TIME TO GET IN THAT HOLIDAY STATE OF MIND

(Photos by Clara Osten) Prior to last weekend's snow, area residents had ideal conditions to get holiday decorations in place. Above, the Carol Bauermeister home, located southwest of Wayne, contains an assortment of holiday decorations including candles, reindeer, a lighted nativity scene and hundreds of lights. Inside her home, more than 200 angels have been used for decorating. At right, Saturday's snow created a Christmascard like scene at the corner of Seventh and Main Streets. The day-long snow storm dumped nearly five inches of snow in the Wayne area. Cold temperatures this week will mean the snow will result in area residents having a white Christmas.

Interlocal deal for police services draws criticism

By CLARA OSTEN Of the Herald

The issue of an interlocal agreement with South Sioux City for law enforcement service for the city of Wayne created considerable discussion at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Prior to discussion. Mayor Ken Chamberlain stressed that "in order to dispel rumors that have been spreading, this is not an attempt to 'clean house' or an attempt to be prepared for a walkout of current officers.'

Chamberlain said the police department is currently short three police officers and two dispatchers, making it difficult for those who are part of the department to take time off.

"With the holidays coming, we would like our employees to have the option to take time off if they would like. With officers working 12-hour shifts, we don't necessarily like the idea of them working double shifts," Chamberlain said.

Officer Brian Swanson, who is president of the Fraternal Order of Police, spoke to the council with a list of concerns he and fellow officers have with the proposal.

"We have been shorthanded since February. Why is this all of a sudden a concern? Why hasn't anyone asked how we are doing and why hasn't a meeting been held for us to discuss what is going on in the department?" Swanson said.

He also questioned the plan to sign a fouryear contract with South Sioux City and asked why Wayne police officers haven't Sunnyview Park and was able to purchase been asked to work overtime, rather than paying South Sioux City officers. He said in recent weeks he has been turned down for overtime hours.

"In December of 2010 the Fraternal Order of Police asked to sit down and talk with city officials and no one did," he said.

Officer Jessica Boyles echoed Swanson's statements, expressing concern that a meeting between the police department and city officials hasn't taken place. She also expressed a willingness to work overtime if necessary.

Wendi Consoli, whose husband, Dominic, is an officer with the department, told the council "as family members of officers, we know that, sometimes, family has to be put on hold. I speak for my husband when I say that he would be willing to put in over-

After discussion, the council voted to table the issue until members of the department have had time to discuss the issue.

Cable company working on local station negotiations

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

Officials with American Broadband expressed concern that cable television customers in Wayne could lose access to some regional TV stations in 2012.

The cable carrier has been in negotiations with companies representing broadcast stations in Sioux City and Omaha that provide programming for over-air networks ABC, NBC, CBS, Fox and CW. The cable company and station representatives are negotiating the fees the cable company pays the stations for the right to carry them on Wayne's cable system. The current package. agreement runs through the end of the year, and if an agreement is not reached, the company may have to drop some of those stations from its broadcast lineup.

Since 1992, the federal government has given local network TV affiliates the right to grant or deny cable operators use of their signals, in addition to exclusivity in the market. This gives broadcast companies operators over retransmission fees, which are generally renewed every three years.

Shawn Hanson, president and general manager of American Broadband, said that customers deserve access to the regional TV stations, but the company rejects increasing cable costs for subscribers to pay for increased transmission fees to local above the local citizens," he said.

Kay Peterson, marketing manager for American Broadband, told The Wayne Herald Wednesday that agreements have been reached with all four Sioux City television stations - KPTH, KTIV, KCAU and KMEG - and work is continuing on the three Omaha stations in the Wayne cable package - KMTV, KETV and WOWT.

At issue is the rates the local stations are demanding from cable companies. These rates are passed on to customers, and American Broadband is trying to minimize the amount of rate increase they must charge to keep the stations in its local cable

"This isn't exclusive to American Broadband, though," Peterson said. "This is a nationwide situation, and every three years the broadcasters have a right to renegotiate contracts with the cable and dish satellite companies. Anybody who transports their signal is in negotiations with these stations," she said.

Peterson said she didn't want to speculate an advantage in negotiations with cable on the final outcome regarding the Omaha stations. She said more information about negotiations with the Omaha stations would be known within the next week or so.

An online petition is being promoted that would encourage the Obama Administration to address and revamp outdated broadcast television laws, Peterson said. Warner attends Cowboy Mounted Shooting World Shoot

By JESSIE WARNER Special to the Herald

Jessie Warner, daughter of Jack and Rhonda Warner of Allen, attended the Cowboy Mounted Shooting Association (CMSA) World Shoot in October after a summer of attending shoots across the Midwest to obtain points to qualify. This is the third year of competition for Jessie and her horse, Dixie, and their first year to attend the big shoot.

