on the side of the "This & That" store at 222 Main Street in Wayne will probably take place in June. More information will be released at a later date.

Planning for the mural started with sketches last October and November. After Christmas, work on the mural began. One of the students, Ashley Soden, made preliminary sketches after getting input from the Advanced Art and Painting students.

"Ashley's willingness to use her extra time so the mural had a good composition was a big deal," Amy Jackson, art instructor, said. "With her help, the theme is reflected well in the mural."

Jackson noted that after the sketches were done, the board was prepared and the students were involved from the beginning small tasks until the end. Preparation of first," Jackson said. "The students painted - struggling in an area, students would help with acrylic paint and symbols were chosen to focus on the theme, "Preserving the Past, Building the Future."

Jackson continued that as far as the symbols go, the train was used because it is such a big part of the town's history and the older car also shows the past. Agriculture is a huge part of the town, which is reflected in the old tractor located on the left side of the mural. Technology and agriculture has changed through the years - which is shown in the newer tractor and combine placed in the mural. And, the farm scene with the barn and windmill is a common one in Nebraska. The town's water tower is shown on the horizon in the background, which reflects hope for the "Painting started in the background job helping each other out. If someone was offer suggestions, etc."

Jackson added that when so many are working with a big mural, it can be hard to have vision, technique, color, theme, etc. Trying to look at the whole picture instead of the little things can be a challenge as you have to stay focused and unified.

Genelle Gardner, one of the students who worked on the mural, had a few comments about the symbolism: the Q-125 logo is in the middle and a pioneer family is near by close to tractors, older to newer. A train is on the mural because it is a founding reason for Wayne. A newer image is the father and son with an American flag behind them; these show patriotism and protecting land and country. Another current image is a silhouette of the water tower is in the background.

A couple of the students working on the mural had the following to say: Kim Bouck noted that the bright colors should draw attention and people will see the mural, which should benefit the town. Kelsie Lundahl added that work on the mural showed artistic values and talents of the students.

Pet owners need to get animals licensed in May

It's that time of year. The weather is turning nice, the trees are leafing out, the birds are singing, and yes, it's time once again to renew pet licenses.

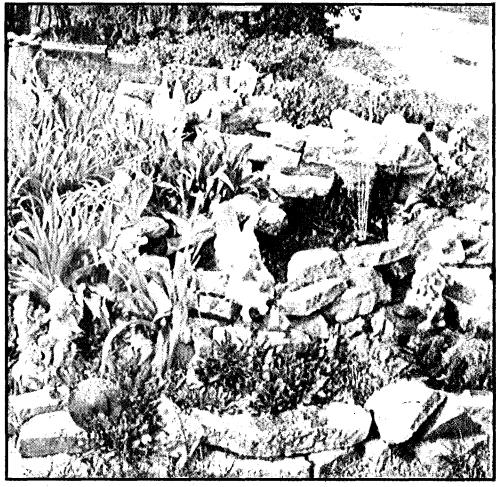

The month of May is when Wayne residents who own dogs or cats must visit the Wayne Police Department and renew their pet's registration.

From May 1 through May 31, the cost to renew a pet registration is $5. On June 1, all of last year's licenses are expired and the renewal fee is $20.

Pet owners must present proof that their pet's rabies vaccination are up-to-date and in exchange for your $5, you will receive a shiny new purple bell-shaped dog tag or a purple mouse design cat tag.

The Wayne Police Department is open 24 hours a day and tags will be issued at any time that is convenient to Wayne residents.

In addition to higher fees if licenses are renewed after May 31, pet owners may be subject to misdemeanor charges that could cost an additional $66.50.

Resignations, hirings dominate school board meeting

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald .

The Wayne Community Schools Board of Education met in regular session Monday night. Several resignations were approved with regrets.

Garwood made a motion to accept Lori Ruskamp's resignation as elementary school fourth grade teacher, board member Wendy Consoli seconded the motion which passed unanimously. Garwood made a motion to accept the resignation of Sandy Spethman, fourth grade teacher, Evetovich seconded the motion which passed unanimously.

