Cap Peterson with Northeast Nebraska Insurance Agency made the presentation and explained the process of determining whether the city receives a refund or needs to be billed for additional premiums.

He told the council that the city has been part of a multi-city program for nearly 15 years. The goals of the program include decreasing the cost of insurance, making the city a safer place to work and in the process, saving money.

"I had this property re-plated in 1998 and would like to know who this is helping? What is the city going to do with the property?" Casey asked. Casey also said he was not made aware of the action being taken by the council.

Mayor Lois Shelton said that Casey's legal counsel had been involved in the discussion process and "lots of discussion has taken place." She also noted that Casey needed to be represented by coun-

The work will upgrade the water line from a two-inch water line to an eight-inch water main to provide adequate water to the facility. The firm will work with the city's Water Department to complete the project.

Money saved will be re-directed to help pay part of the construction cost of the Summer Sports Complex Building.

In a related agenda item, the council gave its approval to allow press box naming rights to Jill Brodersen/ Homestead Homes.

Doug Carroll, with the fundraising committee for the Complex, spoke to the council and noted that Brodersen's work on the project "turned into lots of extra work and we thought this was a good gesture and way to thank her for all her work."

A number of housekeeping tasks were completed with the passage of five ordinances at the meeting.

All vacated portions of city streets that were part of recent paving projects. All had been previously vacated by resolution and the ordinances completed the process.

The council also passed Ordinance 2007-24, which will amend the city code relating to the Building Code, Energy Code, Electrical Code, One and Two Family Dwelling Code, Plumbing Code, Unsafe Buildings and Property Maintenance Codes, as well as adding a section pertaining to heating, ventilation and cooling.

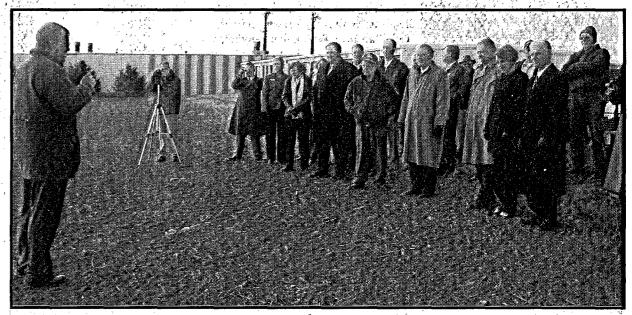

City Planner/Inspector George Ellyson told the council that the code had last been updated in 2000 and the changes will provide clarity in a number of areas and upgrade the current code.

The council will next meet in regular session on Tuesday, Dec. 18 at 5:30 p.m.

Let the building begin

Local and area officials took part in a ground breaking ceremony last week on the site of the future speculative building. During the ceremony, David Simonsen, Executive Director of the Wayne Area Economic Development Agency, told those in attendance about the process the city had gone through to make the building possible. Depending on weather conditions, the building should be completed next spring.

The public hearing closed and the commissioners gave their fence. Commissioner Mark Ahmann 90-710 (c) parking or driveway surrecommendation of approval. The next public hearing opened and Brandi Vandenberg of Omaha, US Cellular project manager, addressed the commissioners and stated a tower was wanted outside of town to improve coverage. Commissioner Bill Kranz asked about the height of the fence, which Ellyson noted was 8 foot and was FAA approved. Commissioner Derek Hill felt for security reasons, there should be something on top of the fence. Vandenberg said it could have barbed wire on and they could include a 10 foot anti-climb system. The commissioners recommended approving the request with two conditions: there be a fence similar to that of the nearby public power district and have the anti-climb system. and Nikki Weber, exercise training of liability and legality reasons, officer, both of NEMA (Nebraska Emergency Management Agency), a state agency in Lincoln, presented a LEOP (Local Emergency Operation Plan) workshop at the Wayne Fire Department on Nov. 29.

The goals of the workshop were: understanding the LEOP, how everyone will work together, understanding the chain of command and NIMS (National Incident Management System). LEOP reflects jurisdictions controlled management of resources during a disaster.