Mounted shooting is the fastest growing equine sport. It combines speed and .45 caliber pistols shooting black powder blanks, to hit targets, which are balloons, as fast and as smooth as possible. There are over 60 different courses to draw from, so it is not the same pattern every run. Horses are accustomed

'We really started working together a year ago when we had our first win at the Iowa State Shoot in 2010. Everything just really started clicking after that!" said Jessie.

Jessie and Dixie had a great year. Wins were gained at the Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming, and Colorado State Shoots. The team picked up more wins at smaller shoots. They were also the Nebraska Ladies High Point win-

With each shoot, points are accumulated. Riders qualify for the World Shoot based on the number of points earned. Jessie and Dixie had a great time at the World Shoot. They finished strong in a class of 32 ladies from across the United States and Canada. "It was truly a learning experience to run in an arena that big under the lights. Dixie did amazing, but my nerves got the best of me. I learned a lot and met friends, which is the best part of the sport!"

There are six levels for men, women, senior men, and senior women, in addition to Wrangler classes for the youth. To move to the next level, a rider must acquire four wins in their class. Jessie started the year as a Ladies Level 1 with one win. She is now a Ladies Level 2 with three wins.

"Not too bad for a girl who grew up milking cows and really started to ride horses when she bought her guns!" she said.

Jessie has plans to continue her way up the Levels. She is working on training a second horse to shoot, improving Dixie, and just started practicing to compete in the rifle competitions, which has been her goal since she started shooting.

"The CMSA is an association that is truly family oriented. The whole family can compete, including Grandpa, Grandma, Dad, Mom, and the kids. Many families plan their vacation around shoots, me included. This is a sport that anyone can compete in. It is for the weekend pleasure rider up to pro-

County hears jail study update

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

Thurston County officials are looking for help from their neighbors to help in the building of a regional jail facility.

At Tuesday's Wayne County Commissioners meeting, Leonard Peters, chairman of the Thurston County Board of Supervisors, discussed a jail study that the county has conducted to help address jail issues within a fourcounty area that includes Cuming and Burt counties, as well as the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Peters said he has talked with Wavne County Sheriff LeRoy Janssen about the need for more jail beds in the area, and is hopeful that the counties that were part of the study can help with financing for the facility.

"(Janssen) said he would be interested in housing prisoners with us, but I'm going to be frank with you, if we can't get commitments from Wayne County and Cuming County – and Burt County has also showed some interest – we will be unable to do this," Peters said.

Community commitment prompted the Nebraska State Historical Society's State Historic Office to fund Alley Poyner Macchietto Architecture of Omaha to do the exacting support research necessary for successful National Register nomination.

Mine's Jewelry at 204 Main Street was recognized as a particular gem. Also noted by the Nebraska Historical Society are the buildings on the west side of Main Street, just south of Third Street. These impressive masonry buildings were all constructed after a fire destroyed their predecessors in 1891. Also recognized were the two railroad depots built in 1883 and 1920, the old city hall, and the grain elevators who also have an intriguing history.

The Wayne Commercial Historic District does tell compelling stories about the past, but it also represents an opportunity for the future. By recognizing historic main streets, communities can preserve history and facilitate economic sustainability. Many of the members of the Wayne Street Wayne, now also know as the Revitalize Wayne committee of WAED, viewed this selection as a possible growth area for our community. In fact, it was a main reason the volunteers worked so diligently on collecting the research and completing the application work. National statistics show that travelers may travel from 50 to 100 miles out of their way to visit a designated historic district. Other statistics and research reveal that many people will often build their vacations around visits to designated historic districts. If these statistics are accurate, a terrific opportunity was staring us in the face.

The committee recognized this and was hopeful that we could be the group that could start the strategic planning toward an end where we could have a show place for visitors to visit and that we could offer them planned historic tours and all the amenities that make for a good visit or vacation.

Progress has been slow and volunteers few and far between. At a committee meeting Dr. Tony Kochenash has stepped forward to volunteer to research historic plaques for our buildings and to begin writing script for historical tours. Tony and his wife, Marie, have purchased the first plaque in hopes that having the plaque on the wall outside of Swans Apparel may peak interest on the part of historic building owners and the committee can gain greater interest and volunteerism for the project.

In the near future the city of Wayne will be appointing a committee that will begin the new year working on recommendations to present to the city council on historic preservation ideas for the downtown area. Many of the members of this committee will come from WAED's Revitalize Wayne Committee and this may be a start to fulfilling the dreams that many had when we first started the work to get designated a Commercial Historic District.

Does the city of Wayne need this? Yes, if we are to continue to progress as a city to live in and to visit.

Cemetery Board to begin fundraiser

Foundation will soon begin its annual fundraising campaign.

The funds generated from this year's campaign will be used for road replacement and general upkeep of the cemetery property.

"The first roads in the cemetery were put in place in 1922. We plan to start with the areas that are the worst and continue to replace what we can," said Steve Gross, a member of the Greenwood Cemetery Board.

Gross said that the Cemetery Board operates with the interest generated from money in the cemetery's Perpetual Fund as well as with monies raised from services the cemetery provides.