Communication from the public included concerns about the music program. Wayne High School band instructor Brad Weber noted he has heard rumors that the Middle School music instructor position would be cut to a half time position and if it does, he's afraid it will kill the program. He added that Mrs. Parker sees 203 students every day and that is the foundation of everything. He sees 197 students (more with Jazz Band, etc.). Mrs. Parker echoed Weber and added time. The music program is one of year plan so does the board want made a motion to amend the agenthe most successful in the district. Dr. Laurie Zink reiterated Weber and Parker. She said that when the Zink family came to Wayne, they let their children choose which school to attend and Erin picked Wayne. She loves fine arts. Mr. Weber has respect across the state and Mr. Parker is his partner. It's not just about instruments but leadership too, Karma Magnuson noted their children have been out of Wayne High for around 10 years but their son said he felt everyone fit into band and the music program gives pride to the community. Board president Carolyn Linster thanked them for their comments and noted they heard what they are saying. She ended with their children have been in band too and at this point, what they are hearing is a rumor. Board member Ken Jorgensen reported on the Foundation and noted $20,000 has been transferred into the technology account and the remainder, $28,000, will go towards the elevator project.

Wayne school employee Dennis Mitchell and a representative of Rasmussen Boiler Company reported on the boiler situation. Mitchell noted there is a split in the cast iron on the small boiler so they have to rely on the larger one, which is not cost efficient. He added that that her position is more than half upgrading the system is in the 5-10 the executive session Garwood to repair or upgrade? Upgrading will cost around $250,000 but there should be around a 35 percent payback in one year with new boilers. Rasmussen said if they would repair the small boiler, it will be 70 percent efficient and the bigger one, less than that. With new boilers and controls, his company can monitor the system on the Internet at no charge for a year ($50 month after that). They could go through bid specs compared to through an engineer, which is faster and the project could be done in a lease purchase agreement at two percent more interest than the going rate. Board member Jeryl Nelson said they need to look into some numbers first.

Nelson made a motion to go into executive session (to protect the reputation of an individual not requesting a public hearing), Garwood seconded the motion which passed unanimously. The agenda read as follows: XII. Personnel-Hiring A. Hiring of Emily Rockhill as Elementary School Kindergarten Teacher B. Hiring of Carrie Walton as Elementary School 1st Grade Teacher C. Some are skeptical of the need to close schools since this H1N1 flu has not been as deadly in the U.S. as it has been in Mexico. The CDC states emphatically that they are concerned about this new virus because little is known about it and it is behaving like a pandemic flu virus. At this time, it is not infecting babies, young children or the elderly the way the annual seasonal flu does. The median age of those contracting H1N1 flu is 17 yrs old. Another concern is if this virus will re-emerge next flu season, so scientists are working now to develop a vaccine that may be ready next fall. Viruses mutate or change and can become deadly like the Spanish Flu in 1918 so scientists are taking this very seriously.

BOOK IT! program helps keep students motivated to read

By Lynn Sievers Of the Herald

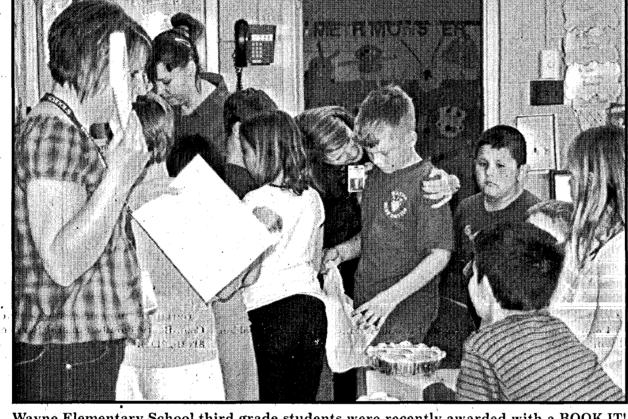

Wayne Elementary School third grade students were recently awarded for meeting their reading goals with a BOOK IT! party compliments of the local Pizza Hut. Cathy Garrod, manager of the Wayne Pizza Hut brought mini pizzas and prizes to the school for the students.

"This is the fourth year that I've come into the school to have pizza parties with the students," Garrod said. "Pizza Hut has had the BOOK IT! program since 1985."

Garrod said she loves to read and that it is a great way to relax. She noted that with the BOOK IT! program and her love of reading, she approached Mr. Lutt (former Wayne Elementary principal) several years ago, asked if she could, interact with the students and the parties evolved.

