School, police prepare for what can happen

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

The horrifying story out of Connecticut last week has forced local school and law enforcement officials take a closer look at their security measures to make sure students can be safe from harm.

On Friday, a deranged 20-year-old man shot and killed his mother at her home, then broke into a Newtown, Conn., school and began an attack that ended with the deaths of 20 children and six adults, including the school principal and a number of teachers.

While the likelihood of such an event occurring on any given day is unlikely, school and law enforcement officials aren't holding on to the "it could never happen here" fantasy and are taking ongoing precautions to help prevent such an event from happening in Wayne,

On Monday, Wayne Public Schools superintendent

Mark Lenihan sent a letter and what-to-do information to parents and guardians of children in the school district, outlining the steps the school has taken to improve security on its campuses at Wayne Elementary and Wayne Junior-Senior High School.

"The incident has brought sorrow and sadness across our nation, as well as in our community," Lenihan said in the letter. "Our thoughts, sympathies and prayers go to the families of the victims, the staff and students of Sandy Hook Elementary School, and the entire community of Newtown.

In the letter, Lenihan said the school has received numerous questions about the protocol that is in place to deal with situations like the Connecticut shooting, adding that it is reviewed annually by school officials.

The new configuration of entries to both buildings and lockdown procedures that have been instituted do a good job of limiting entrance to the buildings by those not affiliated with the school.

"While there is no way to consider all possible events that might require a lock down or shelter in-place, we do ask our staff to be familiar with our plan, and have it posted in a location that is accessible to them," he

At the elementary school, a camera and buzzer system was installed on the west entrance last year, and a similar system will eventually be in place at the east entrance. Visitors are required to use the west entrance and sign in at the office.

At the junior-senior high school, the offices have been remodeled to provide a clear view of who is coming in the north entrance, and the school administration is meeting with local law enforcement to review the procedures again.

"The safety and security of our students and staff is of the utmost importance for us, and I can assure you that we will take any and all steps necessary to keep your children safe from outside influences that could compromise that," Lenihan wrote. He encouraged patrons to cooperate with the school's protocol and encouraged parents who want to visit the school to signin at the office.

Local law enforcement is also prepared if such an event were to take place here.

Wayne Police Chief Marlen Chinn said the events in Connecticut have helped to further efforts being made by the Wayne Police Department to prepare for the possibility of an attack on a school building, whether at Wayne Public School or at St. Mary's Catholic

"I'll admit it was an eye-opener, and I think it makes everybody take a close look at their policies and procedures to make sure we can handle situations like this,"

Nick Muir was sworn in as Wavne's newest member of the City Council at last night's meeting. Mayor Ken Chamberlain said he had conducted seven interviews, "all of which were good," from those who had indicated interest in serving in the capacity.

He brought forth Muir's name after the interview process and the council approved his recommendation unanimously.

Following a public hearing, the council approved resolutions in regard to the city's revolving loan funds.

Earlier this year, the Nebraska Department of Economic Development (NDED) staff was forced to change the way Community Development Block Grant revolving loan funds were monitored throughout the state. Two new members were added to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department on Tuesday. Peter Phillips and Abraham Rodriguez received approval from both the fire department and the Council.

The Council will next meet in regular session on Wednesday, Jan. 2 at 5:30 p.m. in Tax increment financing (TIF) in the council chambers. The change in meeting date is due to the New Year's holiday fall-

County board offer rejected before it has officially been made

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

The daughter of a Winside-area landowner had a response to an offer the Wayne County Commissioners were planning on making to her parents for the purchase of three acres of land.

It's a waste of time.

There's just one problem, however - the offer has yet to be officially made.

At its Dec. 4 meeting, the Wayne County Commissioners authorized Wayne County Attorney Mike Pieper to offer LeRoy and Ione Rubeck a total of $32,000 for the purand twenty-two additional miles. Now, chase of three acres of land, including right Wayne, Carroll, and Sholes, hop to it, and of way and fencing, to end a long-running automobiling will be great." argument between the county and the famtheir property.

