Wurdeman ousted overwhelmingly District 1 voters remove four-term commissioner by 5-to-1 margin

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Voters in one Wayne County district have decided it is time for new representation.

In a special recall election that was held Tuesday, voters in the county's First District voted overwhelmingly to remove Kelvin Wurdeman from office. The vote on the recall was 370 in favor (82.77 percent) and 77 against (17.23 percent). The canvassing board met early Wednesday morning to confirm the vote totals, and no change in the final outcome was noted.

Wurdeman was the longest active-serving member of the three-person board, having held the District 1 office since 1999. He ran unopposed in his last election to the board in 2010, but faced mounting criticism during the past year, particularly after pleading no contest to misdemeanor charges of theft by unlawful taking and official misconduct.

The charges stemmed from the early-2012 sale of county-owned scrap metal by Wurdeman to a Norfolk recycling company. After selling the scrap metal, Wurdeman had the company make out the check in his son's name, then forged his son's signature and cashed the check at a Wayne bank. Wurdeman has maintained that the money received from the sale of the scrap metal was put in his district's petty cash fund, and that the money was never in his possession.

Wurdeman pled no contest and was fined $1,000, and was subsequently asked by fellow board members, Jim Rabe and Dean Burbach, to step down from the position. Wurdeman said he had paid the fines and refused to step down from the position.

Voters in his district forced the issue, however, even after a first attempt at a recall was thrown out by District Judge Robert Ensz, who ruled that there was no reference on the petitions as to whether or not the circulators were paid or volunteer circulators. A second recall effort was made earlier this year by Jerold Meyer, who secured more than 300 signatures to force a recall election.

A total of 447 votes were cast among 1,812 eligible voters in the county (24.7 percent), and there was overwhelming support for Wurdeman's ouster among all the areas in District 1. Wurdeman received 20 percent voter support in the Brenna/Plum Creek/Hunter and Logan/Leslie precincts, while getting only 15 percent support in Ward One and Ward Two in Wayne city limits. He received just under 16 percent support among 113 absentee ballots that were counted.

Once the final vote totals are confirmed, the next step in the process will be to seek a replacement for Wurdeman. By Nebraska state statute, the county must first advertise for the position, with nominations received by County Clerk Deb Finn. Once nominations are received, they will be considered by a three-member board that includes Finn, County Attorney Mike Pieper and County Treasurer Karen McDonald, who will select the individual that will serve out the remainder of Wurdeman's term, which is up in 2014.

The Wayne Herald attempted to contact Wurdeman for comment regarding Tuesday's decision, but calls were not returned by press time.

LOCAL STUDENT'S ESSAY WINS TRIP TO GERMANY

Dwaine Rethwisch, President of the Wayne Lions Club, congratulates Maura Loberg after she won the Lions Clubs International Essay Contest.

A different vacation plan on deck for Lions International Essay winner

While most school students are excited about the end of the school year and many are planning family vacations to destinations such as the Black Hills or Disney World, 11-year-old Maura Loberg, a sixth-grade student at Wayne Elementary School, and her family have a different destination for a summer trip.

She and her family will be traveling to the Lions Clubs International Convention in Hamburg, Germany in July where she will be honored.

Maura has been named the grand prize winner of the 2012-2013 Lions International Essay Contest for visually impaired youth.

Maura is the daughter of Ken and Jean Loberg of Wayne.

The Lions International Essay Contest, sponsored by Lions Clubs International, encourages visually impaired children ages 11-13 to express what peace means to them. The winning entry was sponsored by the Wayne Lions Club and was announced during the "Lions Day at the United Nations" event in New York City. She will also receive $5,000 for winning the competition.

Maura's essay was selected for her ability to convey this year's theme, "Imagine Peace".

Her essay talks about peace in relation to pieces of a puzzle. It is printed in its entirety here.

"In English class, we learned about homophones which are words that sound alike but have different spellings and meanings. I think of the words "piece" and "peace" and realize I am a piece of the peace puzzle. Like a puzzle, our world consists of many types of people that are separated by color, religions, money and many other reasons. It is hard to fit together and live next to each other if not positioned the right way.

"My ideas to help aid world peace include better communication, more respect for each other's differences and the opportunity to dream for a more peaceful planet.

"One solution to peace would be to try to communicate more and try to get along. I am blind (since birth) and I understand about communication. I rely on my listening skills and I hear a lot of things in the way people talk to each other. I am different than other students in my school because of my blindness, but a lot of students have other differences that they are dealing with.

"Another solution is for people to work on respecting one another more. People have to have open minds and be willing to share their ideas to solve problems . . . but they won't do that if they fear being laughed at and not respected.

"A third piece to this puzzle of peace is for people to imagine and dream things can change. For generations people have used their imaginations to come up with new ways to solve old problems. Allowing people to be creative is always a good way for a positive change.

"Putting puzzles together can be challenging but rewarding. Pieces all look different and come in many different shapes and sizes. That should never be a reason to give up. With communication, respect and dreams, we can all be a piece of peace. That is a world that I hope to see."

Wayne school board accepts resignations

By CLARA OSTEN
Of The Herald

The resignation of Nate Wall and the hiring of Ashley Hoffman and Ryan Schurman were approved during Monday's meeting of the Wayne Community Schools Board of Education.

Wall has been teaching fourth grade at Wayne Elementary School for a number of years.

When discussing the agenda item, Board member Rod Garwood said, "the date of the resignation concerns me. I feel in the future we need to discuss the validity of a contract."

Ashley Hoffman, who is currently teaching at South Sioux City, was hired as the school's reading teacher. She is currently working on obtaining a Masters degree in reading, and all those involved with the interview and hiring process were confident in her abilities.

Ryan Schurman was hired as the school's new technology director. He and his family currently live in Omaha, but desire to move to northeast Nebraska to be closer to family.

Superintendent Mark Lenihan updated the board on a number of items, including the schedule for removal of asbestos at the former elementary school building and the demolition of the building.

A special meeting is planned for May 20 to approve the contract for the asbestos removal.

Lenihan also presented preliminary information on the budget for the 2013-2014 school year. He said numbers are not set yet, but it is anticipated that Wayne Community Schools will see a decrease of $187,000 in state aid.

Even with the decrease, Lenihan says he feels confident the district will be able to create a workable budget.

