Wind farm could be built in Wayne County

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

A new crop might be on the horizon in Wayne County. While corn stalks are starting to make their presence felt in fields across the county, the area could soon become home to a wind farm, as a proposal to build 48 wind turbines just south of Winside was announced earlier this week.

Way Wind LLC has entered into a joint venture with Nordex USA, Inc., for the co-development and later construction of a wind farm in Wayne County. The 120-megawatt wind farm would generate enough electricity to power about 47,000 homes, and would include as many as 48 wind turbines when it would become operational, which company officials said could happen by the end of 2013.

Dan Jaeger of Winside has hosted a wind measurement tower on his farm south of town, and he said the company has entered into agreements with landowners to secure a 8,000-acre area to build the turbines.

"They have some landowners signed up, and it gives them five years to build a project," he told The Wayne Herald. "They have to be able to sell the power as well, and once that's done and the environmental studies are done, it's a go. Everything has been positive so far, so I don't anticipate any problems."

Way Wind and Nordex USA have entered into a joint venture on the project, and additional studies and surveys are being completed before an application for approval is submitted to the Nebraska Power Review Board. The wind farm would create a number of temporary construction jobs, as well as several long-term jobs, according to the release. The exact number of jobs was not noted in the release.

Nordex, a Frankfurt, Germany-based company, would supply the towers, which would come from its new production facility in Jonesboro, Ark. The company already has wind turbines installed in seven states, including Iowa, Colorado and Minnesota.

"We've been working for a couple of years to develop this project," said Wes Slaymaker, one of three members of the Way Wind group based in Madison, Wis. "The biggest critical item to the project's success is selling the power or selling the project, and at this point, Nordex is taking the lead on those items and working up the project costs."

Slaymaker said the power would probably be marketed through the Southwest power Pool, a nine-state energy group that includes members in Nebraska like Nebraska Public Power District.

Slaymaker, whose father, William, is a tenured professor at Wayne State College, said he started looking at the area after talking to several area farmers on a recent visit to see his father.

"I was out there for an event at the college, and I had a farmer ask about getting turbines on his land and some others asked questions about having wind farms in this part of the state," he said.

The biggest challenge, Slaymaker said, is selling the energy that the turbines generate, as well as having the proper power lines to move that energy to customers.

"We need large transmission lines, which exist south of Wayne, and there are a number that feed the Nucor plant in Norfolk," he said.

Slaymaker said he's worked with several landowners in the county, and is optimistic that his company will be able to secure lease agreements on enough land to cover the project.

"The land owners we've been working with have been fantastic, and Dan Jaeger has been instrumental in getting us organized," he said. "We're going to have 8,000 acres, so it's going to be a huge area."

A project of this magnitude could be a tremendous economic benefit to the county, Slaymaker said.

"With a project this size, there will be a local operation and maintenance facility, so we're looking at 8-10 full-

Local business owners honored with state SBA award Tuesday

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Lennard Dickinson and Jule Goeller received a nice welcome home present from their community.

The owners of Sand Creek Post and Beam recently were honored as the Nebraska Small Business Persons of the Year, earning them a trip to Washington, D.C., where they were nominated for the national award by the Small Business Administration.

On Tuesday, the couple and many of the 48 employees that have helped the business achieve the success it has were honored by community leaders during a special luncheon at the Wayne State College student center, where they were presented the award by Leon Milobar, SBA district director.

Several local officials were on hand to publicly congratulate the couple on their award.

"Sand Creek Post and Beam is a model business that any community would yearn to have," said Wes Blecke, Wayne Area Chamber executive director. "When I want to sell the community to a prospect, Lennard and Jule are often one of the first people I turn to for support. Their passion and optimistic view of the area help carry the message of what this area has to offer."

Mayor Ken Chamberlain echoed Blecke's sentiments.

"They have not only made Sand Creek Post and Beam a part of the business community, but have made it part of the community as a whole," he said. "Their continued growth and success is a testament to the people they are and the kind of people Wayne has to offer."

Loren Kucera, director of the Nebraska Business Development Center, complimented the duo on their ability to grow their

UNMC officials visit Wayne, discuss health care concerns

Representatives from the University of Nebraska Medical Center met with area residents Wednesday morning at Wayne State College to discuss health care and the two school's involvement in educating tomorrow's health care professionals.

Chancellor Harold M. Maurer, M.D., said the leadership team visits a different quadrant of the state each year and talks with area residents to find out what issues are at the forefront of the area's health care concerns. They also share what's new at UNMC and answer questions of area resident.

"Shaping the health care of the future is happening right now," Maurer said. "How it will come out is the question, and everybody is able to help shape it right now and we'll see what comes out at the end."

Maurer said changes in health care are inevitable, whether they come from the government or the medical community.

"Health care reform will occur, one way or another, because it's too expensive," he said.

One of the programs UNMC is working with Wayne State College on is the Rural Health Opportunities Program, which involves area high school students. The program, which is funded by a $17 million federal grant, guarantees students a place in a health care-related school if they

Benefit is set for Lonnie Weinrich

By CLARA OSTEN
Of The Herald

During last year's Nebraska State Fair, Lonnie Weinrich of Wakefield began having a cough and running a fever.

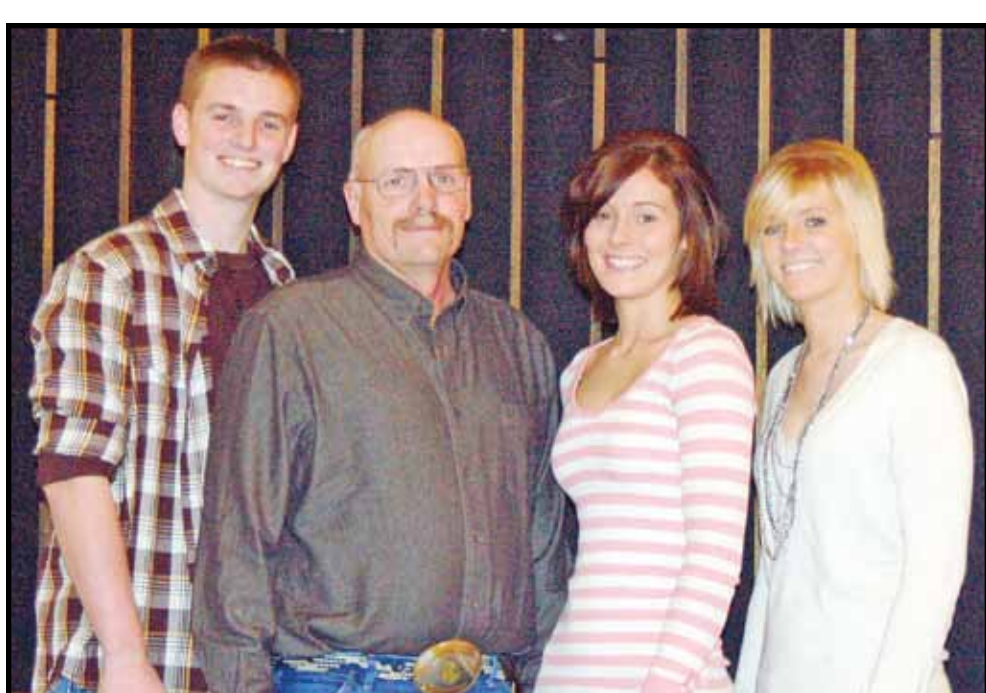

He didn't get better and by the middle of October, was getting run down and feeling worse.

