Lower Elkhorn NRD to go ahead with hearing on new water rules

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Irrigation concerns in certain parts of Wayne County and other parts of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District brought more than 150 residents from a three-county area to Northeast Community College last week to air concerns about possible rule changes for water usage in 2013.

A number of conflicts between those operating high-volume irrigation wells and rural residents with domestic wells forced the LENRD to take a look at possible adjustments to deal with water issues that were augmented by the drought conditions that have been prevalent in the area throughout 2012.

Concern was heightened after a recent discovery that showed all 243 irrigation wells in the district had lower water levels than a year ago, and at least a third of them had recorded all-time lows.

Several townships in Wayne County would be affected by any new rule changes the 15-member NRD board might make, including Brenna, Chapin, Hancock, Plum Creek, Strahan and parts of Hunter and Wilbur townships.

Most of those in attendance from Wayne County who spoke to the NRD board urged the board to go slow with any proposed rule changes.

"I think everybody realizes we didn't have any rain this year, and that's the big problem," said Scott Krusemark, whose family has farm land in Wayne County. "I think, if anything, this has been an educational year for us, and we've learned that these domestic wells need to be brought up to date and worked on."

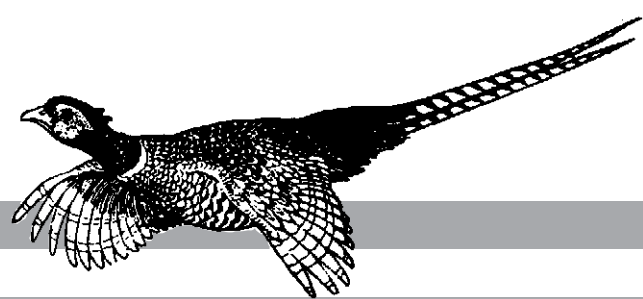

Many of those irrigators who raised concerns shared Krusemark's thoughts, as a number of domestic wells were not dug deep enough originally, rendering them dry after a year's worth of drought conditions in the area.

Targeting new water rules at irrigators could bring more legal concerns for the NRD, Krusemark suggested.

Keep gas meters clear this winter

Severe winter weather could land heavily and with little warning now through late spring, and Black Hills Energy has an important safety message about rapidly developing dangers that can occur if snow and ice builds up on natural gas meters.

The company urges customers with any gas-related emergency concerns to call the toll-free Black Hills Energy emergency number, answered all day, every day of the year, at (800) 694-8989.

Gas meters and regulators are designed with the weather in mind, but a coating of ice or snow could cause a loss of service, an inaccurate bill, or a legitimate safety concern.

"Removing snow gently by hand or with a broom is the only way to do it," said Jeff Sylvester, vice president of Nebraska operations. "You don't want to create an immediate danger by striking meter parts with a shovel, ice pick or other tool that could damage or break the meter. Natural gas has a consistently commendable safety record, and public and employee safety are always our first concern. Meters are durable, but gas equipment has to be easy to see and get to all year in an emergency, so removing snow is essential."

Sylvester warns that it's important to remove snow before it has a chance to freeze. "If you notice ice buildup, please contact us and a Black Hills Energy technician will respond free of charge," he said. The toll-free, 24/7 Black Hills Energy emergency number is (800) 694-8989.

Natural gas is injected with a rotten egg odor to help detect a leak. If you suspect an indoor gas leak:

- Get everyone out of the home or business immediately and call 911 or the Black Hills Energy emergency number from a safe distance on a cell phone or from a neighboring location.

- When leaving, don't touch any switches or electronics, and leave windows and doors in their current position. Touching or moving any of these can create static electricity capable of causing a fire or explosion.

- Once everyone is safely outside, don't under any circumstances go back inside. Emergency response and Black Hills Energy personnel will let you know when it's safe to return.

Outdoor safety measures include:

- Keep snow blowers and shovels away from gas meters and other above-ground equipment.
- Gently clear snow by hand or with a broom.
- Use your hands or a brush to clear snow away from the outdoor vents serving high-efficiency furnaces. Furnaces will not run safely and efficiently if the vents are blocked.

- Make snow removal contractors or personnel aware of gas equipment so they don't accidentally hit a natural gas meter or piping. Hitting the meter or piping with a shovel or other snow removal equipment could damage the meter, creating a highly dangerous situation.

"In my opinion, if you go strictly after regulating irrigation wells and we don't regulate domestic wells, I think that's discriminatory and there will be more lawyers involved," he said. "Even though it was a small minority (with water problems), they were loud and you listened, and it's your job to listen. But, please, ask them what facts they have before you jump to any conclusions."

The LENRD board has a number of possibilities they will look at prior to issuing any rule changes for 2013, including:

- Limiting irrigation water to at least 8 acre inches per year, with a default allocation of 15 acre inches if the board does not enact the control prior to Dec. 1.

- Requiring pumps to be turned off for a certain period of time in an effort to rotate irrigation use.

- Requiring flow meters or other measuring devices on irrigation wells. (The LENRD board voted last month to set aside $100,000 for cost sharing in designated conflict areas in Madison, Pierce and Wayne counties.)

- Requiring mandatory continuing education to reduce groundwater depletion and also reduce conflicts between users.

Wayne County area farmer Rich Koenig spoke in favor of moving forward with a January public hearing, reminding the board that the LENRD may have to follow state directives if they don't take care of the situation at the local level.

"I realize a lot of people here tonight are against it, but if you guys want to keep local control, you'd better move forward and look at things," he said. "This NRD is under a microscope right now, and I hope you make a good, informed decision. You would rather have the NRD maintain control rather than having decisions made in Lincoln, because if they're made there, you aren't going to like it."

LENRD board member Joel Hansen of Wayne said the groundwater concerns has been an ongoing issue for some time, dating back to 2007 in Wayne County.

"It's not something that is just now being talked about by this board," he said. "We have had problems in Wayne County . . . I think it needs to move on to a public hearing."

The board voted 10-0, with five members absent, to move ahead with a public hearing, which will be held Thursday, Jan. 17, at 3 p.m. in Norfolk. The board could consider adopting some or all of the controls suggested when it meets the following Thursday, Jan. 24. If those controls are approved, they would take effect the following month.

From The Bleachers

Elite 8 is No. 1 in Top 10

There are top tens, and then there is the From The Bleachers Top 10 that looks back on the top area sports events of 2012.

There's nothing scientific about this - it's just The Bleacher Bum's look back at some of the big events that happened on the local sports scene. So, without further adieu, here's the list:

1. First Elite Eight - For the first time in school history, Wayne State made the Elite Eight as the women's basketball team capped a magical year with a trip to San Antonio. Things were looking fantastic until Bentley College slapped a wicked full-court press that helped them bounce back from a double-digit deficit to knock Wayne State out in the Div. II quarterfinals. It was a long bus ride both directions, but one that will long be remembered by Wildcat faithful.

2. Rugby team wins national title - Wayne State never had a national champion in any sport at any level until the ruggers went to New Jersey and claimed the NSCRO women's national championship. The team made an amazing goal-line stand to win their semifinal matchup, then dominated in a 32-0 shutout in the finals to bring the first-ever national title back to Wayne, America.

3. New guy in charge - The unexpected departure of Eric Schoh as athletic director at Wayne State opened the door for a new guy, Mike Powicki, to take the reins of the Wildcat athletic department. Schoh, now the AD at Winona State, did a fantastic job during his tenure here and left things in great shape for Powicki, who came to Wayne from Minnesota State in Mankato, Minn.

4. New look at Wayne State - The recent announcement of renovations at Cunningham Field and the soccer complex are going to be a big improvement to the athletic facilities at the college. Field turf will replace the natural grass at the football stadium, and the work that will go into that will allow for a widening of the soccer field to make it compliant with NCAA minimum regulations. Once the $1.3 million project is completed, it will give a fresh look to the campus.

5. A wing and a "Claire" - The top story in this year's list probably doesn't happen without the amazing buzzer-beater shot made by Claire Duwelius in the finals of the NSIC conference tournament. The 3-pointer by the senior not only gave Wayne State a thrilling come-from-behind win over Augustana, but allowed Wayne State to secure the host site for the Central Regional tournament, where Wayne State won its first regional title and earned a trip to the Elite Eight. The call by former Voice of the Wildcats Bill Seifert is still ringing in my ears nine months later.