Foundation director Lindsay McLaughlin told the board that the foundation had presented $500 grants to three elementary teachers and one junior high teacher for projects that had been submitted.

Lee Brogie (junior high science) and Lisa Meyer, Jill Niemann and Kim Hix (Wayne Elementary educators) will receive funding for the projects they submitted.

Lifelong love of sewing turns into opportunity

By KATIE KASL

For the most part, Sandra Wriedt has always been a sewer.

As a child, she grew up with a mom and grandma who knew their way around a needle and thread.

"I've always quilted because my mother quilted," Wriedt said.

And then there was her 4-H leader, Violet Diamon, a perfectionist who'd rip out the flaws in Wriedt's work and ask her to redo them so that she could have a well-constructed final product.

Diamon, Wriedt says, shaped her into the sewing perfectionist she's become. When she found out the instructor was still alive, she sent her a letter of thanks.

As Wriedt grew older, she carried her love of sewing with her. It accompanied her through high school and then, later, as a student at Wayne State. In college, Wriedt majored in home economics and minored in art. She also has an endorsement in education but, while student teaching in Wakefield, learned that the profession wasn't for her.

"I just knew I could never do that," she

Winside sophomores among presenters at Wayne State's Aquafest

Nine students from Mr. Sok's sophomore Biology classes at Winside High School recently presented at the 2013 Wayne State College Aquafest for fifth graders in northeast Nebraska.

Sixteen schools with approximately 338 students attended Aquafest 2013 at Wayne State College on May 6-7.

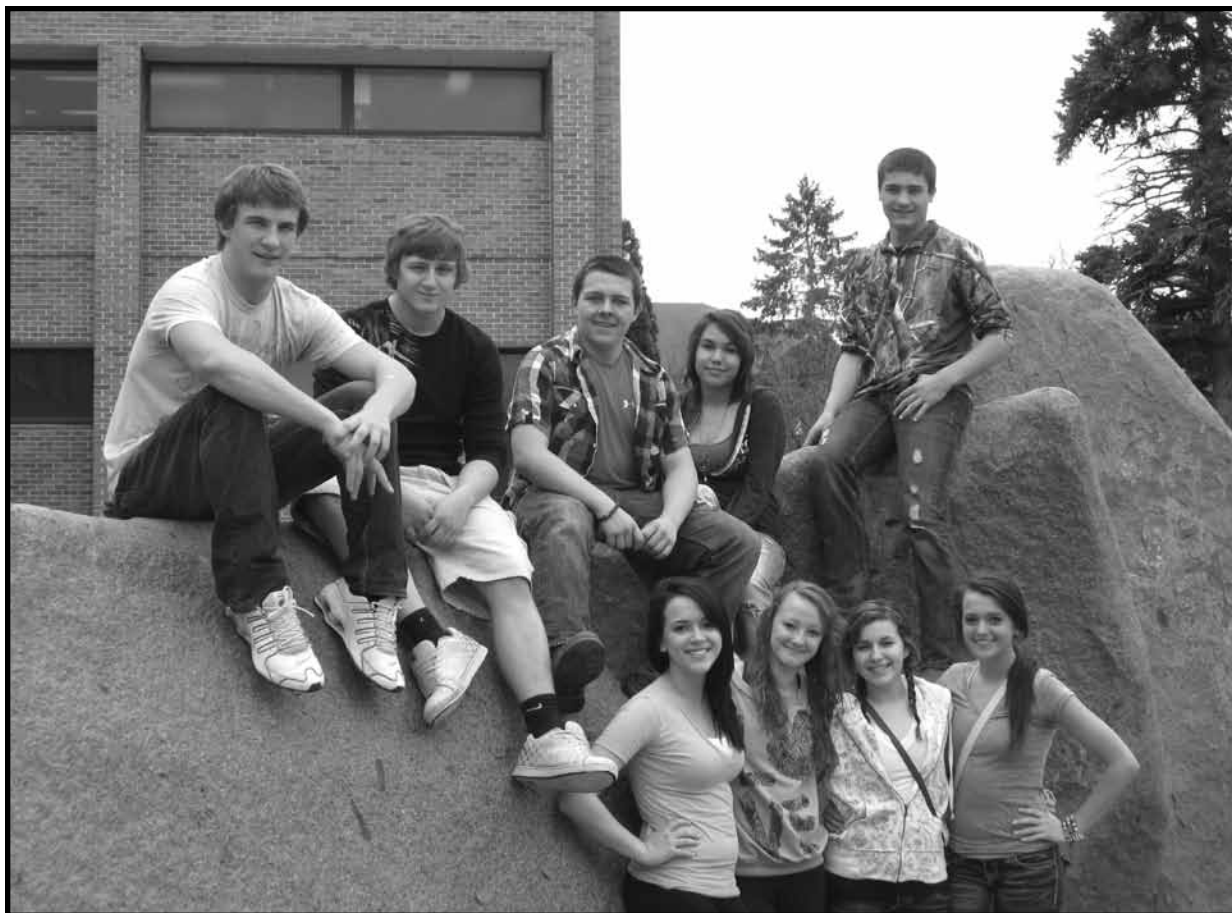

The students first had a chance to listen to discussions concerning the drought from Sioux City Meteorologists Fred Hexom and Chad Sandwell. The students then had an opportunity to view four of 12 sites during the morning.

The sophomores from Mr. Sok's class were involved with a topic concerning Water Wheels and Turbines.

Hailey Steece and Gage Main led a discussion on dam construction and hydroelectric energy. Carly Schwegler and Haley Mitchell presented on traditional water wheels and their importance in activities from grinding grain to sawing lumber. Morgan Jensen and Cali Jorgensen talked about modern day wind turbines while Bryce Meis and Brock Carlson followed up a brief history and demonstration of how wind mills were an important part of Nebraska's past and present situations concerning livestock.

The final discussion was a presentation and activities concerning water surface tension by Zach Jones. The sophomores made eight presentations in two days to the fifth graders.

State Senators override veto regarding school pension fund

By CHRISTINE SCALORA and JOSEPH MOORE
Nebraska News Service

LINCOLN - State senators overrode the gubernatorial veto relating to the state's school pension fund on May 14, the day after the governor returned the bill with his objections.

LB553, introduced by Sen. Jeremy Nordquist of Omaha, closes a pension funding gap by reducing retirement benefits for teachers hired after July 1st of this year.