"The actual money in the Perpetual Fund is untouchable for use at the cemetery. We are only able to use the interest generated and with the economy the way it has been in recent years, very little is generated. This is the major reason we need to do a fundraiser that were damaged by lightning throughout the community and the or storms, disease or needed to be surrounding area," he said.

Gross reminds those who have loved ones buried at the cemetery that the monuments and stone settings are personal items and when a grave is purchased, it becomes personal property.

"This is a good time to look at the stones and see that they are stable, safe and the way you want them,' Gross said.

The Cemetery Association is not responsible for damage to monuments or stones, caused by vandalism but Gross noted that most are covered under a homeowners' insurance policy, provided that they belong to the primary owner of the cemetery property. It is always a good idea to check with your insurance provider for coverage.

Loss of focus can bust hopes

As you may (or may not) know, The Bleacher Bum is a card player. While we can sit around a poker table and argue from here to the end of time about whether or not poker is a sport (I would argue that it has some of the ingredients of a sport, but won't go along with the idea that it actually is), yours truly did something I have never, in almost 30 years in the newspaper business, tried before - I took the first weekend of winter sports season off.

Of course, this wasn't just a restand-relaxation kind of weekend for me. I earned a trip to Las Vegas to play in a free national tournament sponsored by the North Dakotabased Free Poker Network.

I qualified through playing in a weekly tournament at The Max, one of three area establishments that sponsors (or have sponsored) FPN tournaments. From there, I was able to qualify for a regional tournament, and managed to make it to the state tournament where I earned the trip to the national tournament by placing in the top two of a 65-player tournament in mid-October.

There was a lot of buzz surrounding my arrival in Vegas. As one of two players who earned double chip stacks, I was actually one of the "players to watch" when the tournament started.

Like any real athlete, I spent a lot of time in practice and preparation for this event. I came in with a game plan (tight, aggressive play) and was executing it very well through the first part of the tournament.

But as anybody who's experienced the highs and lows in any competition will tell you – you can't lose focus. You need to stay in the game mentally and not lose sight of what is going on in the field of play. Do it at the wrong time, and you'll go from hero to zero in no time flat. And that's exactly what I did.

I found myself, coincidentally, in a hand with the other doublestacked player midway through the tournament. We both had built our stacks to more than double our starting 20,000 chips (everybody else started with 10,000), and we were head-to-head in a hand where I flopped the best hand, a pair of 10's with a queen kicker.

On the turn, a seven was turned over, which didn't seem to bother me as I bet two-thirds of the pot. My opponent studied the board with a frustrated look on her face, and after a moment's deliberation, announced that she was all-in.

For whatever reason - I lost focus of the situation. The cards on the board included a 10, 8 and 7, which leaves the potential for two combinations to make a straight. None of these possibilities entered into my mind as I tried to determine what hand my opponent was holding and whether or not she might be bluffing. After a minute of contemplation, I called her allin check-raise and she showed me that she wasn't bluffing – she had an unbeatable hand, or what we call in poker, "the nuts."

My top pair was dead to her J-9 that gave her the straight, and I saw about 80 percent of my chip total move to her side of the table. On the next hand, I moved all-in preflop with A-K, only to be called by pocket queens by the big blind. With no Ace or King on the board, my day was done and I was eliminated in 38th place out of 75 competitors.

Saving the arguments about whether or not poker is a game of skill or a gambling device that shouldn't be allowed to exist within our state's borders (don't get me started on the hypocrites who have a problem with poker, yet are the first in line to buy Powerball, scratch-off tickets or keno cards - complete games of chance with little to no skill required), I learned a good lesson about keeping your focus in difficult situations, lessons that can be applied anywhere in

The Blue Devils went on the road and overcame a key injury and a 19-0 third-quarter run by the Cardinals to post a 55-51 win in Thursday's season opener.

Coach Nate Wall said the start to the season was big for the team, and he was impressed with the focus his team showed.

"I was really impressed with how the girls had so much focused energy," he said. "They came out and knew exactly what they had to do, and we really played to our strengths and that helped us fight through that 19-0 run they had."

The Blue Devils jumped out to a 14-5 lead after one quarter and increased that lead to 11 points by halftime, using their quickness and defensive pressure to put the Cardinals in a 31-20 hole at intermission.

"We just played a lot harder than they did the first half," Wall said. "We ran the floor well and our press created opportunities, and we crashed the offensive boards and really caught them off guard with our quickness."

After the game, Wall said the atmosphere in the locker room was one of jubilation.

"It was complete madness in there, and to see the excitement in the girls' eyes is something I'll never forget," he said.

Katie Hoskins led three Blue Devils in double figures with 16 points, Marissa Fallesen had 14 points and Jalyn Zeiss put in 12. Wayne forced 29 turnovers, and Schweers led the team in rebounds with eight.

Wayne State's Jennifer Kalbfell drives toward the basket during the Wildcats' win over Southwest Minnesota State, the Wildcats' 33rd consecutive in Rice Auditorium.

