forward to ideas that will help us improve the activities of the day and weekend.

Controversial terms may be excluded from trial

By Ed Howard

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

What's in a word? A very great deal, especially in a courtroom. Senator Ernie Chambers of Omaha has often lectured his colleagues on the need for careful use of language, often reminding them that "words have meanings." Since words have meanings, and are used to define what is required by laws enacted by the Legislature, the importance of clarity is self-evi-

It is easy to understand that such clarity is equally important in courtrooms. That's one reason attorneys bob up and down at trial, objecting to perceived implications, misrepresentations, inaccuracies and other things they regard as disadvantageous to their side.

Comes now District Judge Jeffre Cheuvront of Lincoln, and behind him come a variety of people unhappy about his decision to bar witnesses from using certain words in the upcoming retrial of a fellow charged with first-degree sexual assault, formerly known in the law books as rape. The first trial ended in a hung jury.

Cheuvront decided that use of words like "rape," "assault," "assailant," "victim" and "rape kit," would put at risk the right of the defendant to a fair trial. Cheuvront concluded that such words could prejudice the jury. Their use was barred in the first trial, too.

The alleged victim in the case caused a stir recently when she said she wasn't sure she could get through a second trial without violating Cheuyront's order to eschew the use of the banned words. She said the ban is unfair to her, and would be unfair to others.

Issues such as those raised by Cheuvront's order have the potential to set the stage for precedentsetting decisions by higher courts. Critics argue Cheuvront's ruling unduly restricts appropriate references to allegations and events, particularly as viewed by the purported victim.

It isn't difficult to understand why a woman who alleges she was raped doesn't want to describe the episode in terms of "having sex," or "intercourse."

Imagine the alleged victim responding to questions, from the prosecution or the defense.

Attorney: "Then what happened?"

Witness: "He raped me." That sends a message somewhat different than:

Attorney:

"Then what hap-

Witness: "He had intercourse with me."

Other possibilities for the witness? Perhaps "He had intercourse (or sex) on me."

Will words like "penetrated" be subject to banishment?

A victim wants to convey her belief that she was an object of sexual behavior, not a willing participant.

No one who has been assaulted, in any context, wants to help a defense lawyer persuade jurors that the entire event was a team sport.

Those defending Cheuvront's position contend that allowing a witness to testify that she was raped, or was sexually assaulted, conveys to a jury that a crime was, in fact, committed - when it is actually the jurors' job to decide if such was the case.

Rejoinder: Obviously that's what the victim contends, or she wouldn't be on the witness stand, complaining about it.

American courts have moved in recent years toward some "valueneutral" words in criminal trials. Substituting "complainant" for "victim" is one example.

To what degree can such valueneutral terms be required while still keeping the scales of blind justice balanced?

It is an issue that we might be reading about for years and years.

Next City Council Meeting

The next regular meeting of the city council will be Tuesday, Aug. 7 at 5:30 p.m. in the city council room at 306 Pearl Street.

Keeping Our Eye on the Ball. Why take a Chance on a Spec Building? Last night the mayor and council approved the sale of a 6.6 acre lot in the Kardell Industrial Subdivision to Wayne Industries.

They also agreed to extend water including Pac N Save, First and a paved street to the site. Why do this? The mayor and council and Wayne Industries measure most decisions on what affects they will have on future (20-50 year) school enrollment, population growth and job opportunities. They are looking for investments made now that will provide business opportunities, housing and quality schools later.

Wayne Industries has a 40 year history of success using existing buildings to invite new businesses,

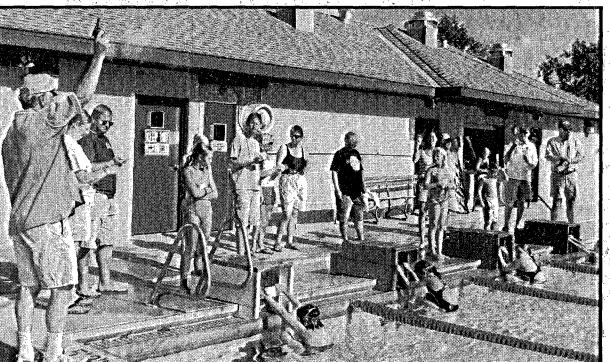

National Bank Card Center, Ameritas. Concord Components and Caterpillar. In recent years, business development has kept all buildings occupied and Wayne has missed opportunities for some small companies looking for a place. The spec (speculative) building is Wayne Industries plan to make new space available.