Senators voted 32 to 1 to override the veto, with 15 present not voting. Thirty votes were required to override the veto.

Under the bill, all school employees will continue paying more of their salaries toward their retirement - 9.78 percent as opposed to the 7.37 percent they would have paid after 2017.

The bill also increases the state's contribution from 1 percent to 2 percent of benefits, which translates to an additional $20 million per year.

In his objection, Gov. Dave Heineman wrote that there should be a public study about the state's options before any long-term changes were implemented. Heineman also objected to the doubling of the contribution rate to 2 percent.

"I do not believe the proposed long-term changes contained in the bill are wise or warranted at this time," Heineman said.

Supporters of overriding the veto argued that the state has to uphold its contractual obligations.

Teachers and school boards agreed to contribute more, Nordquist said. "Now it's time for us to meet our obligation and step up and that's what we've done with LB553," he said.

Others suggested creating a cash balance plan for the school pensions.

Sen. John Nelson of Omaha introduced a bill this session that would have created cash balance benefit plan for new school employees. The bill was indefinitely postponed by the retirement committee.

"We have a temporary fix as it understand it here," Nelson said.

Making a transition would be difficult until the liability is paid off, Nordquist said. There would be nothing subsidizing the old obligation, he said.

Sen. Bill Kintner of Papillion voted against overriding the veto.

"I would like to get together with some senators and see if we can't come up with a plan because this is going to continue to eat us up and taxpayers are on the hook and I don't like when taxpayers are on the hook," Kintner said.

Sen. Burke Harr of Omaha, who voted for the override, said nothing prevents long-term changes to the pension plan from being made next session.

"If we don't take care of our teachers, we're going to lose them," he said.

Allen senior Brittany Sullivan earned a trip to the state track meet with her effort in the 300-meter hurdles.

Allen, Winside get state qualifying bids

HARTINGTON – Both Winside and Allen had some solid performances in the D-3 district track meet last Wednesday in Hartington, and both schools will be represented at this week's Nebraska State Track and Field Championships.

Both schools will have four entries in this week's state track meet, and coaches from both teams were happy with the qualifiers who punched their tickets to state.

The Allen girls finished sixth in a tight team race where 31 points separated the top seven teams. The Lady Eagles got four entries into state, with all efforts coming on the track.

"We had a lot of girls get personal bests and I was happy with how it turned out for us," coach Denise Hingst said.

The 3,200-meter relay team shaved more than 10 seconds off their best time and won the district title with a time of 10:31.9. The foursome of Candice Rastede, Rachel Finnegan, Lindsey Jones and Lexi Oswald gave an outstanding effort, according to their coach.

"They had their best time and have really been improving these last few weeks, and we had some good competition that helped us get our time down," Hingst said.

Both Finnegan and Oswald will compete in individual events as well. Both finished as runners-up in their respective events, with Finnegan going in the 400 and Oswald in the 3,200.

"Rachel got her personal best in there, and Lexi put on a lot of miles with the 3,200, 1,600 and the 1,600 relay," Hingst said. "She really gave it her all and got her best times in both events."

Also going for Allen is senior hurdler Brittany

Sullivan, who finished second in the 300-meter hurdles.

"Brittany competed well and had a great time, and I'm happy to see her get to state also," Hingst said.

Allen's boys were shut out of the state qualifying efforts this year, but with only one senior on a young 13-man team, coach Dave Uldrich wasn't disappointed with the effort.

"We had several personal bests, and considering this is the toughest district in Class D and we only have one upperclassman, I thought we competed well," he said. "We improved all year long, and I think next year we're going to come back and be a little better and compete more."

Winside will have two athletes on both the boys and girls side of the ledger at state. The girls finished eighth and the boys were sixth in the team competition, but each team got a pair of entries in for state.

"We've got a lot of kids that competed well today and had a number get personal bests, and these kids just did an excellent job and I'm happy we got four in for state," coach Mark Tonniges said.

On the girls side, Jayd Roberts earned a trip to state as a freshman in the hurdles, but went the field route this year and got a runner-up finish in the discus. She is joined by senior Nazya Thies, who punched a ticket to state with a silver medal in the high jump.

"Jayd is a newcomer in the discus and did well for us, and Nazya went 4-10 at districts and I think she can make 5 foot at state, but it will be tough," Tonniges said.

On the boys side, senior Colin Hansen was the district champion in the triple jump, finishing with a personal best of 41 feet, 2 1/2 inches. Junior Garrett Watters also made it to state, taking runner-up honors in the shot put.

"Colin had his best jump today and did very well, and Garrett competed well for us in the shot and was able to qualify for state there, so we're happy with that," Tonniges said.

Wildcats' season ends with 1-2 clip at NSIC

The Wayne State baseball team saw their season come to an end after losing games to the two conference representatives in regional competition during the Northern Sun Conference baseball tournament.

Wayne State's opener with Augustana took more than 24 hours to play, as showers halted the game in the eighth inning Wednesday and resumed Thursday afternoon.

The Wildcats scored three runs in the third inning, thanks to back-to-back RBI doubles by Curtis Bussard and Blake Brisson. Wayne State added another run in the fourth when Brett Keim scored on an Augustana error to make it 4-1, but Augustana cut the lead to 4-3 before play was stopped.

Once play resumed Thursday, Wayne State picked up two key runs in eighth, as Michael Herman's fielder's choice and a sacrifice fly by Tanner Lancaster helped the Wildcats finish off a 6-4 win over the Vikings.

Tadd Johansen got the win after a solid pitching effort before the rain, striking out seven and scattering five hits and three runs in 5 1/3 innings. Brisson and Bussard each had three hits in the win.

Thursday evening, the Wildcats ran into the eventual conference champions from Minnesota State, and the Mavericks shut down Wayne State's bats on their way to a 7-0 win.

Wayne State had a chance early in the game and left the bases loaded in the sixth. Minnesota State broke the ice with two runs in the fifth, then scored four in the ninth to put the game out of reach.

Wayne State was limited to four hits in the game, and Michael Frericks pitched well in a losing effort, striking out seven and allowing three hits and three runs in seven innings.

Top-seeded St. Cloud State was upset in the first round, and they battled through to face Wayne State on Friday in a losers bracket game. The tournament hosts broke through with a big inning late to end Wayne State's season with a 7-1 decision.