6. Softball back at state - Wayne High's softball team made what is becoming an annual trip to Hastings for the State Softball Championships. The Blue Devils won a wild matchup against Milford before losing a pair of tough games to bow out of the tournament. We're not sure what life would be like without a trip to Hastings every October... and we hope we won't find out for some time.

7. Volleyball team upsets No. 1 UNK - The Wayne State vs. UNK rivalry added another exciting chapter this year when the Wildcats upset then-undefeated and top-ranked Nebraska-Kearney in Rice Auditorium. The win definitely helped Wayne State in their efforts to qualify in an even tougher Central Region tournament this year, where they lost to the eventual six-time national champs from Concordia-St. Paul.

8. LCC to L&C - Conference realignment isn't limited to the college ranks, as we found out this past year when Laurel-Concord/Coleridge bid adieu to the NENAC to join the Lewis and Clark Confer-

Club wrestling program is labor of love for WSC coaches

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

When wrestling was discontinued as a varsity sport at Wayne State College many years ago, it eliminated a venue for area wrestlers to continue competing after their high school years were over.

The sport has experienced a resurrection of sorts over the last five years at the college. Now competing as a club sport, the Wildcat wrestling program is quickly establishing itself as one of the top club teams in the United States.

Greg VanderWeil, an industrial technology instructor at the college, has worked hard to get the program back on its feet after an absence of almost three decades, and with the support of a number of people and business owners in the community, the program is quickly working its way up among the best programs in the National Collegiate Wrestling Association.

"It's been a labor of love for me, and it's been a real positive growth cycle," he said. "The talent pool has always been there for us, and the program is really starting to take on a life of its own."

The resurrected program got its start five years ago when VanderWeil put out information to would-be wrestlers at the college. About 30 kids showed interest, and the interest in the club has continued to gather interest among wrestlers who have come to the college.

Rob Peter was one of the first kids to express interest in the new club five years ago. The 197-pound national qualifier has been with the program from the beginning, when he actually intended to play baseball at Wayne State College.

"I didn't make the (baseball)

"I take care of the logistics, and Aaron (Schuett) handles the technique and conditioning. He's there every day in the practice room and has a great expertise and wrestling background, and we're very blessed to have him on our staff."

team, and a couple of weeks later I heard they were starting a wrestling team, so I went to the first meeting and the rest is history," Peter said.

The O'Neill native wrestled for four years in high school, coming up one match short of qualifying for state all four years.

"I made it to the heartbreak round every year at districts, but I finally broke through my sophomore year (at Wayne State) and qualified for nationals," he said.

It's also been an opportunity for Glenwood, Iowa native Jon Williams, who originally came to Wayne State to compete in track, but found the wrestling program and wanted to continue competing in the sport.

"I didn't like how things finished for me in high school and wanted to keep getting better," he said. "I got a call from coach (VanderWeil) and thought it would be interesting to check out the program, and I really like it a lot."

VanderWeil has called on another coach with Wayne ties, Aaron Schuett, to lead the team as its technique and conditioning coach.

When they're not hard at work in practice or competition, the Wayne State wrestlers hang out with Olympic champions. Here they are with Jordan Burroughs, a 2012 Olympic gold medalist and two-time undefeated national champion at Nebraska, after a recent Husker home dual.

Both VanderWeil and Schuett were former coaches at Wayne High School and had the opportunity to coach each other's sons in high school, and the opportunity to work with him again has proven to be a positive for the program.

"I take care of the logistics, and Aaron handles the technique and conditioning," VanderWeil said. "He's there every day in the practice room and has a great expertise and wrestling background, and we're very blessed to have him on our staff. He's so passionate about the sport, and we're both at a point in our lives where we can give these kids a good pair of coaches that can help them be successful."

Because of its status as a club program, the wrestlers have to be creative with their fundraising, especially since it costs about $1,000 in travel, lodging and tournament fees to compete every weekend during the season.

VanderWeil said the support of the student senate at Wayne State, along with Len Dickinson and Jule Goeller at Sand Creek Post and Beam, has helped the club out tremendously, and they also do everything from poster sponsorships to serving as the area's moving service.

"You get 6-8 healthy wrestlers and 3-4 pickups, and it's the best $500 donation you'll ever make," VanderWeil said. "We've become the moving company of northeast Nebraska. The college had us move a bunch of heavy bunk beds from the basement to the top floor of Anderson Hall, and there are a bunch of other things we do to raise funds for the program."

The wrestlers also do their part. See BLACK, Page 2B

Blue Devils work overtime in 53-51 win at S. Sioux City

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

SOUTH SIOUX CITY - Wayne came storming out of the gates Friday, but needed to work a little overtime to head into the holidays with an unblemished mark.

The Blue Devils got out to an 11-point lead early in the game, but had to come back from a nine-point second-half deficit to escape the Mini-Dome at South Sioux City High School with a 53-51 win that improved Wayne's record to 8-0 going into what should be a very entertaining tournament at this week's Great Northeast Nebraska Shootout.

"It's our second overtime win this year, and the kids did an excellent job," coach Rocky Ruhl said after the game. "The kids just found a way."

Early, it looked like the Blue Devils were going to blast off and bury the high-flying Cardinals early. Grant Anderson scored eight of his game-high 22 points in the first five minutes, including a 3-point basket that gave the Blue Devils their biggest lead of the game at 15-4.

The Cardinals came back, however, scoring four points in less than 15 seconds after Nathan Rogers made a layup, then wound up on the receiving end of an alley oop pass off a turnover that he jammed home to bring the home crowd to its feet.

The Cardinals made a game of it after that slam, eventually forging a 24-24 tie at intermission on a late basket by Rogers, who led South Sioux City with 11 points.

"I don't know if we relaxed or what," Ruhl said of the first-half turnaround. "We forced a couple of shots and I thought we needed to do a better job of shooting the ball. It was a struggle after that."

South Sioux's momentum continued into the second half. Back-to-back 3-pointers by Scott Manley and Sky Aldrich gave the Cardinals their biggest lead of the night at 36-27 with 2:11 to go in the third before the Blue Devils rallied with a run of their own.

"The best part of it was that we made them play a half-court offense, because they score a lot out of transition," Ruhl said. "We knew they would double- and triple-team us off their press, and we're tall enough and long enough that once we were able to break that we could attack the basket. I thought the kids did a good job handling the kind of pressure we haven't seen all year."

Wayne got back into the game with a basket by Jared Anderson and a 3-pointer by Grant Anderson, which fueled a 9-0 run that tied the game at 36-36 early in the fourth quarter on a Ben Hoskins basket.

The Blue Devils got a dunk by Anderson and a basket by Barry to make it 47-41 with 3:36 to play, but the Cardinals came back and tied the game, sending it into overtime.

Wayne scored on baskets by the Anderson boys in overtime. South Sioux City had a chance to tie the game at the end of overtime, but a 10-foot shot by Aldrich rattled in and out, giving Wayne the win.

Fundraising underway for Wayne State facilities

Wayne State College has officially announced plans to begin nearly $1.3 million in athletic facility renovations, which include installation of artificial field turf at Bob Cunningham Field, resurfacing of the Dr. LeRoy Simpson Track at Cunningham Field and widening of the playing surface at the Wayne State Soccer Complex.

The project, which was first reported on mywaynews.com and The Wayne Herald, calls for the Wayne State College Athletic Department and Foundation to raise $575,000 for this project.

"This project is extremely important for Wayne State athletics to maintain a competitive balance within the Northern Sun Conference, and the Central Region, in regards to recruiting and overall facility standards," remarked Wayne State athletic director Mike Powicki. "These facility upgrades will be a significant improvement and an incredible asset to Wildcat athletics, Wayne State College and the greater Wayne community."

Currently, 12 of the 16 schools in the Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conference and 13 of the 15 schools in the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association, another conference that is in the Central Region that Wayne State competes in, also have field turf.