Board chairman Jim Rabe said he had talked with Pieper on Monday and was told that Pieper would try to have the paperwork for the offer ready to be delivered to the Rubecks

The Rubecks' daughter, Linda Kirsch, said there was no need for any paperwork. "I've already told (Pieper) no," she flatly told the board. "It's a waste of time. Your state easement is south in Deano Janke's field, not on the Rubeck property." Kirsch, who told the board "you don't mess with a person who wanted to be a history teacher," produced a copy of a book published in 1914 called "History and Stories in Nebraska" that included surveyed roads that were mapped all the way to Lincoln. She said the state's easement is south of the trees in a big field.

She also produced a copy of the April 15, 1915 edition of The Wayne Herald, which included a story regarding a meeting of the Winside Road Improvement Association. While specific mention of the road in question was not included, "It has been agreed that Winside shall scrape and drag all main roads leading to neighboring towns for one half the distance to the various towns and to the county line on the main south road

After Kirsch left the meeting, Rabe said ily regarding the placement of a road on the board had authorized Pieper to make the offer to the Rubecks, but other than publication of the offer in a story and the board's minutes in the Dec. 6 edition of The Wayne Herald, a formal offer had yet to be presented to the family.

> "We probably should have LeRoy (Sheriff Jansen) take it out and deliver it to them personally," he told the board. "He wants LeRoy and Ione to have it, not (Kirsch)."

> The board approved the county's calendar for 2013 and confirmed that the courthouse will be closed on Christmas Eve and open all day on New Year's Eve. In 2013, the courthouse will be open until noon on Christmas Eve, and will be closed for all the

Rebuilding is never an easy task

A few thoughts before putting out the egg nog and cookies for Santa: - Hey, nobody said a rebuilding year would be easy.

By now, I would hope that fans of the Wayne State women's basketball team aren't making any comparisons between last year's Elite Eight squad and this year's team that is limping into the holiday break with a 6-2 record.

(Wait a minute - did I just say a team is LIMPING at 6-2? Geez, you'd think I was talking about Nebraska football or something . . .)

Those are the expectations coach Chris Kielsmeier wants out of his program, and if they aren't limping, the Wildcat women really banged their toe on a coffee table Saturday after that 39-point beatdown issued by Winona State.

This young team – with not a senior on the roster – is nowhere near playing at the level that was exhibited by last year's senior-dominated that made the school's first NCAA Div. II Elite Eight appearance nine months ago. With only two starters and just two juniors on the roster, this is a team that doesn't begin to compare with what Wildcat fans enjoyed last season.

That being said -6-2 is nothing to sneeze at. With all the inexperience and injuries in some areas where depth is a concern, this team is showing signs that it can be a very good team by season's end.

Kielsmeier said this team has the potential to be something special down the road. Assuming there are no losses in the current roster, Wayne State should have a ton of experience next year - but a lot of that will depend not only on how this year's team builds confidence and consistency, but in how quickly we grasp the concept that this year's team is going to take some of those bumps and bruises that last year's team dished out to some folks.

It's not an easy job, but be patient with these young ladies – it will be

- The high school basketball season is showing some promise heading into the holiday break.

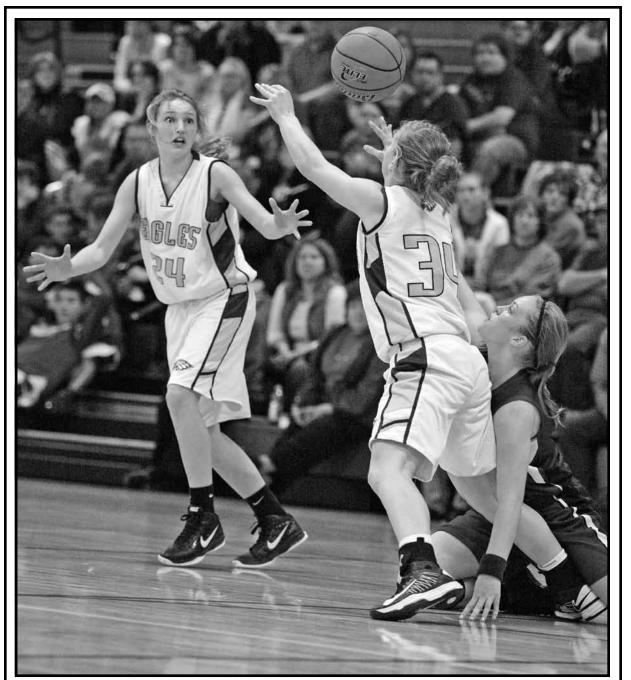

The Wayne High boys are undefeated heading into a Friday showdown at South Sioux City. Both Wakefield teams are off to 4-1 starts. The Laurel-Concord/ Coleridge boys seem to be showing signs of being a tough out for some of the area's traditional top-tier teams. If the first few weeks are any indication, we could be heading for a little March Madness of our own down in Lincoln.