"I never get sick and didn't even have a doctor, but on Oct. 21, I went to Pender and they admitted me to the hospital because I was anemic and had a fever," Weinrich said.

The doctors ran tests but could not find a cause for the symptoms, and he was sent home.

A week later he saw the doctor again and was given two pints of blood.

"Dr. Timm (of Pender Mercy Medical Clinic) then sent me to Sioux City where they performed a CT scan and found a mass on the top of my large intestine. Dr. Johnson performed surgery on Nov. 1 and removed a tumor the size of a tennis ball. It had perforated the intestine wall, causing

County has until Jan. 1 to complete bridge bracings

By JAYCIE WOSLAGER
Of The Herald

The Wayne County Commissioners meeting took place on Tuesday, and the commissioners were visited by Mark Mainelli of Mainelli, Wagner and Associates.

They started off discussing bridge retrofit recommendations to comply with the Nebraska Department of Roads' bracing by deck policy. At the last commissioners meeting, board members Kelvin Wurdeman, Dean Urbach and Jim Rabe were presented with a letter from Mainelli with the bridges within their districts that needed to be braced. Mainelli told the commissioners to look through that letter well and understand what needs to be done.

"In the letter we broke down bridge by bridge on what you've got to do," said Mainelli. The bridges that need to be braced have to be completed by Jan. 1, 2012.

Mainelli also told the board that they need to start keeping a record of their inventory and their running inventory for all districts within the county. The board will be working with Mainelli more in the future, so they do not have to designate a highway superintendent.

County emergency manager Nic Kennitz told the board that he recently completed the Instructor Training Certification for the Department of Homeland Security in Anniston, Ala.

In other action, the board:

- approved a project designation resolution for Project BRS-3100 Winside East.
- approved a bid for pipes for Winside Northwest.
- authorized Rabe to sign temporary easements for Winside Northwest and Hoskins Northeast.
- authorized Rabe to sign a Certification of Compliance for Structure No. C009001720.
- approved an application for permission to place an utility line in county road right-of-way for Kris Loberg and Klein Electric.
- awarded a one-year contract for auditing services to Michael J. Pommer, CPA.
- signed employment contracts to pay commissioners $8 per hour, not to exceed $3,000, for performing work beyond their commissioner responsibilities.

bleeding and the anemia," Weinrich said.

After being home for two weeks, Weinrich took aspirin for pain, causing bleeding and the need to be re-admitted to the hospital in Sioux City. During this time he received eight units of blood because of low hemoglobin.

Doctors continued to analyze the tumor to determine what type of cancer Weinrich had.

On Thanksgiving, he was transferred by ambulance to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. the four-hour trip was painful, but after arriving at the clinic, doctors there began running tests immediately.

"By this time I was feeling better. The doctors think that my body had healed itself and the bleeding stopped," Weinrich said.

His doctor at the Mayo Clinic, Dr. Bible, "explained things in terms we could understand. He said the doctors determined the cancer to be similar to small intestine cancer and set up a chemotherapy schedule."

Weinrich began the chemotherapy treatments at the June E. Nylen Center on Dec. 10.

"I came home with a pump to administer the chemo. It took a total of 46 hours to complete one treatment," he said.

Among the side effects of the chemotherapy was an intolerance to cold. Weinrich had to wear gloves just to remove items from the refrigerator. He also had to completely cover his body before going outdoors.

Treatments were completed just prior to Memorial Day and Weinrich is scheduled to have additional tests yet this month to determine what the next course of treatment will be.

Through the winter Weinrich was unable to work for his employer, Nichols Feedlot. He has just recently begun working on a part-time basis.

Weinrich has high praise for his neighbors, Merlin and Delores Felt, who took him to a number of the cancer treatments and have assisted in a number of ways.

Weinrich has a son, Cody Hutchison, who is in the Air Force, and two daughters, Stephanie Weinrich, a student at Northeast

Community College and Katie Weinrich, a student at Wakefield Community Schools.

"I feel a lot better now, and it is nice feeling better," Weinrich said.

To help offset medical bills, a benefit will be held at the Wakefield American Legion on Sunday, June 26 from 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

The Nebraska Cattlemen's Association will be preparing steak sandwiches for a freewill offering. Supplement funds from the Thrivent Lutheran group will be received. A silent auction of items will be available.

Council gets into sludge

BY CLARA OSTEN
of the Herald

Sludge was the main topic on a relatively short list of agenda items at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Lucas Billesbach with JEO Consulting Group presented information on options available to the city for removal of sludge from the 26-acre lagoon currently used by the Wastewater Treatment plant.

On Sept. 13, 2010 the Environmental Protection Agency informed the city that a plan for removal of the sludge from the lagoon needs to be in place by July 28, 2011 and the sludge removed by July 1, 2013.

Billesbach told the council that the Wayne lagoon contains approximately 790 tons of "Class B sludge" which is 6 1/2 percent solid. There are three ways of removing the sludge.

The first of these options is a belt filter press, which reduces the amount of hauling necessary to remove the sludge. The cost estimate for this option is $1 to 1.5 million.

A second option involves geotubes, by which the water in the lagoon seeps out, eliminating some of the hauling. The cost for this process is approximately $500,000.

The third option involves the liquid hauling of the sludge and applying it to farmland.

"Depending on the method used, we would need between 2,800 and 13,000 acres of farm land to apply the sludge to. It would be beneficial to do this in the fall of 2011 and 2012, thereby cutting the actual number of acres in half because the sludge could be applied to the same area each year. Also, doing it in the fall, we would probably have more cooperation from the farmers because the ground would be bare," Billesbach said.

The estimated cost for this option is from $260,000 to $500,000.

Although this cost was not anticipated or budgeted by the city, it can be put into the financing plan for the city's new wastewater treatment facility.

Following discussion, the council voted unanimously to approve the plan as presented, noting that adjustments can be made to the plan in the future if necessary.

A public hearing was held for the purpose of considering amending the assessment schedule by $10,000 for the Muhs Acres water project.

City Administrator Lowell Johnson told the council that when the plan was originally discussed, city officials verbally agreed to give a $10,000 to the project as a credit for the double water rates the property owners have been paying since 1996.

Mark Klassen, representing the Muhs Acres Homeowners Association, told the council that homeowners in Muhs Acres have been paying double water rates while maintaining the lines and that there is documentation from the time the water lines were installed that indicating that the city had agreed to taking responsibility for the lines, but not ownership. However, that was not the case.

Klassen also told the council that the new water lines "are working well and were sorely needed."

Following the public hearing and council discussion, approval was given to amend the assessment schedule. It was noted that the assessments are part of a lien on each property and the responsibility of the current property owners in the event that a property is sold. Property owners will have 20 years to pay off the lien.

The council approved the city administrator's employment contract for the coming fiscal year with a one percent increase. This will give City Administrator Lowell Johnson a salary of $71,962 for the coming year.

In other action, the council approved the application of Austin Frideres to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department Cadet program and Ridge Abbott to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department.

The council will next meet in regular session on Tuesday, July 5 at 5:30 p.m. in council chambers.

