On the other hand, foods thawed in cool water or the microwave are susceptible to bacteria and should be cooked immediately. Even more dangerous is leaving food to thaw on the kitchen counter because microorganisms grow between 40 and 140 degrees.

"The inside could still be frozen, but you're encouraging microorganism growth on the outside," she

Re-freezing food is the subject of one of four food safety myths from the Partnership for Food Safety Education (fightbac.org). The organization debunks these myths this September as part of National Food Safety Education Month.

Another of the myths they address says that bagged lettuce should be washed to rid it of bacteria. However, packaged greens labeled "ready-to-eat" or "washed" have already been cleaned and rinsing them actually can expose them to contamination.

"They've already been cleaned," Albrecht said. "And you're giving them one more handling.'

In the case of pre-washed greens, it's enough to use clean cutting boards, utensils and countertops. Another myth is that microwaves kill the bacteria in food. In reality, the microwaves don't kill bacteria; the heat does. Microwave ovens cook food unevenly, leaving cold spots and the risk of foodborne ill-

Following package instructions carefully and checking microwaved food with a food thermometer can prevent these illnesses, Albrecht said. Microwaves only kill bacteria when the food is heated to a safe temperature. Ground meat is done at 160 degrees, poultry at 165 and fish at 145. Steaks should be cooked to a minimum of 145 degrees, according to the PFSE website.

"In fact, it's important to check all food with a food thermometer before eating it," Albrecht said.

The final myth is that looking at

with a finger can indicate its done-

"Some hamburgers look like they're done when they're not done," Albrecht said. "You have to make sure to kill microorganisms and not look for whether it's not pink inside. or juices are clear."

Again, using a food thermometer is the only way to know for sure that food is cooked properly. Even if the outside appears done, the inside may still have cold spots, which can't be detected by appearance or touch and might contain bacteria.

Food thermometers should be food or checking the temperature cleaned with soap and water after each use.

Currently, council members have set aside $160,000 from the electrical funds to be used as a $20,000 short-term construction loan for each new home built.

At Tuesday's meeting, the council voted to amend the program to include either the $20,000 construction loan or a $5,000 three-year construction loan per market rate single family dwelling or per apartment unit in multi-unit apartment buildings. The loan would be at zero percent interest and would have to be repaid if the home was sold.

Salute to the fallen on the field

I'm trying to beat deadline, so here's a few quick thoughts to fulfill my contractual obligation to write a sports column this week:

- You probably aren't going to see their names in the paper any more

They are young men and women who have worked hard in the offseason and busted their backsides to get ready to compete, only to have their hopes for athletic success cut short by that dreaded "I" word:

Whether it's a broken bone, a concussion or a blown-out ACL, there are several athletes in our area who are feeling the emotional frustration, along with the physical pain, of having their seasons ended early by some type of injury.

Every athlete goes through their share of bumps and bruises, but it's those body-altering injuries that get the best of everybody at some point in time. The will to work and compete is still there, but the body is unable to continue, and that's the frustrating part for these young

While we wish we could see these individuals continue to compete, we hope for the best as they make their recoveries from the injuries they have suffered. Here's hoping for quick and full recoveries for all the young men and women who are among the walking wounded on sidelines across the area.

- If you get a chance to see the volleyball teams at Allen or Wakefield this fall, don't miss out.

I had the chance to watch the two teams battle Tuesday at Allen High School, and what a match it was. It went the full five sets, with all five sets coming down to the very end before the visiting Trojans pre-

What these two teams lack in height, though, they more than make up for in scrappy play and a never-say-die mentality that makes it hard for opposing teams to score. ing made by the opposing defense.

It was a great night of back-andforth volleyball between two area rivals, and they are two teams that are well worth the price of admission to go watch.