We'll get to see Wayne and LCC match up in the first round of the boys bracket at the Great Northeast Nebraska Shootout, which should be a fun tournament to watch this year. Hartington Cedar Catholic is always tough, but that Wayne-HCC finals matchup that seems to take place every year could very easily be a game for third place, thanks to the addition of two solid programs in Adams Central and Boone Central/Newman Grove. If the top four teams all win that first round, you'll want to get to Rice Auditorium early on Friday for what should be a barn-burning semifinal session on the boys side.

 I don't know if there's anything in the budget for recruiting – er, er, encouraging – students to transfer, but Winside could really use an infusion of bodies right now.

Wrestling is making do with filling just over half of the 14 weight classes, but there are fewer guys filling basketball uniforms right now, and that makes for some rough nights at the office for coach Jeff Messersmith and his team.

There's always a silver lining to every cloud, though, and here is one for the Winside coach – he will NEVER have to worry about parents complaining about the lack of playing time their son is getting this season, although it might be tough having to buy 2-3 sets of basketball shoes with all the running they've had to do so far this season.

the Blue Devils were able to edge the Eagles 55-51 in the first of two matchups of undefeated teams for Wayne.

"This was a great game, and our guys played a solid second half and won a big conference game on the road," Ruhl said.

It was a tight game for much of the first half, with O'Neill hitting a late trey to take a 27-26 halftime lead. Wayne came out and played outstanding defensively in the second half, outscoring O'Neill 14-5 in the pivotal third period and finishing with the four-point win.

Barry and Grant Anderson each had 14 points in the win, while Jared Anderson scored 12, and Brady Soden put in 11. Barry had seven assists in the win, while Soden led with seven rebounds.

Wayne had no problems on Thursday and Friday, posting easy wins at home against West Point-Beemer and on the road at Wisner-Pilger.

On Thursday, the Blue Devils caught fire early on with Barry, Hoskins and Jared Anderson all lighting up from long range as part of a 26-point first-quarter explosion in a 65-41 win over West Point-Beemer at Wayne High School.

Wayne High sprinted out of the gates in the first two periods and had a 23-point lead built up by the half, allowing them to come away with the easy win.

"We got off to a great start and had a super first half," Ruhl said. "The second half we were not as sharp, but we got everyone a chance to play.

Wildcats humbled at Winona

Women 6-2 after weekend road split

It wasn't the way the Wayne State women's basketball team was hoping to go into the holiday break.

The Wildcats shot a dismal 28.8 percent from the field and suffered their worst loss in Chris Kielsmeier's five seasons as head coach, as Winona State drilled the then-No. 12 Wayne State women 74-35 in a one-sided matchup Saturday in Winona, Minn.

The Wildcats' worse loss under Kielsmeier was a 34-point affair at Concordia-St. Paul in the 2010-11 season, but the combination of finals week, an injurydepleted lineup and a solid, experienced opponent combined for a rough night at the office for the 6-2 Wildcats.

"I didn't have us ready to play, and we left some good shooters wide open and didn't play with a lot of confidence," Kielsmeier said. "We played like a tired basketball team. It's not what we expect from this program, but we hope a lot of good can come from this.

The Wildcats got limited output from starting post player Whitney Epp and freshman Katie Hoskins coming off the bench. Both players were limited due to injuries, leaving Wayne State with fewer options un-

"Whitney and Katie didn't practice much last week because of injuries, and we don't have a lot of depth in the post, which made it difficult for us to prepare," Kielsmeier said. "I'm proud that we found a way to win Friday, but we just came out tired against an experienced

Jordan Spencer was the only Wildcat to finish in double figures on the night. She finished with a team-high 12 points and also led the team in rebounds with eight.