Christian Frisch (next to the ladder) fills a sandbag while his teachers and classmates work to get more ready during a recent volunteering trip to North Sioux City.

Tower School kids help fill sandbags

In addition to academic skills taught at the Wayne Tower Schools, students strive to learn social skills to assist them throughout their lives.

In recent weeks the students have been listening to the news of the flooding in the Sioux City, Iowa area and with the help for their teachers, planned a trip to North Sioux City to help fill sandbags.

"The best part of the trip was shoveling. The worst part was seeing all the houses and stores underwater," said 13-year old Christian Frisch. "I didn't see as much water as I expected, but we did see stores that were closed because of the flood. I would like to go back and help again."

Although rain shortened the trip, the group of four students and their teachers filled 200 sandbags in approximately one hour.

Chantell Hoffman, who teaches the students at the Tower School, said the experience helped promote skills taught as the school such as helping other people, volunteering and citizenship.

"The trip provided a lot of educational benefits on many levels. The students saw the environmental impact the flooding is having on the area, as well the impact it is having on the people who live there," she said.

Nine-year-old Emma Matthies said that while the flooding is making people who are losing their homes sad, "it makes me happy that other people are helping them."

For Emma, the best part of the trip was digging up the sand, and the worst part was "trying to hold the sand bags. They were really heavy. The next day I was sore and fell asleep early."

Also making the trip to North Sioux City were Haley McElwain and Barry Cook.

While traveling to and from the sandbagging, the students traveled across an area they had visited earlier this year while on a field trip and were able to see just how much the water had risen.

Pamida in Wayne donated gloves for the students to use and bottled water for them while they were filling the bags.

maintain a certain grade point average.

"Those students have done beautifully," Maurer said, adding that some students are also trained as scientists at Wayne State before receiving additional training at UNMC before they graduate.

UNMC also works to send some of its students to rural parts of the state as part of their education.

"They like to come here and they learn a lot, so it's a great opportunity for them," he said.

business during a challenging economic climate.

"The growth they've had during a tough economic time over the last several years is directly attributable to Lennard and Julie and the phenomenal growth they've done," he said.

In accepting the award, Goeller was quick to deflect the business' success to the employees.

"These awards you helped earn," she told those employees in attendance. "You've really taken ownership of this, and I thank you."

Dickinson said he looks at his employees as a second family.

"I've never had a relationship with a group of people like this," he said. "Everybody associated with Sand Creek Post and Beam is important to me, and every thought about the business I have is about the people who make up the business. We have a responsibility to them, and if we can do that, they'll reciprocate, and they've always been there. Even when times have been tough, we continue to go forward every day."

Dickinson said he was thrilled to have an opportunity to share the award with the community.

"When we were in Washington, I thought how great it would be to share this with Wayne, because they're the ones who helped us be who we are," he said.

time jobs, and we'll try to hire local people if possible," he said. "The construction jobs will have several hundred people involved to build the project over a six-month period."

In addition, landowners will benefit through lease payments that, Slaymaker said, would amount to millions of dollars over the project's life.

"We talked with the county about property tax rates, and I think it's going to be in the range of $10,000 to $20,000 per turbine, so the county will realize a big economic benefit from the tax revenue on this," he said. With the recent passage of LB248 in the Nebraska Legislature, the 48-turbine project could generate more than $422,000 in tax revenue for the county.

Slaymaker said the project has been approved by the Federal Aviation Administration for the height permits, and they are in the process of completing other required studies and permit applications, including the Nebraska Power Review Board, in order to make the project a reality.

"We've met with Game and Parks, and they like the site, and I think we'll be able to obtain all our permits, so I think the project will go smoothly," he said. "There are some significant tax credits that expire in 2013, and that will drive us to get the project completed and in operation by then."

Wildcats helping out with flood

Summer officially began on Tuesday, which means it's just six weeks until the start of fall sports practices. With that in mind, here are a few random thoughts and observations regarding the sports world in general:

— Now this is how you get out of a workout: several Wayne State football players joined graduate assistant Spencer Gray to spend a day helping flood prevention efforts in Wynstone, S.D. last week.

Danny Keller, Vincent Patteros, Josh Riggle and James Worthen helped with sandbagging efforts to help build a levee to keep the Missouri River from flooding the area.

Kudos to those young men for helping out their fellow man in a time of need.

— Can we hold off on the comparisons to Rory McIlroy and Tiger Woods for just a minute or two?

Last week, McIlroy obliterated the U.S. Open record books, finishing with an amazing 16-under par to win by eight shots. While the margin of victory isn't a record, the four-day total of 268 obliterated the mark set by Woods a few years back.

McIlroy, at age 22, is already drawing comparisons to Woods. While McIlroy grew up watching Woods burn and pillage the golf world a decade ago, he has a long way to go to get in that rare air that Woods and Jack Nicklaus sit in among the game's all-time greats.

If Rory can put together a "McIlroy Slam" like Tiger did a few years back and win a few more majors, then the discussion can begin. I love watching the kid's game, but I'm not ready to put him in Tiger's neighborhood just yet. After all, he has only one more major than Sergio Garcia right now.

— When Major League Baseball had its World Series-killing strike in 1994, I vowed never to return to the game as a fan.

This was hard for me to do, because I grew up collecting baseball cards, learned how to chart a game in a scorebook while watching Atlanta Braves games on cable, and memorized the relevant stats of every noteworthy player in the game.

I grew tired of the bickering over millions of dollars by greedy owners and overpaid players, so much so that I burned all my baseball cards and have watched very little of the game ever since.

I am prepared to do the same thing with the NFL if billionaire owners and multi-millionaire players can't figure out how to divide $8 billion in revenue by the start of this coming season. If one week of the regular season is missed, I'm prepared to light a torch to all my Seattle Seahawks gear and find something else to do with my Sunday afternoons and Monday nights.

If the millions of NFL fans across the country were to follow my lead, how long do you think it would take the two sides to come up to a solution? Minutes? Seconds? Let's hope we don't have to find out.

— I took my father, stepmom and daughter to the new TD Ameritrade Park for a College World Series game last week, and we were all impressed with the new stadium in downtown Omaha.

I will say this — the way the stadium is built is awesome from the perspective of getting between your seat and the concession stand. The open-air construction allows you to see the game from anywhere in the building, and there is an abundance of space in the concourse area that made getting from Point A to Point B more of a challenge at Rosenblatt.

The atmosphere around the ballpark is much different as well, and the business owners around the stadium have done a great job in preparing the area for the hundreds of thousands of fans that make the College World Series an American tradition in Nebraska.

Juniors stay undefeated with four wins last week

The Wayne Juniors American Legion baseball team is still undefeated on the season after winning four games this past week.

On Wednesday, Tyler Robinson and Brady Soden both launched three-run homers as the Wayne Juniors dominated West Point on the road, winning 11-0.

Robinson hit his round-tripper in the first inning, while Soden's came in the second inning. Soden also had a double and pitched three innings of one-hit baseball to get the win on the mound.

Kaje Maly and Danny Melena each scored three runs in the win, while Luke Rethwisch came home twice. Soden finished with five RBI's in the game.

On Thursday, the Juniors continued their season-long unbeaten string with a sweep at home against Stanton, winning 12-0 and 12-7.