Wildcat women keep streak going with 33rd straight win

By TRAVIS CORLEY Of The Herald

The fourth-ranked Wayne State women's basketball team opened conference play last weekend with victories against Minnesota State and Southwest Minnesota State.

"It felt good for a day, we really enjoyed it on Tuesday," coach Chris Keilsmeier said of the team's highest ranking in school history. "It's good to be in the national spotlight, but the only ranking that matters is the one at the end of the year.'

Clare Duwelius scored 14 points to lead a host of double-digit scorers for the Wildcats in a 78-60 win over Minnesota State on Friday.

Ali Schwartzwald had a beautiful start to Friday night's game. The senior point guard scored five of Wayne State's first nine points, and also dished out an assist to Ashley Arlen. Schwartwald finished the night with 10 points and five assists.

Midway through the first half, the Wildcats gained their largest lead of the half at 22-15 following a jump shot by Jennifer Kalbfell. With five minutes left before the break, Schwartzwald's jumper gave the Wildcats their first double-digit lead, 32-22.

Down 14 points with under four minutes to play in the opening half, the Mavericks tried to get back in it with a 3-pointer, but Duwelius followed with one of her own to give the Wildcats a 39-25 cushion.

Wayne State led 44-33 at the break, and held a double-digit lead throughout much of the second half after the Mavericks got within six at 47-41. Wayne State outplayed the Mavericks from there to claim its 32nd consecutive home victory.

Eva Benson finished with 13 points and four rebounds from the center position. Arlen scored 12 points and grabbed seven rebounds. Alisha Brown added 12 points.

On Saturday, Duwelius carried Wayne State in the first half before Arlen took over after the break, helping the Wildcats defeat the Mustangs 78-58 for the team's 33rd straight home win.

Arlen's 23 points and 10 rebounds led the Wildcats. In the first half, Arlen was quiet and scored just three points, but Duwelius made up for it by scoring 16 of her 21 points in the opening half, as the Wildcats were leading by three, 33-30. Duwelius torched the Mustangs with her dominant play, shooting 66 percent behind the arc.

"She's in a great comfort zone. She's improved on both ends of the court," said Keilsmeier. "She's also a great leader off the court."

The Mustangs didn't stand a chance against the Wildcats' defense in the second half. As a result, the Wildcats outscored the Mustangs 45-28 to come away with the easy win.

life, including the sports arena.

There are a lot of distractions our area athletes have, not just inside the lines, but out there in the real world. From homework to family, friends, girl/boyfriends and personal interests, there are a lot of things out there that can take kids away from the goals they are pursuing as student-athletes.

There are some potential state champions within our midst this winter, both on the basketball floor and the wrestling mat. School concerns, injuries and outside forces will all do their part to try and distract them from the goals they've set. It is up to them, with the help of their coaches, to keep that focus from here to season's end. One slip-up can completely change the outcome and, like my hopes for a national poker championship. eliminate the dream in an instant.

Winter sports, like a good poker tournament, is a long and grueling grind. Between the length of time, the cold weather and the challenges on and off the court, it takes a lot of focus for these young athletes to compete and work toward their goals. Here's hoping that when it's time for them to go all-in, our area athletes can come out on top and not go bust in their quest for success.

Tough weekend for Wayne State men

Of The Herald

It was a tough weekend for the Wayne State men's basketball team. The Wildcats gave a valiant effort against the two-time defending Sun Conference champions before falling short at home to Minnesota State 65-60 in the NSIC opener for both teams.

Wayne State followed that with a disappointing effort Saturday, losing to Southwest Minnesota State 73-54 to fall to 1-5 overall and 0-2 in the NSIC.

"We faced two very rich tradition programs this past weekend in Rice," said coach Paul Combs. "Our inexperience really showed at times during both contests.

Army Shelby led the way with 23 points as the only Wildcat player to reach double-figures in scoring in the loss to the Mavericks.

Minnesota State held the largest of the half at four, 11-7 with 14 minutes left before the half as scoring between both teams in the first half remained close.

The Mavericks were up by a point with a minute left, but the Wildcats answered with a 3-pointer from Derrell Williams. As time expired, the Mavericks had one more opportunity to score but failed, as the shot bounced off the rim. The Wildcats walked into the locker room with a two-point advantage, leading 28-26 at the half.

Following the break, Vontrell Seroyer found Williams for a wide open two-point basket.

Laurel-Concord/Coleridge both brought home a little wrestling hardware for their efforts Saturday at the season-opening Creighton Invitational.

The Wildcats finished fifth overall in the 18-team tournament and earned two individual titles and five medals on the day. The Bears were 11th overall and had three medalists for their efforts.

"I felt very good about the overall performance at Creighton," Winside coach Paul Sok said. "We met quite a few district teams, along with some strong Class C teams and a top 10-rated team from South Dakota. With only covering half the weights, I thought we were very competitive with having three finalists and two champions.

