Downtown taking off

DED grant helping revitalization efforts By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

The downtown area of a community is the heart and soul of any small town, and efforts to revitalize Laurel's downtown area are beginning to take off.

The effort to improve the Cedar County community's downtown region got its start three years ago, according to Luke Virgil, the community's economic development co-

"Annete Junck was in this position at the time, and she got a group of people together around town to build up enthusiasm about downtown revitalization," he said.

The city received a Phase 1 Community Development Block Grant from the Nebraska Department of Economic Development to do some design and planning work for ideas that would assist in Laurel's downtown revitalization. A lot of meetings with interested parties generated a ton of ideas for how to improve the look of downtown Laurel.

"There were a lot of roundtable discussions between business owners and residents, and it was a really good 2-3 months where there were a lot of great discussions about it," Virgil said. "We were able to come out of that with some ideas about what the community wants for its downtown revitalization.

Ideas such as keeping the median separating the two sides of the main street in the downtown area, repairing sidewalks See FAIRS, Page 3A and making them handicap-accessible, updating business facades, creating a gateway from the highway to the downtown, and including some greenery in the area were among the ideas that came out of those dis-

> With all of that information, the city was able to procure a $350,000 grant in September of last year from the Nebraska Department of Economic Development. The Phase II CDBG funds can be used by downtown businesses to help enhance and improve storefronts, repair roofs and create a vibrant-looking downtown for the town of less than 1,000.

Jake Owen highlights Wayne County Fair Friday

Of The Herald

Jake Owen has been all over the place re-

Whether it's bouncing up the country music charts or playing stadium tours, Owen has been enjoying the travel as he tours in support of his latest album, "Barefoot Blue The album, which debuted at No. 1 on

Billboard's Top Country Albums chart, has already spawned a pair of No. 1 singles, and his third single, "The One That Got Away" is moving up the charts, which is good news as he gets ready to entertain fans at the Wayne County Fair this Friday. Owen signed on with RCA Records in 2005 and released his debut album, "Startin' With Me" the following year. The impressive debut was recognized nationally, as he was named the Top New Male Vocalist by the Academy of Country Music in 2009. He has gone on to earn multiple ACM and Country Music Association awards, and was nominated for his first Grammy in

The Vero Beach, Fla., native started out with hopes of becoming a professional golfed Florida State University and Jake was a walk-on member of the Seminoles' golf team before a waterskiing accident took care of his athletic dreams.

It was while recovering from his injuries that he took up guitar, borrowing a neighbor's guitar and teaching himself how to play. He became a regular at a local bar and started writing his own material, eventually moving to Nashville to pursue his new dream in country music.

Owen has had quite a rise to success since then, touring with Kenny Chesney, Brad Paisley, Carrie Underwood, Alan Jackson, Brooks & Dunn, Sugarland and Jason Aldean. He is joining Chesney and Tim Mc-Graw on their "Brothers Of The Sun" stadium tour this summer.

In addition to his music, Owen established the Jake Owen Foundation to offer support and raise awareness nationally for children battling cancer and other childhood diseases. ## City officials keeping eye on water situation

The City of Wayne has had a number of calls asking if water usage will be restricted in the community.

According to Garry Poutre, Wayne Public Works Superintendent, "As always, we are monitoring our well water levels and, at this time, have no need to restrict water usage.

"Water levels in the City wells are lower than usual this early in the summer, due to the severe dry conditions, but we are still very comfortable with the water levels in the city wells. With that said, we encourage all of our water customers to be 'water wise' and conserve water whenever possible. Again, at this time the city does not plan to restrict water usage in the community."

City sales tax receipts still on record pace

Wayne's sales tax receipts for July were down slightly from last month, but were more than double what the city received one year ago.

The city received $49,032.12 in receipts for sales made during the month of May. That is more than $26,000 ahead of the $22,563.79 received during the same period a year ago. The low figure was attributed to a return of sales tax receipts the city had to make due to a refund request.

The city is well ahead of its projected total for the fiscal year with two months left in fiscal year 2011-12. The city has received $483,466.08 in sales tax receipts, compared to the $500,768.37 received during all of the 2010-11 fiscal year. At the current average of $48,346.61, the city will easily surpass its all-time total of $521,105.15.