In the first game, Steve Sherman had three hits and three RBI's, including a pair of doubles. Soden, Melena and Maly each had two hits and scored two runs, and Sherman and Ramsey Jorgensen both scored twice.

Bradley Longe tossed a two-hit shutout in the opener, striking out four in four innings of work.

In the second game, Stanton got out to a 2-0 lead early, but Wayne scored three in the first and outscored the visitors from there to improve to 11-0 on the season.

Longe and Sherman each had two hits, and both recorded doubles in the game. Soden scored three times while Melena and Dylan Sokol both scored twice.

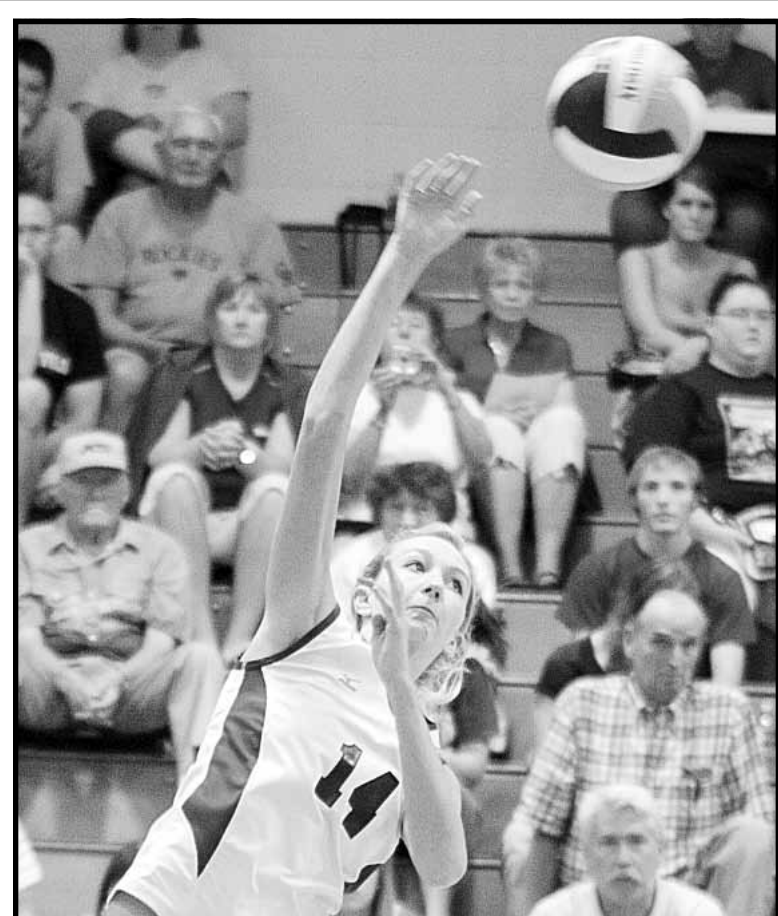

Robinson threw three solid innings, allowing four hits and striking out three to get the win.

On Monday, the Juniors broke open a close game with four runs in the third inning and posted a five-inning win over Ponca, 10-2.

Wayne broke the game open with four runs in the third, highlighted by a two-run single by Sherman. Drew Carroll had two hits, including a triple, and scored a pair, while Melena and Soden both came home to score twice.

Grant Anderson had a solid game on the mound, allowing three hits, a walk and a hit batter while striking out four in five innings of work.

The Wayne Juniors play at Wakefield on Friday and host South Sioux City on Monday at Hank Overin Field. Start time for both games is 5:45 p.m.

Area all-stars show stuff

Three area volleyball standouts were part of the Northeast Nebraska All-Star Volleyball Classic Friday at Northeast Community College in Norfolk. (from top) Wayne's Elisa Robinson and Winside's Audrey Roberts competed for the Light squad, which was coached by Joyce Hoskins of Wayne and Teresa Watters of Winside. Keri Lunz of Wakefield competed for the Dark squad, which lost to the Light team in four sets.

WSC recruit named Athlete of the Year

A Wayne State recruit was named as the outstanding senior volleyball player in the nation as the National High School Coaches Association announced its selections as the 2011 National High School Senior Athletes of the Year.

Courtney Van Groningen, a three-sport standout at Sterling High School, was one of the state's most feared outside hitters despite standing just 5 feet, 4 inches tall.

The Wayne State set an all-class state record with 50 kills in a match as a sophomore, and this year, she broke her own Class D-2 state record with 642 kills as she led Sterling, one of the state's smallest high schools with an enrollment of only 65 students, to a 30-3 record and a state runner-up finish.

Van Groningen racked up 30 kills, six blocks, 32 digs and three aces in the championship match, which Sterling lost in five sets. She also recorded 40 kills in the Lady Jets' semifinal win, was named the captain of the D-2 All-Tournament Team and was recognized as the NHSCA/GTM Sportswear Athlete of the Month for December. Van Groningen also holds the all-class state record for career digs (1,907) and the Class D-2 record for career kills (1,901).

Van Groningen was a four-year starter at shooting guard for the Lady Jets basketball team, averaging 15 points per game as a senior and scoring 1,127 career points. She concluded her high school career with a dominating performance in the state track and field meet, winning the Class D 100- and 300-meter hurdles crowns for the second straight year and also winning the 100-meter dash.

Seniors get home victory, struggle in 8-1 road defeat

The Wayne Seniors American Legion team played well in a win at home, but had troubles getting a similar outcome on the road in action last week.

On Wednesday, Gage Rethwisch tossed a one-hit shutout and struck out nine as the Wayne Seniors blanked West Point on the road, 6-0.

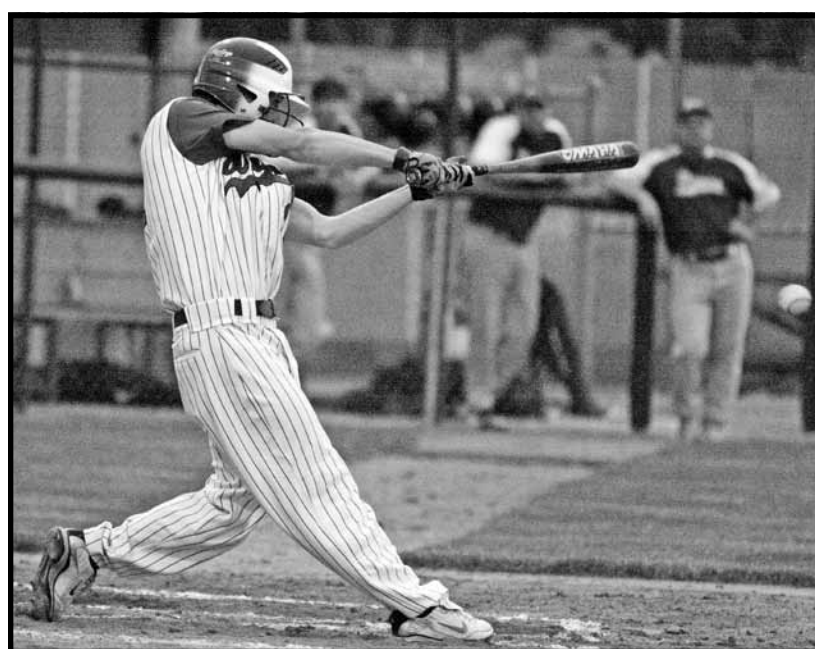

The Seniors broke a scoreless tie with three runs in the third, highlighted by a bases-clearing double by Jacob Zeiss. Wayne tacked on two more in the fifth and one in the seventh to come away with the win.