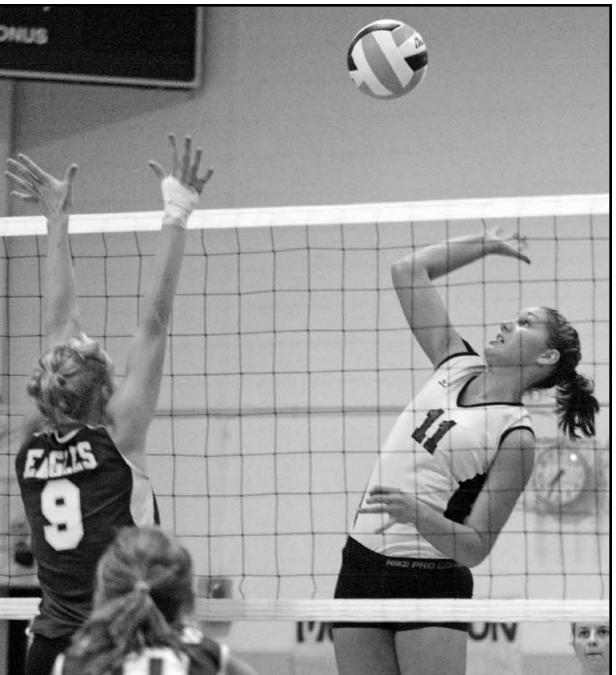

- There's a new attitude in Wakefield this season that has the football team singing the school fight song . . . over and over again.

Two weeks ago, the Trojan gridders won their first home game in four years, which was cause for celebration in its own right. The team marked the occasion by running over to the Wakefield fans gathered by the concession stand at Eaton Field to sing the school fight song.

Tuesday night, the football boys were leading the local fans in attendance at the Wakefield-Allen volleyball game after the Trojans won a five-set thriller over the Lady Eagles. As the volleyballers left the floor, the footballers were rockin' the school fight song in celebration. - I wouldn't say the Div. II Central Region volleyball tournament will be a war, but consider this: Wayne State is 21st in the latest AVCA Div. II coaches poll, and if the regional tournament started this week, they would be out of the running as the first team out.

Based on the current rankings, the Wildcats would also be sixth - yes, you read that right - in the NSIC conference tournament. Now THAT is a tough region.

Wakefield and Allen played one of those down-to-the-wire, thrill-aminute matchups Tuesday at Allen High School, and the visiting Trojans ultimately survived the twohour marathon, hanging on to beat the Lady Eagles 25-23, 24-26, 20-25, 25-21, 15-11.

The momentum in the match swung back and forth numerous times in each set, including the last one, where Allen rallied from a 7-3 deficit to tie the match at 10-10 before the Trojans scored five of the final six points to take the match.

"We've been waiting to win a big game and beat a good team like this," a relieved Wakefield coach Timarie Hansen said after the match. "Allen's a fantastic team and has come a long way since we saw them at Wisner. Their scrappiness and their hustle on defense definitely showed they're a great team, and this is a great win for us."

Allen coach Cheryl Greve said she had a feeling this battle was going to be a special one during the game's first point, which volleyed back and forth countless times before the first point was scored.

"It was a great match, and I knew it was going to be a great match when I saw that first volley," she said. "I've never seen a first volley go like that, and it was a great battle between two teams. I just hate to lose a match like that.'

have lost their first game of the 2012 season Friday, but their coach thinks they got a lot of respect from one of the top teams in Class C-2.

The Trojans gave top 10-ranked West Holt all they could handle before the visiting Huskies turned a key interception into a touchdown and held off a Wakefield comeback for a 26-20 win Friday at Eaton

The Trojans and Huskies traded touchdowns in the first half. Wakefield struck first on a 59-yard pass from Evan Nicholson to Jacob Lunz, and the visiting Huskies countered with running back Josh Coyle, who broke free on a 73-yard run in the second period to knot the game at 7-7 at intermission.

"We came out really well and got up early on a big play-action pass," coach Mike Hassler said. "I thought we played really good defense the whole first half, and we had a couple of opportunities to go up 14-0 that we couldn't quite capitalize on."

West Holt opened the second half with a three-yard scoring dive by Coyle to take a 13-7 lead, but Wakefield put together an impressive drive to take a 14-13 lead early in the fourth quarter, using 20 plays and taking up the equivalent of an entire period before Josh Dolph scored on a three-yard run and Heath Greve kicked the extra point.

Take extra care to avoid harvest fires

With almost all of Nebraska un- tank is an easy way to remove deder high fire danger, it's important farmers take extra precautions with harvest underway across the state.