Wayne Community Q-125 committee discusses Garden Walk brochures/ tickets and more

The Wayne Community Q-125 committee met Monday evening at the Coffee Shoppe. The meeting began with a report on the Garden Walk. Brochures/tickets were counted and will be distributed to various businesses for sale. The tickets are $5 and each ticket holder will get a bottle of water at the first garden they visit. Tickets will be sold at the Wayne Greenhouse, the Plant Market, Swan's Apparel and the Wayne banks. Point of purchase signs will be distributed to the businesses that sell tickets. A schedule is being developed for volunteers to work at each of the gardens. The next topic of discussion was the taking and exhibiting of old photos, how and where they would be exhibited and what will happen to the photos when the celebration is over. After some discussion and no consensus on these matters, the subcommittee was asked to come up with some possible alternatives for the total committee to consider at the next meeting. The mural project was discussed and the committee is optimistic that the mural can be in place in late May or early June. The committee would like to have an unveiling of the mural celebration where the art students who worked on the mural could be recognized and honored. A "Bank Robbery" performance group was discussed and it was decided that if sponsors could be found for this group, there could be a performance on Saturday, Aug. 8 during the "Q-125 Weekend." The possibility of having a military band march in the parade on Saturday, Aug. 7 with a possible US Air Force jet fly-over prior to the parade was discussed. The Pumpkin Contest was discussed and it was noted that Amy Topp, UNL Extension educator -Wayne County, will be visiting third grade classes this week and talking to them about the growing of pumpkins and distributing pumpkin seeds to them. The committee wants the public to know that the contest is open to people of all ages and they can buy and plant pumpkin seeds of their own choice. More information on the contest will be coming and it will be in the Wayne Herald. Pac 'N' Save is sponsoring the contest. The next meeting of the committee will return to Tuesday night, May 26 at the Coffee Shoppe. New members are always invited to join the committee and to participate in the creation of ideas.

Wildcats land five players on '09 NSIC All-Conference Baseball Team

The Wayne State College baseball team placed five players on the 2009 Northern Sun Conference All-Conference Baseball Team that was announced last Thursday by the league office during the first round of the 2009 NSIC Baseball Tournament in St. Cloud, Minn.

WSC had four players receive First Team honors to go with one Second Team selection.

The Wildcats also earned three post-season awards as Joe Wendte was named the 2009 NSIC Player of the Year, Eric Bond was named the NSIC Newcomer of the Year while head coach John Manganaro was selected at the NSIC Coach of the Year.

Manganaro coached WSC to their sixth straight regular season NSIC title this year with a 27-4 record in league play. The 27 wins are the most ever by an NSIC team as the Wildcats topped their previous mark of 25 wins (25-5) that was achieved during the 2007 season. It's the fourth time, and the third time in the last four years, that Manganaro has collected NSIC Coach of the Year honors.

He picked up his 500th career win on May 3, in a 19-7 win over Minnesota, Crookston and has coached the Wildcats to a 198-54 record (.785) in NSIC play since WSC joined the league in 1999.

Wendte, a junior outfielder from South Sioux City, has a team-best .405 batting average so far this sea-4x400 Meter Relay: NC, 1st son. He also leads the team in runs scored (71), hits (65), slugging percentage (.745), on base percentage (.526) and stolen bases (13).

Wendte also has 11 homers and 57 RBI's with just one error all season in center field for the Wildcats. In NSIC games, Wendte was first in on base percentage (.579), walks (29) and runs scored (50), and was third in batting average (.420), RBI's

(34) and slugging percentage (.818). He also had seven home runs and nine stolen bases in league games this year.

In addition to this season's accolades, Wendte also received First Team All-Conference honors last season and was named NSIC Freshman of the Year in 2007.

Bond, a junior infielder from Blue Springs, Mo., made a big impact for the Wildcats' offense in his first year with the club.

He has a .347 average with a .677 slugging percentage for the this season and leads WSC with 14 home runs on the year.

In conférence games, Bond was tied for first in homers (11), fourth in RBI's (32) and total bases (75), and sixth in slugging percentage (.743).

Other First Team All-NSIC selec-

Moreland, a senior right-handed the season with 11 homers and a pitcher from Sioux City, Iowa, went team-high 63 RBI's. 6-0 in NSIC games this season with a 4.26 ERA. His six conference wins was tied for first in the NSIC.

He allowed just 30 hits (4th-NSIC) and 17 runs (T-7th-NSIC) in NSIC play this season.

Moreland is 7-2 overall on the season with a 4.31 ERA for the Wildcats.

Koch, a senior from Omaha, had 41 RBI's in conference play this season (1st-NSIC). He also had five sacrifice flies (1st-NSIC), 11 doubles (T-4th-NSIC) and ranked seventh in the conference with a .730 slugging percentage.

Overall, Koch is hitting 340 on selection last year.

He also joins Moreland as a repeat First Team All-Conference selection as he collected the honor in 2007 and 2008.

Second Team All-NSIC selections for WSC included Justin Hemauer. Hemauer, a senior outfielder from Moundsview, Minn., ranked second in the conference in runs scored (37), third in doubles (12), and seventh in total bases (70).