Wayne had six hits in the game, with Drew Carroll adding an RBI double. Rethwisch was never threatened on the mound, sprinkling a pair of walks into his complete-game gem.

On Sunday, errors and stranded runners hurt the Wayne Seniors as they dropped an 8-1 decision at Bennington.

Wayne did out-hit the hosts 8-6, but left 10 runners on base. Three errors on defense led to four unearned runs for Bennington, which dropped Wayne to 10-3 on the season.

highlight the Wayne offense. Trent Beza struck out three and allowed three hits in a losing effort on the mound, pitching 3 1/3 innings.

On Monday, the Seniors were set to battle Ponca in action at Hank Overin Field, but the game was stopped in the top of the third inning with Ponca leading 1-0. Coach Jeff Zeiss said the game would be continued at a later date.

The Wayne seniors host Chadron on Thursday, play at Wakefield on Friday and host South Sioux City on Monday.

10-under Devils qualify for Class C state tournament after 3-2 record at districts

The Wayne Dirt Devils 10-under team qualified for the state tournament after going 3-2 in district play over the weekend.

Wayne opened the tournament with a 16-3 loss to the Gretna Storm, putting them in a must-win situation for the remainder of the tournament.

"Despite what the score might say, the girls came out and played pretty well for the first game," coach Alesha Finkey said. "Tori Kniesche pitched very well with seven strikeouts, but Gretna hit all the open holes on the field."

Katelyn Grone hit a home run and Abby Ankeny singled and scored to highlight the offensive effort.

Wayne bounced back for a 9-0 win over Valparaiso, riding the no-hit pitching of Tori Kniesche. She struck out seven batters and allowed just one runner to reach base.

"The girls knew they'd have to battle back and they came out ready to play," Finkey said. Ankeny had a double and Annie Kniesche had two hits to highlight the effort for Wayne.

The Dirt Devils held on for a 4-3 win over Dodge to stay alive in the tournament. Annie Kniesche had two hits and Ankeny added a single. Tori Kniesche struck out five and allowed three hits and five walks to get the win in a tough losers bracket matchup.

Wayne's bats came alive in their next win, a 7-5 decision over the Scribner Red Rippers. Ankeny had two hits, including a triple, and scored two runs, while Josie Thompson hit a double to help Wayne to the win. Tori Kniesche struck out eight and walked four while allowing just one hit.

In their final game, Wayne met a similar fate to a similar opponent, as the Gretna Storm beat Wayne for the second time in the double-elimination tournament, taking a 15-1 decision.

"They had a great group of girls, but I think we should have been able to play with them a little better," Finkey said. "After losing the first game, the girls had to battle back and did so very well. They fought hard and finished eighth, which qualifies us for state."

The Dirt Devils 10-under team will play in the Class C state softball tournament July 7-9 in Grand Island.

Paddlefish season shut down due to river flooding

Due to unsafe conditions on the flooding Missouri River, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission closed the 2011 archery paddlefish season that was previously set to begin July 9 and run for 30 days. The commission took the action during a special teleconference Friday at agency headquarters in Lincoln. Nebraska Game and Parks will return permit fees to all 275 successful applicants who were awarded a permit via a drawing held May 9. All preference points for the applicants will be restored to where they were following the end of the 2010 season. The archery paddlefish season normally takes place on a 77-mile stretch of the Missouri River from Gavins Point Dam to the mouth of the Big Sioux River near Sioux City. The U.S. Coast Guard has closed this section of the river to all boat traffic due to flooding that is expected to last most of the summer.

Carroll teams compete

The Carroll softball teams hosted Laurel on Wednesday, June 15. In the 10-under game, Carroll lost to Laurel 20-9. The girls had a rough first four innings, but held Laurel in the last inning while scoring a few more runs to make the game a little closer. The 12-under team beat Laurel 12-11 behind Kelly Tweedy's eight strikeouts. The Carroll team did some great hitting in the bottom of the fifth to get the come-from-behind win. In the 14-under game, Carroll dropped a 7-3 decision. The score was 3-2 going into the last inning, and Laurel got some timely hits to win the game. Hannah Kenny pitched and had seven strikeouts.

Goodwill suspends trailer visits

Due to the flooding taking place in the Sioux City region at the present time, which is predicted to continue to affect this area for at least the next few months, officials with Goodwill Industries have made the decision to temporarily suspend the Ambassador program.

"For those of you who are in communities that were scheduled to receive an Ambassador trailer in the past few weeks, you are already aware that because our trailers have been needed in other places for humanitarian purposes, there have been instances when we have been unable to meet our obligations to your community," said Jenny Lindgren, Goodwill Ambassador coordinator.

Officials at Goodwill hope to have the Ambassador program back up and running this fall, but until flood waters recede and clean-up is well underway, they have no way of knowing what the need for their assistance in the region will be.

Those who have questions, can contact Goodwill Industries at (877) 608-7775, Lindgren said.

Tenants and landlords should communicate

As you all know, rental rates for cropland have increased dramatically over the past year. There are probably going to be some unfamiliar negotiations between landlords and tenants over the next several months as we plan for the next cropping season. Here are some tips from Alan Vyhnaek, Extension Educator from Columbus.

The key to positive relationships between landowners and tenants is open communication.

Cash rents have been increasing throughout the past six years, increasing between 75 and 90 percent depending on the classification of land. This will make it difficult to bring prices back down when and if commodity prices drop.

As a rule of thumb, landlords should receive between 25 and 30 percent of the gross per acre of crop. For example, the typical Nebraska irrigated corn field is 200 bushels per acre. If the local elevator price is around $7, the gross would be

Ag Happenings
Keith Jarvi
Extension Educator

$1,400. At a 25 percent share, that would be $350 per acre. Some landlords make that calculation and when rent is lower than the 25 to 30 percent range, they will think that they aren't getting a good deal.

Market volatility creates uneasiness between landlords and tenants when developing rental rates. Extreme market swings can overwhelm and stress both parties because they aren't sure what to do. By maintaining open and honest communication with each other, strong relationships can be developed and kept. Landlords and tenants should discuss expenses and intentions of both parties.

Some landlords are previous farmers, but they have lost track of current farmer expenses. Those expenses they used to have when they farmed have changed and gone up dramatically. Tenants need to express that fact to landlords.

Also, landlords may just want updates about their land to be able to share with their friends and family. Typically their land, their farm, is important to them and they want to be knowledgeable of what is going on.

In some cases, landlords and tenants should consider flexible cash rents, taking the market price and yields into account and adjusting rent either up or down. In any case, volatility of the corn and soybean markets has created some interesting side effects, one of them being the cash rental rates for farm ground.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Bank foreclosure turns the tables

Yours truly has been on vacation the past few days, and as is usually the case, chaos runs unchecked when I'm away.

From the "Man bites dog" department: a Florida couple turned the tables on an unsuspecting bank when they actually foreclosed on one of the bank's branches.

The family had paid cash for its home, yet was served with foreclosure papers by Bank of America. The case went to court, and the homeowners proved that they didn't owe the major bank a dime.