On Friday, the Wildcats went on an 11-2 run over the last six minutes of the game and were able to come away with a 60-52 win at Upper Iowa.

The Wildcats led by seven at the half and never trailed in the second half, but Upper Iowa was able to tie the game at 41-41 on a 3-pointer by Lindsay Carroll with seven minutes to go. Wayne State held the Peacocks to just one basket over the final six minutes to come away with "The girls showed a lot of toughness and resiliency in getting the win at Upper Iowa," Kielsmeier said. "We played really good at times, and right now we're just struggling to find that level of consistency.'

Spencer paced the Wildcats with game highs of 20 points and 12 rebounds for her third double-double of the season, while sophomore guard Ashton Yossi also reached double figures with 17 points. Junior backup center Shantel Lehmann added nine points and eight rebounds for the Wildcats.

ALLEN'S BOYS HOPED TO make it a clean sweep in front of the Eagle faithful, but a rough third period helped the Cougars come away with a 53-34 win, dropping the Allen boys to 1-5 on the year.

It was a competitive game for much of the first half, and Allen was still in arm's reach with the Cougars taking a 27-19 halftime lead. Allen came out cold in the second half, however, and the Cougars held the Eagles scoreless for the first six minutes and went on a 12-0 run to take control of the game.

"We forced the ball too much in the second half," assistant coach Drew Diediker said after the game. "We played hard tonight and the score wasn't an indication of how hard we played. We just got tired and needed to do a better job seeing the floor."

Cougars forward Drew Zitek scored a game-high 21 points and Dakota Riecken added 14, with a number of those shots coming from the outside.

"We matched up with them well on the inside, but (Riecken) was able to shoot well from the outside, and it was tough for us to match up with that," Diediker said.

Jacob Stewart led the Eagles with 12 points in the losing effort, while Brian Boese scored 10 points. Also Allen scoring were Landon Kraft with four, Austin Connot and Zach Crom with three each and Jon Bausch with a field goal.

Wayne State Coaches Show

Victoria Kranz, who was solid on defending O'Neill's top player, hit a pair of treys and finished with a gamehigh 15 points to lead three Blue Devils in double figures. Members would like to thank all those who helped with the fruit process. "We know it can be long and painful, but in the end it's oh so sweet!

He worked for 12 years in Africa and Europe before starting his academic career and now collaborates with many universities around the world to help develop precision farming and agricultural robotics. His presentation will discuss how smarter machines will save time and money.

Jacobs is a professor in the Department of Computer Science at the University of Maryland with a joint appointment in the university's Institute for Advanced Computer Studies. Jacobs' research has focused on human and computer vision, especially in the areas of object recognition and perceptual organization. He will describe the first mobile app for identifying plant species using automatic visual recognition. The system called LeafSnap identifies tree species from photographs of their leaves. In addition, he will discuss some recent work on animal species identification.

Tang is an associate professor in the Department of Agricultural and Biosystems Engineering at Iowa State University. His research program focuses on the development of robotic and intelligent systems for agricultural applications such as robotic weeding. He will present his research findings in crop and weed recognition, and share his vision about how the technological advancements in sensing and computation may enable us to invent new weeding tools that can maximize weed control efficacy while minimizing their environmental footprint. For more information visit the ARD's Big Idea Seminars website at bigideaseminars.unl.edu.

Donate blood, save lives

Every two seconds, someone, somewhere needs blood. During the winter months the need for blood is constant, however, poor weather conditions can make it challenging for donors to give blood. January has been designated as National Blood Donor Month to encourage donors to give blood. Just one unit of blood can help save the lives of up to three hospital patients. You can make a difference by making a life-saving blood donation blood at the Wayne Community Blood Drive on Thursday, Dec. 27, 2013 from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m. at the Wayne Fire Department, 510 Tomar Drive.

For more information or to schedule an appointment to donate, contact LifeServe Blood Center at (800) 287-4903 or visit www.lifeservebloodcenter.org

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Why?

It always seems to be the first question asked after a violent rampage ike the one unleashed last week by an obviously mentally-deranged indizidual in Connecticut.

Who thinks of murdering his mother, breaking into a school and killing 27 people, the vast majority of them no older than 7 years of age? What kind of darkness do you have to plunge into to be able to bring yourself to killing innocent children before taking your own life?