The current natural grass field surface is shared by Wayne State College and Wayne High School. Each year, the surface starts out the season plush and green, but by season's end is normally chewed up and down to bare spots in areas due to usage. Regularly scheduled football practice, marching band practice and intramural sports take place on other fields in order to keep the game field in good playing condition. Wayne State is expected to save money with the installation of field turf due to less watering, fertilization and other upkeep that comes to maintaining a nat-

Wakefield native new NECC mentor

A Wayne State graduate assistant has been tabbed as the new coach of the resurrected volleyball program at Northeast Community College.

Wakefield native Amanda Schultze was named late Thursday as coach of the reinstated Lady Hawks volleyball program, which will begin play next fall.

"I'm very excited to be at Northeast Community College and be part of a great college and community," she said in a press release. "I look forward to building a volleyball program at Northeast."

Schultze is a 2006 graduate of Wakefield High School and earned junior college All-American honors at Central Community College in Columbus. She transferred to Morningside College and played libero for the Mustangs while earning her degree in organizational management.

Schultze worked the past two season as a graduate assistant for Wayne State volleyball coach Scott Kneif while obtaining her Master's degree.

 in giving back to the community as well. VanderWeil said the program has supported the Tender Heart animal shelter near Wayne, and recently donated money to the Wayne State soccer team to help with their fundraising for a team mission trip.

The club has also received a big lift from the National Guard, which lets the team practice at the Armory in Wayne.

"It's been a blessing to have that facility available," VanderWeil said. "One of the recruiters was visiting with me at a career fair, and he said the Guard administration wanted to support the club and asked what we needed. I said that we could use a place to practice, and they've let us use the Armory the last three years. As we've grown from 6-8 guys to more than 20, we really need the mat space, so it's been one of the nicest improvements to the program."

Wayne State's wrestling program is currently ranked in the top 15 of Div. II at the NCWA level, and VanderWeil said the program has a chance to be in the hunt for a national title this year.

"We keep getting quality kids, and I think we're positioned for success," he said. "Tanner Thiem made All-American a couple of years ago ural grass surface.

 Wayne State head football coach Dan McLaughlin said an artificial surface at Cunningham Field is vital for a number of reasons.

"Late in the season, the condition of our field is torn to shreds exposing bare clay that is slick and unsafe which leads to player safety," said McLaughlin. "Recent studies have shown consistently that artificial surfaces are safer to play on than natural grass."

McLaughlin added another factor in getting field turf is recruiting.

"Most high school kids today play on artificial surfaces and they expect to do the same in college. Not having an artificial surface puts us behind when we recruit," stated McLaughlin.

Dr. Ralph Barclay, retired Wayne State football coach and athletic renovation project chair, says the biggest advantage of field turf is its all-weather playability and being ready to play during the heaviest of rainfall.

"I'm sure most ex-football players remember playing in the mud after the high school played in the rain the night before . . . no longer will there be a problem for the high school or college," said Barclay. "Most of our conference schools have artificial turf as well as most of the colleges in Nebraska. We also plan to make the soccer field regulation size and LeRoy's wonderful track is due for re-surfacing and that is in our plans."

Along with a new artificial field turf at Cunningham Field, a new running surface is planned for the newly named Dr. LeRoy Simpson Track, replacing the old surface that was installed in 2003.

The soccer complex will also see several improvements involved in this project. The playing surface, which currently does not meet NCAA width requirements, will be widened and new bleachers will be installed on the opposite side of the field.

Plans call for construction crews to begin removing dirt from Cunningham Field in May, 2013 with the project scheduled for completion before the start of the 2013-14 school year.

ence next year. LCC is one of four NENAC schools that will join the L&C (Randolph, Plainview and Creighton), bringing about the demise of the conference, which was already on shaky ground after Crofton's defection to the Mid State Conference. West Holt, Neligh-Oakdale and Elkhorn Valley will compete in the Niobrara Valley Conference.

9. Area teams make state football – Wakefield won an exciting district final over Ponca to earn their first trip to the state football playoffs, while Wayne High took advantage of a killer schedule and a very liberal playoff formula to earn a trip to state.

10. Area competitors earn medals – Cassie Heier of Wayne and Mackenzie Gray of Winside earned individual medals at the state cross country meet in October, and LCC's Amy Pritchard capped an impressive high school career with a runner-up finish in the triple jump at the state track meet.

So what does 2013 hold for us on the area sports scene? Whatever it is, The Bleacher Bum is looking forward to it and wishes everybody a Merry Christmas.

Super Santa

At the recent Winside Elementary Winter Concert the vocal music students and band students performed for the public. The vocal instructor is Mrs. LeNell Quinn and the band teacher is Mrs. Kathy Hansen. Music ranged from traditional songs such as "Jingle Bells" to more modern such as "Snowkey Pokey." Above, the fifth and sixth grade students perform "Super Santa" where the boys are Super Santas and the girls played the role of villains. The Super Santas saved the day!

Award winning ClickDMV site shows off new design

The Nebraska Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) has announced a relaunch of its popular online services web portal: ClickDMV. This website hosts the full suite of DMV online services including driver license renewals, vehicle registration renewals, specialty license plate ordering and several others. The new redesigned ClickDMV is focused on organizing the 20+ online service showcased on the site in the most user friendly way; allowing visitors to quickly and easily find what they are looking for, as well as locating other online services that they are looking for, as well as locating other online services that they may not have known were available.

The ClickDMV website and accompanying branding campaign by the agency was awarded a Digital Government Achievement award in 2011 in the Government-to-citizen government category. Citizens are directed to clickdmv.ne.gov through the state's portal, Nebraska.gov and mailings such as driver license renewal and vehicle registration notifications. Since the beginning of 2012, there have been nearly 450,000 visitors to the clickDMV website.

The DMV has launched an average of two new online services a year for the general public since 2008. In 2012, close to 64,000 citizens have renewed their driver's license or obtained a duplicate online, resulting in 32 percent of all renewals for the year done online instead of waiting in line at a DMV office. The percentage is expected to grow as the application is expanded to allow student drivers to apply for school or provisional operators permits online beginning in January of 2013.

Immunization clinic to be held in Wayne

Northeast Nebraska Community Action Partnership (NENCAP), formerly known as Goldenrod Hills Community Action will hold the Wayne Immunization Clinic on Friday, Jan. 4.

The Immunization Clinic hours will be from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at the United Methodist Church located on 516 N Main Street in Wayne. For an appointment, call (402) 385-6300.

NENCAP's Health Services Program will provide lead screening to children 12 months to 5 years of age at the Immunization Clinics for a fee of $10. Children may get lead poisoning from paint of homes built before 1978, tap water, food, pottery, dirt, dust and even from the air we breathe. Elevated blood levels can cause irreversible damage to the brain and nervous system; it can harm the kidneys and digestive system; and because lead reduces the ability for the body to produce red blood cells, it can cause anemia. Children with elevated blood levels of 10 or higher may suffer dulled hearing, stunted growth, reduced eye-hand coordination, behavioral problems and delayed learning skills.

The Immunization Clinic is open to the public, and there are no income guidelines. Each child should be accompanied by the parent or guardian. Past immunization records are required. Proxy forms are needed when a parent or legal guardian is unable to accompany the child to clinic. Proxy forms may be obtained by contacting the Pender office at (402) 385-6300. A suggested donation of $20 per child would be appreciated to help defray administrative costs. If a child only receives one immunization, then the suggested donation is $13.50. No one will be denied immunizations for inability to make a donation.

Immunizations are needed at ages: 2 months, 4 months, 6 months, 12-15 months, and 4-6 years. This project is supported in part by Federal Immunization Program Funds awarded to Northeast Nebraska Community Action Partnership by the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services. The Immunization Program is also partially funded by the Pfizer Foundation.

Northeast Nebraska Community Action Partnership, in conjunction with the Nebraska Health & Human Services Vaccines for Children Program, offers Menactra (meningitis) for 11-18 year olds, Tdap (tetanus with pertussis) for 7-18 year olds, Hepatitis A for 12 months to 18 year olds, RotaTeq (rotavirus) for infants, and Gardasil for VFC eligible 11-18 year olds, as well as other recommended childhood vaccines. The Influenza vaccine is now available for VFC eligible children 6 months-18 years.