After more than five months, the bank had yet to pay the couple, so the couple's attorney turned the tables and seized the bank's assets, going so far as to have the sheriff's department serve papers and have two moving vans pull up to haul out computers, printers and the cash in the teller's drawers.

Republican presidential candidate Tim Pawlenty has an interesting vision for cutting taxes and reducing the size and scope of government operations.

His idea? Simple - if you can find a good or service by typing it in to Google, the federal government doesn't need to provide that service.

Here's the thing, though . . . I spent an afternoon typing in the name of every member of Congress in Google, and their respective websites were usually the first one listed in the search engine.

Is there a bigger waste of government resources than the current sitting members of the House and Senate? I would submit that there is not - and I think I've just found my choice for next year's election for President of the United States.

Two players who were starters on the nation's World Cup team last year, and three other players, were kicked out of the tournament after testing positive for clenbuterol, an anabolic agent used to treat breathing disorders.

The secretary general of the Mexican soccer federation claims the players ingested the drug after eating - brace yourselves - beef that was "contaminated" with the drug. He claims their ingesting the drug was done completely by accident.

In other shocking sports news, former Ohio State Terrell Pryor accidentally took possession of another car, and three of his personally autographed jerseys were accidentally sold on Ebay.

For those in the younger generation who seem to think wearing baggy clothing is a fashion statement comes this news item: a football player from the University of New Mexico was arrested and removed from a flight for wearing saggy pants on an airplane.

The young man was boarding a flight from San Francisco to Albuquerque, N.M., when an airport employee noticed his pants were below his buttocks and his boxer shorts were showing. He refused a request to pull up his pants and failed to comply when he was asked to get off the plane.

Let that be a lesson - if you don't want airline officials to see your undies in the airport, it's better to wear pants that don't require suspenders.

Or, better yet - take the train. Speaking of taking the train, yours truly made a trip to Denver via Amtrak, and the delays were such that I could have driven from here to Colorado in the time it took for me to wait for my train.

In Amtrak's defense, the train had to be re-routed due to the flooding on the Missouri River. There is a lot to be desired, though, with sitting in a train station overnight.

And finally, this just in from the "Thou shalt not steal my $8 beer nor nibble on my $6 hot dog" department: A lesbian couple that shared a quick smooch during a Minnesota Twins game was scolded by a security guard at the game.

The couple gave each other a peck on the lips, and the security guard came by to inform them that such public displays of affection were not welcome in the stadium.

"Here in the stadium, we adhere to the Ten Commandments," he reportedly told the couple. I'm confused - where does same-sex partners engaging in a quick game of kissy-face fall within the Ten Commandments? Is that under the one that says "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's cup holder?"

REMEMBER THE OZONE HOLE THREAT BACK IN THE 80s? MOST SCIENTISTS SAID "HUMAN ACTIVITY" CAUSED IT. MOST FOLKS AGREED BECAUSE RECORD HOLES WERE OCCURRING ALMOST EVERY YEAR. SO, THE WORLD GOT TOGETHER AND DID THE RIGHT THING.

IT WAS COSTLY, BUT WE CONTROLLED THE EMISSIONS. NON, THE HOLE IS SHOWING SIGNS OF SHRINKING. SO WE AVOIDED A GLOBAL CATASTROPHE.. FOR NOW.

GLOBAL WARMING IS A HOAX. J. Keller

Capitol View Flooding will be investigated

By ED HOWARD Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN - Floods are not forever, but it seems like if one of them invades your life and your home.

Beyond damage and destruction which is immediate and lingering, the aftermath of a flood is disgusting.

Disgusting, oftentimes, in a way that might be compared to what used to be called a diaper pail. And that is a mild analogy, chosen in the interest of family newspapers.

A flood isn't a spring rainstorm that floods your basement, although such is bad enough. A flood is filthy water that carries filthy stuff with it. It's muck and debris that will stink forever and, even if it doesn't, whenever you recall the flood the stink will come back to you.

Pray, if you're the sort who prays, that you never have to deal with a home that has been ravaged by floodwaters, but not ravaged enough to be written off as a total loss.

Once upon a time in Ohio, where floods are more common than football scandals, I regularly waded through the aftermath of the troublesome Ohio River, notebook in hand.

There was a memorable poor soul whose home - at least the entire first floor and most everything it contained - had virtually been warped.

"What are you going to do," I asked.

"I'm going to keep praying for a fire!"