Overall, Hemauer has a .356 average with eight homers, 35 RBI's, 54 runs scored and 10 stolen bases for the Wildcats this season. He was also a Second Team All-Conference

Web Development course offered by WSC[.]

The Computer Technology and Information Systems (CTIS) Department at Wayne State College is offering a special course for individuals who wish to enhance their knowledge and skills regarding the creation of Web pages and Web sites.

To offer convenience to those with busy schedules, the course is being offered as a hybrid course with part of the course delivered as face-toface classroom instruction and part as online Internet-based instruction. The face-to-face portions will be delivered as evening class meetings.

The CSC-0396H0 (Call Number 10031) Web Development Tool course will give an introduction to tools for creating Rich Internet Applications (RIAs) using Adobe Air and Adobe Flex. The use of Cascading Style Sheets (CSS) to create menus and creative page layout will be introduced. Web programming using Rails and Ruby on Rails will be introduced.

Students should have a basic knowledge of Hypertext Markup Language (HTML). Educators, web designers, computer enthusiasts, persons responsible for creation or maintenance of their organization's web content, and other interested individuals who have had some experience with web page or web site creation will find this course very useful and valuable.

The course will begin on June 3 and will conclude on Aug. 6, but there are only three (3) face-toface class meetings. The dates for those meetings are June 3, June 17, and June 24. Those dates are all Wednesday evenings and the class will meet in Gardner Hall Room 211 on those dates from 6:30 to 9:15 p.m. on each of those evenings. The rest of the course will be delivered online, so students will need reliable access to the Internet during the early June to early August time period.

Preregistration is required. Early registration is encouraged as space in each course is limited and available seats in the course are filled on a first-come, first-served basis. To register, please call 1-800-228-9972, extension 7217 or (402) 375-7217. For questions regarding course content, please call (402) 375-7545. MOTHER-DAUGHTER EVENT

Concordia's annual Mother/ Daughter Event was held on May 6 with a special committee serving the meal. Marilyn Harder welcomed the 90+ guests and told about the cookbooks, canned goods, and antique items used as decoration.

The Table Grace was given from the 1955 cookbook that was printed during Concordia's 70th celebration. Pastor Ernest Nelson was the pastor at that time and the father of Naomi Peterson. Devotions were built around prayer for our daily bread and for the families and friends. Fern Erickson baked all of the bread and buns in memory of Mrs. Arthur Johnson (Evelina), using shredded wheat as a main ingredient.

Reflections of the Past were given by Ardyce Johnson, her daughter, Lynette Krie, her daughter, Trisha Reifenrath and her daughter, Shelby Krie. Old aprons were worn by the hostesses. Lynette gave the history of the apron.

Peg Lutt gave an interesting history of the Lutheran Women and welcomed the guest speaker, Mary Hamer, formerly of Wayne, now from Missouri Valley, Iowa. She displayed and spoke about her Hull Co. -Editorials— Capitol View Congress has no business How to pay for running state goverment? targeting car dealers By Ed Howard The Legislature will not debate

by Loy Todd, President & General Counsel of Nebraska New Car & Truck Dealers Association Endorsed by Bill Reeg, President, Arnie's Ford Mercury and Chairman of Nebraska New Car & Truck Dealers Association

As the Obama Administration considers whether to provide additional bridge loans to General Motors and Chrysler, some members of Congress suggested that the manufacturers reduce their dealer network to cut costs. This suggestion underscores a common misconception that manufacturers own dealerships and expend vast sums to maintain them. Nothing could be further from the truth.

New-car dealerships are owned by independent business people who literally invest millions of dollars in real estate, buildings, inventory and personnel, all to provide consumers the opportunity to test-drive inventory, trade in used vehicles, diagnose problems and provide warranty, recall and repair services. Dealers, not manufacturers, pay for dealership real estate. including property taxes; construction and upgrades of buildings as mandated by the manufacturer; and cars and parts inventory.

Dealers have paid the manufacturer for the vehicles before those . vehicles are shipped to the dealership; the shipping of vehicles is also the dealers' expense. The following are also provided at dealers' expense: tools and equipment in the service department to service vehicles; advertising; dealership signs purchased from the manufacturer; employees' training; employees' salaries, health insurance and benefits; computer and information technology costs to communicate with the manufacturer; taxes; dealers will survive, and others insurance; and freight charges from the manufacturer. Since the dealer is the manufacturer's customer, how can it make sense to claim the manufacturer's problem is that they have too many customers?

Without franchised dealers, manufacturers would need to work. Moreover, the network of franchised dealers in communities across Nebraska and the country provide intra- and inter-brand competition, benefiting consumers by encouraging lower prices and better service.