Cleaning and maintaining equipment is key as is being prepared in the event a fire does happen, said Paul Jasa, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension engineer.

The first thing farmers should do is to identify and monitor potential hazards on the combine, said Joe Luck, UNL Extension precision agriculture engineer.

This includes:

- doing a "dry run" of the combine before entering the field to listen for worn bearings or moving parts and check for any over-heated bearings. Push/pull shafts and sheaves often to check for worn bearings.

- Checking wires and wiring harnesses for damaged insulation to prevent an electrical short. If there have been problems with blown fuses, try to find the source of the problem instead of constantly replacing the fuse. Exposed wires could be causing the short and creating sparks which could start a fire.

 Never putting in a fuse with higher capacity than those recommended as the wires may overheat and start a fire.

side the combine should listen and watch for potential problems.

- If using other equipment (grain cart or rotary mower) in the field during harvest, also keep an eye on it for possible problems.

During harvest it's important to clean debris from the combine at regular intervals. Be sure to:

 Clean any area where chaff or plant material accumulates often, especially those near moving parts

- Check areas around the engine, exhaust manifold, fan shrouds, fuel/oil tanks, and chaff spreaders to ensure they are free of debris. Using a leaf blower or compressed air bris material that builds up on the combine.

 Closely monitor any belts that are frayed or worn as they can produce enough heat to start a fire. - Any time you think you smell smoke, stop and examine the combine completely. Chaff and plant materials may smolder for some time before an actual fire starts, sometimes even after the combine has been shut down.

It's also important to take precautionary measures and be prepared to respond if a fire does occur. This includes:

 When harvesting on windy days, if possible, start on the downwind side of the field. This way, in case a fire does occur, at least the wind will carry it away from the standing crop.

 Consider carrying a water tank with a pump to the field and always keep a fire extinguisher handy.

– Some growers keep a tractor with a tillage implement close by to till a fire break if necessary.

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Bullying is in the eye of the victim

Beauty, it has been said, is in the eye of the beholder.

What one person finds to be full of beauty, the other may think is not that big of a deal. I love driving along Interstate 80 in the western part of Nebraska and admiring the landscape, which is absent the subdivisions, gigantic billboards and eyeball-assaulting light fixtures that distract drivers from the road ahead between Omaha and Kearney – others will drive that same road and be bored by how flat, quiet and absent of intelligent life (outside of cattle and other farm creatures) everything is.

The same holds true for bullying - what one finds as simply annoying behavior can be one step short of physical assault to another person.

During his recent visit to Wayne, Kirk Smalley - the driving force behind the nationwide Stand For The Silent Movement – said the U.S. government has spent the last four years trying to define what a bully really is. He said that it's difficult to make such a definition, because the act of bullying is, in all reality, what is being felt by the person who is targeted.

You can call one person a disparaging name, and that person might think it's funny or might not respond to it at all. Call another person that same name, and you are going to hurt their feelings and make them feel as if they are being picked on. You might also call somebody by a certain nickname, and they might not be bothered by it until the one day when ally heavyweight foundations and you catch them on a "bad" day, and then it will make them feel bad about

One of the great things I've seen in this community, in the weeks we've ran our series on bullying and the recent showing of "Bully" at the Majestic Theater, is that the people in this community care about one another. There is a willingness for people to work with each other and do their part to make Wayne, America, the wonderful community that it is today.

Sometimes, though, we can go overboard when we're dealing with a particular issue. Administrators at Wayne Public Schools have a challenging task ahead of them as this community pays closer attention to the actions of those who would engage in the act of bullying, and while they are instituting a zero-tolerance policy regarding the problem, they must balance that with what some would argue are justifiable situations where a student must be disciplined.

Is physical or verbal abuse a call to action? Without question. But what about cutting in front of somebody in the lunch line? One would argue that such an act could be better handled by pulling the offender out of the line and making him go to the back of the line where he (or she) should have been originally - an in-school or out-of-school suspension is hardly a proper response to such an incident.

We must be sensitive to the students who are being targeted by bullies, and we should also be aware of what those who would bully our children are doing as they commit these inexcusable acts. But it must be done with a strong dose of common sense - suspending a student for cutting in the lunch line is the equivalent of treating dandruff with decapitation.