Wayne State scored in the top of the first when Brett Keim's RBI double to left center scored Blake Brisson. That would prove to be the Wildcats' only run of the day, which was matched by the Huskies in the second. St. Cloud State took the lead for good in the fifth, then put things out of reach with a five-run explosion in the eighth.

Keim had two of Wayne State's five hits in the game, finishing with a double and an RBI. Eric Schwieger took the loss for the Wildcats, who finished the season 27-20.

Northeast Community College Disability Service Department to hold special meeting

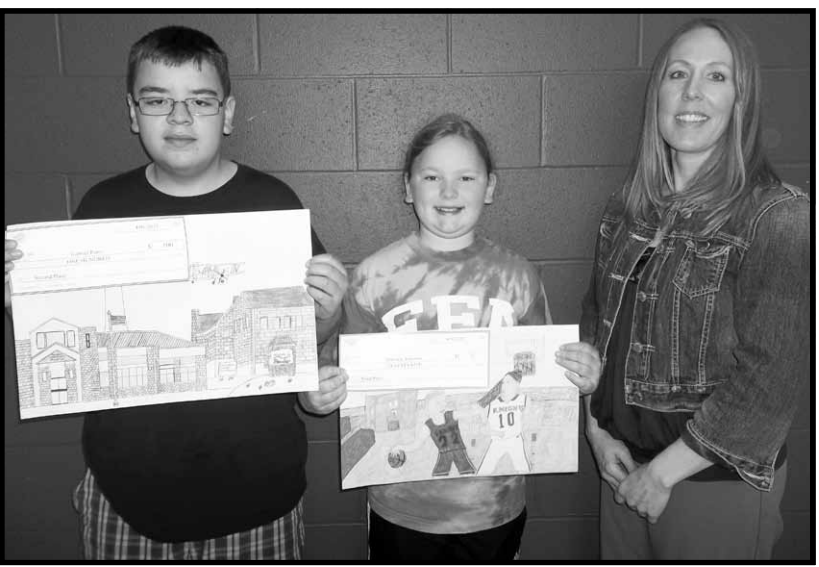

The Disability Services Department at Northeast Community College has scheduled a special meeting to familiarize individuals with services offered by that department. The annual Disability Services Informational Meeting is planned for Tuesday, May 21, at 6 p.m. in the College Welcome Center, Room 1108, on the campus in Norfolk. According to Mary Balaski, Disability Services coordinator, this meeting is for incoming students diagnosed with a disability or those who believe they may have a disability. Parents of those with a disability and students who have benefited from a special education program or served under a 504 plan are encouraged to attend. During this meeting, Balaski will explain eligibility and documentation requirements, how to receive accommodations, assistive technologies, course recommendations, and a realistic number of credit hours for which to register. Balaski will explain the importance of communicating needs to faculty and staff, housing/residential life, support services, and community resources. Current Northeast students will also be sharing their experiences with using accommodations. Before the meeting begins, from 5-6 p.m., representatives from the Assistive Technology Partnership Program of Nebraska will demonstrate various devices and software to aid students with studying and access to education material.

Northeast's financial aid office will remain open until 6:30 p.m. that day.

Balaski said a disability is defined as a physical, mental or learning condition that affects major life activities. Major life activities that can be affected and influence access to educational programs may include seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and mobility.

Registration for the special meeting is requested by calling (800) 348-9033 or (402) 844-7714. Those interested may also email shari@northeast.edu or conniem@northeast.edu with a name, contact information, and the number of people planning to attend.

Are the Chinese really that dumb?

Since my 18th annual 29th birthday party is taking place Friday, here's a well-timed purging of the "Bits and Pieces" file:

— For those who think the Chinese are smarter than us 'mericans, here's one from the "Do the math, Einstein" department: An enterprising individual in China is selling "safety belt T-shirts" to those who seem to have issues with being strapped into their car seat while traveling.

The T-shirts are designed with a black strap running diagonally across the chest, giving the look that a driver is wearing a seat belt. Evidently, the Chinese law enforcement are cracking down on those who ride without a seat belt, and those who are caught are fined the equivalent of $8 and have two points taken off their driver's license.

So how much do the T-shirts go for? Yep — eight bucks. And if you happen to collide with somebody while wearing the shirt WITHOUT a seat belt — the hospital bills are probably going to run you up a few more bucks.

— For many years, Nebraska has had two cities that were considered metropolitan areas (Lincoln and Omaha, in case you've not ventured outside Wayne County recently).

According to the latest census figures, we now have a third metro area in the Cornhusker State — Grand Island.

Grand Island is the fourth-largest city in the state (Bellevue is third) and is the biggest city outside the Omaha-Lincoln metro areas. The latest census figures show that the population of Grand Island and the surrounding area is 83,472, which qualifies the area for the "metro" designation. Grand Island's metro area includes the counties of Hall, Hamilton, Howard and Merrick.

I'm not sure what newsworthy significance this is for those of us in the rural area, but if nothing else it's a great trivia question to win free drinks with at the White Dog Pub on Saturday nights.

— From the "We hire only the most disgruntled members of the Fourth Estate to do our research" department comes this rather disheartening piece of news (at least for those of us in the news media business).

CareerCast.com, a career website, recently ranked 200 jobs from best to worst, based on criteria that included physical demands, work environment, income, stress and hiring outlook.

Using data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and other government agencies, the best job in the United States right now is — drum roll, please — an actuary.

Go figure (bah dah boom).

Other jobs in the top 10 include biomedical engineer, software engineer, audiologist, financial planner, dental hygienist, occupational therapist, optometrist, physical therapist and computer systems analyst.

The bottom 10 is going to come as disappointing news for some of us in the audience. They include farmer, flight attendant, roofer, mail carrier, meter reader, dairy farmer, oil rig worker, actor, enlisted military personnel and lumberjack.

Annnnd, at No. 200 on the list, we have — wait for it — waaaaait for it — newspaper reporter.

I'd like to say that this news item is full of hoey, and I'll be more than happy to — just as soon as I get an ergonomically-designed chair, have lunch delivered to me free every weekday, get my salary doubled, am relieved of dealing with crabby people and have a chance to become publisher by the end of the week.

— Annnnd finally, from the "If the Meter Maids are forced out of work, the terrorists win" department: Three men in a small town in New Hampshire are coming under fire from the local city government for the unthinkable act of — get this — searching for expired parking meters and feeding coins into them to help drivers avoid a parking ticket.