Without the franchised-dealer network and the revenue it generates, our communities' infrastructure would be irreparably damaged. Franchised dealers contribute to their local economics, through employment, state and local sales taxes, and support of charities, hospitals, scholarship funds and local organizations. Nebraska dealers employ more than 6,000 people; dealers' payroll constitutes more than 12% percent of the state's retail payroll. Sales tax revenue generated by dealership sales of nearly $4 billon annually is divided among state, county and municipal governments, paying for public safety, bridges and road construction.

And, Nebraska dealers contribute to their communities in so many ways. They sponsor youth sports teams, are members of local clubs, and donate vehicles, time and money to schools, hospitals and charities. When a dealership closes, the loss to a community is real and immediate.

It is unnecessary to artificially designate a "right number" of franchised GM and Chrysler dealers. The franchised dealer network has evolved over the past 100 years and will continue to do so. In 1950, there were more than 50,000 franchised dealers in the United States. Today, there are 19,700, and that number is shrinking. When economic conditions dictate consolidation of dealers in a market, it happens without being forced by an arbitrary decision. Profitable will either sell or close. Closing dealerships will negatively affect the bottom line for GM and Chrysler, since the manufacturers will lose market share without any meaningful reduction in costs. It will also affect thousands of independent business people, their employees, their customers

The state's two-year budget plan was well on the way to enactment when this column went to press, bolstered by more than a half-billion dollars provided by the federal stimulus program, and another $254 million from the state's cash reserve.

Those federal dollars could have been used for things other than staving off the impact of continued shortfalls in what were Nebraska's hoped-for revenues. No matter. A legislative majority made its choice.

What will happen in two years when those federal stimulus funds stop coming? Good question. Answer: Darned if I know. In truth, no one else knows, either. Chances are that it won't be pretty.

Former Republican Gov. Norbert Tiemann is thought of in some corners, including this one, as the fellow who dragged Nebraska, kicking and screaming and mad as heck, into the 20th century.

Through a constitutional amendment in 1966-the same year Tiemann was elected-the people eliminated state government's use of property taxes.

It seemed obvious Nebraska would need a state sales and income tax system to fund government operations if it hoped to advance, especially in education at all levels. However, Tiemann's push for the new income tax outraged a great many among the citizenry, and some in the press.

In a recent interview in the Lincoln Journal-Star, Tiemann looked back on his administration, arguably the most important in modern times, and certainly the mentioned 20th century legislation resulted in his defeat by Democrat Jim Exon after one four-year term. However, neither Exon nor any other policymaker of status ever tried to repeal the income tax. And neither Exon nor the Legislature hesitated to spend the cash reserves Tiemann left in his wake.

Tiemann also had the problem of having alienated the most conservative elements in the Republican hierarchy. Put that together with his sometimes injudicious stylė, such as the time he said that he had never met a happy farmer when it came to government matters, and his fate was sealed.

A significant issue raised in the LJS interview: If not for Tiemann, would Nebraska state government have remained, to this day, marginally funded and thus extremely limited?

The view from here: Probably. And it is important to understand that a potential majority of Nebraskans would regard that situation as a good one.

Weekly Legislative Update

The Legislature's budget debate went smoothly last week, passing through two rounds of debate without a major floor fight. Given the revenue picture facing not only Nebraska but the rest of the country, the Appropriations Committee worked hard to slow down state spending while still funding many of the Legislature's top priorities.

The budget which has advanced for Final Reading this week provides an average 1 percent growth in spending for each of the next two years, and relies heavily on the state's Cash Reserve Fund to prevent either heavy cuts or tax increases. Money from the federal stimulus package has also been helpful in balancing the budget, providing $234 million for K-12. education alone.

cational opportunities throughout the Siouxland region. I applaud the State College System and the Appropriations Committee for making this project a priority despite the difficult economic times we face, and I look forward to the Center's opening next year.

Finally, two of the bills I proposed this session appear destined for final passage in the next week. LB 412, which would align deadlines for Sanitary Improvement District (SID) elections with other mailin elections, and LB 537, which would enable smaller communities that rely entirely on volunteer fire departments to supplement their volunteers with paid firefighters during the business day, were both advanced to Final Reading on a voice vote last week. I look forward to the final vote on both bills, and am hopeful that they will be signed by the Governor.