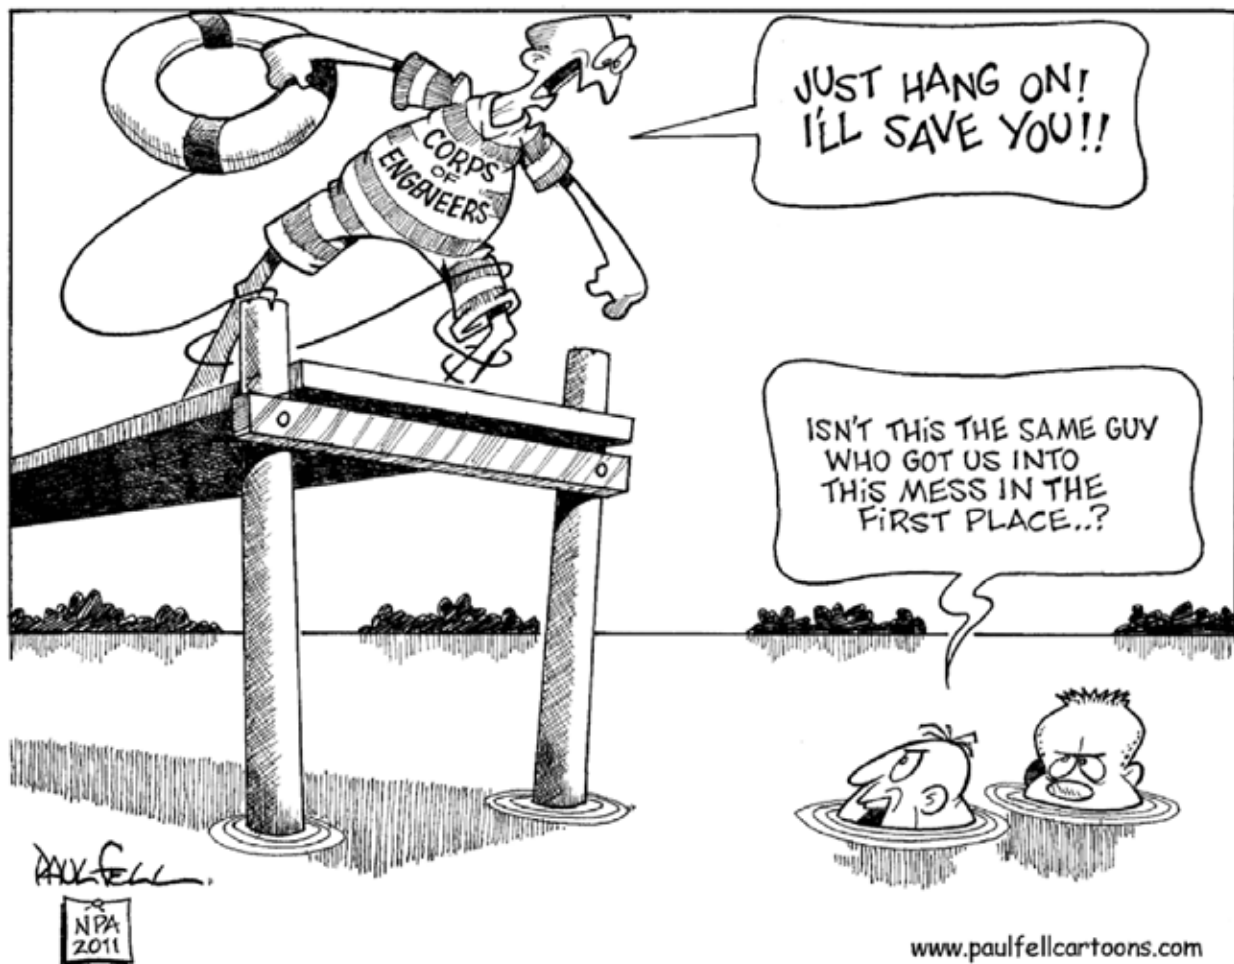

Legislative Update

Efforts being made to help flood victims

Though flooding continues to impact the communities along the Missouri River, the citizens of those communities and those from outlying areas continue to fight back and meet the challenge of protecting life, property, homes and businesses.

Some have said the magnitude of the flood of 2011 will most likely exceed that of the flood of 1952. Through it all, the citizens then and now have been able to come together and lift one another up to continue the pursuit of surviving through tough and horrible times.

Our State Capitol office has fielded a few calls on assistance needed to feed and house citizens being displaced by the flooding. Every effort is being made to answer the inquiries and set the wheels in motion to bring aid to the citizens. One such aid is anyone

www.paulfellcartoons.com

It's more than bad enough when nature slaps a flood on you.

Your stomach is likely to churn at a far higher rate, however, when you have reason to suspect that the damnable thing might have been avoided if some dunderheads had done their jobs.

In this instance, the suspected dunderheads are the people at the Army Corps of Engineers who were responsible for deciding when to

A good many landowners and officeholders want to know why the Corps didn't begin those releases a lot sooner, and perhaps avoiding the flood-level waters that have roiled through fields and communities.

Sens. Ben Nelson and Mike Johanns both want federal investigations into what happened, into whether the Corps did its job properly.

If decision-makers within the Corps did the right things, resulting in the best outcomes possible, the public needs to know it.

And if what we've seen represents the best outcomes that can be expected, the public needs to know that; and policymakers need to do something about it, if such is possible.

Legislative Update By Dave Bloomfield State Senator, District 17

Now is not the time to abandon that support - we have those who need assistance - let us be part of providing their most basic of needs.

Upcoming events in District 17:

In Wayne County - Carroll celebrates 125th July 1-3; Hoskins Independence Day parade 8 a.m. on July 4; Wayne Chicken Days July 8-10; Wayne County Fair is July 28-31.

In Dakota and Thurston counties - Emerson parade July 9 at 6 p.m.; Dakota/Thurston County Fair July 21-24; Winnebago Pow-Wow July 28-31.

Neighboring Dixon County Fair is July 30-Aug. 3.

Letters

Keep downtown area vital, support theatre

It is fantastic to see the fruition of all the hard work put in by the volunteer board and Melanie Loggins on the Majestic Theatre project. The facilities are something to be proud of.

Our family is really enjoying the convenience and good value of the weekly movies featured here. I especially appreciated the recent showing of "Gone With The Wind." It is just another example of how this group is generously giving back to the community.

I hope that residents of Wayne will take advantage of this opportunity to keep our downtown area vital. May we all continue to support this endeavor whenever possible with our presence, as well as continued contributions to complete the payment for the upgraded facilities.

Habitat for Humanity earns recognition as the sixth largest home builder

Efforts by Norfolk and Wayne Area Habitat for Humanity units to provide affordable housing has helped Habitat for Humanity International rank as the sixth largest homebuilder on Builder Magazine's top 100 list. With 6,032 closings in 2010, this is the second time Habitat for Humanity has placed in the top 10.

"Our placement on the Builder 100 list is a testament to what can be accomplished when people work together," said Larry Gluth, senior vice president of U.S. and Canada for Habitat for Humanity International. "So many families in the United States and around the world face an incredible need for affordable housing, and this need only increases during challenging economic times. Habitat works every day to help these families, and we are grateful for the generosity of our donors, volunteers and advocates who have joined our efforts to help families obtain safe, decent and affordable homes and to strengthen communities."

In 2010, Norfolk Area Habitat helped one family obtain affordable housing and they plan to finish four homes under construction this year. Since 1994, they have provided 20 homes. Wayne Area Habitat, which is an affiliate of the Norfolk Chapter, also completed a home in 2010, their third since 2001.

Fundraising efforts are underway for a fourth build.

"We are thrilled that our work to provide affordable housing has contributed to Habitat's ranking as the sixth largest builder in the United States," said Donna Rector, Executive Director at Norfolk Area Habitat. "We are proud to help families obtain affordable housing, and we thank our supporters for their commitment to helping families in need."

The Builder 100 list is an annual compilation of the largest homebuilders in the country. In 2009, Habitat for Humanity ranked eighth on the list with 5,294 closings, marking the first time the organization made it to the top 10.

For more information on the Wayne Area Habitat, contact John or Ann Witkowski at (402) 375-4509. The group meets on a monthly basis and conducts several fundraisers each year to support the home building projects.

Soda pop not catchall for health issues

Despite what some studies — like a recent study by the London Imperial College School of Public Health — may say, soda pop is not the catchall for health issues.

People shouldn't jump the gun and let one study navigate their approach to health and fitness before having all of the necessary information. Some studies only distract from clinically proven approaches to lowering the risk for hypertension and heart disease: diet and exercise.

Until there's a trend where different research groups find the same results, people should be careful about accepting findings in all studies. People should be aware and get a variety of opinions before latching onto one study's results.

Soda pop has long been said to be the cause of some sort of health issue. At one time, sodium levels in soda pop were believed to cause hypertension, so companies removed all or most of the sodium, though there wasn't much sodium in soda pop to begin with.

There also have been rumors about the effects from aspartame in diet soda, but there has never been any clinically designed research about the sugar substitute. Eating healthy is the bottom line. Moderation and balancing calories — what goes in and out — is the key.

In the United States, when children enter middle school, most of them stop drinking milk and start drinking more soda pop, which is nothing but sugar and calories. Milk is filled with necessary nutrients, such as magnesium, potassium and calcium. Some people not getting those important nutrients have increased risk of hypertension. That doesn't necessarily mean it's soda pop causing the problem, but maybe the soda pop is displacing some nutrient-rich foods that could protect against hypertension.

As long as food choices are made wisely, one soda pop a day combined with nutrient-dense foods — such as low-fat dairy, fruits, vegetables, whole grains and lean meat — most likely won't be bad.

Residential Sales

The home inspector's report scared us beyond belief; what do we do?

Sound familiar? In many cases after reading a home inspector's report, buyers are understandably nervous and unsure about moving forward. Are home inspectors are trying to scare buyers? No, it's their job to find every imperfection and list it as well as the positives on their report to the potential buyer. However, when a home's every imperfection is listed in brutal detail, the effect can be daunting to say the least.

So what can buyers do? There are 3 things to focus on when reading a home inspector's report.