This generous act of paying it forward has resulted in the city suing the three Robin Hood-like individuals because, shudder the thought, the city has not been able to issue enough parking tickets and is losing revenue as a result.

Ladies and gentlemen — I don't make any of this stuff up, and I hope they never make being an idiot against the law.

Capitol View

Other stuff floats downhill, too

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Water and other stuff flows downhill in Nebraska, especially when the Legislature is in session.

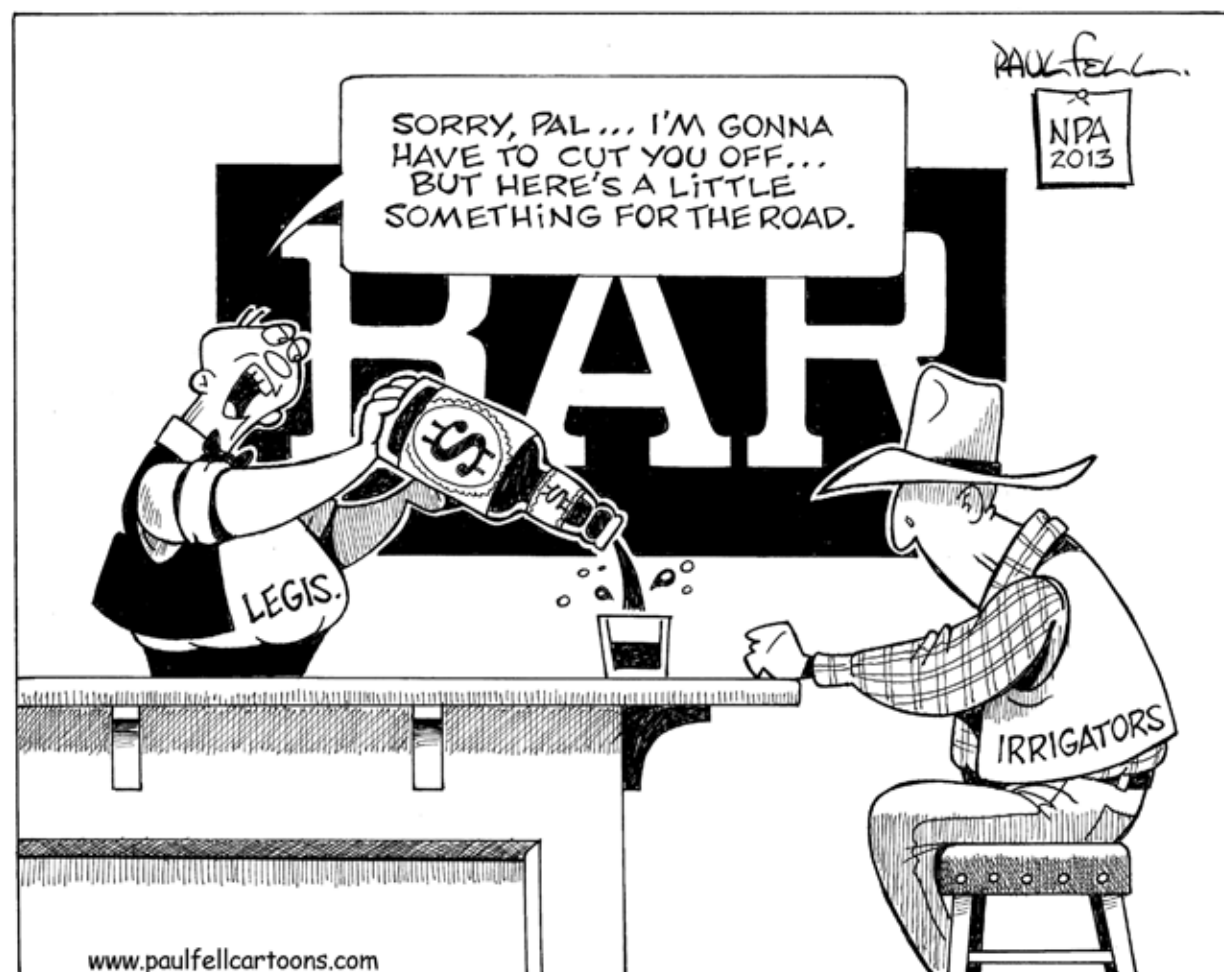

During the same week that the state Department of Natural Resources started releasing water from the Harlan County Reservoir to the Republican River in Kansas to avoid penalties, state lawmakers gave first-round approval to a measure that would compensate Nebraska farmers for the loss of water.

Most water laws impacting the states were drafted in the form of compacts in the 1940s. Nebraska has long struggled with Colorado and Wyoming over Platte River flows that were first set in the late 1940s and are now overseen by a special master. Kansas has long accused Nebraska of violating the 1943 compact by allowing farmers to divert more than their legal share for private use. Kansas has said Nebraska has allowed the use of thousands of wells hydraulically connected to the river and its tributaries, thus depleting the river's flow.

There have been two lawsuits involving Kansas and Nebraska, including one that is pending before the U.S. Supreme Court. Water lawsuits are complicated and lengthy. There is the matter of surface water (lakes and rivers and streams) and ground water (wells).

One of Nebraska's best (water) legal minds, the late Gov. Robert Crosby, once wheeled a stack of boxes of legal files on water cases into the Nebraska Supreme Court during oral arguments. The stack was taller than he was. That was several decades ago and dealt with Wyoming releasing enough water to keep Nebraska's Panhandle inland lakes (Big and Little Lake Alice, Minatare and Winter's Creek) at a certain water level.

That was also before Nebraska went through a drought cycle that would compare to recent years. Now, a state that has limited money available and projections of a lingering drought is planning to compensate farmers when the department limits or shuts off irrigation in the Republican River Basin. The bill (LB522) would direct $10 million to pay surface-water irrigators as much as $150 an acre per year for two years as compensation for the loss of water. Of that, $6.6 million would come from a fund the Legislature has been paying into since 2007 — the last time the state paid irrigators for water sent to Kansas. The other $3.4 million would be new spending from the general fund. If passed, the bill would also set policy so the $150-an-acre yearly payment could be increased to $300.