Weber said that once the counties have their emergency plan in place, she is in charge of testing that plan. She noted that NEMA can help counties with many things that are helpful in a disaster situation. She added they are the only agency that can activate the National Guard, They can also initiate action from the State Patrol, the Department of Roads, etc.

Weber discussed Mutual Aid versus Interlocal Agreements and noted handshakes between counties in the past were enough but but it is not up to NEMA to take Memorandums of Understanding have to be used.

The Federal government has a $1 million cap for each disaster. Weber said it is up to the Emergency Manager in each county to have a declaration of disaster signed (the Emergency Manager has to contact NEMA and they contact the governor for a declaration) before Federal funds can be paid and if that isn't done, that county is responsible for all costs incurred. And, before funds can be granted to a county, that county must be in compliance with regulations.

Weber also discussed MOU's (Memorandum of Understanding) vs. Interlocal Agreements in view of working with private businesses during a disaster. She said all parties involved need to keep records of expenses and that representatives of county insurance, private insurance and the county attorney must come to payment agreement prior to the disaster. With proper paperwork given to the county's Emergency Manager, it can be turned in for payment

Bill Meyer, planning specialist not so anymore. Now, because care of it. Laura Gamble, an RN at Providence Medical Center noted that is why a Logistics Officer is so important. Meyer said the emergency manager position is a very important one and that emergency management restores the sense of normalcy after a disaster. Meyer applauded Nebraska because of the "get it done" attitude he sees and the concept, "one state, one plan."

> Meyer asked if everyone knows who is responsible to make decisions should a disaster occur and answered that it is the chief elected official in each jurisdiction because they have the authority to spend money. He added that during a disaster, people look to first responders to attend to immediate needs. Overall, people expect; control, coherence and connection. During an emergency there's is stress but afterwards there is a sense of euphoria that the community came together for a common cause.

> Meyer asked attendees if a disaster occurred, are they ready? Who is in charge? Who is their spokesperson? Could they carry out an evacuation? He noted in Nebraska, most evacuations are at night (average of 8-10 a year) with a population of 12,000 or less and the most common cause is HZMAT (chemicals). It was mentioned that the nearest HZMAT team is in Norfolk.

> Overall, Meyer said LEOP may look complex but it works. He added that each jurisdiction must plan for self-sufficiency for at least 72 hours. Deanna Beckman, Wayne County Emergency Manager, announced that Wayne County is planning to hold a full-scale emergency exercise in a year.

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

Wayne County Board of Commissioners met in regular session on Tuesday. Deanna Beckman, Wayne County emergency manager gave the commissioners an update of the Hazard Mitigation Plan and also of the recent LEOP Workshop. Beckman noted that through the Hazard Mitigation Plan, grant monies can be obtained but there is confusion about what can be applied for. One thing that grant funds can be used for is generators for the critical facilities (courthouse, EOC trailer and county sheds). The deadline for grant applications is March 7 and action can be taken on the grant applications once the Hazard Mitigation plan is filed and has been reviewed by NEMA. Discussion was held on the lack of lighting on the west side of the Court Services building. It was stated that Mark Klein can put a wall pack on the building which would light from the building to the front of the parked cars for around $400. Otherwise, a flood light could be put up for about the same cost. In checking into the wiring, it was found that 80 percent of the plug ins in the treasurers office have open grounds so that needs to be fixed. It was noted that new circuits need to be put in from the ceiling and run accordingly. The commissioners agreed that quotes are needed.

The Wayne Herald, Thursday, December 6, 2007 Public invited to see Gulag exhibit at NECC

The public is invited to see a Gulag exhibit at Northeast Learning Center Saturday, Dec. 8, through Wednesday, Jan. 30.

The free exhibit, "Gulag-History of a Camp," will be on display in the Lifelong Learning Center Atrium from 8 a.m. - 9 p.m. weekdays and when the center is open for other events during the weekend. The exhibit is closed during the Holiday break from Dec. 24-Jan. 2.

