Dixon Fair's 100th is a record breaker

Great crowds, perfect weather made this fair one to remember

By CLARA OSTEN
Of the Herald

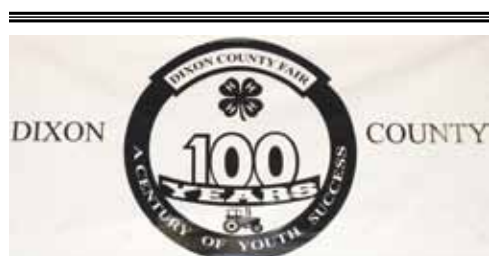

Ideal weather and a number of new and expanded features helped set attendance records at the 100th annual Dixon County Fair this year.

According to Fair Board President Brent Johnson, "Attendance was the best ever in our 100-year history. It was up every day of the fair."

He attributed the increased number of people at the fair to several factors – new attractions and ideal weather.

"The grandstand was full for Susie McIntire; the Outlaw Pull was new for us and brought a lot of people and the Demolition Derby was packed," Johnson said.

The fair board brought back the Chain Saw artist and Johnson said a number of Fair-goers at this year's Dixon County Fair found numerous ways to relive 'the good ole days,' including the larger than usual display of antique farm machinery display with over 125 items.

Act of nature

In what has been somewhat uncommon in recent years, the Wayne area was hit by a thunderstorm and high winds Monday morning. A number of branches were knocked down, including this one that landed on the roof of a home on Douglas Street. Several minor electrical issues were reported to the city of Wayne electrical department due to the storm which dumped more than an inch of rain in Wayne.

Passion for cars leads local man to start pair of local businesses

By KATIE KASL
Of the Herald

Ask Jason Schulz to describe his business, and he'll call it "more of a passion than a way to make a quick buck."

The car enthusiast and owner of Quality One Auto Sales has been selling vehicles from a small lot next to Godfather's Pizza in Wayne for almost 15 years.

He's been in town, however, for longer than that.

"I've been here my entire life," Schulz said. "I was born and raised here."

During that time, he's garnered over 25 years of experience in automobile purchasing. The year 1987 introduced Schulz to his first job working with an auto dealer. In 1988, he began attending vehicle auctions, something he still does to this very day.

"I like to specialize in late-model automobiles that are a little bit of a cut above the rest," Schulz said. "I tend to buy higher-end upscale models."

Jason Schulz, owner of both Quality Auto Sales and Quality One Graphics & Signs, displays a couple of the offerings that are available at his dual-purpose business, located at 115 West First Street in Wayne.

When his dealership opened to the public in 1999, Schulz could count on one hand the number of vehicles he had for sale. Today, he's got enough cars, trucks and SUVs to fill his lot – and then his garage at the first sign of a thunderstorm.

"I basically started with around three automobiles and have worked my way up to around 40," Schulz said.

He prides himself on not being a high-pressure sales person.

Look around, he encourages his customers.

Construction project highlighted at Council

By CLARA OSTEN
Of the Herald

A number of construction projects, along with the demolition of several buildings, were given the go-ahead during Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

A public hearing was held on a request by Breck Giese to demolish and clean up two of the three grain elevator properties currently owned by Michael Foods.

The elevator location on Logan Street and on South Main Street would be demolished and the property cleaned up. In addition, a new grain leg and additional storage would be built at the South Windom location.

A determination has been made that the area fits into the 'blighted and substandard' definition and is eligible for Tax Increment Financing.

The council also heard presentations from two Wayne residents and proposals to develop areas with assistance from the city in the form of TIF funds and the sale of city-owned property.

Ken Jorgensen told the council he would like to build a sports bar/grill on property east of McDonald's and would like the city's assistance with extending Hillside Drive across Highway 35 to this area.

He told the council he hopes to have a plat map for the re-development of this area approved at the September Planning Commission meeting and continue to move the process forward.

As a part of Tuesday's meeting, the council did approve a resolution which will amend the city's one and six year street improvement program to allow for the extension of Hillside Drive across Highway 35 to be a part of the plan.

Chad Sebade spoke to the council about his plan to construct a three-plex apartment house at Fourth and Nebraska streets.

Sebade would like to demolish the current property there, which is uninhabitable and structurally unsound and build a 1 1/2-story building on the location.