The Republican River, formed by the confluence of three smaller streams that originate in the high plains of northeast Colorado, flows generally eastward from Colorado into and along the southern border of Nebraska, into Kansas. There, the Republican River joins the Smoky Hill River to form the Kansas River. The 1943 compact says that Nebraska gets 49 percent of the water, Kansas 40 percent and Colorado 11 percent.

The state recently ordered the release of water from four Federal Bureau of Reclamation owned-and-operated reservoirs — Swanson, Enders, Hugh Butler and Harry Strunk. Critics say that the release of surface water is a quick fix that should have been addressed by better management of groundwater supplies.

A water lawsuit was filed in December by two groups of irrigators against the state of Nebraska and federal officials, challenging a plan to pump groundwater into the river to comply with the 1943 compact. It was filed in U.S. District Court by the Frenchman Cambridge Irrigation District, the Bostwick Irrigation District and three individual irrigators against Gov. Dave Heineman, the state Department of Natural Resources, the Upper Republican NRD and the U.S. Department of Interior, among others.

Natural Resources Committee Chairman Sen. Tom Carlsson of Holdrege voted for the payment measure, but he said that might change during the next round of debate if the lawsuits filed by the people who are asking the Legislature to help them find a solution aren't dropped. Omaha Sen. Steve Lathrop said somebody needs to get a handle on the situation so the state doesn't have to keep throwing money at the problem. He noted that some of the surface water is actually going into the earth to recharge the wells of the groundwater users.

Then came the profundity. "This is everybody's water" and the Legislature can't continue to pay people for water that wasn't theirs in the first place, Lathrop said. True.

So, what's next? The air that we breathe?

Legislative Update

Debating budget has been a long process

As expected, it has been a long week debating the budget.

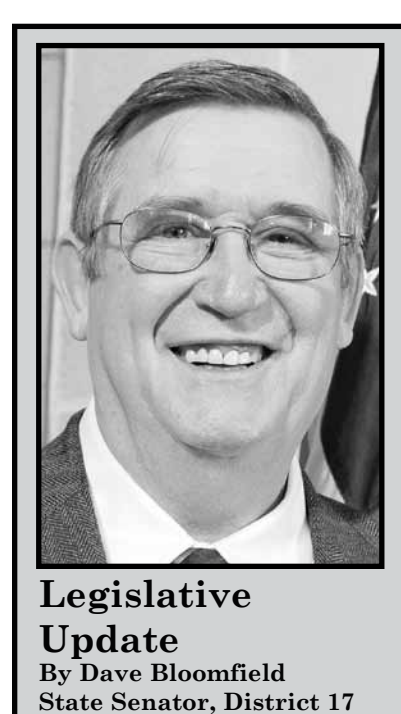

The budget is done in a group of about six bills. The first two bills dealt with the actual payment of salaries of lawmakers and the salaries for the elected officials cited in the state constitution. LB195, the main budget bill, would appropriate funds for state government expenses. This is where the harder work began.

Many would claim that we spent a lot of time debating "small cost" items; I would argue that those "small cost" items add up and rather quickly. While I would agree that presently our economic outlook is better than it has been, I think we need to be very careful with how we

"OK... I'M READY... TURN ON THE NEWS."

Legislative Update
By Dave Bloomfield
State Senator, District 17

are spending money.

Sen. Ken Schilz, of Ogallala, introduced an amendment that would have added $15 million over the biennium (the two-year period) to the already budgeted $230 million property tax credit program. This addition of $7.5 million each year would have amounted to about $4.56 per $100,000 of property evaluation which would have been used to reduce property tax paid.

I fully supported this amendment while others argued that it would take $15 million away from funding so called "worthy" projects and programs. It is my opinion that we should not be spending on all of these programs without giving some tax relief (especially property tax relief) to the hard working taxpayers in the state. Sen. Schilz's amendment did not pass, I've lost that fight, and property taxpayers will not see that additional relief this year.

Another budget bill that has received a lot of attention is LB194, a bill that included $2.7 million for the purchase of a 2001 Super King Air B200 airplane. For that $2.7 million we would have no warranty, but it does include five years of maintenance assuming nothing major goes wrong and an avionics upgrade.

This plane would be for use by the Governor and state agencies for state business. The state has been leasing this plane from the University of Nebraska Foundation but that operating agreement will expire on June 30, 2013. The Foundation is planning to sell the plane at that time and the Governor would like to purchase it. This funding was included without debate in the budget.

Sen. Annette Dubas, of Fullerton, brought an amendment, AM1324, which would strike the funding for the purchase of the plane and provide funding for a study addressing whether or not the state needs a plane, if so what kind of plane or if the state should lease or charter a plane for state use.

After lengthy debate AM1324 did prevail, eliminating the funding. I was in favor of this amendment. I am not yet convinced that we need to own a plane and think that rather than jumping into the purchase of a plane just because we are familiar with it, we should look at our needs and if it is deemed necessary that we own a plane we need to look for one that meets our needs for the most reasonable cost. A new only slightly smaller 2013 King Air C90GTx with a full five year warranty, upgraded safety equipment and the latest technology can be purchased for about $800,000 more. With the memory of the crash that killed the governor of South Dakota still in my mind, I think if we must own a plane that the extra money would be well spent.

What does 4-H pledge really mean?

I pledge . . . my hands to larger service. Every 4-H member says it at the start of club meetings and other events. But what does it really mean?

A 2009 survey, conducted within the United States by Harris Interactive showed that 73 percent of youth ages 12-17 have participated in a volunteer opportunity. That is nearly 19 million youth who are working to improve their community, their country and their world.

"As adults, when we see young people listening to iPods, texting friends, or watching TV, they may seem relatively self-absorbed," says Heather Jack, Founder and President of The Volunteer Family, whose website gets over 250,000 unique visitors a year from families and youth interested in finding a volunteer activity. "However, the reality is that young people are finding ways to give back in more ways than we could have imagined. They truly have the potential to become our country's most philanthropic generation."

The study found that the types of activities popular among all youth ages 8-18 include: helping children in need (29 percent), advocating for the environment (27 percent), assisting the elderly, sick or disabled (21 percent), helping animals in need (18 percent), and supporting the homeless (14 percent).

"Today's youth are choosing the causes they identify with and supporting them," says Heather Jack. "They are joining causes on Facebook. They are planning their own fundraising events. They are encouraging their friends and families to help-out. They are embracing the traditional ideals of giving back, but they are finding new and unique ways of doing so."