As always, I would encourage you to contact me if you have any questions or simply have an opinion on legislation before the Unicameral. Feel free to call my office at (402) 471-2716, send me an e-mail at bgiese@leg.ne.gov, or stop by in person any time you're in Lincoln.

our nation's history. Unfortunately, they're also a target for scam artists. In response to a growing number of senior consumer complaints, my office began the SAFE (Senior Anti-Fraud Education) program.

Last year, the Attorney General's Office educated more than 2,000 Nebraska seniors on how to avoid becoming victims of scams. Our consumer outreach coordinator travels across the state training volunteers and giving SAFE presentations to arm seniors with the tools to guard against consumer fraud. The presentations provide information on top complaints such as telemarketing fraud and home repair and sweepstakes scams.

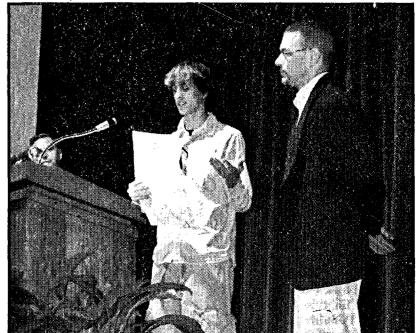

Here are some tips to help seniors protect themselves:

Visit to the morgue

Criminal Justice students and professors from Wayne State College recently returned from a week-long trip to Chicago. The students spent time at the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office (Chicago Morgue) where they observed two autopsies, witnessed the intake and toe tagging of incoming bodies, and spent observation time in the walk-in cooler which houses 250 deceased persons. Students on the trip also toured Stateville Prison, Cook County Juvenile Court, the Jane Addams Hull House, as well as a women's prison. The trip was organized by Dr. Jason Karsky, and Criminal Justice Association Student President John Brady.

As of May 1, American pork producers have lost $17.69 on each hog marketed. For the April 24 through May 1 period, total losses reached $7.2 million a day.

"Ironically these losses have resulted from nothing more than misinformation and improper use of terminology on the part of our federal government and media," said Loos. "This is unfortunate considering domestic food production is a means of national security."

In addition to the importance of the United States being self sufficient in food production, Loos said the very health of the American public depends on the continued viability of pork producers. He pointed * out that research at the University of Texas and elsewhere has shown the consumption of cured and processed meats, such as ham, bacon and luncheon meats, promotes good cardio vascular health.

A sixth generation farmer and rancher, Loos believes it is time to raise awareness of the valuable contributions made by the pork industry and he intends to do just

Lemon tree bears fruit faithfully for 45 years

By Lynn Sievers • Of the Herald

Dick Carman of Wayne recently picked lemons from their tree. Something he's done once a year for the past 45 years. The six foot indoor tree has produced two to four dozen lemons a year since they bought it in Florida in 1964. Dick and his wife, Roberta, were at the Orange Bowl game that year for the Nebraska/Auburn game and brought the tree home as a memen-

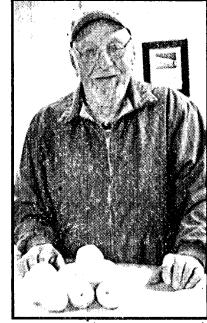

"We went to a nursery there and there were rows of lemon trees in gallon buckets," Carman said. "I told the guy I wanted one that produced lemons. We brought it home and I've nursed it along all these years."

Carman noted the most lemons the tree has produced at one time is four dozen but each year it produces less. He added the tree isn't as nice looking as it once was so it has been moved to the basement.

"I re-potted the tree into a large redwood tub and fertilize it with Miracle Grow," Carmen said. " It's more of a bush now than a tree and my wife thinks it's messy. It's thorny and doesn't look so good but it's my baby. I aereate the soil which kind of revitalizes it. If I neglect it, the lemons drop off. It has set on flowers already for its next crop."

Carman said the lemons don't go to waste as his wife has made lemon pies, lemonade and also has frozen the juice to use in recipes. He has also enjoyed giving the lemons to people through the years.

Another memento the Carmans picked up was a cactus when they attended the Sugar Bowl in 1987, in for a long time.

when Nebraska played Louisiana State in New Orleans. Nebraska won in both bowl games they attended.

"We have a 16 foot ceiling in our living room and the cactus reached to the top," Carman said. "I had to cut it back several times, which was hard to do because it was so fibrous. I don't have to do that anymore because it died awhile back."

Carman ended by saying that taking care of and enjoying the plants have been a hobby that both he and his wife have been involved Lifestyle

Our Savior Council Retreat proves productive and affirming

Council of Our Savior Lutheran Interim's work includes providing Church enjoyed a productive retreat at the Benedictine Peace Center of Sacred Heart Monastery, in Yankton, S.D.