The Gulag Museum at Perm-36 preserves, documents and interprets a Gulag camp built under Joseph Stalin in 1946 near the city of Perm in Russia. Known as Perm-36, the camp served initially as a regular timber-production labor camp. Later, the camp became a particularly isolated, severe facility for high-government officials.

In 1972, Perm-36 became the primary facility in the country for people charged with political crimes. Many prominent Soviet dissidents, including Vladimir Bukovsky, Sergei Kovalev and Anatoly Marchenko, served sentences there.

During the Soviet government's period of "openness" of Glasnost President Mikhail under Gorbachev, the camp closed in 1987. The camp was the last remnant of more than 12,000 forced labor camps in the former Soviet Union,

The exhibit includes photos of prominent Perm-36 prisoners, such as an editor jailed for publishing an illegal newspaper and a human rights activist whose father became ill while imprisoned in labor camps.

The display also features statements from former prisoners, excerpts of Soviet-era regulations banning dissension, and an authentic prison shirt.

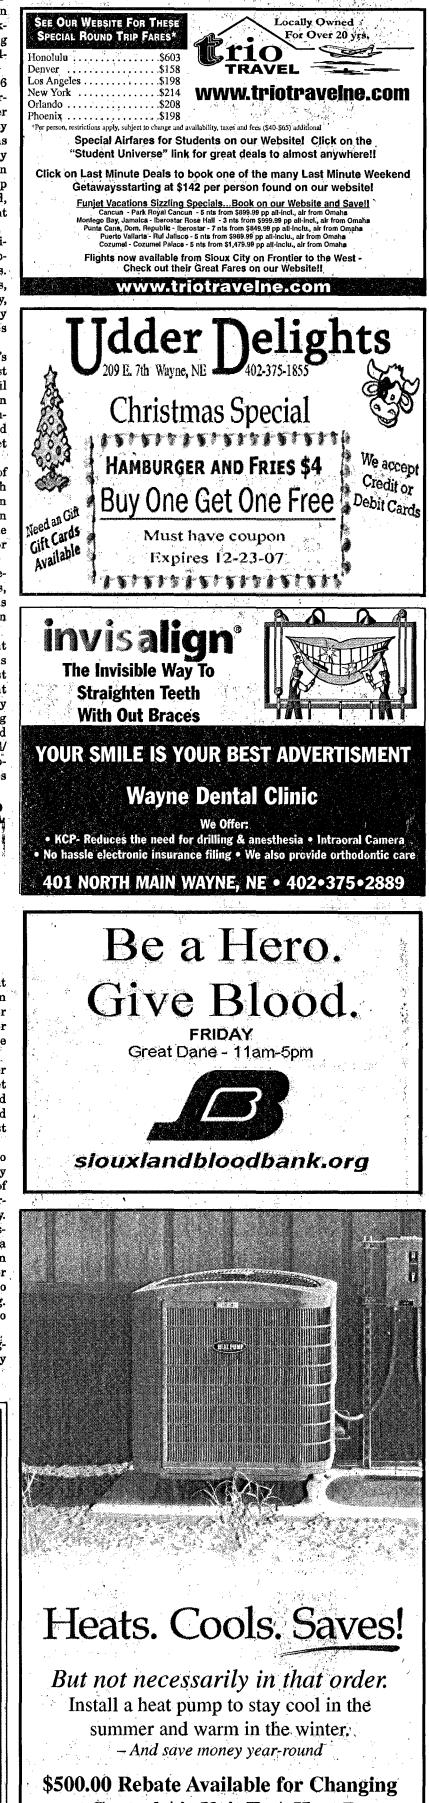

The display's appearance at Northeast Community College is sponsored by the Midwest Institute, headquartered at Kalamazoo Valley Community College in Michigan, Gulag Museum at Perm-36, and Northeast's International/ Intercultural Education Sub-Committee of the Student Services

LAUREL PHYSICAL THERAPY

Due to adverse weather predicted this weekend, our grand opening will be rescheduled. Watch for further announcements.