He presented a drawing of the proposed apartment building and council members indicated willingness to assist in providing TIF funding as the project moves forward. Discussion centered on the need to make the building fit in architecturally with the neighborhood.

LB840 funds were approved for two projects during Tuesday's meeting.

An interest-bearing loan of $37,000 was approved for Julie Cull, doing business as Geno's Steakhouse. The loan will be re-paid over a 10-year period.

The funds will be used to remodel the steakhouse, including installing new flooring and siding and the installation of several windows in the building.

Wes Blecke, representing the LB840 Committee, told the council that the business has also obtained bank financing for a portion of the project and is using its own assets for project.

A loan for $39,750, with the same terms, was approved for Dale and Debbie Paulson, doing business as Paulson Construction, was approved for the purchase of the former Ellis Plumbing building on Pearl Street.

B.J. Woehler expressed concern about what activities would take place at the location, noting construction is not allowed in the area.

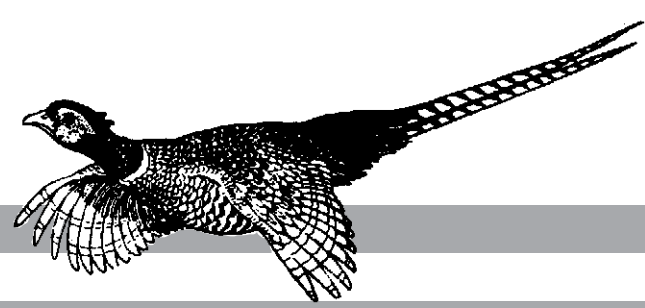

Council members were informed that an office space for the construction business would be allowed under present zoning, as would the sale of tires, which the Paulsons plan to do.

Council members listened to city staff explain the current policy and procedure for mowing properties in the city when property owners fail to do so.

Obituaries

Daniel 'Boone' McCright

Daniel "Boone" F. McCright, 58, of Seward, died Friday, Aug. 2, 2013 in his home.

Services were held Tuesday, Aug. 6 at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church in Seward, Father Christopher Barak officiated.

Daniel "Boone" McCright was born Oct. 1, 1954 to Thomas and Margaret (Dalton) McCright in Wayne. He graduated from Wayne High School in 1973. On March 2, 1973, Boone married Valerie Hirschman at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Laurel. He worked as a Seward County Sheriff's Deputy for many years and most recently worked for the Seward County Roads Department as Chief Sign Officer. In his free time, Boone enjoyed riding horses and roping, boating and fishing and especially spending time with his family and enjoying his grandchildren. Boone was a friend to many. He was always prepared to make others laugh with a good joke, and would go miles out of his way to help someone in need. Boone died surrounded in love by his family after a valiant seven year battle with cancer. He redefined "fight" throughout that journey, never giving up, and always filled with hope.

Survivors include his wife, Valerie McCright of Seward; one son, Daniel McCright (fiancee, Sheena Hall) of Seward; daughters, Melissa (Michael) Eberspacher of Beaver Crossing, Trisha (Brad) Urbanek of Omaha and Stephanie (Jason) Ruether of Beaver Crossing; his father, Tom McCright of Wayne; grandchildren, Caden and Kenna Eberspacher, Grant and Kraig Urbanek, Samara, Kasten and Leyton Ruether, Owen and Shali McCright; brothers, Tom (Sheri) McCright of Omaha, Randy (Chris) McCright, Omaha, Dustan (Dawn) McCright, Littleton, Colo., Jamie McCright, Staplehurst, Mark McCright, Wayne, Patrick (Elizabeth) McCright, Denver, Colo., Jon McCright, Milford, Ted (Adrienne) McCright, Denver, Colo.; sisters, Pam (Rick) North, Elkhorn, Mary Ellen (Ron) Green, Spokane, Wash., Susan (Royal) Cover, Omaha and Paula (Joe) Vazzano, Omaha.

He was preceded in death by his mother, Margaret McCright; brothers, Stephen McCright and Jeff McCright; and sister, Katherine McCright.

Pallbearers were Ed Schmieding, Dean Blum, Gary Ruether, Larry Ruether, John Adler, Wes Luebbe, Frank Mikos and Dave Lathrop.