Donald Claude Charles

Donald Claude Charles, 94, died Wednesday, July 18, 2012 in Wayne. Private memorial services will be held at a later date. Memorials may be made to any of the local food pantries. Don was born on April 22, 1918, and grew up in Dayton, Iowa. He attended Dayton High School, Fort Dodge Junior College, and Iowa State Teachers College (now UNI). Following a stint of teaching, he entered the service of his country in 1941. After attending Officer Candidate School and the US Army Armor School he served in Europe as an officer in the 736th Tank Battalion, earning three battle stars and the Bronze Star medal for courage under fire. Following the war, he returned to the US where, boarding a train one day in 1945, he found himself seated next to an appealing young woman. A year and a half later they were married, and he and Anne shared life for the next 65 years. Don earned his M.A. and PhD degrees at the University of Nebraska and in 1951 joined the Department of Psychology at Iowa State University, where he practiced his profession until retirement in 1988, remaining Professor Emeritus until his death. Throughout his career he greatly enjoyed lecturing and teaching at universities throughout the country. Don founded and headed the ISU Honors Program, making it possible for gifted students to pursue work at a higher level than would have been available without the program. During his career he produced scores of professional books and papers, including a textbook which became a standard in teacher education both here and abroad. He was also a pioneer and leader in what was then the emerging field of gerontology. Don was a Fellow of the American Psychological Association and the American Gerontological Society, and served on many boards and committees related to psychology and aging at the local, state, and national levels.

Don loved music, literature, and - his passion from boyhood onward gardening and horticulture. He was a longtime member of the Ames Choral Society and a former Trustee of the Ames Public Library. Don and Anne always took great pleasure in travel. Retirement allowed them to visit many parts of the world, but it was always clear that what they enjoyed most about each trip was experiencing it together. At home they each pursued a multitude of hobbies and interests, usually in the company of a cat or two. Don was always busy. He once wrote "Work is what I know, and what I am impelled to do, but I define 'work' in a fashion that pleases me." Throughout his life he seized the day and lived in the present. For Don and for Anne too, yesterday was gone, tomorrow might never come, but today was always in their hands.

He was preceded in death by his parents Claude and Helen, and his

Small-town atmopshere draws lawyers to Laurel practice

By MICHAEL CARNES

Almost 40 years ago, Craig Monson took a big chance on leaving the big city for an opportunity to be a small-town lawyer.

It seems to have turned out pretty well for him – so nice, in fact, that he's helping another small-town kid with an opportunity to enjoy a similar experience.

Monson has practiced law in Laurel since January of 1973, and less than a year ago he brought in a new partner in Keelan Holloway. Both are small-town natives who have found a home in this community.

For Monson, it all started in 1972 after hearing from a fraternity brother, Dave Felber, who was a longtime pharmacist and doctor in

"I was in the same fraternity with him, and he told me about Dave Curtiss being elected as the county judge," Monson said. "Dave told me about Laurel, and it was about the same size as my home town of Osceola, so I gave up some security in Lincoln to come up here and try it and we've been here ever since."

Bringing his wife, Arllys, and a six-month old baby to town just after the start of the new year was a scary proposition at first, he said.

"I think I spent a day and a half with Dave (Curtiss) before he went off to be the county judge, and I was on my own after that," he said. "I was thrown into the fire, even if it was my own choosing.

Thanks to a loan from the man he replaced as the local lawyer, Monson was eventually able to establish his law practice, doing everything from estate planning, wills and trusts to tax law, personal injury work and real estate transactions. He also has served as the attorney for the cities of Laurel, Allen and Concord, as well as for the Laurel and Wakefield school districts.

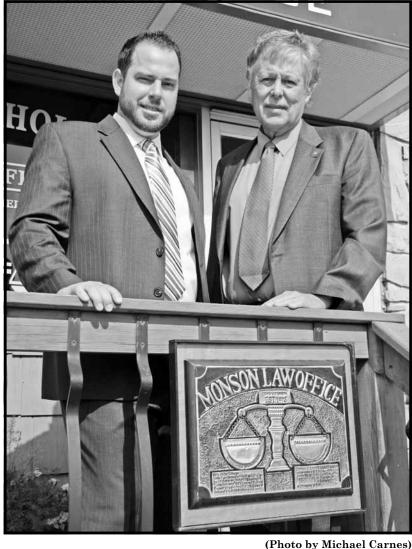

The practice has grown considerably over the course of his time in Laurel, and Monson felt the need to bring somebody in to help ease the stress and pressure that went with a job that, many times, had him working seven days a week.