Adult vaccine (MMR, Hepatitis A, Hepatitis B, Tdap, TB testing) is available to the public for a mandatory fee at all immunization clinics to anyone 19 years or older. These fees cover the cost of the vaccine. Call the Pender office at (402) 385-6300 for more information.

Operation Great Start (OGS) information will be available at the Immunization Clinic this program provides education and resources to expecting mothers and mothers with children up to 12 months old. OGS works to provide services to families and children in Northeast Nebraska to ensure and strengthen their well being.

For more information on NENCAP programs, call (800) 445-2505.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes
Managing Editor

Year 2012 was an awesome year

Sometime this weekend, I'm going to think back to everything that happened to me in the year 2012 – and my guess is that most of what I experienced during these last 12 months was awesome.

While the world experienced more than its share of ups and downs this year (and I'm not sure if the Mayan thing is an up OR a down . . . I guess it depends on how many credit cards you maxed out on Dec. 20, thinking you wouldn't need to pay off the bills because the world was supposed to come to an end the following day.)

For me, though, 2012 was a blast:

– The big thing, of course, was in writing my first book, "Call Me A Survivor" (momentary shameless plug – you can get the book in print or Kindle form on Amazon.com, or pick up a print version at the Herald and get it autographed). The book is starting a compound effect in my life that is going to lead to some great things in the years ahead, as I'll be working more as an advocate for better education for schools and communities, more resources for victims, and stronger sentencing guidelines for those who would violate our kids through sexual abuse.

Currently, I'm working to get the Legislature to take a look at "Erin's Law," which was started by a young lady in Illinois who was the victim of sexual abuse as a child. She has already passed the law in four states and has 8-9 more considering legislation. Nebraska is not on that list – yet – but I'm going to be communicating with state legislators and the Attorney General's office in 2013 to see that it becomes law here in Nebraska.

– Part of the fun in writing a book is being able to talk about and promote the book, and I've had some great opportunities doing that this year.

Recently, the Lincoln Journal's prep sports columnist, Ken Hambleton, wrote a column about my book and personal experience. This was a really cool moment for me personally, as my newspaper career started as a paper carrier for the evening Lincoln Journal back in Milford. Ken has been a writer and columnist for the paper for 40 years, and I always enjoyed reading his work while doing my daily deliveries.

I also had the chance to talk with Jeff Steffen on 97.5-FM KEXL, which is a great experience because of my connections with that station. I worked part-time there and have gotten to know Jeff and the staff there very well over the years with my work at the Norfolk Daily News and by helping them with wrestling coverage the last 15 years.

There was also an interview with another media legend, Mark Ahmann, on KTCH recently. For somebody who has grown up digesting a lot of different media outlets and having had the opportunity to get to know some of the legends in the media industry over the years, these were personal events that I will always treasure.

– Another awesome moment in my life came this summer when I was able to have both my daughters together for the first time in a long time.

Abby Thurstenson was born out of a relationship I had with a woman while I lived in Norfolk in the late 1990's, and we decided to give the baby up for adoption. She was adopted by a family in Arkansas (the cousin of the birth mother, as it turns out) and while the adopted family has continually stayed in touch over the years with photos and letters, it wasn't until this past summer that Kylie, Abby and I were all together in the same room.

I'm very happy to report that Abby has grown up in an awesome family setting in a small town in northwest Arkansas, is super-intelligent and an outstanding musician (fortunately, she has her mother's looks, so she's a winner there as well). She is a very laid-back and funny young lady, kind of the flip side of my more-outgoing daughter, Kylie, and I'm looking forward to having her visit Nebraska sometime soon.

– Speaking of my "other" daughter . . . Kylie took her last college semester test a couple of weeks ago, and is preparing to student-teach beginning next month in Gretna. If all goes well, she will graduate with a degree in elementary education and be teaching young kids somewhere in Nebraska next fall.

My daughter is extremely passionate about working with young kids, so when she decided to switch from nursing to education after high school, it was a real no-brainer (even though she got a low grade her freshman year in an elective class called "History of Rock and Roll" – a subject that her dumb ol' dad could pass in his sleep). I know she's going to be a wonderful teacher, following in the footsteps of her grandpa, Millard Carnes, and her aunt, Jenni Canham, both of whom spent time as educators themselves. I'm looking forward to seeing where her journey takes her to next.

So what lies ahead for 2013? When I asked myself this question about the year that's winding down 12 months ago, I had no idea that any of these events mentioned earlier would take place. There were some challenging moments and I lost some family and close friends, but that's all a part of the life we live, and part of the magic is in not knowing what's going to happen, but taking in the moments as they occur.

I hope 2012 was an awesome year for you, and I hope we all can enjoy a great year in the one that will be in front of us a few days from now.

Capitol View

Lincoln fascination sparked by movie

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

A current popular movie and a recent election have folks talking about their fascination with America's 16th President, Abraham Lincoln.

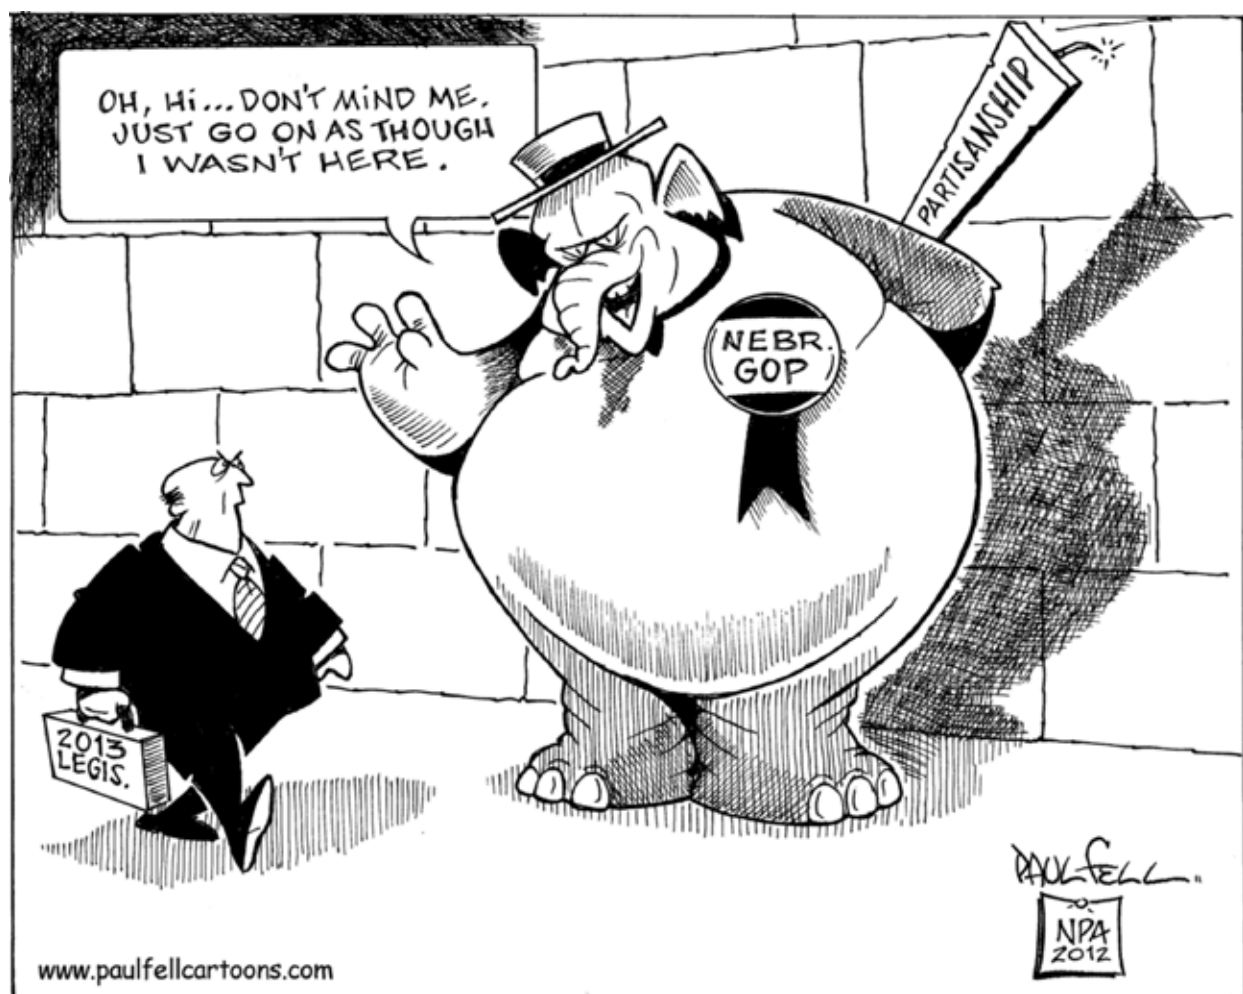

In Nebraska, the state's capital city bears his name. A statue on the west steps of the State Capitol seems to beckon Nebraskans from the west to visit their seat of government. Likewise, a statue on the east steps of Lincoln's City Hall beckons the majority of the city's population who live east of that building.