Youth who volunteer are not just helping others; they are also taking an active role in shaping their own futures. The leaders of today are being shaped by these experiences joining and leading these efforts to make a difference today. They are:

- Learning the value of helping others,
- Developing leadership, communication, organizational skills and a sense of empowerment,
- Building self-esteem from the positive results of their service,
- Developing problem-solving and decision-making skills by applying their knowledge to real-world situations, and
- Instilling a sense of responsibility for their community and a sense that citizenship requires them to actively participate in their community.

4-H clubs grow through community service projects by building relationships and unity among members as they work together on a common goal, boosting member involvement by providing meaningful activities, and demonstrating to the community that youth are indeed resources who can, and in fact want to be a part of community improvement.

Acme Club conducts final meeting of club year

Seven members of the Acme Club met for the last meeting of the club year for a 9 a.m. breakfast at Tacos & More on May 6.

In the absence of club president

Joann Temme, vice president Ruth Victor opened the meeting. She thanked Betty Wittig and Delores Utecht for making the arrangements for the meeting.

For roll call, each member told member told of their vacation plans for the summer.

Ruth gave the Thought for the Day - "Who's the Happiest?" Research proves that these folks have mastered the art.

The cheeriest folks in America? Hawaiians, all those beautiful sunsets and beaches can't hurt.

Turns out Biotech workers are the most satisfied employees. Next on their list, customer service representatives or teachers.

Life does get better as we age (or maybe we just appreciate it more). Older Americans are the most content generations, with satisfaction peaking at age 70.

Corn silage in cattle diets

University of Nebraska-Lincoln scientists are experimenting with the use of corn silage in cattle finishing diets, finding that it can be an economical replacement for corn in feedlot diets containing distillers grains; while, on another front, research is being conducted into feeding distillers grains that have some corn oil removed, so the oil can be used in biofuels.

Corn silage long was a staple of cattle diets, particularly in times of high corn prices, since it allows feeders to use the entire corn plant, but animal scientist Galen Erickson thinks UNL's current research may be the nation's first that looks into evaluating elevated levels of corn silage in finishing diets containing distillers grains.

Distillers grains are a byproduct of ethanol production and have become an increasingly important element of cattle feed, particularly in Nebraska, which relies on cattle, corn and ethanol production like no other state.

"I'm a big fan because I think it fits our state," Erickson said. "As corn becomes more expensive, it's quite economical."

He also added, "We're on a mission to improve the use of corn residue, whether grazed, baled or harvested as silage as long as it's done in a sustainable way."

The objective of our experiment was to determine the performance effects, carcass characteristics and economics of feeding elevated levels of corn silage and MDGS (modified distillers grains with solubles) as a partial replacement of corn in finishing diets."

The research, which partially replaced corn with the more economical corn silage, found that as corn silage increased, there was a slight increase in feed-to-gain ratio and a decrease in dry matter intake and average daily gain. However, ADG and F:G were improved when corn silage was fed with MDGS.

Scientists also studied the economics of this approach, comparing the impacts at different price levels of corn and cost of silage. They found that under certain conditions, it makes economic sense.

"In general, corn silage in combination with MDGS can be utilized to partially replace corn in finishing diets," Erickson said. "Cattle performance is reduced with increased level of corn silage in finishing diets containing MDGS. However, feeding corn silage with MDGS is better than without MDGS for average daily gain and feed to gain ratio."

As for the de-oiling research, Erickson said it's yet another way to take better advantage of the synergy in Nebraska's mix of corn, beef and ethanol. Erickson and his colleague Terry Klopfenstein are comparing the effects of feeding condensed distillers solubles, and distillers grains plus solubles, with and without corn oil removed in steer diets.

Condensed distillers solubles (CDS) are a liquid byproduct and distillers grains plus solubles are a semisolid byproduct, both from ethanol production. CDS are generally added back to distillers grains before feeding, but earlier IANR research found they can be fed separately in cattle diets. Ethanol plants can remove some corn oil from the CDS; it can be sold for about 30-35 cents a pound to be developed into biofuels. So, IANR scientists wanted to determine how performance of cattle fed the de-oiled byproduct compares to that of cattle fed regular CDS or regular distillers grains plus solubles.

Findings so far are surprising. Scientists found that when CDS are fed at a higher percentage of cattle diets, removal of corn oil improves digestion in forage-based diets. In feedlot diets, two experiments have shown either no impact or a slight decrease in value for finishing cattle. However, the impact on performance is much smaller than predicted, or had no impact at all. More work is under way.

Grand Island to Host 4-H Invitational

Nebraska is host to the 2013 National 4-H Shooting Sports Invitational Match, June 23-28 at the Heartland Public Shooting Park and Heartland Events Center in Grand Island.

"This is the top event in the country for 4-H shooting sports," said Steve Pritchard, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension educator and coordinator of Nebraska's 4-H shooting sports program.

This event will involve 4-H youth, ages 14-18, from across the nation competing in one of the nine disciplines offered.

The 27 events in the nine discipline areas include: small bore rifle, small bore pistol, muzzleloading, shotgun, air pistol, air rifle, hunting skills, recurve archery and compound archery.

States can send up to nine teams to compete in this event, which would be a maximum of 36 youth representing their state 4-H shooting sports program.

"Nebraska looks forward to hosting this competition. More than 530 youth from 32 states competed in this event last June in Grand Island. It's a great opportunity for 4-H youth to meet and interact with other 4-H youth from across the country who have a similar interest," Pritchard said.

The free event is open to the public.

May is kaleidoscope of events

Well, 12 days ago, we had snow. Today, our thermometer says 85 degrees. So much for spring. This seems to happen a lot in Nebraska.

Why do we continue to live in this crazy state? If I wanted, I could create a long list of reasons to move. But I guess we want to prove we are tough! We can go from shivering to toasting and keep our sense of humor.

We were at a grade school track meet in Seward on Saturday; the wind was fierce, and it was cold. We had dressed for it, and found a sunny spot, but there was no place to get out of the north wind if we wanted to watch the action on the track. And there was plenty of action there. Boys and girls from grades five to eight, all sizes, long legs and short ones, sprinting and chugging. Our Jaxson easily overtook two boys from Seward in the 800 for first place, and he was second in the mile. It actually hurts me to see people run the mile, but I give them all kinds of credit.