"I did income taxes for about 35 years, but it got to the point where I was working seven days a week,' Monson searched for the better part of 2 1/2 years before a little research on the Internet by a Beloit, Kan., native who was looking for a way together.

"After I graduated from Creighton, I thought I wanted to be a financial analyst for a corporation in Omaha," Holloway said. "It wasn't as fulfilling as I had hoped, and I had always wanted to pursue law, so I went to law school."

His wife, Leslie, is a dentist, and the couple went looking for a small town where they could both practice their chosen professions. They cult, Monson admitted. found it in Laurel, where Holloway practices law and his wife makes the short drive to Wayne as part of the Burrows and Holloway dental

"We wanted to live and raise our family in a small town, and we looked for small towns that could support both a lawyer and dentist," he said. "Laurel is a very attractive community that doesn't feel like the small town that it is, and Craig was looking for a new associate to help ease the hours he worked, and we iust hit it off."

And with his wife making the 15-minute drive to Wayne every day, Holloway said it's just like commuting in the big city – minus all the traffic.

"She loves practicing there and has gotten to know a lot of people," he said. "Everything here just fell into place for us and it's worked out really well."

Holloway joined the law firm last change brought Monson and Hollo- October, and having him on board is helping Monson enjoy the opportunity to spend more time away from the office.

"My wife retired from teaching, and we have four children and 10 grandchildren who live in Phoenix, Los Angeles and Virginia, and and buy the business from him," he I wanted to spend more time with them," he said.

"So many lawyers want to go to the big city and specialize and not be bothered by the business aspect," he said. "I had a national search firm looking for me, and Keelan found us here on the Internet. I interviewed a lot of people and couldn't find the right fit until I met Keelan, and everything seemed to click and it's vorked out great."

Holloway joins some pretty rare company in Laurel. While there has been an attorney practicing in town since 1894, the number of practicing lawyers doing business in town has been a pretty select bunch.

"An F.P. Voter was here from 1894 to 1944, then there was Dave Curtiss until 1973 when I came to town," he said, adding that Darrell Gubbels was a partner for a couple of years before moving to Colorado.

Having some young blood in the office has been a blessing for Monson, but he's not sure he'd have the courage today to take the same chance he did by coming to Laurel 40 years ago.

"Dave (Curtiss) loaned me some money to get me going and I was able to eventually pay him back said. "I had a lot more risk-taking savvy back then, and I don't know Finding somebody who was a if I could do that now . . . but it has good fit for the firm was very diffi- worked out great."

Rick Wozniak explains the water cycle and some of the reasons for a large number of water concerns taking place throughout northeast Nebraska at last week's groundwater workshop in Norfolk.

Farmers, homeowners gather to discuss water concerns

Of the Herald

The best way to deal with water issues is "to be a good neighbor."

These were the words of advice presented during last week's Groundwater Users Educational Workshop, hosted by the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District.

The workshop, held at the Lifelong Learning Center in Norfolk, was attended by more than 100 people, including a number of irrigators from within the LENRD and domestic well users within the area.

Rick Wozniak, water resources manager for the LENRD, spoke to the group about the fact that groundwater is a "shared resource," and explained the impact of multiple users on the groundwater sup-

"This year the NRD has received complaints, by far the most ever,"

He listed a number of statistics for this increase, including the higher than normal temperatures, lower precipitation amounts and high water use by corn crops.

Among the solutions he offered to eliminate overwatering, scheduling of irrigation, the use of no-till farming practices and cover crops and setting realistic yield goals.

Suggestions for water conservation for all water users included no tion wells non-stop. outdoor water use and the use of low-flow water fixtures.