Honorary pallbearers were grandchildren, brothers and brothers-in-law.

Memorials may be made in care of the McCright family.

Burial was in St. Anne's Catholic Cemetery in Dixon. Volzke Funeral Home in Seward was in charge of arrangements.

Bob Pruss

Bob Pruss, 52, of Wayne, formerly of O'Neill, died Sunday, Aug. 4, 2013 at the Golden Living Center in O'Neill.

Services will be at 10 a.m. on Thursday, Aug. 8 at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in O'Neill, with burial in the O'Neill Cemetery. Fr. James Netusil will officiate. Visitation will be Wednesday, Aug. 7 from 5-8 p.m., with a 7 p.m. Rosary at Biglin's Mortuary in O'Neill. Memorials may be made to R Way of Wayne, where Bob has lived and worked for the last 16 years.

Bob Pruss was born July 16, 1961, in Omaha, to Bernard and Barbara (McCarthy) Pruss. He graduated from O'Neill High School and attended college for one year. He did construction roofing and drywall.

Survivors include his parents, Bernie and Barb Pruss, of O'Neill; brothers, Bernie Pruss II and finance, Maru, of Denver, Colo. and Daniel Pruss and wife Linda, of South Fork, Colo.; a sister, Diane Pruss and special friend Brian, of O'Neill; nephew, Joe Pruss, wife, Ashlea and their daughter Emma, of Springfield, S.D., nephew, Jacob Shelhamer of Denver, Colo. and nephew, Michael Shelhamer, of O'Neill and numerous aunts, uncles, cousins and friends.

He was preceded in death by his grandparents, and brother Gregg. Biglin's Mortuary in O'Neill is in charge of arrangements.

Looking Ahead in Wayne

Lake Beverly at Wayne?
I've gotten a few calls about all the water in Beverly Park just west of the cemetery.

The park is in a detention basin. It was temporarily covered with storm water runoff after the rains on Monday. The storm water detention dam is working as it's designed to work. We are developing the park in the detention area to make use of that land which will seldom flood and when it floods the water will go down quickly.

Temporary water won't hurt the park equipment.

The detention basin was required by the Nebraska Department of Roads to control storm water runoff from lots developed in Western Ridge. NDOR required the detention capacity to be large enough to hold the runoff of all the land in and above Western Ridge from a 4.6 inch rain in 24 hours on 5 percent permeable ground

The four foot diameter steel culvert through the dam still has the temporary vertical head on the north end. It holds back a lot of storm water runoff right now to allow the silt to drop out of the water. This vertical head was required by The US Army Corps of Engineers as part of the SWPPP (Storm Water Pollution Prevention Plan) for the Western Ridge Subdivision project until the lawns and undeveloped lots have enough vegetative cover on them to stop silt erosion.

Next year we'll remove that vertical head which holds back the water. Then, the storm water runoff will drain right on through the four foot culvert except for a little left in the drainage ditch along the west side of the park and along the dam. After that, the only time we should see water backed up into the park will be during major storm events.

What about the underpass? The underpass for the trail will be beside the four foot culvert. It will go under the road east of the dam and the two will be separated by a dirt berm.

Beverly Park was named after Bev Sturm by the students on the Mayor's Youth Council to honor the Sturm family for their involvement and support of area kids and athletics.

Storm damage

A great debate: are new windows necessary?

Do I need new windows?

Another window salesman just knocked on my door and told me that switching out my windows can save me 40 percent to 50 percent on my energy bills. Wow! That would be wonderful. Think of the money I would save.

But is it true? Regrettably, in almost all situations - no.

There are many things about windows that homeowners should be aware of before replacing them. One common misperception is that new windows will provide an excellent return on investment from the energy they save. A close examination of the economics reveals the error in this assumption.

"Replacing old windows with high-performing, energy-efficient ones can save significant amounts of energy," said Jeffrey F. Lowinski, vice president of technical services for the Window and Door Manufacturers Association (WDMA). He notes that reports published by the U.S. Department of Energy and Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory reveal that almost half of the homes in the U.S. still have single-pane windows; if all of those homes would upgrade to Energy Star-certified windows, Lowinski calculates, the energy savings would be approximately 20 million BTUs per house per year.