There is a chance for failure in every endeavor so the risk for this building is being spread around but the reward for success is great.

We are framing a series of aerial photos of the city made available to us by Midwest Land that will be on display in city hall. The record of Wayne's growth since 1940 will be on display here and is proof of successful risk taking by those who have invested here. Quote ranchers to nominate eligible colleagues as candidates for election to the Wayne County Farm Service Agency Country Committee.

FSA is unique because it receives direct input from the farmers and ranchers it services through elected County Committees.

Committee members are elected from county Local Administrative Area (LAA) committees on an annual rotating basis and serve three year terms. The 2007 County Election in Wayne County is LAA #1. The list of eligible voters for the LAA is available at the Wayne County office. The nomination of women and non-traditional farmers is encouraged.

This is an important time for LAA communities, because county committee members make decisions that have significant effects on the county's agricultural sector. The Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, commonly called the 2002 Farm Bill, ends Sept. 30, 2007. The 2008 County Committee will play an important role in helping farmers understand the new or extended program. Committee members offer valuable insights on the implementation of USDA farm programs. Committee members also make many other important decisions that affect local farmers and ranchers, such as haying and grazing on Conservation Reserve Program acreage, recommendations for soil rental rates and verifying disaster

Soybean cyst nematode losses being monitored in northeast Nebraska

Four field days in August, conducted by University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension, will alert growers to the damage caused by soybean cyst nematodes in Nebraska. It will help farmers and agricultural professionals identify and manage SCN to minimize its impact on yields.

If the current yield losses from SCN in Nebraska were being caused by soybean rust, it would be the lead ag story across the state. While soybean rust has received much attention, SCN has earned the title of "The Silent Yield Robber." It costs Nebraska soybean growers millions of dollars in lost production each year, often without being detected. Yield loses of 20-30 percent have been documented in the state with no above ground symptoms on the plant.

If SCN caused holes, lesions, spots or other plant abnormalities, it would be much easier to convince producers to test for and manage it. However, infested plants usually look healthy. The first indication of a problem is soybean yields that have leveled off or even started to drop while corn or other crop yields in the same field continue to Originally identified in counties bordering the Missouri River, SCN has been identified in 41 counties in eastern and central Nebraska as far west as Boyd, Valley Buffalo and Kearney counties. As soybean production has moved across the state, so has the distribution of soybean cyst nematodes.

The 2007 SCN Field Days will be

•Tuesday, Aug. 21, 3 p.m., at the Lindy Koester farm. From Concord: go 1/2 mile north on Lincoln Street (5775 Avenue); or 1/2 mile west of Concord Cemetery in 867 Road.

•Wednesday, Aug. 22, 10 a.m., at the Greg Anderson farm. From Newman Grove: go 1 mile north on Highway 45, then 1/4 mile east on 824th Road.

•Wednesday, Aug. 22, 6:30 p.m., at the Warren Peterson farm. From Plainview: go 5 miles west on Highway 20 to Highway 13 junction, then 4 3/4 miles south on 531 Road (Copenhagen Road)

• Friday, Aug. 31, 9 a.m., at the Kerry Knuth farm. From Mead: go 2 miles west on Highway 92 (or 1 mile west of the Highway 77 junction), then 1 1/4 miles south on County Road 12.

At east SCN Field Day site participants will be able to: • see SCNresistant and susceptible soybean varieties • examine cysts on infested soybean plant's roots •learn how to identify and manage SCN infestations •receive a kit for one free SCN analysis ($20 value) •get answers to your questions on SCN.