Jovan Lausterer, an attorney for the NRD, told those in attendance that the NRD does not have legal authority to shut down wells or resolve disputes.

meaning we have to have all the paperwork submitted by September of 2013," Virgil said, adding that the city will lose whatever money it does not use by that One of the first businesses in town to take advantage of the grant was the Monson and Holloway law firm, which has added a handicap-accessible ramp, improved its signage, replaced its roof, and added an awning to the front of its building. "They were the first to go through the full applica-

"I know Craig is super-proud of the building, and it really looks sharp," Virgil added. "It's a great way for a business to take a little of their own money and springboard it into a nice project.'

Virgil admitted that the paperwork for the grant funding is a little tedious. However, he said there are some other businesses who have shown interest and feels it is well worth the time and effort so he is encouraging local businesses to take advantage of the fund-

The Wayne Kiwanis Club recently purchased a shelter in Omaha. With the assistance of Ken Liska, a member of the group, the shelter was moved to Wayne and on July 21 resembled it at the corner of Fourth and Nebraska streets. Construction assistance was provided by Lucas Thompson of L&L Construction. This is the second shelter that the Wayne Kiwanis Club has built in the last eight months. The other shelter is located at the Northwest corner of Sunnyview Park. Together, the shelters will serve over 60 school students. The Kiwanis motto is "Helping the Children of the World" and the installation of these two shelters will help promote that motto. ## Wildcats in middle of NSIC pack

Because it's the end of July and we're really stretching the envelope to find stuff to talk about, here's a 'scraping the bottom of the barrel" edition of the "Bits and Pieces" file:

- The preseason college football rankings are coming out all over the place, and Wayne State looks to be in the middle of the pack in the Northern Sun Conference this coming season.

The Wildcats are ranked 33rd in the CompughterRatings.com preseason rankings that were announced late Monday. Wayne State is one of eight Northern Sun Conference teams ranked in the top 40 of the 167 Div. II schools the ratings service ranked for the coming sea-

Minnesota Duluth, at No. 2, is the highest-ranked team in the NSIC, sitting behind Northwest Missouri State. The next highest-ranked team in the preseason poll from the NSIC is St. Cloud State at No. 15. Minnesota State is No. 28, Winona State is No. 30, Augustana is No. 31, and Bemidji State and newcomer University of Sioux Falls are behind the Wildcats at Nos. 36 and 37, respectively.

The rest of the conference schools listed, in order, includes Concordia-St. Paul (47th), University of Mary (55th), Northern State (69th), Southwest Minnesota State (72nd), Upper Iowa (99th), Minot State (114th), MSU-Moorhead (118th) and Minnesota-Crookston brings up the rear as the 142nd of 167

For those of you scoring at home (and, since it's so blasted hot outside, we know you are), the Wild-30th and 28th teams in Div. II, while playing on the road against Nos. 118, 36, 72, 47, 99 and 37.

So what does that add up to? My calculator tells me 627 . . . and an entertaining season of college football coming our way.

- Speaking of preseason picks, the Big Ten media are picking Nebraska to finish third in the Legends division.

Now for the scary part . . . the winner of the Legends Division will take on the winner of the Leaders Division in the Big Ten championship game this December. Considering that two of the otherwise-likely contenders are now on probation (Ohio State and Penn State), the possibility of an Iowa vs. Indiana conference championship game is now a real one. OK, maybe THAT matchup is a little far-fetched . . . I mean, really, who would think Iowa could actually win a division title?

- It's almost August, and the possibility of a World Series between the Oakland A's and Washington Nationals is still a mathematical possibility.

More and more, I'm starting to believe the Mayans were right.

- From the "Those crazy Englanders will do anything to get on TV" department: an Olympic torch relay was disrupted when a streaker jumped out in front of an official runner while holding a fake flame.

The birthday suit-wearing goofball was apprehended by authorities and charged with public indecency after running a short distance with the actual Olympic torch-bearer, who was, we assume, appropriately clothed.

- Annnnnd finally, a New York man was arrested for making false public alarms and hindering the work of a police officer after he allegedly made 911 calls saying he wanted to talk with - brace yourselves – Tim Tebow.

The man claimed he was the president (of what, we're not sure), and wanted to talk with the New York Jets' backup quarterback. Authorities traced the call to the man's mother's home, and eventually found him hiding in a closet.

And, really, that's where most Jets fans can be found by the week after Halloween. (Ba-da BING... Thanks, you've been a wonderful audience, tip your waiter . . .)