That may sound like a lot, but depending on how you heat your home, that equates to $110 to $600 annually. If you are focused on the bottom line and energy savings, that $12,000 investment on replacement windows will go a lot farther through other energy-saving measures.

For example, an old house with minimal insulation can be air sealed and insulated for much less money than replacing windows, and these steps have the potential to result in three-to-four times more energy savings.

Before pursuing new windows, consider whether tuning up existing windows can yield similar savings at greatly reduced costs. If you have single-pane windows and do not have storm windows on the outside, get them. The energy saved is comparable to installing new double pane windows at a fraction of the cost.

Do the existing windows seem "drafty"? Check around the outside frame of the window, as well as around the panes to see if caulking is cracked, chipped, or is missing. Drafts felt around the window trim inside can often be stopped by removing the trim and filling the gap between the window frame and the wall with low-expansion, insulating foam. Be careful not to use standard expanding foam, as this may put excess pressure on the window frame and hinder your ability to open and close the window.

If you are still convinced that new windows are your best option, know that they will eventually pay for themselves. Common paybacks are in the range of 15-30 years, depending on purchase price, installation costs, energy saved, and utility rates. That may provide some solace, since the American Architectural Manufacturers Association states that windows last 50-60 years if maintained properly.

Your local utility and Nebraska Public Power District want to help you make the most of the energy they provide you. That includes assisting you with the consideration for new or replacement windows and what to look for. For assistance on making your home EnergyWiseSM, contact your local utility or visit www.nppd.com.

UNL report charts livestock trends

A new University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension publication from the Department of Agricultural Economics offers an ongoing factual understanding of livestock industry changes impacting Nebraska.

The publication, U.S. Livestock Industry Trends and Nebraska's Role, is available at go.unl.edu/livestockindustry.

The report presents a baseline perspective with trend analysis over the past 10 years. Data was assembled from several sources and a set of metrics is used to track trends and compare relationships with other states.

The report provides readily accessible insight for industry stakeholders, policy makers and researchers.

In addition, the agricultural economics department will continue to monitor and update the report in an online series called "Nebraska Livestock Industry Data Dashboard." For more information visit the website at agecon.unl.edu/livestock.

Nebraska is among the top livestock producing states in the nation. Currently the state ranks first in commercial cattle slaughter, second in cattle and calves receipts, third in meat production, fourth in all livestock and products cash receipts and beef cows and heifers calved and sixth in all hogs and pigs produced.

With the U.S. livestock industry always in a dynamic flux, the industry changes rapidly in both structural configuration of livestock production and its geographic location. How Nebraska's livestock industry is adapting to these changes is the focus of this report and the subsequent ongoing data monitoring/analysis series.

NSAA to partner with NFHS to create digital sports entity

The Nebraska School Activities Association (NSAA) is one of 28 members of the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) that has joined the NFHS Network, the new all-digital network devoted to coverage of high school sports and performing arts through the Internet at www.NFHSnetwork.com.

The NFHS, in association with PlayOn! Sports (PlayOn), announced the official launch of the NFHS Network on Aug. 1. With coverage of boys and girls sports and activities initially in at least 28 states during the 2013-14 school year, the NFHS Network becomes the largest aggregated destination for coverage of high school sports in the country. Through a subscription-based digital service available at www.NFHSnetwork.com, more students, parents and fans will be able to watch high school sports than ever before.

In addition to the NSAA, NFHS member associations in the following states have finalized agreements and will be a part of the NFHS Network as the 2013-14 season begins: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

In addition, member associations in a number of other states are close to completing agreements and are expected to join the NFHS Network soon.

"We believe this is one of the greatest opportunities in the 94-year history of the NFHS as we are able to take advantage of new technology and showcase high school sports and performing arts on a national scale," said Bob Gardner, NFHS executive director. "We are excited to provide viewership opportunities for fans of high school sports that have never existed before. The NFHS Network will help showcase our primary mission of expanding participation and opportunities for involvement in education-based interscholastic sports and performing arts activities."

"The NSAA Staff and Board of Directors are excited to be a part of this grassroots initiative. The NFHS Networks goal is to showcase the vision and mission of interscholastic participation," said Rhonda Blanford-Green, NSAA Executive Director.