Nearly two years ago, Providence Medical Center administration first free-standing sateland staff shared a dream lite facility for PMC and of providing therapy outreach services, including aquatic therapy, to the residents of Cedar County and the surrounding region. Laurel Therapy Outreach Clinic at 699 Cedar Avenue in Laurel is the result of that dream.

The Providence Therapy Outreach Clinic the physical therapy

is the first therapy center in the city of Laurel, the to date the first clinic of its kind between Laurel and Yankton to offer aquatic therapy.

Recognizing a need for this kind of care facility in the Laurel area, Providence Medical officials Center approached Laurel city officials with the idea of building. Laurel officials looked into obtaining a USDA REDLG (Rural Knox Board of Directors Economic Development Loan Grant) and contact ed Cedar-Knox Public Power District and then contacted Dale Wemhoff, USDA area director out of Norfolk. Conditions of the REDLG grant stated the application must come through a utility company so officials turned to Dan Leise, general manof Cedar-Knox ager

Public Power District. Leise and the Cedarassisted in retrieving the REDLG grant by applying for a $100,000 grant. This was the first time the utility company had been approached to help in acquiring grant money. The conditions of the grant called for the applicant to put down 20 percent of that amount so Cedar-Knox Public Power put in $20,000, thus loaning Laurel city officials $120,000 interest free over a 10-year period. Not having to pay back the $120,000 to USDA, Cedar-Knox Public Power District can use that amount as a revolving loan to be re-used as wanted in their coverage area.

The cost of the project will be over $300,000. Laurel city officials committed to $180,000 to bring the project to completion, which took about one year from start to finish. Security National Bank in Laurel volunteered to service the loan for Cedar-Knox Public Power.

The design of the new building was supplied by Providence Medical Center in coordination with the city of Laurel. Providence Medical Center has entered into a lease agreement with the City of Laurel and has provided $100,000 worth of equipment and furnishings for the facility.

"This building, together with how it is equipped, epitomizes the optimal planning and foresight of those individuals who had their thoughts not only on the needs of the present but of the future," said Marcie Thomas, administrator of PMC.

"Ed Simpson of Providence Medical Center was a huge help in trying to alleviate any bumps in the road," said Duane Lammers, Laurel city administrator.

Both Lammers and Annette Junck of Laurel Economic Development worked with Cedar-Knox Public Power District, the USDA, Security National Bank and Providence Medical Center to bring this project to reality.

Students of the month recognized at Wayne Elementary School

Good Citizenship was celebrated in an assembly on Nov. 28 at Wayne Elementary School.

Principal Daryl Schrunk, and Counselor, Joan Sudmann, recognized Students of the Month with certificates and pins.

Second grade students, under the direction of their teachers, Mike Jaixen, Nate Wall and Cheryl Suchl, led an entertaining Quiz Show program highlighting the characteristics of a good citizen.

Joan Hansen and her third grade students made a presentation encouraging all students and teachers to recycle paper. This home room has made recycling a goal and has led the way in putting in place a system for recycling plastic milk containers in the cafeteria. The students also created recycling containers for all classrooms and offices, for students and staff to deposit their waste paper for recycling. The paper will be collected once a month by Mrs. Hansen's students, and picked up by Boy Scout Troop #174 in their monthly recycling drive.

These students have demonstrated excellent citizenship with their leadership and hard work, organizing the recycling effort and educating everyone about why it is important.

November birthdays were also celebrated. Thanks were extended to Judy Poehlman and her staff, who bake and decorate delicious cupcakes for birthday celebrations every month.

Letters Support for midwives

Dear Editor.

There has been significant media coverage of the new Gentle Beginnings Birth Center that sits, many other states enjoy the beneas of right now, empty in Norfolk. fits of Birth Centers and midwives As patients of certified midwife Gail Consoli, who funded and built the center, we feel compelled to speak on her behalf as well as for the hundreds of women in Northeast Nebraska who receive exemplary care every year from Gail.