Forrest Jones (160) and Coltin Brokaw (170) both came away with individual titles Saturday. Jones posted a 9-0 major decision over Miles Semmler of Parkston, S.D., while Jones was a 4-2 overtime winner over Spencer Smith of Neligh-Oakdale in a tightlycontested match.

"Forrest totally domianted his weight class from beginning to end, and Coltin was much more controlled than he has been in advantage," Sok said.

Brady Wurdeman came away with runner-up honors at 106 pounds, losing to a very tough Blake Bietz of Parkston by technical fall

"Brady wrestled aggressively throughout the meet, but he got caught in the wrong position a few times in the finals and it was hard to recover," Sok said.

Brian Gruenke finished fourth at 152 pounds, and Caleb Lienemann was fifth at 182 pounds to account for Winside's other two medals.

The Bears didn't have any wrestlers reach the finals, but Austin Roach had a solid outing and came away with consolation honors at 160 pounds, defeating Viktor Jonseth of Neligh-Oakdale 6-4 in the consolation finals. Roach was joined by Teammates

Ethan Hirschman, a fourth-place finisher at heavyweight; and Brett Haisch, who came away with a sixth-place medal at 170 pounds.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Drive careful, and watch out for cops

It's that time of year – winter has made its presence felt here in Wayne,

It's also that time of year when we seem to get the kind of advice that seems a little too obvious for the vast majority of us intelligent-thinking members of the human species.

Have you ever noticed how often people will encourage you to drive safely during this time of year? It's as if the temperature drops, the snow flies, and we suddenly forget what we're supposed to do when we get

I've been driving in Nebraska weather for the better part of 30 years, and there has not been one time that I have even given thought to driving in a reckless manner (although, admittedly, I wound up doing it on several occasions during my wild and crazy, alcohol-fueled, young adult years).

Who gets behind the wheel and says to him or herself, "Gee, today seems like a good day to drive like a bat out of hell. I think I'll be as reckless and menacing on the roads as I possibly can without causing serious injury, at

And yet, here's my mom, calling me on the phone prior to my departure for last weekend's poker tournament in Las Vegas, reminding me to take care while I drive to the airport in Omaha.

"Drive careful, honey," she said to me.

Gee, mom – I thought to myself – it had never occurred to me to drive any other way. However, now that you bring it up, I think today's the day I'll drive 100 miles an hour, on the wrong side of the road, passing vehicles in the no passing zone and turning left on a red light instead of right.

Now my dad, who I evidently picked up all my driving DNA from, never offers me advice on driving. When I let him know I'm coming up to visit, his answer is usually something along the lines of, "We'll see ya' when ya' get here, son" - he doesn't concern himself with HOW I get there, just that I get there. I can drive like a little old lady, or do my best Kyle Busch impersonation after he rams Tony Stewart or Carl Edwards into a wall at Talladega – it doesn't matter to him, so long as I reach my destination.

My best friend's dad was equally dismissive about his son's driving, but always offered some rather important advice whenever my friend hit the highway: "Watch out for the cops, they love those out-of-towners." And when you're not driving with care, that really should be one of the things you should keep an eye on, because it's a pretty good bet that, no matter whether it's the local cop or a State Patrolman, they are going to pull you over if they catch you driving carelessly.

Even funnier, though, is the driving advice you get when you've been out of town for a few days - it's as if you suddenly forgot all about driving in Nebraska during the winter while you were playing poker for a few days

All day on Sunday, as I waited in the airport for my flight home, I kept getting calls and text messages from friends and family back in Nebraska "Roads are bad, be careful driving home."

"Look out for the heavy fog - going to be really slick out there."

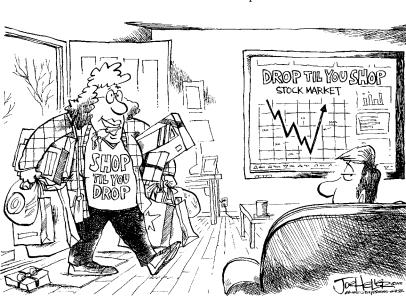

"Snow and ice all over road, wouldn't drive home tonight if I were you." "Cars in the ditch, driving treacherous. Stay in Omaha and drive home n the morning.' Hey, the only thing I lost in Vegas was - well, let's just say that what happens in Vegas STAYS in Vegas – but suffice to say that I did manage to keep my winter driving capabilities. Now I realize that all of this advice is coming from people who mean well and care about my safety. They don't want me to become another statistic and get hurt or killed in a car accident, especially during the holidays. But give me a break - I'm fully aware of what the road conditions are like, and have 30 years of training while driving in weather much worse than that which hit the area this past weekend. I'll be fine – in fact, I made it home with a little fog, no ice and no blowing or drifting snow to speak of.

As for the rest of you, I'll pass on the advice for you as a friendly reminder drive careful . . . and watch out for those cops.