At four SCN-infested field day sites in 1006, SCN-resistant varieties out yielded susceptible varieties by an average of 7 bushels. These infested sites had low to moderate levels of infestation. There was no difference in yield between the same susceptible and resistant varieties at a site which was not infested with SCN.

The Soybean Cyst Nematode Field Days are presented by UNL Extension with support from the Nebraska Soybean Board. For more information, contact your local UNL Extension office.

MILC makes it to farm bill draft

An addition to the 2007 Farm prices are strong. Bill draft is getting an enthusiastic response from the more than 4,000 dairy farmer-owners of Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI).

For the first time since farm bill talks began, the Milk Income Loss Contract (MILC)—a program that provides financial support to dairy farmers when milk prices fall-is in the legislative package.

Chairman Collin Peterson, D-Minn., of the House Agriculture Committee included the program in his version of the bill that was just released. The addition is a big step for AMPI members who have been pushing to get the countercyclical program into the next farm

"The MILC program is essential legislation for dairy farmers, supplementing an inadequate federal dairy price support system," says Paul Toft, chairman of the AMPI Board of Directors and a dairy farmer from Rice Lake, Wis. "AMPI members have been actively lobbying Congress to get this program returned to the farm bill."

AMPI members have testified before both the Senate and House agriculture committees and flooded Capitol Hill with letters, calls and e-mails about the importance of the MILC program. Some even traveled to Washington to make personal appeals to elected officials.

Since being introduced in the 2002 Farm Bill, the MILC program has often served as a life preserver for dairy farmers. The program provides assistance when market prices fall below target levels and remains dormant when market

"The MILC program helps dairy farmers pay their bills when the milk check doesn't cover them," Toft says. "Though milk prices are strong right now, dairy farmers know it won't last."

Initially enacted for a three-year period, the MILC program was extended through August 2007. Lawmakers had to once again extend the MILC program through September 2007 in order to renew the program through the 2007 Farm Bill. Under the congressional budget rules, this one-month extension triggered the additional dollars needed to fund the program in the new farm bill.

The one-month extension of the MILC was included in the supplemental appropriations bill passed earlier this year. Dave Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, pushed for the extension in the House. Sens. Herb Kohl, D-Wis., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., led MILC efforts in the Senate.

With MILC now in the most recent version of the farm bill, members of the House Agriculture Committee are expected to consider that and other dairy provisions when reviewing the entire bill next week. The farm bill package will then move to the full House of Representatives for consideration.