1. Stick to the facts. Do not assume anything unless it is proven by a licensed person including making sure the home inspector is licensed. Get a second opinion if necessary.

2. Know which imperfections are structural and which are cosmetic. Cosmetic imperfections do not affect the overall integrity of the house, can be fixed over time and should not be cause for major concern. Structural imperfections may require further investigations. Although, even structural imperfections can be remedied; it's a matter of whether the buyer and seller can come together on how to accomplish that.

3. Realize that every home has imperfections even new construction.

So, read the report, keep the facts in mind, and make an informed decision about what you can live with and what needs to be fixed. What do you think? Email me your comments at: wendy@mwlc.net.

Wayne group volunteers at Orphan Grain Train

Recently, a group from Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne volunteered at the Orphan Grain Train warehouse in Norfolk.

The nine volunteers logged 32 hours for Orphan Grain Train by sorting, and packing clothing, toy-stuffed animals, bedding and linens, making boxes for packing, loading a container with clothing, school and medical supplies, school desks and etc. for shipment and rearranging items within the warehouse.

Groups are welcome to volunteer at the charity organization. The Orphan Grain Train, located at 601 West Philip Avenue, may be contacted at (402) 371-7393.

Donations of good-clean clothing, as well as many other items that are in good condition, are accepted at the warehouse office Monday through Friday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

A receipt for income tax is given upon request.

Many hands

Volunteers at St. Mary's Catholic Church helped install the pews in the church building last week. Earlier this month, the pews were removed so that the carpeting in the church could be replaced. The carpeting that was removed was installed when the church was built in 1970. In addition to the carpeting, the church was repainted, pews varnished and kneelers replaced.

Going wild for Jesus

Grace Lutheran Church went wild this summer and journeyed with Jesus during their annual Vacation Bible School. Over 50 youth were assigned tribes and led on daily expeditions by their leaders. They trekked among trees, waterfalls, and wild animals. The adventurers rested at base camps strategically placed and listened to stories by campfire, sang songs, devoured delicious snacks, and crafted souvenirs from their journeys. On closing night the tribes acted skits and performed songs for their parents.

Public invited to Praise Assembly of God activities

The congregation of Praise Assembly of God is inviting everyone in the community to join them for any of the worship and Bible Study meetings during the next week.

The Sunday morning Sunday School class continues at 9:30 a.m. Its discussion about "Unity in the Body of Christ" with the study of Psalm 133. This has sparked a lively interchange between attendees to the class as the group considers the meaning of the opening verse which says, "Behold: how good and pleasant it is for brothers to dwell together in unity."

The morning worship service, starting at 10:30 a.m., begins with worship led by Ernest Bratcher and Phil Pfaltzgraff, Wayne State staff accompanist. This Sunday, June 26 service has a special Missions Offering during the service.

The pastor at Praise Assembly of God, Rev. Dennis Preston, and his wife Martha, drive from Omaha each week to be a part of the ministry of the church. Rev. Preston will be speaking in the morning service as well as in the evening worship, which starts at 6:30 p.m.

The midweek Bible Study is on Thursdays from 7-8 p.m. in the "Fireside Room." The topic of the current study is the "Little Books with Major Themes." This is a study of the four, one-chapter books in the New Testament. Last week the study was on the book of Philemon and was entitled "The Relationship that Supersedes." Next week, June 30, the study will be on the book of 2nd John and is entitled "Guard What You've Got!"

Saturday evening is an Hour of Prayer meeting held in the sanctuary of the church from 7-8 p.m. This is a time for personal prayer and waiting on the Lord.

Psalm 122:1 begins with the words of the writer: "I was glad when they said unto me, 'Let us go to the house of the Lord.'" It's great to gather together for worship of God, prayer and fellowship with one another.

Bathtub experience frightening

This townhouse has three bathrooms, one more than I believe is necessary. But it is nice to have a "guest lavatory" that stays clean for company. It also has the only tub in the place. Obviously, as we get older, we prefer the walk-in shower.

There are two things about this tub. It is deep, deeper than the usual, because it also has jets. And it is surrounded on all three sides by mirrors! Yes, mirrors, by which you can see yourself in all of nature's glory. It sits beside the toilet, so that, too, can be observed in a mirror. Who in the world thought of this???

We had many discussions about what to do, from curtains to etching, to paint, even. Finally, I just bought some opaque contact paper and put it in strategic places. After all, we seldom use either the tub or the stool, so it doesn't bother us.

I even had the electrician work on the jets when he was here for something else. I got to thinking about those jets the other night when my muscles were aching. I thought, maybe some hot water and massage would ease my aches and pains. Why not?

I used LOC, the Amway liquid cleaner, in the tub when the kids were small because it is so kind to the skin. I always keep some on hand. I turned on the water, put in a cap of LOC, got a magazine to read, turned on the jets (which are on the far wall since the tub is surrounded by glass) and got in.

The Farmer's Wife
By: Pat Meierhenry

The jets roared, the bubbles formed, and before I realized what was happening, they were getting very high! The Big Farmer was soaking his feet, so he wasn't in a position to come and turn off the jets. And the bubbles just kept getting higher . . . and higher! Soon, all I could see in the mirror at the head of the tub was my head, and the bubbles were in danger of going over the side!

Let me tell you, those movie scenes that looks so romantic are frightening! I was about to drown in bubbles! And it is not easy for an older lady to crawl out of a tub. But I managed, and left bubble foot steps on the floor as I finally got to the knob on the wall and turned off those darned jets! The magazine was wet, and after I dried off, I let the water out. There were still bubbles in the thing the next morning.

I shared this story with my neighbor yesterday, and after she quit laughing at the thought, she informed me she could not get out of her tub the last time she was in it, many years ago, and she's never been in it since. She thinks the thing is dangerous. She may be right!

Process not difficult

Evergreen trees benefit from pruning

Evergreen trees (conifers) may benefit from pruning, whether they're being grown for landscape trees around the home or for Christmas trees.

Pruning evergreen trees is primarily done to maintain and enhance the natural form and symmetry of the tree, to prevent the tree form growing too wide or tall or to develop more dense foliage. Pruning should follow the natural lines of the tree as closely as possible. This means cutting back individual shoots and not pruning the tree to a formal shape. The objective should be to maintain a natural look, but still control size and general shape of the tree.

Pruning evergreens is not difficult. However, it is important to remember the basics of pruning. Use sharp pruning equipment and make clean pruning cuts. Common pruning shears or special shearing knives are common pruning tools to shape conifers.

Before any shaping is done, the first pruning cuts should be to remove any dead or damaged branches. Only then should shaping begin. It is best to make shaping cuts only in the current season's growth. If branches are cut back behind live foliage, new needles will not be produced and the branch will die.

When shaping evergreen trees, the time to prune varies between coniferous species. Junipers, cedars, spruces and firs may be pruned any time of year, but best results or from October 1 to April 1 during the dormant season. These species produce buds all along their branches. If you prune back to their buds, foliage will develop from the buds along the branches.

Pines, on the other hand, produce a cluster of buds only at the end of the current season's growth.

Therefore, pines should be shaped from about May 15 to July 15, during the growing season, to ensure adequate bud set after pruning. If trimmed too early, too many buds may occur. If trimmed too late, few, if any, buds may set for next year's growth.