My daughter, who is hoping to be a school teacher a few months from now, sought my advice on what would bring someone to kill in this man-

Why does this keep happening?

It wasn't that long ago that the Von Maur shootings happened in Omaha, when a young man walked into Westroads Mall and started shooting up a department store. I was working in downtown Omaha that day and actually had to text my daughter and ex-wife to make sure they weren't taking a rare weekday off to do some post-holiday shopping. I talked with a young man who was in the store next door when it happened, and I've never seen a look of fear in another human being's eyes like what he exhibited as he recounted the events that took place while he, his wife and daughter scrambled to safety.

There are a lot of things we can point to – none of which are exclusively the problem, but the combination of them has helped create an environment where situations like this are happening far too often.

First and foremost, I feel, is the lack of accountability that, somehow, is encouraged by our nation's leaders.

Look at what's going on in our nation's capital. Our nation is $16 trillion in debt and standing on the edge of a fiscal disaster, and rather than accepting blame and seeking real solutions, our "representatives" seem hell-bent on blaming the other guy, rather than coming together and of-

That way of thinking trickles down - everywhere you look, a lot of peoole seem more interested in spinning the facts to satisfy their concept of reality, rather than taking account of themselves and accepting responsi-

We also have allowed our culture to glorify violence, blood and death to the point where nobody seems shocked by incidents such as the one in

Rap music, movies and television glorify drugs, gangs and mayhem in ways that are beyond common sense. The big hit right now, "Gangam Style," was created by someone who openly rapped about the death of American citizens. Video games have gone from eating dots and ghosts to shooting up enemy terrorists and cops like it was a penny arcade.

Arguments can be made regarding the statistics that are out there reday of your life, the birth of your into this group. The old saying, "You ating to gun violence, and while I'm absolutely all in favor of the safe child, being overshadowed with the and responsible acquisition and use of guns, I believe it's time we had a feeling that something just isn't conversation about the possession of the kinds of guns that are only built right? There are times when a parfor the killing of another human being. We can make a solid argument for ent just knows even if the doctors weapons that are used for hunting animals, target practice and safety. But do we really need an assault rifle with 100 rounds of ammunition to keep a burglar from breaking and entering?

It's a question that continues to be asked, and I hope and pray that, as the year 2012 comes to a close, we can answer the question with solutions that will help us avoid having to ask that question again in the future.

Have a Merry Christmas, and pray for those who have lost loved ones

Letters

A correction from North Pole

I recognize this letter may seem a bit tardy, but here at the North Pole we just received the Dec. 6 edition of The Wayne Herald.

We subscribe to any number of local newspapers (It helps with the naughty/nice list). Earlier this month the mail was delayed because of severe winter weather in northern Canada; hence the delay in composing this missive.

We appreciate the front-page coverage of the jolly old elf participating in the Parade of Lights. However, we are compelled to bring a most egregious error to your attention. The caption to the left of the picture reads, "Ho Ho Harley." It should be "Ho Ho Honda.'

Undoubtedly, Duane Schroeder is mortified for folks to think he has been reduced to riding a Harley. He was kind enough to lend Santa the use of the Wing when we had trouble with the sleigh, due to the severe snow deficiency down there in Nebraska. Therefore, we cannot let this mistake go unchallenged and uncorrected. We trust you will print this letter to set the record straight and that you will avoid similar errors in the future.

Remember, "You meet the nicest people on a Honda."

With best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain very truly yours:

Challenging our rural relevance

So what does it mean when the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture says that rural America is "becoming less and less relevant?" Ag Secretary Tom Vilsack, the former Democratic governor of Iowa, said it last week at a Farm Journal sponsored

What is Rural America? It's home to about a sixth of the nation's population. Just who they are and what that means depends on who is doing the statistical measuring and for what reason. The Associated Press says that rural voters accounted for just 14 percent of the turnout in last month's election, with 61 percent of them supporting Republican Mitt Romney and 17 percent Barack Obama. According to the AP, twothirds of those rural voters said that government is doing too many things better left to businesses and Vilsack lays the blame for Congress' inability to pass a farm bill on the squabbling going on among groups in rural America. His department says that 50 percent of rural counties have lost population in the past four years and poverty rates are higher there than in metropolitan areas. As the population shifts to cities and suburbs, the gap grows between people who care about a booming ag economy and those who just want food to eat.