A lot of these problems could be handled, in all honesty, if parents would take an active role in their kids' discipline. Some parents expect the school to educate, feed and discipline their child, then wonder what's wrong when they are called because Johnny or Jane have been suspended for picking on another student. Bullying is a learned behavior that can be unlearned, but it takes more than a principal to get the kid to see the light. Parents must play a significant role in their kids' lives, and nowhere is that more important than in the disciplining of that child to make them understand what is acceptable behavior, and what is not acceptable.

This is an issue that has been brought to light by a number of people who care enough about this community to want to make a difference in the lives of our young people. From school administration to parents and other people in the community, it will require open communication, and an abundance of common sense, to bring bullying to a stop in Wayne, Amer-

And this time . . . we mean it!

The Nebraska Press Association

There it was in the Sunday paper. The same edition with the story about the drought continuing to hurt Nebraska agriculture and the assurances that just because the Cornhuskers lost their second game of the season there would NOT be mass firings in the athletic depart-

Having reached my limit of bad news, I was looking for a bit of good and was intrigued by the tabloid size and the title: "Forging Nebraska's Future 2012 Progress Report." With my cynical mind now fully engaged, I started looking for the source of the information in this document filled with charts and a rating system of outlines of stars some completely filled with ink and some with only a bit, as if the printing plates were out of register.

Yikes! There it was, the Nebraska Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Yep. The Chamber. The folks who are paid to breathe positive comments into the sagging economy because that's their Mary Poppins' duty. Wait a minute. Look at those other sponsors. A couple rethe Nebraska Legislature - remember we elect those people – and the Nebraska Press Association. You know, the old jokes about not arguing with the people who buy ink by the barrel and paper by the boxcar

And the mission statement! "Using a business-like model" to develop long-term strategies to stimulate the economy. OK, this is serious stuff. I was on the verge of thinking anything less of it, but the text seemed to face some hard issues head-on. Yes, we have tremendous water resources (most of the time) but we also generate tons more environment-threatening solid waste than we once did.

Future thinking is NOT new for Nebraskans. Years ago I was invited to sit in on sessions with such a group that would periodically meet for two days to "think" about such things. Turns out they liked to gather in small towns along Nebraska's northern border so they could slip over into South Dakota and hunt waterfowl. Yes, some folks pay big bucks to do that because the hunting is apparently better on the other side of the border. And my neighbor's back yard is always greener than mine!

But, I digress. Bottom line here: This idea of a coalition to "build a better Nebraska for the Next Generation" looks like the real deal.

discuss things like workforce and ment rates, tax incentives, exports, quality of life. AND, half of the "Advisory Committee" is under the age of 35. So the "good old boys" must all be off hunting. Or at least half downsides such as the increasing of them are.

The Progress at a Glance confirms some things – so far – that many of us already take for granted. Nebraska gets 4 of 5 stars for quality of life: It costs less to live because of business taxes. here; takes less time to get to work; there is less violent crime; health care costs less; heart disease is not as prevalent and there are fewer the issues and the plans to draft single parent families than other a working document to truly forge parts of the country.

Meetings, hearings are on the agenda

I need to begin this newsletter by apologizing for an error in my newsletter last week. When telling you about the state-based health insurance exchange meeting in South Sioux City on Sept. 12, I mentioned that the Governor was planning to attend the meeting, that was incorrect. Governor Heineman was not scheduled to attend the meeting. I was able to attend this meeting on Wednesday night and firmly believe that we are being dragged by the federal government to a place that is not good for Nebraska.

I was in Lincoln Thursday morning for a Health and Human Services Committee hearing involving child protection and when and how the state should become involved.

Thursday evening, I was in Dakota City for a meeting with the Papio-Missouri NRD where I learned that the new man-made lake being constructed near Hubbard will be named Kramper Lake after Vince Kramper of Dakota City. Congratulations, Vince.

I am back in Lincoln for an Agriculture committee hearing concerning the abandonment and mistreatment of animals. There appears to have been an increase in this problem particularly with horses, given the high cost of feed and the loss of the ability to take unwanted horses to slaughter.