Newspapers cover community

By MARY KAY QUINLAN Bureau Chief Nebraska News Service

LINCOLN—People who follow the news and public policy-making got a big surprise this week with the announcement that Omaha's most famous businessman, Warren Buffett, was buying the Omaha World-Herald. It was a move widely praised because it keeps Nebraska's largest newspaper in Nebraska ownership.

Less widely heralded - perhaps unheralded outside the journalism college—was an employment notice that the Gannett Company, one of the nation's biggest media empires, plans to hire more than 30 people in Des Moines to consolidate page design for 21 Gannett newspapers.

Full disclosure: I used to work for both companies, spending 10 years from the mid-1970s to mid-1980s as a reporter in the World-Herald's Washington Bureau, followed by five years as a regional correspondent for seven small Gannett newspapers in the

Legislative Update

Health and Human Services at work

The Thanksgiving break is over, Human Services Committee is back at work.

The Health Committee, along with the Legislature's Appropriations Committee, met on Tuesday in Lincoln to hear testimony on LR282, a resolution studying the Nebraska Health Care Funding Act. This Act was established in 2001 with Nebraska's share of the national tobacco settlement agreement and with funds Nebraska collected through a Medicaid billing loophole. The fund was supposed to pay for health-related needs with its earnings for generations.

We were informed Tuesday that the Health Care Funding Act is declining in value, and will probably run out of money if current trends continue. Unfortunately, more money is going out of the fund than is coming back in. The federal government closed the Medicaid loophole in 2005 the tobacco settlement amounts are projected to keep shrinking, and the volatile investment climate is not good. These things are all part of the reason for the decline in income to the fund.

The Nebraska Health Care and the Legislature's Health and Funding Act is in part paying for health needs biomedical research, children's insurance, public health, behavioral health care, developmental disability services, and respite care. Legislators were told that the fund can either continue spending at the current level and disappear over time, or be preserved by reducing the spending level. This issue will probably come before the Health Committee again during the 2012 regular session. It would appear to me that a cut of roughly 20 percent in spending would keep the thing going for a long, long time. If spending stays the same, it is gone in a few years.

The Health Committee and Appropriations committees also heard testimony on LR285, a study of the nursing shortage in Nebraska. Testimony was taken on ways the State of Nebraska could be proactive to make sure there are enough nurses to work in the various roles that they fill throughout the state.

The Health Committee listened to testimony on LR306, an interim that work with state government of faith, family and friends study on the effectiveness of and the people being served throughout the season.

the ACCESS Nebraska System. The ACCESS Nebraska System is state government, working community-based organizations, to serve the various clients. Legislators wanted to hear from both the organizations to learn how well the state is doing in various geographical areas across the state. The news doesn't seem to be real good here either, it seems to me like we are spending plenty of money, and not getting real good results.

My staff members met with representatives from FEMA this week. They were briefed on services provided to the Missouri River flood victims. They were also told about an extension given to Thurston County to allow individuals to apply for assistance. Residents from Thurston County have until December 12th to apply for services. Various meetings are being held in the county to provide help for people who are filling out applications. I have been pretty much pleased with FEMA employees, and would encourage Thurston County citizens affected by the floods to find out if they qualify for this assistance. If you have questions about contacting FEMA or need assistance, please contact our office at (402) 471-2716 or e-mail dbloomfield@leg.ne.gov.

The Christmas season is fast approaching. Enjoy the blessings home as their own.

1. Pay close attention to the curb appeal. Make sure to clear the driveway and all sidewalks. Keep exterior decorations minimal and the walkways well lit. A simple wreath on the entry door and some greenery in pots will go along way towards welcoming buyers. 2. Interior decorations should also be in moderation. Think soft holiday reminders in the main rooms. Use artificial garland if you use any. Buyers can be allergic to real garland and that can result in an unpleasant reaction to your home. Don't overdo garland on railings as it can cause people to feel uncomfortable on the stairs. 3. Use home baked goods as welcoming scents instead of candles whenever possible. 4. Get yourself a reliable real estate agent who will seek out buyers and go the extra mile to sell your home for you during

I understand decorations can add interest, but buyers can be easily overwhelmed. So show off your house not the decorations. If you have questions about staging your nome, piease call 402-375-3385 or email me at: wendy@mwlco.net.

Minerva Club at the Wayne Senior were read and approved. The trea-Center. Eleven members answered surer's report was given by Donna

Hallie Sherry presented her program about three memorable days

She opened with humor when she told the group it was National Flossing Day.

On a more serious note, she drew members' attention to Veterans' Day. She focused on a serious disability of hearing loss experienced by today's soldiers serving in Iraq and Afghanistan because new technological explosives are louder than ever before. It is sad because many soldiers will never hear the cheers and shouts in a welcome home

Thanksgiving was the third memorable November day Hallie mentioned. Showing gratitude year round has been known to improve one's general health.

A Christmas pot-luck and gift exchange will be held Monday, Dec. 12 at the home of Fauneil Bennett.

It's easy to munch on delicious the holiday goodies; it means being conscious about eating decisions.