I went to Lincoln Heights grade school in Scottsbluff. There was also a Lincoln Elementary in nearby Gering. My wife grew up in Lincoln County.

The Lincoln Highway dissects the state, closely parallel to Interstate Highway 80. It was Henry Bourne Joy, then President of Packard Motor Company, who convinced Congress to name the hard surface road from New York to California after his favorite president. Lincoln had worked as an attorney who helped Joy's father, railroad magnate James Joy, in his push to connect large parts of America by the iron rail.

Honest Abe served the country at a time of controversy and unrest as slavery led to Civil War. He died at the hands of an assassin while enjoying a night at the theater with his wife. It was during these struggles that some of his best-remembered sayings were recorded.

As shared by my late friend Nebraska Attorney General Robert Spire during a minor hiccup in the doings of state government, Spire quoted what Lincoln said when confronted about who was right in the Civil War. "My concern is not whether God is on our side; my greatest concern is to be on God's side, for God is always right."

Lincoln, whose face appears on the humblest and most prolific of United States currency, the penny, said in defense of his sincerity and his own looks: "If I were two-faced, would I be wearing this one?" He noted later that "The Lord prefers common-looking people. That is why he made so many of them."

Interesting that the recent elections have sparked talk of the secession that Lincoln confronted during his presidency. What did Lincoln say in addition to the oft quoted "a house divided against itself cannot stand?" He said, "We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory will swell when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Lincoln even had a warning for future generations of politicians that seems fitting today: "You cannot escape the responsibility of tomorrow by evading it today." And for the rest of us, this reminder: "If you once forfeit the confidence of your fellow citizens, you can never regain their respect and esteem. It is true that you may fool all of the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all of the time; but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

Thank You President Lincoln!

Legislative Update

Power of changes lies with the people

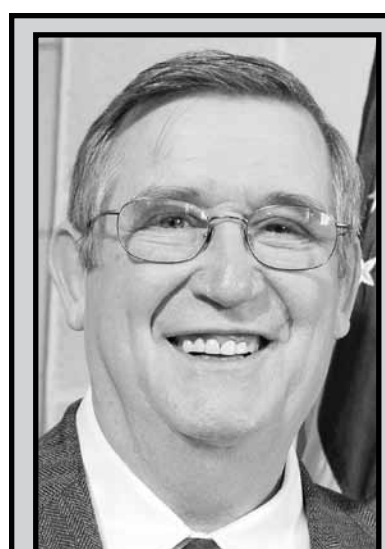

In anguish we cry out: Why does God allow so much violence, terror and death in our public schools? We must remember that we, as a nation, have done about everything we can to throw God out and keep him away from our schools. Yet we turn to Him for comfort when evil fills the void. Still the all loving God grants us that comfort and peace that only He through Jesus the Christ can provide.

Where does the answer lie? Do we need more government control, more laws, more unenforceable rules?

I think not! We have already tried that, it does not work. There will be a cry for more gun control, probably the so called assault weapons in particular. Blaming the weapons used in this evil act is akin to blaming box cutters and jet planes for the evil of 9/11/2001. We also should remember that this evil act took place in Connecticut, a state with some of the most restrictive gun laws in the nation. Chicago, the murder capital of America has the strictest gun laws in America. That is not the answer.

There will be other cries to "arm the teachers." While this on the surface may have a little merit, we must realize that today's teachers have been trained not to ever even consider giving someone a swat on the behind. They have been taught that if someone grabs them, their first response must be "Please let go." The idea that we are now going to count on them to provide front-line defense seems a little out of character. There are some

By Dave Bloomfield
State Senator, District 17

that could probably pull the trigger when needed, many more could not. The job of our teachers is to teach, not to protect and defend with lethal weapons.

This brings us to a third option, armed guards in the school building. This does seem a little more logical, but where do we get them? Do we use police, National Guard troops, private security companies or just who? How do we pay for them and/or their necessary training? Who foots the bill, the local school, the county, the state, or the feds? Add to this the fact that currently, legally, guns are not allowed anywhere near a school.

The evil act of one troubled young man leaves us with many, many, questions and not very many good answers. I would suggest that perhaps we try to lessen the coarseness of our society. Maybe instead of guns we should consider regulating video games, which teach that the winner is the one who kills the most. Maybe we should try to convince Hollywood that it is not necessary that each movie be more violent than the last. Maybe we try to convince the news media that it is okay to broadcast a few pieces of good news now and then. Evil has, since Cain, lurked in the hearts of mankind. It is time that we stop glorifying it.

President Abraham Lincoln said, "Don't interfere with anything in the Constitution. That must be maintained, for it is the only safeguard of our liberties." He, Mr. Lincoln, also said, "I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go." I believe that he was right on both occasions.

Perhaps instead of adding regulation, it is time to remove some. Perhaps we should allow God back into some of our public institutions. Perhaps we should allow the Ten Commandments back on public property. Perhaps we should allow someone to pray in school, even at graduation, if they so desire. Perhaps we should allow Christmas programs in school instead of winter celebrations. Perhaps it is time to say grace again at the dining table. Perhaps it is time that we greet each other, at this time of year, with a hearty Merry Christmas instead of Happy Holidays.

The power of change, in this country still lies where it belongs, with "we the people". Let your elected officials, all of them, from the President down to your local school board member hear from you. Change is going to take place, your involvement or lack thereof will decide what that change will be.

With the Yuletide Season upon us, let me wish each and every one of you a very Merry Christmas.

As always, if we can be of any assistance, contact our office at (402) 471-2716 or e-mail dbloomfield@leg.ne.gov.

Financial Peace University class to be held at Journey Christian

More than one and a half million families have positively changed their financial future through Dave Ramsey's Financial Peace University (FPU).

FPU will be held in Wayne at Journey Christian Church, 1110 East Seventh Street.

The classes will begin on Sunday, Jan. 20 at 3:20 p.m. Contact Mike Schlickbernd at (402) 375-4743 for more information or to register.

Updated in the summer of 2012, the now nine-week course provides families and individuals with practical tools to gain control of their finances and set themselves up for long-term financial success. The course meets once a week where a different lesson is taught by Dave on DVD followed a small-group discussion.

Lessons include budgeting, relationships and money, getting out of debt, saving for emergencies and investing.

Since its inception in 1994, FPU has helped more than 1.6 million families positively change their financial future. Through commonsense principles and small-group accountability, FPU gives people the tools they need to change their behavior and succeed financially. On average, families who complete FPU pay off $5,300 and save $2,700 in the first 90 days.

Following the class, nearly 94 percent of those families budget regularly.

"FPU will not only transform the way you handle money, but also your marriage and other areas of your life," Ramsey said. "This is not a boring financial class. We make learning about money fun and easy to understand so people in every situation can benefit from the information."

Ramsey knows first-hand the pain that financial stress can cause. After creating a net worth of more than a million dollars by age 26, he quickly lost it all. Since then Ramsey has helped families and individuals across the country learn how to get control of their finances and avoid debt so they don't have to experience the same pain he did.

FPU lesson also include guest Rachel Cruze, speaker and daughter of Dave Ramsey; Jon Acuff, author of Wall Street Journal best seller Quitter and popular blog Stuff Christians Like and Chris Hogan, counselor and speaker for the Dave Ramsey organization.

The revised FPU will be offered through churches and community centers. After purchasing a membership each participant receives a yearbook, Dave Ramsey's Complete Guide to Money, an envelope system and an audio CD library. Participants will also have access to budgeting forms and MP3s of all the lessons.