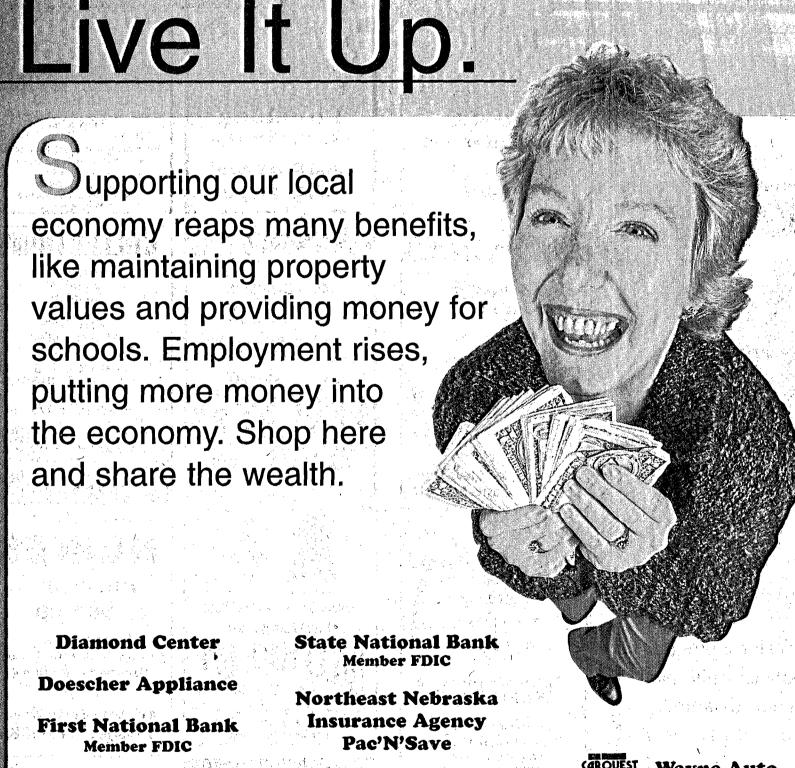

Corn rootworm school to be held at Concord

There will be a "Corn Rootworm School" at the University of Nebraska Haskell Ag Lab on Tuesday, July 24 from 1-4 p.m. This school will consist of learning the management techniques of controlling corn rootworms but will concentrate on how to recognize root damage and rate the roots on the 0-3 scale.

On hands root digging, root washing and learning the rating system, has become more important as corn rootworm pressure is expected to increase along with the increase in continuous corn acres. Recognizing corn rootworm damage and what constitutes economic damage is important, especially for seed dealers and consultants who have to answer questions about rootworm control.

The cost will be $10 for refreshments and materials. Pre-register by calling Keith Jarvi at 402-584-3806 or 402-649-7347. Only the first 25 applicants will be accepted because of space limitations.

Carroll High School reunion was a fun part of 4th of July weekend that involved another high school reunion. You know me, I go to Jenkins, Jones, and Owens. In school reunions, church reunions, fact, there are 46 people who had family reunions, you name it. If the last name of Jones! I knew there, I'll be there.

Of course, there are some golden wedding anniversaries I'm being invited to this summer that I have a problem with; they are couples whose ceremonies I sang for. How can they be married 50 years? I must have been 10, right?

Anyway, Shirley Bowers called months ago to invite me to share a few words of wit and wisdom at the Carroll High School reunion. It sounded fun, so I said yes, of course. But the closer July 7 got, the more worried I was. What in the world was I going to say to all these old friends and neighbors? I needn't have worried.

Carroll only had a high school for 50 years and they have an alumni affair every three years. That way, folks can kind of plan their summer vacations around that date. They had several attendees from California, and Washington, and Tennessee. Their banquet was in the community building, which is air conditioned, thank goodness. And the street in front of it was blocked by fire trucks at either end. Someone told me once that if the last name ended in S, it was probadevoid of vegetation. The name for the insect indicates part of what this particular insect actually does and that is, it uses the cicada or more commonly called locust, as a food source for its' next generation. The cicada killer is rather large, about 1 1/2 inches long and has a large abdomen with stripes and looks rather threatening as it flys around the landscape. It will dig holes along sidewalks, driveways or other areas that have an easy access to the hole, and create a pile of soil where the hole has been dug.

The cicada killer will find a locust, paralyze it and carry the victim back to the hole, lay an egg on the paralyzed locust, and fill the hole with soil. The egg will hatch and feed on the food supply and be ready for next year.

The cicada killer is not considered to be harmful to humans even though they appear rather aggressive and dangerous. If the insect is left alone, not stepped on with bare feet or pinched with your fingers, it will not normally bother anyone. If there are several of these insects around and there are small children present, one can use carbaryl (Sevin 5 percent dust) sprinkled over the burrows in late evening and scratched in with a rake. The cicada is forced to dig through the treated soil and get a dose of the Cicada killers are a good specimen to collect for entomology collections as they add another type of interesting insect to the collection.

Caleb Snyder

County Middle School, Va., Caleb Snyder, son of Paul and Marie Snyder, Bumpass, Va. and Grandson of Bill and Pearl Snyder of Allen, has exceeded academic expectations from a young age and continues to do so as a National Young Scholar, Being a member of the Accelerated Reader Program since first grade has motivated him to add more books to his list. He read approximately 40,000 pages and accumulated over 1000 points to break a school record.

Seeing Snyder's commitment to his studies, motivated his reading teacher, Debra Jones, to nominate him to attend the National Young Scholar Program held in Washington, D.C. Snyder attended the program from June 25 - 29 and could choose one of eight categories. With an interest in problem solving led Caleb to the Crime Solvers 2 Track.