The Secretary says rural Americans need to be proactive instead of reactive. He suggests replacing complaints about EPA regulations on farm dust and labor rules on cal community to deteriorate." young people and dangerous jobs -

Chuck Hassebrook, director of the Center for Rural Affairs in Lyons, NE, (pop. 851), says some of the problem in rural America can be traced to the decline of the family farm. In a recent news release, Hassebrook said that increasing farm size and absentee ownership have caused "social conditions in the lo-

HHS needs to stop kicking our families

Can you imagine the happiest Dee Shaffer and her son, Brian, fall do not know it right away. Recently, an article was in the Lincoln Journal Star about a family in Ashland, Nebraska that I have worked with; I actually introduced LB1083 last year to help address some of their needs that are similar to a few families that I have worked with in our Legislative district.

We have a handful of individuals in our state that need the help of our state through various programs that do not fit perfectly into the categories that have been developed.

By the age of five, Brian was lost to autism, developmental disabilities, all of which are now complicated with multiple chemical sensitivities, congestive heart failure and food allergies. They recently discovered that Brian is allergic to at least 97 different items. Brian is not able to be out and about in the world. He is safest at home where he is in a controlled mother, Dee, in lieu of legislation that would allow Dee to be his private duty nurse. This agreement would pay her for providing Brian with 18 hours of care a day. This agreement worked very well until 2011 when the state transferred his case to managed care under Coventry Health Care of Nebraska. Last year, I introduced LB1083, which was passed by the Legislature that states that licensed nurses may care for family members in their can; these are people. homes and receive pay for their sersimilar situations. The state of Nebraska through Coventry has not lived up to the agreement that the state had originally negotiated with Dee and Senator Cap Dierks. They also have not provided any other caregiver for Brian or any payments to assist Dee during the past 14 months.

At a time when healthcare is at the forefront, it seems that we are trying to "stiff" families that we, as a state, have promised to assist. The Shaffer story is a similar story to situations being faced by individuals in our area. When families have been able to provide aid to their loved one at home, keeping them safe and as healthy as can be expected with help from the state, we need to continue to help them. It saves the taxpayers of the state more money in the long run than it would if individuals like Brian were in a care facility.

As for Dee and Brian, the fate of their assistance from the state will remain in limbo until a hearing in January. The Department of Health and Human Services continues to inexcusably kick this family down the road. This is not the proverbial

Home staging is simply a professional process of "getting your house ready to sell on the real estate market and to be shown to buyers". It begins with cleaning, de-cluttering, and shining up your home and sometimes that's all you need! It can also become as detailed as actually bringing in new or borrowed furniture and accessories, designed to

Your best option is to get an objective professional opinion from someone who is knowledgeable in this area. For the last 20+ years, I have helped hundreds of sellers get their homes ready for sale. Look at it this way – if you buy an item from a local merchant you decide whether to shop in your rather than from the big discount store in the larger community down the road, the merchant in that local store might take the same dollar and purchase something in the store across the street. The owner of the store across the street might pay his employee with that dollar. That employee might make a purchase at another store in your community. The owner of that local store might use that dollar to make a contribution to a local sports program. That local sports program your town's economy. attracts the visiting shoppers from the other communities in your town, which brings outside dollars into your community. What are the reasons that you find yourself shopping outside of town? The following list might get you started thinking.

- I'm looking for the best price. - I want greater variety of mer-

- I like the convenience of store

 I have a desire to be "different". As you think about your reasons for shopping somewhere outside of your community, consider how local merchants could fill your needs. For every reason you can think of that makes you shop out of town, consider an alternative that would allow you to shop in your community. Let's looks at "Price". Calculate the price of driving to your alternative merchant who is 30 miles out of town. Use the following formula to calculate your actual savings. M = Miles to the out of town merchant

Add the trip cost to the price of the products/services purchased. Subtract the total from the price of the identical higher priced goods available in your community. Did you really save anything by driving out of town to get the things you could have purchases at home? Does it really pay to get a lower price if it costs more to drive the distance to get the savings? If I continue to shop out of town, will I have any options to shop locally in the future?