For more information or to purchase a membership, go to www.daveramsey.com

Looking at family from a new perspective Birthday

The family strengths perspective is a world-view or orientation toward life and families, grounded in research with more than 24,000 family members in 35 countries around the world. It is basically a positive, optimistic orientation. It does not ignore family problems but relegates problems to their proper place in life: as vehicles for testing our capacities as families and reaffirming our connection with each other.

Over the past four decades, researchers at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the University of Alabama-Tuscaloosa and affiliated institutions in the United States and around the world have studied families from a strengths perspective. A number of propositions can be derived from this work:

Extension Educator
4-H & Youth

- Families, in all their remarkable diversity, are the basic foundation of all human cultures. Strong families are critical to the development of strong communities, and strong communities promote and nurture strong families.

- All families have strengths. And, all families have challenges and areas of potential growth. If one looks only for problems in a family, one will see only problems. If one also looks for strengths, one will find strengths.

- It's not about structure, it's about function. When talking about families, it is common to make the mistake of focusing on external family structure or type of family rather than internal family functioning. There are strong single-parent families, strong stepfamilies, strong nuclear families, strong extended families, strong families with gay and lesbian members, and strong two-parent families. For every family structure in the world, there are countless representative strong families. Likewise, every type of family structure in the world also has many families that are not functioning well. Simply knowing what type of family one lives in really does not tell one anything about the strength of the family.

- It's not about race or ethnicity, either. There are strong black families, strong white families, strong American families, strong Afghani families. Every ethnic or cultural group has strong families. And, every ethnic or cultural group has families that are not doing well. One knows nothing about the quality of a family simply by knowing the group to which it belongs.

- Strong marriages are the center of many strong families. The couple relationship is an important source of strength in many families with children who are doing well. Parents - both fathers and mothers - cannot afford to neglect their relationship with each other, and it is important to find ways to nurture a positive couple relationship for the good of everyone in the family.

- Strong families tend to produce great kids; and a good place to look for great kids is in strong families (Stinnett & O'Donnell, 1996).

- If you grew up in a strong family, it will probably be easier for you to create a strong family of your own as an adult. But, it's also quite possible to do so if you weren't so lucky and grew up in a seriously troubled family (Skogrand, DeFrain, DeFrain & Jones, 2007).

- The relationship between money and family strengths is shaky, at best. Once a family has adequate financial resources - and adequate is a slippery and subjective word to define - the relentless quest for more and more money is not likely to increase the family's quality of life, happiness together, or the strength of their relationships with each other. Rampant materialism in Western culture can be a dead end, for as our couples and families over the years have told us clearly, "The best things in life are not things."

- Strengths develop over time. When couples start out in life together, they sometimes have considerable difficulty adjusting to each other, and these difficulties are quite predictable. Adjusting to each other is not an easy task. Many couples who start out unstable end up creating a healthy, happy family.

- Strengths are often developed in response to challenges.

A couple and family's strengths are tested by life's everyday stressors and also by the significant crises that all of us face sooner or later. For many couples and families, it takes several years before they believe they have become a strong family, and they know this because they have been tested over time and tested by fire by the significant challenging events that life inevitably brings.

- Crises can tear families apart. Crises also can make family relationships stronger. Families in crisis sometimes forget about the strengths they have and need to remind themselves.

- A family's strengths are the foundation for positive growth and change in the future. Families become stronger by capitalizing on their strengths.

- Most families in the world have considerable strength.

Human beings wouldn't have lasted across countless generations without these qualities. There are many more strong families in the world than families that are deeply troubled. As a global human community, we cannot afford to forget this.

- Families are about emotion. Strong emotion. If family strengths could be reduced to one single quality, it would be a positive emotional connection and sense of belonging with each other. When this emotional bond is present, the family can endure almost any hardship.

Human beings have the right and responsibility to feel safe, comfortable, happy, and loved. Strong families are where this all happens.

CCD youth conduct food drive

Earlier this fall, the fifth-grade students at St. Mary's Catholic Church made a list of ideas of community service projects they could possibly be involved with and voted on what they wanted to do. They decided that they would do a food drive. The class divided into groups and each group was assigned two grades within the religious education program at the church to encourage and collect food from. Food was collected for four weeks. Classes were able to earn points for each can of food. Meat items were worth three points and everything else was one point. This is because there is a shortage of meat items in the food pantry. Each week, the students were responsible for collecting and tallying points. "We learned that you can really make a difference for others by donating food items. We are thrilled that we were able to make a difference in our community. We are spreading the good news and doing what Jesus would do," said Jennifer Bruckner, fifth grade teacher. The students are excited for their next project that they will begin next month.

Grace Lutheran Ladies Aid holds Christmas potluck

Grace Lutheran Ladies Aid and L.W.M.L. met Dec. 12 for a pot luck carry-in lunch and their annual Christmas observance.

Twenty members, 15 guests, Pastor Lilienkamp, and Pastor Feldmann were in attendance. President Rhonda Sebade welcomed the guests, members, and the Pastors.

Pastor Lilienkamp gave the opening prayer and table prayer. The meal was enjoyed by all.

Vice President KimBerly Hansen introduced the program entitled, "A View of the First Christmas," a skit presented by Ellen Heinemann, KimBerly Hansen, Pastor Feldmann and Betty Wittig. Bonnadell Koch accompanied the songs.

President Rhonda Sebade led the group in the L.W.M.L. Devotions. She read the Christmas card and news letter received from Ryan and Dani Janke.

President Sebade announced the new funeral committee persons will be KimBerly Hansen and Mary Lou Erxleben.

The birthday song was sung for Esther Brader, Milly Thomsen, and Rhonda Sebade. A lighted birthday cupcake was presented to these ladies.

President Rhonda Sebade thanked all for coming. She presented the table of gifts to Pastor Lilienkamp and Pastor Feldmann. Thanks were extended by both Pastors, and Pastor Lilienkamp gave the closing prayer.

Members boxed the cookies and gifts for the shut-ins, which were then delivered.

Hostesses for the observance were Mary Janke and Ellen Heinemann. The Jan. 9, 2013, meeting will be at The Oaks, at 2 p.m., with Rhonda Sebade as hostess.

Set thermostat back to save energy

You can easily save energy in the winter by setting the thermostat to 68 degrees while you are awake and setting it lower while you sleep or are away from home.

By turning your thermostat back 10-15 degrees for eight hours, you can save 5-15 percent a year on your heating bill. That is a savings up to one percent for each degree if the setback period is at least eight hours long.

It is a common misunderstanding that heating systems work harder than normal to warm the space back to a comfortable temperature after the thermostat has been set back, which will result in little or no savings. In reality, as soon as your house drops below its normal temperature, it will lose energy to the surrounding environment less quickly. The lower your interior temperature is, the slower heat escapes through walls, floors, ceilings and roofs. Therefore, the longer your house remains at the lower temperature, the more energy you save, because your house has lost less energy than it would have at the higher temperature.

The same concept applies to raising your thermostat setting in the summer - a higher interior temperature will slow the flow of heat into your house, saving energy on air conditioning.

Although thermostats can be adjusted manually, you will find that programmable thermostats help avoid any discomfort by returning temperatures to normal before you wake or return home. Once they are properly set, you will not have to remember to adjust the setting before leaving or going to bed. Most programmable thermostats cost between $30 and $250. Through proper use, you can save this cost through energy savings in less than a year in some cases!

Most programmable thermostats have separate programs for heating and cooling, and may feature a switch to turn on the furnace blower for air circulation, even when the system is not heating or cooling. More sophisticated models may be programmed to run the circulating fan for brief 5 to 10 minute periods in the event a heating or cooling cycle has not taken place during the previous hour. This is particularly useful in homes where, without frequent air circulation, hot air rises and separates from the cooler air that falls, creating uneven temperatures throughout the home.

Programmable thermostats may also have an air filter change reminder. This feature counts the accumulated run-time of the system and reminds you when it is time to change the filter. Dirty filters can cause systems to run longer and be less efficient. Some digital thermostats have the capability of being programmed using a touch-tone telephone or over the Internet. This is a convenient way to change your heating or cooling system when you are away from home and cannot physically touch the thermostat.