> Here are some ways to eat more mindfully and still enjoy some holiday goodies.

Include or bring some lower calorie foods for holiday gatherings. This will help balance out higher calorie choices.

- Avoid hanging out near the snack table. It's harder to resist grabbing more servings when the food is in reach.

- Include daily physical activity to help keep excess holiday pounds off. If there's not enough time to go to the gym or take a walk, complete a couple of turns around the mall before starting to shop. If something is needed from a store nearby, put on a backpack and walk for it whenever possible.

Journey Christian Children's Choir to present Dec. 10 program

The Children's Choir at Journey Michael, the Heavenly Army has 'Fear Not Factor on Saturday, Dec. 10 at 7 p.m.

Preschool through sixth-grade students performing will be preforming the 45-minute program, which they have been preparing for since October.

The mission is clear - the time is now. Get set for the most spectacular and celestial adventure of all time as Mary, Joseph, and a few simple shepherds in Bethlehem encounter the wonder of the Fear Not Factor. The most epic event of all time has been established and all of heaven's angels are gearing up to fulfill what has been planned.

Christian Church, under the direcbeen commissioned to wing flight tion of Brook Jech, will present to earth and unveil God's most unexpected, miraculous and perfect

> However, only one angel, the anxious and thrilled Gabriel, has been selected to make the actual announcement of the "Fear Not Factor" to a few choice people.

The Journey Christian Church's children's choir will celebrate Christmas with enthusiasm and spirit like never before as they find themselves in the middle of what has the halls of heaven all a-buzz. After all, there's never been another night like the one when heaven and earth collided, as the Fear Not Under the command of archangel Factor pierced the starlit skies.

The 'Squanderer' who stole energy

Every Fru in Frugalville liked knew, come early next morning, saving Christmas kilowatts . . . But the Squanderer, who lived up north, felt he DID NOT!

The Squanderer hated saving energy the whole Christmas season! Please don't ask why because no one knows the reason. It could be that he hated energy efficient LED lamps, That the Frus had used to decorate

But I think that the most likely reason was based, On his hate of efficiency, so he'd fritter and waste! He winced as he thought of all Fru girls and Fru boys, As they would rush to unwrap their energy-saving toys! He grimaced when reflecting of Frus sitting down to their feast. And they'd feast and they'd feast, only leaving the least! Starting on Fru-pudding, Fru crinkles, and rare Fru-roast-beast, Which should be roasted in a crockpot, since it consumes energy the least!

But, whatever the reason, the holiday LEDS or his energy lust, He was driven to ensure the Frus' efficiency bust! "Tomorrow is Christmas! It's practically here!" "I'll make them waste energy!" He said without shedding a tear. For, tomorrow, he thought of the Frus' Christmasthought, "I must cause the Frus room, though no one was there! to make energy wrongs!" "I know just what to do!" the Squanderer laughed while feeling so smug, So he made a quick Santa hat, coat, and whitened his unshaven mug. Then he chuckled and clucked, "What a energy wasting trick! "With this coat, hat and beard, I'll look just like Saint Nick!"

He'd have their meters spinning without even a warning. And the more the Squanderer

So late that night, he jumped into his gas-guzzling Hummer, While all the Frus laid in bed, most deep in a slumber. He sped down Mount Waste, half-air bound, with reckless abandon, Applying the brakes when only focused on landing. "This is my first stop!", the old Squanderer Claus hissed. And he scaled up the roof with empty bags in his fist.

All the windows were dark. (Since Frus don't waste energy) Quiet snow filled the air. The Frus were all dreaming of energy savings without even a care. "I'll steal their setback thermostats, their CFLs, their insulation, I'll take their Energy Star television, so they can't watch "Face the Nation"!

He opened every door and every window to cold, mountain air, He Songs The more the Squanderer turned on every light in every empty

He slid up and down every chimney, through shadows he'd lurk. Hey! If Santa could do it, then so could this jerk. Then he snook and snatched, with a smirk most unpleasant, Taking all efficiency items before his assent.

He snatched water heater blankets, new furnace filters too!

He even stole the Frus' new insulated shoes!

He stopped at the Energy Star icebox. He took the Frus' feast! He took the Fru-pudding! Fru crinkles! He took the Fru roast beast! To waste more energy, he'd leave the fridge door open. That surely would have the little Fru faces a moping!

To finally leave their stomachs in knots, The Squanderer took the fiber optic tree that used only 10 watts!

As he snuck back up the chimney, he left open the damper, Once outside, he disabled the heat pumps by tamper. He raced out of Frugalville without even a warning. For dawn was coming, it was a bright Christmas morning. Four thousand feet up! Up the side of Mount Waste, In his gas-guzzling Hummer, he

as morning arrove, Frugalville's sounds weren't so sad! Rather it sounded quite happy and joyous; quite grateful and glad! It couldn't be so! He left the Frus in deficiency! He had taken all the items associated with Christmas and efficiency! He stared down at Frugalville. The Squanderer strained his eyes. Then he shuttered! What he saw was a shocking surprise!