The retreat is an annual event aimed at helping council members get to know one another better while providing exposure to new or useful concepts related to ministry leadership.

This year's facilitator was Interim Pastor Judith Wascher, Salem Lutheran Church, Dakota City. The Rev. Wascher is serving her 24th congregation as an Interim Pastor. Interim Pastors serve congregations in transition

Greves to note golden anniversary

Howard and Barbara Greve of Wayne will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, May 16.

In honor of the occasion, their family has requested a card shower in their honor.

Howard Greve and Barbara Krusemark were married May ¹16. 1959 at St. Peter's Lutheran Church of rural Pender. Their family includes Harley and Vickie Greve of Wakefield, Hayley Greve of Omaha and Bobbey and Joe Huwaldt of Huntsville, Ala. They also have four grandchildren.

Seven members of the Church from one pastor to another. An Friday evening. Council members pastoral services and worship leadership, but also guiding of congregations towards better understanding their unique identity and challenges. Preparing a congregation for new pastoral leadership is vitally important to the success of the incoming pastor.

Pastor Wascher's education and work prior to seminary training included social work. Consequently, her analysis of congregational situations includes the "human factors." Because of her vast experience with congregations, her perspective on congregational life, culture, and personality proved interesting to the council and very helpful.

Building on the book "Speaking the Truth in Love" by Rev. Kenneth Haugk of Stephen Ministry, Pastor Wascher helped the Council gain perspective on the complexity of leadership in a mostly volunteer organization.

Pastor Wascher commended the council members for their honest sharing of faith during a discussion of Spiritual Practices on

The UNL organic project began in October 2005. A team of Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources researchers received a $750,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service's Integrated Organic Program to expand organic farming beans and winter wheat in their research and education, enhance collaborations with growers and develop science-based information for organic food production in

Other components of this grant were to develop a tool for measuring a farm's biodiversity, educational outreach for students and farmers, and weed control by flaming, Sarno said.

"An integral part of the grant. has been to develop the Healthy Farm Index as a tool for landowners to measure their farm's ecological health and maintain or improve safe and economical weed concrop productivity." Sarno said. More information about this is at http:// organic.unl.edu/hfi/hfi.shtml.

As part of the Healthy Farm Index, two years of data have been collected on 27 organic farms research focused on bird assemblages and vegetation structure, along with preliminary insect data.

"This really offers a whole different perspective," Sarno said. "For example, a wood lot can provide habitat for birds, help control insects or provide habitat for beneficial insects, increase yields, increase profit and at the same a farmer's ecology. It's a good 21st century tool."

Results from the four research stations and on-farm farmer-driven organic research also were incorporated in classroom education programs, Sarno said. More information about that can be found at http://organic.unl.edu/

Farmer input from these meetings led to an organic winter wheat variety study, "Developing Small Grains Cultivars and Systems Optimally Suited for Organic Production," funded by the USDA-CSREES. Stephen Baenziger, Small Grains Breeding and Genetics program leader, and Richard Little, organic wheat breeding specialist and coordinator, are in charge of the project. For more information go to http://organic.unl.edu/wheat/wheat. shtml.

Another project, flaming to manage weeds in organic crops, started with the 2005 grant and continues with the winter wheat study.

Dose response curves were determined for propane (based on usage rate of gallon per acre) needed for trol. To further investigate weed management with flaming, UNL received a 2008 NRCS Conservation Innovation Grant Award with matched funds from the Propane Education and Research Council for the project, "Reducing Soil Erosion through Thermal Pest Control."

With these funds a commercial type flamer will be manufactured for field demonstration purposes and for working with four organic farmers to conduct on-farm experiments. And, since I work tomorrow, I had better get had, so they spent the night in a few lines sent to Wayne yet this evening.

The weather is finally nicer, and we have been enjoying it. Lilacs are blooming, as is spirea, while most of the flowering trees are putting on leaves now. Our two mourning doves are back, acting like teenagers. And they are fun to watch, but they leave little "remembrances" on the deck!

Our church, where my Mom has attended since about 1970, always has a mother-daughter banquet on the Friday evening before Mother's Day. I hope they never give up this wonderful tradition. I've been going since then, and would usually haul all my girls along. Now, they seldom make it, but my sis almost always does, and lately, I've been inviting my cousin Lyn.

I know they've done a bridal fashion show once before, and this must have been the year for it, because there were several churchit's still fun. I had my Mom's, which is 72 years old, on display, and one of the teenagers modeled mine. the Mother's Day Life Walk, which

And that afternoon, we headed to Omaha for the wedding of a greatniece. This is the first one of that generation. The couple are UNL grads and fanatical fans. Two of the bride's uncles held a horseshoe above the door as the wedding party was announced to the tune of the Tunnel Walk!