Some people suggest that setback is inappropriate for homes with heat pumps because the backup heat, which is usually more expensive to operate, comes on shortly after the temperature setpoint rises and negates savings. That is not necessarily true. Many thermostat manufacturers have specially designed programmable thermostats for heat pumps, which make setting back the thermostat cost-effective. These thermostats typically use special algorithms to minimize the use of backup heating systems while maximizing the efficiencies of the heat pump.

Keep in mind that the best place to install a thermostat is on an interior wall, away from vents and other sources of heat and drafts that could distort temperature readings. If you are doing more than a simple replacement, consider calling a heating and cooling professional for assistance.

IMPORTANCE OF DENTAL RADIOGRAPHS (X-RAYS)

While some patients may be concerned about potential risks from too much exposure to radiation, x-rays are a necessary part of the dental health process and are safe when performed following the standard guidelines for radiology. Radiographs allow dentists to see and interpret signs of disease or potential problems in the teeth that are not visible through direct observation. X-rays are used to discover abscesses (pus-pockets), cysts and tumors. They help dentists locate impacted, un-erupted or extra teeth and determine congenitally missing teeth. Radiographs demonstrate the presence or degree of periodontal (gum) disease, and help to pinpoint the location and severity of cavities. Forgoing x-rays could result in an inaccurate diagnosis or incomplete treatment. Usually, patients will be given a series of x-rays that serve as a frame of reference for future changes. The time frame between x-rays, the type of x-rays and number of follow-up x-rays will be determined by your dentist's assessment of your needs and the condition of your mouth. Growth and development are additional factors taken into account with young children. At Bright Smiles Family Dental we have a digital x-ray system in place which means that there is less radiation and Dr. Braun is able to more accurately diagnose decay and other conditions. In turn this means fewer x-rays are needed and we can enlarge, and focus in on certain parts of the x-ray. We can also send these x-rays to specialists and other offices should the need arise which eliminates taking them again. Prior to taking an x-ray a lead apron is placed on our patients, a thyroid collar is used for children's x-rays and any of our adult patients may use it should they choose to. Our staff has had the required training to take adequate and accurate x-rays and will take every precaution to keep you safe.

Private pesticide applicator training set

Private pesticide applicators holding licenses that expire in 2013, as well as anyone seeking first-time private applicator certification, should contact their local University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension office for information on pesticide education training sessions that begin in January.

Licensed private pesticide applicators can buy and use restricted-use pesticides in their own farming operations after completing this training. About 6,700 private applicators statewide are eligible for recertification in 2013.

Applicators will learn about Nebraska's pesticide laws and regulations, the pesticide label, personal safety, the worker protection standard, environmental protection, integrated pest management, pesticides and application, application equipment and equipment calibration, said UNL Extension pesticide safety educator Clyde Ogg.

New training topics include changes in pyrethroid labeling to reduce the risk of surface water pollution. Pesticide applicators using this insecticide should avoid applications when water from rain or irrigation could carry the pesticide or soil particles holding the pesticide off the site.

Glyphosate is frequently detected in surface water and rainfall; its usage increased more than eight-fold in a 15-year period from 1992 to 2007, Ogg said. Weeds that are resistant to glyphosate are appearing in Nebraska. Training will cover strategies to reduce the chance of developing weed populations resistant to herbicides.

Research has shown that illness in 11 states associated with pesticide drift is not limited to aerial applications. Drift from chemigation and ground applications can cause illness as well.

During pesticide training, applicators will be briefed on how to reduce drift, to protect human health as well as sensitive crops and commodities such as grapes and bees, Ogg said. An online tool called drift-watch, formerly known as the sensitive crop locator site, is available to help applicators determine if they will be managing land near sensitive crops.

Private applicators needing recertification in 2013 should have received a letter notifying them of that fact from the Nebraska Department of Agriculture in mid-December, Ogg said. The letter includes a bar code, which eliminates the need to complete the standard NDA application form for those wanting to recertify, he said. Applicators having the bar-coded letter with them at training sessions will not have to fill out the application form.

Some applicators may have been assigned new 911 addresses in the past three years, and NDA's notification letters may not be deliverable due to an outdated address. All applicators should check their licenses for the expiration date. If it will expire in 2013 and they have not yet received a letter from NDA, contact them at (402) 471-2351 or (877) 800-4080.

For a list of training sessions, sites and dates, contact your nearest UNL Extension office or go online to pested.unl.edu/privatesched, where applicators will find pesticide education sites for private applicators listed by county.

Drought resource info is online

Droughtresources.unl.edu is a one-stop website for timely, unbiased information to help manage the drought conditions experienced this year. The site features practical advice to help citizens deal with the drought.

We hope this resource meets the needs of you and your constituents. Please feel free to have your webmaster use the attached web graphic to link from your site back to droughtresources.unl.edu. Also available on the site is a list of UNL Extension Drought Specialists sorted by region and topic to answer specific questions in your region. It is available at droughtresources.unl.edu/contact-drought-experts.

Sen. Mike Johanns, who was briefed by university experts on the drought earlier this year, praised UNL for its leadership during this difficult time.

"(In August) you folks put together a drought briefing for me, and we had some of the best people in the university system around the table giving me this briefing," Johanns said. "And I was so pleased by the quality of the people that were there in their understanding of row crop problems, range problems, just the whole gamut of drought issues, and I think whatever we can do to support those people and build that capacity will pay huge, huge dividends for our state in the future."

The website features information on a host of topics - from information for use on farms and ranches, to home tips for managing lawns, gardens and more. The site is regularly updated and focused on helping people in Nebraska and across the drought-stricken United States.

UNL Associate Extension Dean Kathleen Lodl said the site provides relevant, timely, fact-based information.

"UNL Extension has a deep wealth of research-based, unbiased expertise, and our new website will give Nebraskans quick, easy access to that expertise," Lodl said.

Forecast for continued drought by climatologists in 2013 a concern

Nebraska has been at the epicenter of the drought of 2012, and its impacts will intensify if it lasts through the winter, as is forecast, say climatologists at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's National Drought Mitigation Center.

"The previous five years all had above-normal precipitation, the wettest period in recorded history," said Michael J. Hayes, the center's director. "For Nebraska, it was unprecedented. We came into 2012 with a full hydrological system – rivers, streams, reservoirs and groundwater. When you're talking major droughts, this is not a multi-year drought. As we look ahead to 2013, we don't have that margin built into our hydrological system, so we're in pretty dire straits."

Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming are all on track to record their driest year on record in 2012, Hayes said, and the country as a whole is having its hottest year on record.

The Climate Prediction Center says the drought in the Plains is likely to continue at least through February, and recovery will take time.

"In Nebraska and the central Plains, we've started seeing the drought feeding off itself, with the dry soils and dry air not allowing precipitation events to develop as usual," said Brian Fuchs, drought center climatologist. "With the lack of moisture, we're more like a desert environment. It warms up fairly quickly during the day, but drops quickly at night."

State climatologist Al Dutcher recently said that the chances of getting a wet enough winter to bring moisture levels back to normal are only 10 to 20 percent.

"When we do have precipitation, very little will go to runoff," Fuchs said. "Those soils are going to act as a big sponge. They're just going to take in a lot of the moisture. We'll continue to see problems of stock ponds, smaller lakes and streams dropping. The hydrologic drought hasn't reared its head, but it's there, as we are seeing more water systems under stress."

"Typically when farmers are done irrigating, you will see the water in the Platte percolate back through the basin," Fuchs said. "We did see that response but it was very minimal and that was even with the irrigation season ending sooner than usual. The channels are tiny, with these very small threads of water in eastern Nebraska."

Anecdotal evidence suggests that in some areas, groundwater levels are declining, which could affect well owners. "I would see that exponentially increasing if we stay dry in 2013," Hayes said. "There's a public health issue when homes don't have water." Although rural residents may be accustomed to hauling water occasionally, Hayes noted that it could be a real hardship for some, such as older people living alone.

Organizations that work with well owners recommend having wells checked now, especially if they were constructed before 1993, to ensure reliability of water supply.