Postseason games in all sports sponsored by the NSAA will be available online on the Network, except for select championship events for which the NSAA has existing television contracts with other media partners. Viewing opportunities for NFHS Network events will be posted in the coming months at www.NFHSnetwork.com.

The NFHS Network will build on the past success of PlayOn's high-quality coverage of high school sports at the state level. PlayOn currently streams nearly 30,000 events per school year and has worked with 32 state associations and sections in 26 states.

Wood named to NBDC staff

The Nebraska Business Development Center (NBDC) announced the recent addition of Alex Wood as a procurement technical assistance consultant that can provide assistance with government contracting.

NBDC's procurement technical assistance program helps companies complete the registration process, locate and bid on sales opportunities with local, state and federal government agencies. Assistance includes contractor networking and training. In this position, Wood will provide services to businesses in northeast Nebraska from the NBDC offices on the Wayne State College campus.

Wood comes to NBDC after spending the past 16 years working as a coach/educator at the collegiate and high school levels. At the collegiate level, he coached on the field, was an off campus recruiter and assisted with the bidding and purchasing process for the athletic department.

In addition to government contracting, NBDC consulting services include financial projections for loan packaging, technology commercialization assistance, exporting, succession planning and marketing strategies. To learn more about NBDC services, contact Wood at (402) 375-7735 or visit the NBDC website at nbdc.unomaha.edu.

ally have," Johnson said.

High praise was given to the volunteers who stepped up to put in extra work to make the 100th fair special.

"Everything was great at this year's fair – the weather was even cool at times. We are already discussing plans for next year because some of the new things we had for this special fair are things people are asking us to bring back next year," Johnson said.

Another change in this year's activities was an old-fashioned carnival on Sunday evening, before the Richards Amusements rides were set up. Johnson said they, too, were very popular with fair-goers.

Displays throughout the fairgrounds focused on activities that have taken place at the fair throughout its 100-year history.

Paving issues discussed at county board meeting

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

The Wayne County Commissioners took care of some paving issues around the Wayne County Courthouse during Tuesday's meeting.

The board spoke with Fred Bader of Bader's Highway and Street Maintenance of Norfolk about four specific areas, two of which are around the courthouse. The other projects included the Winside Cemetery road and the parking lot in the county's Health and Human Services building.

County commissioners were particularly concerned about the concrete in the west parking area of the parking lot, which has a significant number of cracks in it. The parking areas on the south, east and west sides of the courthouse building were one of the projects being looked at, as was the old concrete in the north parking area.

Concerns were also raised about the paved road between Highway 35 and the Winside Cemetery just southwest of Winside.

"I want to do that for sure, because if it gets busted up, there would be people that would be upset if we put it back to gravel," District 3 Commissioner Jim Rabe said. "It costs a lot of money to overlay it."

District 1 Commissioner Randy Larson was also concerned that the county would be spending money on a project that would be replaced in a few years.

"If it's going to be a replacement project in a couple of years, then I don't want to spend money on it," he said.

The county had four items to look at in their discussion with Bader, but the total costs would exceed $5,000. Under consideration

Board chair and District 2 Commissioner Dean Burbach said that the county would need to get three quotes if they spent more than $5,000, and wasn't sure if there were other companies in the area that could take care of the work.

The board discussed piecing out the projects, saving the parking on the three sides around the courthouse property until a later time and focusing on the north parking lot, the Health and Human Services parking lot and the Winside Cemetery road.

The board unanimously approved authorizing Bader to do sealing work on the north courthouse work, the Health and Human Services parking lot and the Winside Cemetery road at a total cost of $4,042. The street parking on the other three sides of the courthouse, which will be done at another time at a cost of $3,539, was not included in the motion.

In other action, the board:

- approved the bid of $9,025.01 to Midwest Sales and Service of Schuyler on the bridge plank project near Ike's Lake.

- approved two bids of $980 by B's Enterprises of Norfolk for culvert projects east of Hoskins.

- approved an easement request for a 30-by-150 foot parcel of land along property owned by Lowell Heggenmeyer near the county shed on Pearl Street in Wayne.

- received a health insurance rebate check of $1,483.33 from United Healthcare.

- approved bank securities relating to Farmers State Bank and F&M Bank.

- approved lodging tax applications for Forward Wayne and Connecting Young Nebraskans ($1,000) and Northeast Nebraska RC&D ($500).