Every Fru down in Frugalville, wrapped in blankets and coats, Without any energy efficient items, the Frus were singing out notes! He hadn't stopped Christmas, nor efficiency, nor happiness. They came! Somehow or other, they came just the same! "Maybe Christmas and energy efficiency," he thought, "don't come only from a store." "Maybe Christmas and efficiency...mean a little bit more!

And at that minute his meanness lifted; he didn't feel quite so tight, He whizzed back downhill with his load through the bright morning light. And he brought back the presents and the Energy Star stuff! And the food for the feast, for which there was more than enough! He closed all the windows and doors, he sealed up each crack. He fixed all the heat pumps and sweatered each

And he . . . he himself, to say not the least! Used a crockpot to cook the Fru roast beast!

Nebraska Public Power District, your local utility and Energy Wise wish you and your family a joyous and energy efficient holiday season!

Dec. 14 webinar explores resources to aid flood recovery

Resources" will be the focus of a webinar for those affected by the 2011 Missouri River flood.

The webinar will feature two producers in the process of repairing their farmland and representatives from key USDA agencies and the U.S. Corps of Engineers who are working with producers whose farmland sustained flood damage.

"Many farmers and landowners may be facing several inches of sediment and sand, scour holes and ponds, and wondering what resources are available to help them proactively address these problems and prepare for the 2012 crop season," said Craig Derickson, Nebraska State Conservationist with the USDA Natural Resources and Conservation Service. "We have assembled a lot of important information to help farmers affected by the 2011 flood move forward."

The webinar will be from 1:30-3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 14, at more than 20 sites in Iowa, app/leftovers/id427307538?mt=8 adds a reminder feature which uses a device's push notifications to alert users when it is time to use or throw away a particular food item.

The app is available for iPhone, iPad and iPod touch devices.

The "4-Day Throw Away" leftovers app, launched last spring, is an easyto-use resource to look up hundreds of individual food items, along with storage recommendations, reheating instructions, special considerations and related foodborne illnesses. Users of the app can set reminders from within a food description, or by using the reminders tab. Reminders can be set for any number of days and hours in the future, so users can match the guidelines for each food type in the app, or set reminders that work best for their daily lives. A notes section lets users add extra detail to a reminder. Many consumers don't realize how quickly food leftovers can become unsafe or spoil, said Julie Albrecht, UNL food specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The app, along with the whole 4-Day Throw Away campaign, is not only informing consumers about food leftovers, but helping them to practice safe leftover usage and food storage in their homes, she said. To view more materials from the campaign, please visit the following

The 4-Day Throw Away campaign, which features the number 4 as its mascot, is educating consumers about the dangers of foodborne illnesses and the four-day guideline for eating, freezing or throwing away leftovers. It is funded by a United States Department of Agriculture grant and is a partnership between Iowa State University Extension and University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension.

Playing hooky and getting into the Christmas spirit

I played hooky last Saturday. I want to go, so left messages to that confess. With the weather forecast on Friday, and all that was on my calendar, I was hoping for a "snow day". That didn't materialize. So, I played hooky.

I was kind of bummed about the volleyball game. For one thing. I can't tell John Cook what to do, but I think I might have subbed a few when I saw how tired those girls were. Someone pointed out to me that the team has not played well since the "hit and run" incident. I don't know; they seem to have been inconsistent all year.

We were scheduled for an extra choir rehearsal on Saturday morning, and the director had told us on Thursday eve that she would let us know by 8 a.m., whether she was canceling or not. She cancelled. So, I thought everything else should

The Aldrich House is all decked out in Christmas finery, and is open on Saturday and Sunday afternoons in December. I was scheduled from 2-5 that afternoon. Typically, there are enough guests that we use two tour guides. As I watched the wet snow come down, I bailed. I called the scheduler and the curator and the house, and got answer machines in all three places. That told me they were all out and about. But I still did not and showed up on Saturday, when she was scheduled on Sunday! Oh, dear; could I work Sunday instead? (They had one brave couple who toured.) Well, I countered, there was a neighborhood holiday get together scheduled. So, I actually said "no", sort of. And I didn't go on Sunday, either!

The next day, I had some energy back; it was a miracle. And I went to the get together, and had some wine, and some Christmas treats, and lots of laughs. Hopefully, now, I can gather the strength to get out the cards, put up the tree, you know the drill.

Tonight, I had the pleasure of the annual Swedish supper at St. Andrew's church here in town. A girl I used to know as Denise Linafelter (from Wayne county) had told me last week that the program was going to be "Angels Among Us." And, the three speakers proved that there are! Plus, the food was outstanding: Swedish meat balls, pickled herring, oostaka, deviled eggs, and all kinds of sweet breads and cookies. So, now, I'm "in the mood".

Of course, I could do without the cold and ice, but it's December, right? Think I will have a nightcap of hot chocolate and get to bed and dream about angels . . . among us!