- Customer service remains the number one competitive advantage for small retailers.

If you have to admit that you do a lot of your shopping for goods and services outside your hometown, now is the time to make a change to help your local merchants grow and prosper. You can make a difference by changing your shopping habits and shopping locally as a routine. You can also encourage others by your strong example.

PEO silent auction held

The annual PEO Chapter AZ silent auction was held in the home of Kris Giese on Dec. 4.

coln's spring semester water semi-lectures covering a variety of timely water-related topics.

The free public lectures begin Jan. 16 and continue weekly through April 24, except for March 20, during spring break. The 14 lectures are Wednesdays from 3:30-4:30 p.m. in the first floor auditorium of Hardin Hall, northeast corner of North 33rd and Holdrege streets, UNL East Campus.

"Weekly topics run the gamut of timely and provocative water and water-related subjects, which broadens the scope of the lecture series and ensures that there are at least one or two lectures that anyone interested in water can relate to and have interest in," said Nebraska Water Center assistant director Lorrie Benson, who organizes the annual series. The NWC is part of the University of Nebraska's Robert B. Daugherty Water for Food Insti-

Andrea Brookfield of the University of Kansas opens the lecture series with a talk on integrating hydrologic models, building new tools for managing water.

"Modeling is an essential and critical tool, both for water quantity and quality, for current and future water management, so it's not unusual to use the lecture series to increase our knowledge of the latest practices in that field," Benson said.

Other speakers and lectures include a talk on estimating and measuring global precipitation in the 21st century by George Huffman of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on Feb. 6; the new local politics of water by Megan Mullin of Temple University on Feb. 20; and adaptive governance of urban watersheds by Ahjond Garmestani of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on March 6.

Invasive species is another issue of increasing importance in managing water and water systems and David Strayer of the Cary Institute of Ecosystem Studies will speak on the effects of the Zebra Mussel invasion on aquatic ecosystems in the Hudson River and other areas on March 13. Zebra Mussels are a persistent and increasing threat to many Nebraska and Iowa ecosystems, as well.

On April 10, Jeremy Weiss of the University of Arizona will address the ramifications of recent variations in low temperature and moisture constraints on vegetation in the southwestern U.S.

Later in the month, Steven Pe-

Remembering the children

I wrote a column last night that was full of anger and anguish. I decided today that probably is not appropriate; it certainly does not help anything. All I know is that the tears keep coming, especially when the faces or names of those little kids show up on the news. It HAS to stop! Somehow!

Mike Kelly interviewed Fred Wilson, the retired teacher who was shot in the Von Maur massacre. He feels we have way too much violence in movies and computer games. Mike Huckabee is getting all kinds of flack for saying this country has lost its way, in so many ways. Families have disintegrated, electronics have taken the place of relationships, and moral values have disappeared. My own take on that is that when we began to abort babies, everything changed. The argument for the law was that it was better for children to be aborted than to be abused or neglected; we have way more abuse and neglect than ever before. Of course, the drug culture has to be blamed for much of that, but it's all part of the downward spi-

the fact that this is the fourth mass shooting he has dealt with since he took office is mind-boggling. And I give him credit for showing up; I'm not sure I could face all that grief like he did on Sunday night. As I heard one Newtowner say on the radio today, "we want to be a support, but we need support ourselves.'

dian school in Minnesota are on their way to Connecticut, just as students from Columbine came to their school. Someone in California sent money for coffee to the General Store! One of the things that moved me was the sight of all the flowers on the iron fence around the American Embassy in Moscow. Parents all over the world can relate.

And Ann Curry started an Acts of Kindness movement that is taking off all over the country. The site says that Fred Rogers, our neighborly Mr. Rogers told us that when things happened that scared him when he was a child, his mother told him to look for the helpers, there would always be helpers. And that has certainly been true, again. There are always heroes in these kinds of situations; I just wish some were not dead heroes.

Our friends in Virginia sent a poem that reminds us that those children are spending Christmas in Heaven with Jesus; yes, and as Fr. Rick used to remind us, there is no dimension of time in heaven, and their parents will be there with them "in the twinkling of an eye". I try to hang on to that vision. And Some of the kids from the In- continue to pray for those families.

Planning now for next year's drought?