The firestorm we saw this spring regarding Lean Finely Textured beef (LFTB) is once again in the news. LFTB is a component used to make certain lean ground beef. LFTB is a safe, nutritious and economical form of beef according to food safety groups, the beef industry and more importantly the Food and Drug Administration.

On Thursday, Beef Products Inc. (BPI), filed a defamation lawsuit against ABC News in a South Dakota court. The lawsuit claims that the "defendants engaged in a month-long vicious, concerted disinformation campaign against BPI." They cite 11 reports that aired on television and another 14 that could be seen online in March and April of this year. During this period the lawsuit cites 200 false statements made by ABC reporters. The reports and corresponding loss of business led to BPI closing three of its four plants that produced LFTB.

Before the reports started airing this spring, BPI was the major supplier of LFTB to fast food chains, grocery stores and the National School Lunch Program. Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota are now the only three states that participate in the National School Lunch Program that have decided to purchase ground beef that may contain LFTB, all other states have

The lawsuit is seeking $1.2 billion in damages. It may be years before the case is settled and that still won't bring back the sales or the jobs that have been lost as a result of these reports. BPI is taking steps to educate the public on LFTE and they have launched a website geared towards answering any question you may have about LFTB www.beefisbeef.com. ### Happy Birthday to U.S. Constitution

Happy birthday, Constitution of the United States of America! This year is the 225th birthday of the U.S. Constitution. The final draft of the U.S. Constitution was ratified in September of 1787 by 55 delegates to the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia's Independence Hall. One fact that many people seem to miss is that the Constitution does not provide protection to government, but rather to the citizens of this country. The document provides for a government that derives its power from the people it governs. In other words, it provides a framework for a government to protect and establish the citizen's liberty, justice and opportunity. The necessary authority of government is balanced with inherent freedoms. These authorities and freedoms are set in the Constitution's body and in its amendments.

Help your child learn to eat 'just right'

Healthy kids usually eat when respect is important. they are hungry and they stop when they start to feel full. Your child probably knows how much to eat. She knows when to stop eating

Your child probably is eating enough if she is full of energy, is growing, and seems healthy. If your child is losing weight or has special food needs, get help from a doctor. This is not the time to figure out the problem by yourself.

You can help your child learn when she is full by:

- Offering small portions and letting your child ask for more.

- Letting your child serve herself. Allowing enough time to give your child a chance to feel full.

- Taking food away when your child stops eating.

- Offering a small snack if your child is hungry between meals.

Learning hunger cues is important. Keep eating times relaxed so your child learns body signals for being hungry and feeling full. That is how your child can learn to eat in a normal way, not overeat. That is a HealthyHabits/index.html

Your child may gain too much weight if you try to get her to eat when she is full or you don't let her eat when she is hungry. Surprised? It is obvious that eating too much can make people fat, but not having enough food can have the same result. Your child might overeat later when there is another chance to eat. For example, skipping breakfast can lead to overeating at lunch.

Your child is watching you. If you overeat, your child may, too. Your child learns how to eat by seeing how you eat. Keep your own portions sensible. Start with a small amount; only eat more if you are hungry. Eat when you are hungry, not just bored or stressed. Slow down to eat the right amounts. When you take care of yourself, you take care of your child, too!

'See You at the Pole' event to be in Wayne

3:14-21) is the theme for See You at the Pole 2012, the Annual Global Day of Student Prayer. The event is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 26 at the Wayne Community Schools, and schools around the globe.

In 2011, millions of students participated in See You at the Pole in every U.S. state and over 20 countries around the world.

This is the 22nd anniversary for See You at the Pole, a student-initiated and student-led movement that started in the Ft. Worth suburb of Burleson, Texas, in 1990. SY-ATP brings students to their school flagpoles to pray for their leaders, schools, and families, asking God to bring moral and spiritual awakening to their campuses and countries.

The San Diego-based National Network of Youth Ministries co- at www.syatp.com.

(from Ephesians ordinates the SYATP promotion. Daryl Nuss, executive director of the Network, commented: "SYATP helps launch teenagers and college students - in unity - to minister to their peers. See You at the Pole empowers students in prayer at the beginning of the school year to take leadership at their schools. What better way is there to begin a semester than to pray for their friends, community, and nation?"