Agricultural producers have been hit hard by the drought. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Risk Management Agency said that as of Dec. 10, indemnity payments nationwide had reached $8 billion for 2012. In 2012, 80 percent of the eligible acres nationwide and 90 to 95 percent in Nebraska enrolled in crop insurance, said Rebecca Davis, regional director for the RMA in Topeka, speaking at Nebraska's Climate Assessment and Response Committee meeting Nov. 29. She said that Nebraska is currently the fourth largest consumer of crop insurance, and the fifth largest recipient of indemnity payments, with nearly $483 million paid out as of Nov. 19, and corn alone accounting for $363.2 million of the covered loss. By Nov. 26, total Nebraska indemnities were at $544 million, with $502 million due to drought, heat and dry wind that affected more than 2 million acres of cropland.

This year's drought is forcing producers to make hard choices. "The problem with drought and lack of forage is that many producers are using corn stalks as forage, actually baling them and selling them like hay, which is a double-edged sword," Fuchs said. "While they are using the stalks for one purpose, it could be hurting them as far as tillage conditions." Leaving stalks on the field as a cover that can prevent erosion and help hold moisture in the soil.

Nebraska had its worst fire season since 1919, with central and western Nebraska hardest-hit. Don Westover, fire program leader of the Nebraska Forest Service, reported that as of Dec. 14, the state had 1,426 wildfires reported, burning more than 400,752 acres and 65 structures, and costing $12 million so far. He added that a few large fires still unreported in the official tally would add another 94,000 acres.

Food safety workshops to be held

University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension workshops in January and February will help fruit and vegetable growers comply with new federal safety law.

The FDA Food Safety Modernization Act, signed by President Obama earlier this year, enhances the traceability of fresh produce grown in the United States, as well as mandates greater responsibility for food safety on the part of producers. The bill requires producers to evaluate hazards to their products, take steps to prevent contamination and to develop written food safety plans.

The workshops will help fresh produce growers or farmer's market managers complete the Good Agricultural Practices training. They will be presented by UNL Extension educators, with support from the University of Nebraska Rural Futures Institute. At the end of the workshop, participants will better understand GAPs, and how they can complete their own farm food safety plans.

The topics that will be covered will help producers enhance worker sanitation, harvesting, handling, packaging, storage and transportation standards of fresh produce from the farm operation to markets, schools, restaurants and retail stores. By completing a Farm Food Safety Plan, producers can differentiate themselves in the marketplace and appeal to many customers who perceive this training as an added benefit.

The one-day workshop will run Wednesday, Feb. 20, from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. in the Meadowlark Room of the Student Center at Wayne State College. The fee is $65 per operation, which covers educational materials, lunch and breaks. Registration deadline is Feb. 13. Extra participants per operation will be charged $10 each for additional breaks and meals. Registration is due one week before the workshops; a $5 late fee will be charged for registrations after that date.

Registrations can be made by calling the UNL Extension Office in Hall County, (308) 385-5088, or by mailing a check, made out to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, to University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension – Hall County, 3180 W. Highway 34, Grand Island, NE 68801-7279. Specify the Wayne workshop when you send in your registration.

This year's drought hurt landscapes, foundations

The 2012 drought has left many landscapes and foundations parched. Mark Kuzila, UNL Extension soil scientist, said everyone saw soils, especially clay soils, get dry and cracked this summer. When soils get dry, they shrink; when soils get wet, they expand back.

This also happened around the foundations of homes.

Kuzila said there are a couple things people can do this winter.

No. 1, don't put more soil in that crack, he said. Instead, homeowners should slowly water the soil next to the foundation. A soaker hose is best.

"Never put more soil in that crack, leave it alone and gently water the soil or wait until it rains again," he said. "A slow rainfall or nice blanket of snow would melt gently and fill back up that crack."

However, a heavy downpour could allow water to hit the house, get through the cracks and come into the house.

"So the best case situation is to keep the foundation moist by putting a soaker hose several feet away from the foundation," he said.

Homeowners also should make sure that directly next to the foundation and extending approximately 6 feet away, the soil surface should slope away at a rate of about 1 inch per foot. In addition, downspouts should discharge away from the house and be free and clear of debris. If gutters overflow, water can run down into the crack. It's also important that landscape edgers and other landscape materials are not blocking water from flowing away from the house.

Keeping trees and shrubs watered this winter also is important, said Kim Todd, UNL Extension landscape horticulture specialist.

"The soil moisture profile is so depleted, that we should continue to water throughout the winter months," Todd said. "If people have exposed soil in their landscape beds, the top surface has turned to dust, or if you poke a screwdriver into the soil, you'll discover it is really dry."

To keep trees and shrubs watered, Todd recommends turning on a soaker hose for a couple of hours when temperatures are above freezing – just remember to take it off when finished watering so it doesn't freeze. It's also important to move that hose to different places around the tree or shrubs.

"The roots extend far beyond the tree's canopy, so don't just water at the trunk," Todd said. "Also be sure to saturate the soil and not put on a huge blast of water that would run off."

Watering is critical to plants that are not well established and/or planted in last year to five years and where the soil is poor, such as in new construction sites.

Todd said many trees already have been lost because of the drought, especially ones that are on the edge of their hardiness zone or not planted in ideal growing conditions. She said white pines and arborvitae have really taken a hit.

Chinn stated over the past year that has been minimal problems with this matter. Only 8 ATV's were licensed within the City this past year. Council consensus was to bring a new ordinance back before them at the next meeting.

Discussion took place on the request of Lou Bencoter to put in a 400', 8' high visual barrier fence on the northwest boundary of the City of Wayne railroad right-of-way on the southeast edge of Wriedt Tractor Court beginning 200' southeast of Dearborn Avenue. Mr. Bencoter has offered to install the fence at his own cost. The cost of materials, which would be borne by the City, would not exceed $8,500. The developer has two home sales pending, with the condition that a visual barrier fence be installed at this location. Council had concerns about the City paying for this and blocking the view of the people living in the trailer court. The consensus was that if the developer wanted a fence, then he should build it on his own property at his own expense. This matter died for lack of a motion.

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING WAYNE MUNICIPAL CODE CHAPTER 90, ARTICLE VIII, BY AMENDING SECTION 90-710(c) PARKING OR DRIVEWAY SURFACES, INTERIOR OF THE LOT BY; AND BY ADDING SUBPARAGRAPH (f) DESIGN STANDARDS FOR PARKING LOTS; TO PROVIDE FOR THE REPEAL OF CONFLICTING ORDINANCES OR SECTIONS; AND TO PROVIDE FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

BE IT ORDAINED by the Mayor and Council of the City of Wayne, Nebraska;
Section 1. That Chapter 90, Article VIII, Section 90-710(c) of the Wayne Municipal Code is amended as follows:

Sec. 90-710. Parking regulations.

(a) Parking, storage or use of recreational equipment. All recreational equipment shall be parked behind the building line except for a period not to exceed seventy-two (72) consecutive hours for purposes of loading and unloading. The building line of a residential dwelling on a corner lot fronts the street that the dwelling is addressed to. No recreational equipment shall be used for living, sleeping, or housekeeping purposes in excess of 30 days in a 60-day period when parked or stored on a residential lot or on any location not approved for such use.

Council may consider granting a waiver upon individual application for recreational equipment in parking spaces existing prior to the passage and approval of this ordinance and based upon the parking surface and the distance from the street in connection with traffic hazards.

(b) Minimum off-street parking and loading requirements. Off-street motor vehicle parking and loading space shall be provided on any lot on which any of the indicated structures and uses are hereafter established. Such space as defined in section 90-9 shall be provided with vehicular access to a street or an alley. A required loading space shall include a ten-foot by 50-foot space with a minimum of 14 feet of height clearance. The loading space shall be so located as to avoid undue interference with public use of streets, alleys and walkways. Minimum off-street parking and loading requirements, which shall be applicable in all zoning districts to the structures and uses indicated, shall be set forth in the following schedule of minimum off-street parking and loading requirements. If minimum off-street parking required in the schedule cannot be reasonably provided on the same lot on which the principal structure or use is conducted in the opinion of the board of adjustment, the board may permit such space to be provided on other off-street property, provided that such space lies within 400 feet of the entrance to such principal structure or use.