Further, on Thursday last week, our Dani high jumped five feet and qualified for state track. I see there is a gal from Pierce who has consistently gone 5-5 this year. That's pretty high for a gal. I wouldn't want to try that, either.

May is always just a kaleidoscope of events, from track meets and ball games, graduations and celebrations, Nurses Week and Mom's Day, nursing home week and Memorial Day. We just go from one observance to the next, and interspersing end of school music concerts and vocal recitals in between. I love it!

One newspaper asked mothers to write in about their most memorable Mother's Day. I always remember one in which I hosted my in-laws and all of our aunts and uncles in the Hoskins area, plus a couple who frequently baby sat for Sue and Jon, for dinner. When I look at the photos of all those dear people who are now long gone, I'm so glad I did that.

The other one I remember, and I'm sure I've written about before, was the weekend I was working afternoon shift at the hospital in Norfolk. Mike was home with all four kids, and it was raining when I left. Sometime that evening, he called. He never called me at work. But his message was that the roads were impassable and I was not to try to get home. I had a friend who ran a small motel on north 13th Street and I called her about a room. I checked in there about midnight and washed out my underwear and hose (yes, we wore hose to work) in the sink and went to bed. I think I probably took some scrubs from the hospital to sleep in. They make good pajamas.

I slept in the next morning, went out for brunch, and later, back to work. I have no idea what my family had for dinner that day, but they survived. And I had a VERY peaceful Mother's Day! You moms of young people will understand, I'm sure. Hope yours was a happy one. Turn on the AC!!

Livestock Market Report

Food Processing Center turns 30

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Food Processing Center will celebrate its 30th anniversary next month with tours and free ice cream.

An open house is planned from 1-5 p.m. June 9 at the center, in the Food Industry Complex on UNL's East Campus. Tours of the center's pilot plants will be offered, as will interactive displays on sensory testing, marketing, food safety and more.

And then there's the free ice cream. The FPC's Dairy Store is one of East Campus visitors' favorite stops, and the samples will remind open house participants why.

Nebraska was one of the first states to develop a food processing center, and its center served as an example for other states to do the same. Early successes included assistance to a group of Panhandle farmers growing and processing carrots and onions as alternatives to sugarbeets and work with the Japanese licensee of the Nebraska Sucrose Ester patents, which led to FDA approval of the product for use in the United States.

The center has a successful Food Entrepreneur Assistance Program used by business people all over the United States to help develop and expand food manufacturing businesses. Its pilot plants enable clients to perform production tests and develop new products using pilot-scale equipment. Areas of expertise in the plants include: extrusion, dairy production and research, high-pressure processing, ultrafiltration, reverse osmosis, dehydration and more.

Rolando Flores, director of the center, said the celebration of its history is important, but he's even more enthusiastic about the future. "We have to be more responsive, more efficient with fewer resources and more effectiveness," he said.

Flores said the center will continue to hone technologies that can be used to ensure more plentiful and safer food and break new ground in areas like functional foods, which are foods that deliver specific health benefits.

"We need to be responsive in new areas of technology, nutrition and health," he said.

Flores emphasized, "We will always give support to mom and pop organizations because it's a very important segment, but the future is the strengthening and development of our applied research."

"We cannot rest on our laurels," he added.

Tractor training, wind and solar tour scheduled near Concord

There will be a small scale wind and solar systems field tour at the Haskell Ag Lab, one mile east of Concord on Saturday May 18.

The tour will be from 1-4:30 p.m. This tour is for all who are interested in wind or solar systems for residence, farm, or business. You will learn about the economics and regulations related to the installing of solar arrays or wind turbines in your location. Indoor information will cover the basics of how each system works.

There will be two small working 5 kilowatt wind turbines and a 1.3 kilowatt solar array with six panels from four different manufacturers demonstrated. One of the turbines will be lowered so you can see and touch the turbine and see all the components which go into the installation.

Again, the tour is this Saturday at the Haskell Ag Lab from 1-4:30

Here is a last reminder that we will be having tractor safety training here at the Haskell Ag Lab on Wednesday and Thursday, May 29-30. Federal law prohibits youth under 16 years of age from working on a farm other than their parents. Certification through the course grants an exemption to the law allowing 14 and 15 year olds to drive a tractor and do field work with mechanized equipment.

Pre-registration is strongly encouraged. Please let us know by this Friday if you want to attend and to get further details. Pre-registration is strongly encouraged at least one week before the start date. Cost is $60, which includes educational materials, testing, supplies, lunches and breaks.

For more information and registration materials, contact the Dixon Co. Extension Office at (402) 584-2234 or e-mail bjunk2@unl.edu.

19th Annual Golf Classic to help Nebraska 4-H and FFA clubs

It's a classic, and it's a good one.

The 19th annual 4-H/FFA Golf Classic links golfers with fundraising to support Nebraska 4-H and FFA. This year, the event will be Monday, June 24 at the Arbor Links Golf Club in Nebraska City.

The golf classic is for men and women of all ages who are advocates for 4-H and FFA, said Stuart Shepherd, executive director of the Nebraska 4-H Foundation.

The event is in a different community each year, and participants are excited about golfing in Nebraska City, he said.

The Golf Classic is a major fundraiser for both organizations. In Nebraska, more than 143,000 youth ages 8-19 participate in 4-H and 6,000 high school students are members of FFA. Many high school-aged youth participate in both organizations, Stuart said.

In addition to golfing, silent and live auctions of donated items, and a nice meal are part of the event. Typically, about $40,000 is raised with 4-H and FFA each receiving approximately $20,000.

"The team at DuPont Pioneer considers it both exciting and rewarding to support the Nebraska 4-H Foundation, an organization that is equipping young people with the confidence and skills they need to live successful lives as they pursue careers in agriculture, agribusiness and other opportunities that match their unique talents," said Jeff Henn, DuPont Pioneer account manager and member of the 4-H/FFA Golf Classic Committee.

The agricultural community has been very generous to 4-H and FFA, Shepherd said. "We are very appreciative of the support of the agribusiness community across the state of Nebraska."

For more information or to donate to the 4-H/FFA Golf Classic, contact Desirae TePoel, Nebraska 4-H Foundation relations coordinator at (402) 472-7688 or e-mail dtepoel2@unl.edu.