Against Beatrice, Biggerstaff broke open a close game with a bases-loaded triple in the fourth inning. Kniesche limited Beatrice to one hit and three walks while striking out 10, and Tuttle and O'Reilly added hits in the win.

Wayne's bats got hot in the win over Blair, scoring five runs in each of the first two innings and adding seven more in the third. Eight Dirt Devils had hits in the win, and Kniesche threw her second no-hitter of the tournament, striking out extra innings, but Seward scored four in the top of the final inning and held on for the win to end Wavne's season. Doring had two hits, while Kniesche, Tuttle and Fleming added hits. Fleming struck out 10 and allowed three hits and four walks in a losing effort.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Focus on the kids, not football's future

There is incredible interest in what will happen to Penn State football. But the fundamental chapter of this horrific story should focus on the innocent children and the powerful people who let them down.'

These were the words of Ed Ray, chairman of the NCAA's executive committee and president of Oregon State University, during the announcement of unprecedented punishment meted out by the NCAA Monday in wake of the child sexual abuse scandal at Penn State University.

The sanctions leveled against the school, after it had allowed a predator to essentially roam free on its campus unchecked for more than a decade, were highly unusual on a lot of levels:

- a $60 million fine;
- vacating 112 wins over the course of 13 seasons from 1998-2011;
- a four-year ban on bowl games and conference championships; - a reduction of scholarships amounting to 20 over four years;
- five years probation for the athletic department; and
- players may transfer from Penn State and play immediately at other schools if they choose to do so.

There was talk that Penn State might get a "death penalty" sanction similar to the one earned by SMU in the mid 1980's. In retrospect, that penalty might wind up being less of a punishment than the one that will no doubt impact Penn State's entire athletic program for the foreseeable

And while there is a lot of talk about the future of Penn State football, Ray is dead-on in where the focus MUST lie – on those whose lives were forever ravaged by the animal who was allowed to roam free, and the people in charge who enabled these horrifying acts to go on, unchecked, for more than a decade.

NCAA president Mark Emmert said that "no price the NCAA can levy will repair the damage inflicted by Jerry Sandusky on his victims," and he is correct – but the sanctions the NCAA has handed down should send a loud and clear message to every institution of higher learning that such behavior - not only that of Sandusky, but the inaction of the administrators who had every opportunity to deal with this problem and chose not to – should never again be tolerated at any level.

Still, even in the wake of all that has happened, there are some who keep asking about the players who had nothing to do with the Sandusky affair. How is this going to affect them? How will they be able to compete?

My first response to that is – who cares? At least 10 young boys had their lives forever altered by the animal who was allowed to use the Penn State brand, the football program and its facilities – as well as his own charity, The Second Mile - to feed his lustful desires. We should be asking how 15 years of unchecked child abuse will affect the lives of those who were touched by Sandusky. We should ask how those who were allowed to be abused by Graham Spanier, Joe Paterno and the rest of the Penn State athletic and academic administration are going to get on with their lives. In the grand scheme of things, those questions are infinitely more important than whether or not Penn State's football team is going to get the crap kicked out of them by Ohio State, Northwestern, Nebraska or Western Tennessee Community College.

But if you must ask, then here's the answer - Penn State's football players will face little immediate fallout from the NCAA's decision. Their education, room and board, meals and support is still being paid for, and they are free to transfer to any other school in the country that will have them. They will still get to play football – the only difference being that they won't get to go to a bowl game or play for the Big Ten title for four years. In future years, the football program will be limited in the number of scholarships they can offer, so they will face more challenges in bringing quality student-athletes to campus (the stigma of the Sandusky affair will probably be a bigger hurdle than the scholarship numbers, and that's something they may never shake loose from).

Hopefully, the decision made by the NCAA will help change the culture that major college sports has become. For far too long, the money and corruption that have evolved in major college sports has left some ugliness in its wake, and if an people supporting an institution doesn't think that a situation like the one at Penn State could possibly happen in THEIR house, they are setting themselves up for a situation where more innocent lives are destroyed, all in the name of protecting a brand whose value, in the grand scheme of things, is far less than any human life.