There's a lot of suspicion and distrust about midwives in the United States, though over 80 percent of the world's mothers use them during birth. It's important to point out that women who experience complications during pregnancy and/or are carrying a child with special needs should not be treated by a midwife. However, for the vast majority of women who have normal pregnancies and are carrying healthy babies, a midwife is a great option.

A midwife knows how to nurture a mother and keep her spirits from fading even during a long labor. She knows the best ways to naturally ease pain without the application of drugs or unnecessary medical interventions. She's there to educate a family before, during and after a baby's birth---she doesn't just "show up" to catch the baby and then leave the rest of the tending to the nurses.

These are just a few of the qualities that women love about midwives, and Gail Consoli in particular. In her decade in Norfolk, Gail has delivered over 1200 babies. Currently, she "catches" (her term) over 150 babies a year at Faith Regional Medical Center in Norfolk. That's a significant number of the TOTAL babies born at the hospital each year. Though the numbers prove that women prefer her to other delivery options, she has to fight red tape and archaic policies every step of the way. At a press conference last Saturday, the public was allowed to tour Gentle Beginnings Birth Center in Norfolk.

ity where women can give birth safely and comfortably without the "sick house" feeling of a hospital. The building itself is full of light and space. The birth suites are roomy and pleasant with the feeling of being in a really luxurious bedroom. Simply put, we can't imagine a more beautiful and relaxing place for one of life's biggest miracles to occur. In addition, births that take place in Birth Centers cost approximately 60 percent less than those in hospitals. True, a Birth Center may not be for everyone, but families in Nebraska should at least have a choice where their baby is born. Families in Iowa and Kansas and in those states have far more rights than in Nebraska. There is a movement now for legislation in Nebraska to give midwives more privileges; we ask that those concerned about the welfare of mothers and babies give this issue serious consideration.

Holiday cheer without the beer

Dear Editor:

Tis the season for last minute shopping, Christmas carols and special gatherings with co-workers, family members and friends. Because some of those gatherings involve alcohol, please be certain to celebrate safely and make sure the alcohol is kept out of the hands of young people.

It's never okay for minors to drink alcohol. By allowing young people to drink on "special occasions," adults send a mixed message about underage alcohol use. Instead, our message should always be clear and consistent - if you're under 21, don't drink... peri-Unfortunately, some adults often turn a blind eye to underage alcohol use - especially during the holidays. Some may even offer to let young people drink in their homes, thinking it's a safe environment in which to celebrate. However, underage drinking is never safe. Alcohol is the number one drug of choice among teens -- killing four times more young people than all illicit drugs combined.

"Project Extra Mile's community coalition is working to prevent underage' drinking 'and its' tragic consequences. We're making progress, but we can't do it alone. # Capitol View Republicans can become a Democratic candidate for office

By Ed Howard

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Bright red is the color of Nebraska's political nature. So much so that the Democratic Party can function as a Plan B for ambitious Republican politicians. Republican businessman Tony Raimondo of Columbus recently voiced interest in running for the U.S. Senate - as the Democratic candidate. No decision had been announced as of this writing, but Raimondo could switch parties and perhaps have the Democrats' nomination for the asking. No current Democrat had declared for the primary. Raimondo floated the "Maybe I'm a Democrat" balloon after Mike Johanns proclaimed his candidacy. on the GOP side.

Johanns recently resigned as the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture. He was twice elected governor, but left in his second term to take the cabinet post in the Bush administration. Johanns' political clout convinced Attorney General Jon Bruning to back out of a Senate campaign. And why not? Who would fight the guy after the President of the United States said he would campaign for him in the primary? In the 2006 election year, then-State Auditor Kate Witek switched from the R to the D column, and a divided Democratic state convention nominated her for the auditor's job.

Not only had Witek been a very conservative Republican, then-Congressman Tom Osborne had chosen her to be his running mate when he ran for governor. That have fielded any candidate for the partnership ended when Osborne auditor's office. was defeated in the GOP primary by Governor Dave Heineman.