> The Wayne event will take place Wednesday, Sept. 26 at 6:45 a.m. at the Jr/Sr High School and 7:15a.m. at the Elementary School. The event is open to the public and all community members are invited to attend. For more information, contact Journey Christian Church or visit the See You at the Pole website

IMPORTANCE OF DENTAL RADIOGRAPHS (X-RAYS)

While some patients may be concerned about potential risks from too much exposure to radiation, x-rays are a necessary part of the dental health process and are safe when performed following the standard guidelines for radiology. Radiographs allow dentists to see and interpret signs of disease or potential problems in the teeth that are not visible through direct observation. X-rays are used to discover abscesses (pus-pockets), cysts and tumors. They help dentists locate impacted, un-erupted or extra teeth and determine congenitally missing teeth. Radiographs demonstrate the presence or degree of periodontal (gum) disease, and help to pinpoint the location and severity of cavities. Foregoing x-rays could result in an inaccurate diagnosis or incomplete treatment. Usually, patients will be given a series of x-rays that serve as a frame of reference for future changes. The time frame between x-rays, the type of x-rays and number of follow-up x-rays will be determined by your dentist's assessment of your needs and the condition of your mouth. Growth and development are additional factors

taken into account with young children. At Bright Smiles Family Dental we have a digital x-ray system in place which means that there is less radiation and Dr. Braun is able to more accurately diagnose decay and other conditions. In turn this means fewer x-rays are needed and we can enlarge, and focus in on certain parts of the x-ray. We can also send these x-rays to specialists and other offices should the need arise which eliminates taking them again. Prior to taking an x-ray a lead apron is placed on our patients, a thyroid collar is used for children's x-rays and any of our adult patients may use it should they choose to. Our staff has had the required training to take adequate and accurate x-rays and will take every precaution to keep you safe.

Changes in dairy industry amazing

I'm sure I've said in this column before that "no milk cows" was part of my marriage pact.

I love milk, I still drink a lot of it to this day, but my hat goes off to the dairy farmer. Those darned cows have to be milked every day, seven days a week. When my dad had cows, it was twice a day; I know that now, many dairies are milking three times a day, around the clock.

After our barn was torn down, we had a three sided shed, and that is where my brother and I were assigned to milk cows before and after school. Jim just told me tonight that Dad always told him that if he milked fast enough, his hands would not be cold; that was a lie! We were laughing about the job after I told him about the article in the Sunday paper that describes a robot manufactured in the Netherlands that practically does it all for

If a cow is not ready to be milked again, the robot withholds the treat, opens the door and sends the cow on her way. It knows when a cow has broken a milk hose, when its cleaning solution has run low (it cleans itself twice a day), and when it has not seen a particular cow in a while.

I think this is mind blowing! I often think about the changes in medical technology since I was a student nurse. But the changes in agriculture are really even more amazing.

These things also have amazing price tags; but think of the wear and tear on shoulders and legs while carrying milking machines, for instance; and we thought those were a marvelous invention. I guess my standard advice to a girl newly When a cow walks into the robot married to a farmer to never learn wonder what the next decade will bring in innovation? I'm kind of

Dixon County History

Elementary Education in Dixon

The early settlers in Nebraska were concerned with the education of their children. In March 1855, the first territorial legislature passed the Free Public School act which created the office of the Territorial Superintendent of Public Instruction and provided for the election of county superintendents. The county superintendents were authorized to divide the county into districts and levy a tax for not less than three nor more than five miles on all property in the county and to distribute the proceeds among the districts on the basis of the white children between the ages of five and 21 in the dis-

Little is known about the early schools in Dixon County, since records are lacking. Frequently, pioneer children would gather in the house of an educated neighbor to receive instruction. In some cases, the early churches assumed the responsibility for educating the children in the community. In 1869, there were 10 public schools with 229 children enrolled. In 1895, the number of districts had increased to 78 with were 87 different Country schools in Dixon County. District 87 was the last one built two miles east of 303 (Mrs. Brogie's Science Room). Wakefield. Ponca was number one.