By RUTH VONDEROHE UNL Extension Educator

The data are in and the climate experts have made their forecasts. The chances of you having average soil moisture going into next year are slim and none. So what are you going to do to prepare? Stay

Drought is hard to prepare for and even harder to predict. Last summer caught a lot of people by surprise and now we are paying the price with high feed costs and limited availability.

Next year, though, shouldn't catch anyone by surprise. know already that it is nearly imture into the soil profile by next depressing information? I sugspring. Unless you receive lots of extra, good soaking moisture next spring, dryland yields are likely to be below average. And since there will be very little hay carryover, prices are likely to stay high. We also know that most pastures were grazed more heavily last year than usual. They have almost no forage remaining for use next year and most root systems were weakened going into winter. Therefore, carrying capacity next year probably will be less than average unless you receive way above average precipitation. Even with extra rain, though, spring growth could be slower or later than usual.

What should you do with all this gest you begin by taking a realistic look at your livestock forage program. If it stays dry, can you afford to keep doing what you have been doing? Should you plant annual forages to get more hay? Or rent more corn stalks for winter grazing? How about grazing more stockers and fewer cows? Or even sell all your cattle and rent out your pasture? And if it does rain, how can you take the most advantage of it?

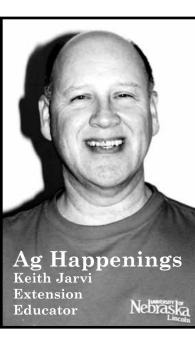

The time to think about and answer these questions really was a year ago, but now is better than next summer. What will you do?

Marketing in New Era workshops announced

Here is a new opportunity for local firms to sponsor a marketing workshop. Thanks to the Nebraska Soybean Board and in cooperation with University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension, we announce opportunities to sponsor local 2013 Marketing in a New Era workshops

The Marketing in a New Era program is an electronic agricultural commodity marketing simulation game designed to educate producers and develop their skills in marketing. Users will learn how market fluctuations, crop insurance, target prices, decision dates, pricing tools, and strategies work together to secure a profit. A local area sponsor will provide a location and time to hold the workshop. A team of education specialists will hold a three to six hour workshop where participants develop simple budgets, discuss challenges and opportunities in the markets, create a market plan and execute their plan in a variety of simulated years. After the simulations, there will be a debriefing session and a discussion.

New Era, you will receive as much or as little assistance as you wish. Our professional staff can help you with the preparations and planning needed for your workshop, including advertising and other promotional materials. Your first step as a sponsor is to reserve a date and

Here are a few things about keeping your landscape a little healthier through the winter months. With little or no snow on the ground it is tempting to walk or park on turf during the winter.

We are inevitably going to get some ice, but be aware that de-icing salt applied to surfaces may run off and enter soil or be splashed onto nearby vegetation. In soil, salts reduce the availability of water to plants, and significantly increase water stress during spring and summer. This effect has been referred to as chemical drought.

Salts splashed directly on foliage may burn and kill the affected parts, or entire plants. This is often observed where salts from winter maintenance damage evergreen trees and shrubs adjacent to roadways. The sodium and chloride

Avoid alcohol, drive safely during holidays

December is a month filled with holiday parties, but alcohol can lead to motor vehicle crashes and deaths.

"No one thinks that their holiday celebration will end in tragedy," said Scot L. Adams, director of the Division of Behavioral Health at the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services. "But for those who include alcohol in their celebrations and then get behind the wheel, this can happen. So do your part this holiday season by choosing to drive safe and sober and help others do the same.'

Before you head out to any holidays parties, if you plan on drinking, make sure you have a designated driver.

If you are the designated driver, always buckle up and make sure your passengers are buckled in drive with caution, and don't hesitate to call 911 to report a suspected drunk driver.

If you are hosting a celebration involving alcohol:

- Designate a sober driver or arrange another safe way home.

- Never serve alcohol to those under the age of 21.

- Plan safe parties, including providing non-alcoholic drink options to guests and not serving alcohol

- Be prepared to get everyone home safe in case plans or individual circumstances change.

the last hour of the gathering.

- If someone you know is drinking, don't let that person get behind the wheel. Your actions may save someone's life.

"Have safe and happy holidays,"

Adams said.