If a dyed-in-the-heart-and-soul conservative like Witek could seek statewide office on the Democratic side, why shouldn't Raimondo figure it might work for him in a Senate bid?

If Witek had not sought and received the Democratic nomination, albeit by that divided convention, the minority party would not Raimondo could face a much easier road. If he were the only candidate for the nomination, it would be his by default. And being the only Democratic candidate in the primary is, as noted, decidedly possible. In 2006, the Democrats would not have had a candidate for even the governor's office had businessman David Hahn not stepped in at the last minute. He ran an enthusiastic but barely funded campaign, and was buried by Heineman in the general election.

Remember that Raimondo is a close friend of U.S. Senator Ben Nelson, the Democrat who has voted with Bush more often than any other member of his party. When Nelson successfully ran for re-election last year, the administration sent clear pre-campaign messages that Bush regarded Nelson as a very good fellow, thanking him publicly for his support.

No one likes being away from the holiday season. Members of the military are no exception but Classroom projects are welcome they do their jobs and serve their country selflessly without complaint. They do enjoy hearing from the folks back home and the folks back home enjoy letting those in the service know they're thinking about them.

I talk with many Nebraskans who tell me they would like to do something to show our troops they care, especially during this time of year but don't know where to begin. That's the purpose behind "Hometowns to Heroes", now in its third year.

There is a page on my official Senate website where Nebraskans can post messages, pictures, or even original artwork, as crayon wielding students have done in the past, which are accessible to our troops serving overseas. It's a cyber connection between our "hometowns" and our "heroes" that provides those serving overseas a one-click stop on the internetwhere they can view messages and pictures from family, friends, and their fellow Nebraskans.

For those of us at home, it's an easy and meaningful way to show our support for the brave sons, daughters, husbands, fathers, wives, and mothers who are serving their country and let them know that their sacrifice is appreciated.

Time for traditional food

We attended a neighborhood gathering on Sunday afternoon and were invited to bring a Christmas treat or snack. Being the unimaginative type, I took party mix; you know, the wheat chex, corn chex, pretzels, nuts.

My Latvian neighbor brought "yellow bread". It has lots of saffron, and candied fruits in it. She reports that her mother's was very light, but she's not been able to duplicate it, even though she bakes this every year. Last year, she brought a tin of very thin, very brown anise cookies that their church makes and sells by the pound every year. They were delicious!

I did four talks last month on surviving the holidays and there was a Scandinavian in each of the groups. So, we heard about their fondness for lutefisk and lefsa. In fact, one of the gals in our Bible study is Swedish and lives in a community of Swedes; she reports that the local grocery store carries lutefisk during the Christmas season and that the store is now owned and operated by a Korean couple. That sounds like an interesting cultural transposition.

described the making of the lefsa, which calls for boiling potatoes, putting them through a ricer, rolling them out with a rolling pin after mixing egg with the potatoes, then frying them and eating with #### cinnamon and sugar.

I will never forget a few Decembers ago, I had a hospice patient from Minnesota. She hadn't

In one group, the Norwegian eaten anything to speak of for days when her sister came from the land of lakes with lefsa. Her eyes lit up and she ate and relished it.

Anyway, the gal describing the process was horrified to learn that her mother is now using instant potatoes in the process. Kind of like the gal in the York Czech club who uses potato flakes in her kolaches.

Lutefisk is cod soaked in lye, really! The lady in our Bible study used to work at that grocery store and she had to rinse the fish in cold water every day, a task she did not particularly enjoy.

One of the Scandinavian dishes we have learned to appreciate is oostakaka. And I am guilty of using a modern recipe for it that includes cottage cheese. The original calls for fresh whole milk and rennet. It's really just a custard, and you serve it with fruit. I use strawberries, but I'm told that aforementioned grocery store carries lingonberries, both fresh and canned.

Anyway, it's that time of the year when we recreate the dishes we learned to associate with this time of year. It's tradition! And that's a good thing.