If anything good has come from this horrible nightmare, it is in the $60 million that Penn State was "fined" by the NCAA. That money, which is the equivalent of a year's revenue for the Penn State football program, must be put into an endowment for programs outside the university that prevent child sexual abuse, as well as assisting victims from the Sandusky

In the end, this is where our focus must be concerning institutional crimes against innocent children, whether it's the Catholic church or a reputable institution of higher learning such as Penn State. The concern (usually 6-9 p.m.), 12- to 14-hour should not be on the future of the institution, but in making sure the vic-days are not uncommon during sestims of those institutions' misdeeds are taken care of. Their survival is of sion. infinitely greater importance than any institution, no matter how big.

Drought back with a vengeance

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Drought is no stranger to Nebras-

But this time, exacerbated by extreme heat, wind and wildfires, Drought 2012 has already become the subject of one of the largest disaster announcements ever from the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture. It is also the subject of bloggers, jokes and prayer chains.

U.S. Ag Secretary Tom Vilsack said more than 1,000 counties nationwide - 16 in Nebraska - have been declared a natural disaster area. The announcement came on the heels of a national crop report that indicated corn and soybean production would be diminished this year. Even though more acres than before are planted, the secretary said, "We are still looking at significant reduc-

In Nebraska, the High Plains Regional Climate Center based at the University of Nebraska - Lincoln, says moderate drought or worse conditions are plaguing 99.81 percent of the state. Temperatures in the 90-degree to 100-degree range and little rainfall since June add to the problem.

At a time when the earth is of Natural Resources has issued more than 1,100 shut-off notices to farmers and ranchers who use surface water on their crops and grassland. The orders touch nearly every river basin in the state, speaking to the breadth of the problem.

There are 49 districts represented in the Nebraska Unicameral, each containing approximately 35,000 people. Senators are elected to four-year terms with a current two-term limit and receive a salary of $12,000 a year. Sessions begin in January each year and consists of 90 working days in odd-numbered years and 60 working days in evennumbered years. Long sessions usually last until early June and short sessions until mid-April. Special sessions may be held at the call of the Governor or two-thirds of the

During session, a typical day for a Senator could include a meeting over breakfast (usually at 7 a.m.), working lunch (12-1:30 p.m.), visits with constituents (any time we can fit one in), Committee Hearings (1:30 p.m. until ???), research, floor debate and conferences. There may also be meetings after adjournment

The best way to set up a meeting with your Senator is to contact his or her Legislative Office and work with the staff member who handles the Senator's schedule; namely, the administrative assistant. As the drought across the nation worsens, Nebraska irrigators, who use surface water such as rivers and creeks, are limited or blocked completely from using their irrigation systems because the rivers they draw from have dropped. Over 1,100 farmers and ranchers have been affected at this time. I fear additional restrictions will have to be imposed if we do not get some rain soon. A group of 4-Hers from Wayne County also participated in the Citizenship Washington Focus Trip in Washington DC at the National 4-H Center. At the National 4-H Center, 4-Hers met with youth from across the nation to learn the importance of citizenship, government responsibility, and service. 4-Hers have also attended numerous camps and educational workshops throughout

I am proud of our 4-Hers for what they have already accomplished and what they will continue to do in their lives. This spring we had 21 of our 4-Hers graduate from high school and this fall they will start a new journey forwarding their education, serving our country and entering the workforce. We know that their involvement in the 4-H program has given them skills to be effective in their future. I am proud of all of our youth enrolled in the 4-H program and look forward to the fair which is a tradition in our 4-H program.

Building family strengths in times of drought

UNL Extension Educator Knox County

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series.

"And what the heck can anybody do? There is nothing anybody can do for drought except wait for rain, that's it!" Female farmer 2004

Commitment means being dedi-

research conducted over the past 30 Why is that? It may have something Committed families are willing to invest time and energy in family activities and don't allow work or other issues to consume their lives. In other words, couple and family relationships are a priority and other things aren't allowed to drain their emotional or physical energy to interfere with family interaction. Commitment to the couple relationship is a great part of this. During drought conditions, the partner relationship must be nurtured even through farmers/ranchers often feel they must work constantly to try to bring in an income or save a crop.