On Sunday, we made it to 8 a.m. church for the third time this year, which is something for us. We took Mom to HyVee for breakfast, and she and I both ate free.

Leaving the Big Farmer with left-over pizza, Sue and I headed to Ashland for brunch.. Then Kay drove to Omaha, where we saw Wicked.

This is a spectacular musical and we thoroughly enjoyed it. The prequel to Wizard of Oz took a lot of imagination and some great song writing. I'm still humming the final duet, which says something like, "I'm a better person since I met you; I've changed for the better since then." I predict you will hear it again, just like Memories from Cats. And now, no more bumming for awhile, and back to work! The corn is up!

six years, depending on the species. Wireworms are our earliest corn pests, as they may feed on the seed before germination, causing reduced plant emergence. Later feeding may kill or stunt small emerged plants. All wireworm feeding is done under ground. Wireworms are white, yellow, orange, or brown with hard shells, which give these insects the name. As stated earlier, they tend to be more numerous in fields that have been in grass/pasture or fields that have had grassy weed problems. Wireworms prefer cooler soil temperatures, under 70 degrees, so early planted fields and heavy surface residue fields may have higher risk than tilled fields.

There is no rescue treatment available for vireworms, so farmers with a high probability of problems need to use a planting time treatment to prevent stand reduction. The relent development of seed treatments like Cruiser and Poncho has really reduced the inciare excellent early season stand protectors. One potential problem with seed treatments is they are becoming so commonly used that resistance is a possibility. Granular soil insecticides and liquids also work well.

White grubs are the larvae of May (or June) beetles. They also prefer to feed on grasses and very rarely affect crops other than corn. There are two basic types of grubs. Annual grubs complete their development in one year and are not considered serious pests. Three year grubs, however, can damage corn severely in the last two years of their larval stage. The larvae overwinter deep in the soil, and as the soil warms they begin feeding on plant roots. Damage to corn may not occur until the corn is in the 2 to 6 leaf stage. This is difficult because up to the time of feeding the stand may look fine. Often grub damage is near shelter belts where the adults may congregate to feed and mate. Like wireworms, Cutworms can cause serious damage to corn in the first couple weeks after emergence so it is important to scout fields for damage. Several species of cutworms attack corn. The severity and the area affected will vary greatly, depending on species involved, previous crop history and weather conditions. The black cutworm does not overwinter in Nebraska, and infestations depend on moth movement in southerly winds in the spring. Fields with winter annual weeds, or abundant crop residue are more attractive to the egg-laying moths in the spring. Other cutworm species (dingy, army, sandhills) overwinter as partly grown caterpillars.

Remember that early detection of a problem is essential because most of the cutting occurs within

ALLEN CLASS RING STORY Also, interesting to Allen people, keep your old graduation rings, they may be valuable. Our grandson, son of Lori and Tom Huddleston of Broken Arrow, Okla.received his class ring ($545) free because the prize for the day was to bring in the oldest class ring. Lori took her grandmother's ring (Myrtle Fegley White) from class of 1922 and that Derald Rice, Katelyn Sachau, was the oldest ring, thus Collin got his ring free. The ring had no date on it, just AHS, so Lori also found her diploma with the year on Shannon Sullivan, Tyler Surber, to prove the date. That ring was worth a lot. His class has around 1,300 students. (Lois and Harold White)

2009 UNL crop production clinics available online

Presentations from the first annual University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension Crop Production Clinics are now available online at http:// cpc.unl.edu/. The Crop Production Clinics, offered in January 2009 at eight locations across the state, provide valuable information to help crop producers and agribusiness' professionals improve their profitability and safety, said Lowell Sandell, UNL Extension educator.

"This will allow participants and others interested to go back and review what was discussed at the clinics," Sandell said.

To view the videos click on the 2009 Video Presentations at the top of the page. The Crop Production Clinics feature presentations from extension specialists and educators on soil fertility, soil water and irrigation management, crop production, pesticide safety, and weed, disease and insect pest management.

The programs for each location were tailored to meet the needs of cropping systems in that part of the state. Presentations recorded at the Fremont, Hastings, York, North Platte and Gering locations are available.

The videos are grouped by discipline. Clicking on a discipline tab will allow you to see the individual presentation title, speaker, and location. Click on the title to view the video. The Crop Production Clinics succeed the Crop Protection Clinics which had been conducted annually since 1974. UNL Extension is in the university's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.