Partners must help each other through difficult times; try to understand one another's concerns, fears and reasoning. However, strong couples will help to balance each other and will let each other know when things are getting out

Successful couple and family relationships not only are about solving problems and resolving conflict, but strong families are good at task-oriented communication. They identify difficulties; stay focused on them, and find solutions that work reasonably well for all family members. Strong families also realize that the couple relationship between husband and wife is the main bond that holds the family together, and take time to nurture and prioritize this relationship. There still will be some conflict in strong families; in fact strong families are not afraid to air their feelings about a sensitive or problem issue because they live in a safe environment and trust each other. Even in times of drought, they will have some optimism and be grateful for the inch of rain, friends who came to visit, the daughter who called home or for time to talk with each other.

for your dentist to perform a thorough soft tissue

Handwriting, heat topics of discussion

Would you believe, on the day sent the column about cursive handwriting, Tom Purcell covered the same subject in the World-Herald? And the Lincoln paper has it today. He told us an interesting thing about why it came about.

He says in the "olden" days, writers used quill pens and ink. Dipping into the ink all the time caused drops and splatters, so someone figured out to connect the letters so they didn't have to dip so often. Thus, cursive handwriting!

Then the Occupational Therapist daughter e-mailed me to say that part of the problem has to do with kids today not developing their large muscles before they have to use the smaller muscles for fine things, like writing. Instead of being outside climbing trees, pulling wagons, and such, they are indoors watching TV and playing video games.

I told her my friend Yvonne, whom I wrote about two weeks ago, had been an elementary teacher and had complained to me about that very thing years ago. And I'm sure it's worse now than it was then.

Of course, we have not had any windows open for a month! Plus, the shades are drawn. In fact, most days, I wish they were darker! The heat, and the humidity, has been almost unbearable.

When they talk about records being broken, they often refer to 1956. That was the year I graduated from high school. I detasseled that year, just as I had every year prior, and I don't remember it being any hotter than the years before. Plus, there was no such thing as air conditioning, although we did have fans. My brother tells me he slept in the basement all that summer, but I know I was in the northeast bedroom, which did have some breeze. We all survived, and got the garden stuff canned and the strawberries picked and frozen. I guess we were young and tough then!

Wayne County is authorized for emergency having and grazing

Nebraska Farm Service Agency (FSA) County Executive Director Deb Pieper today announced that Wayne county is authorized for emergency haying and grazing use of Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) acres for 2012. Surrounding counties that are also authorized for emergency having and grazing include Antelope, Knox, Cedar, Madison, Pierce, and Stanton coun-

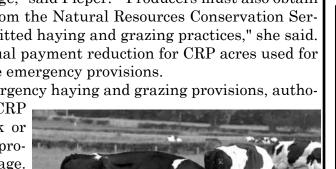

The CRP emergency having and grazing authorization for 2012 is effective immediately. Haying must be completed by September 1, 2012. Grazing livestock must be removed from the CRP acres by September 30, 2012.

"Eligible producers who are interested in emergency having and grazing of CRP must request written approval from the Farm Service Agency before haying or grazing eligible acreage," said Pieper. "Producers must also obtain a modified conservation plan from the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) that outlines permitted having and grazing practices," she said. There will be a 10 percent annual payment reduction for CRP acres used for haying and grazing under these emergency provisions.

To take advantage of the emergency having and grazing provisions, authorized producers can use the CRP acreage for their own livestock or may grant another livestock producer use of the CRP acreage. CRP participants are not allowed to charge livestock producrs more than the 10 percent annual payment reduction for the having or grazing privaleges.

County's first fair was held in 1882 in Ponca and was considered a great success. Records show that $433.20 was taken in at the gate and by the concessions.

This was after difficulties were encountered by interested citizens when they first tried to get a fair in 1878. A group of people met in April of 1878 to organize a County Agricultural and Fair Association. Committees were set up to write by-laws and a constitution and to prepare a list of nominees for offices. At the next meeting S.I. Hart, South Creek, was chosen president. Other officers were L.T. Hill, Ionia, Vice president; W.W. Atkinson, Daily, treasurer; and J.U. La-Follet, Ponca, secretary.

In March of 1882, another attempt was made. P.G. Wright, South Creek, was president and Dayton Ward, Silver Creek, was secretary. This group built barns, a race track and a grandstand on 40 acre tract of land a short distance northwest of Ponca. The fair dates were set for September 6-8 in 1882. Horse and Mule racing was a big part of the fair.