- approved applications by Northeast Nebraska Public Power and CenturyLink to place utility lines in county road right-of-way.

The board is in recess until Tuesday, Aug. 13, when they will have a work session on the 2013-14 fiscal year budget.

Several injured in two-car accident Sunday near Hoskins

The Wayne County Sheriff's Office was dispatched to a two-vehicle crash at the intersection of 854th Rd. and 561st Ave. on Sunday at approximately 11:30 a.m.

A vehicle driven by Adam Behmer of Hoskins was southbound on 561st Avenue, and a second vehicle driven by Sandra Passyka of Hoskins was westbound on 854th Road. The Behmer vehicle struck the Passyka vehicle in the rear passenger side door at the middle of the intersection. The Passyka vehicle then slid into the south ditch of 854th Road and rolled 1 1/2 times, coming to rest on its roof. The Behmer vehicle rolled onto its roof and came to rest in the west ditch of 561st Avenue.

The Behmer vehicle was occupied by Adam Behmer and his wife, Laura Behmer, and their three sons, Daxton, Baker and Dane. The other vehicle was occupied by Sandra Passyka and her grandchildren, Quitin, Westin, and Austin Flesner, and Bradin and Mackaylin Passyka. Passyka and her five grandchildren were transported to Faith Regional Hospital in Norfolk by Winside and Hoskins/Woodland Park Rescue Units. Behmer and his family were taken to Faith Regional Hospital by a family member.

Seat belts and car seats were in use by all parties. Three children in the Passyka vehicle were later flown from Faith Regional Health Services to Omaha for higher level trauma injuries.

The Wayne County Sheriff's Office was assisted at the scene by Hoskins/Woodland Park Fire and Rescue, Winside Volunteer Fire and Rescue and Carroll Volunteer Fire Department.

Fernau sentenced to jail, probation for business theft

A 35-year-old Carroll woman received jail time and probation as she was sentenced Wednesday in Wayne County District Court for her involvement in a theft of a Wayne business over a 14-month period in 2011 and 2012.

Mandi Fernau received a concurrent sentence from Judge Mark Johnson on charges of theft by unlawful taking of more than $1,500, a Class IV felony; and second degree forgery, a Class II felony. She was sentenced to 36 months probation and must serve 37 days in jail, with time to be served on consecutive weekends in the county jail.

In addition, Fernau must pay $37,000 in restitution to Burrows and Holloway Family Dentistry and write a letter of apology to the business owners, take a money management course and perform 300 hours of community service.

Passion

Feel free to drive a vehicle, he tells them.

If they don't find anything in Schulz's inventory that fits their needs, they can tell him exactly what they're looking for, and he'll try to locate it for them.

In fact, at least 50 percent of his sales are made this way.

Schulz – along with his father Don, who he called "an integral part of the business" – go to car auctions and buy vehicles privately for the Quality lot and its customers. Schulz's reason for this is simple: he wants to know what he's getting himself into.

Being able to buy in-person reduces the risk of purchasing a car and all the surprises (think dents, dings and noxious odors) that can go along with it.

In addition to being aware of what he's buying, Schulz wants the same to be true for his customers too. He's a detail-oriented advertiser and is adamant about placing tags from the rearview mirror of each and every vehicle on his lot.

"All my prices are posted on the cars at all times," Schulz said. "I believe in posting my prices right upfront."

Also upfront is a bar code on the windshield of each automobile.

When a customer scans it with their smartphone, it'll take them straight to the car's page on the Quality Auto Sales website. (Vehicle information can be found on the business' Facebook profile, as well.)

It's one way Schulz tries to make the car-shopping process – an already time-consuming endeavor – as quick and painless as possible.

"When I started this business, I started it to provide the customer with a way to purchase a vehicle that wasn't painful," Schulz said.

So, he's willing to provide his shoppers with ample information on a set of wheels, and he's willing to hunt down that perfect car for them, shouldering both the responsibility and the amount of trust that goes into such an operation.

And for that, he's honored.

"The community, as a whole, has been a great supporter of my business," Schulz said.

They back not only the vehicle sales portion of his livelihood but, also, another venture that spawned from his love of automobiles: Quality One Graphics & Signs.

Started in 1999, the business is Schulz's foray into graphic design, a subject he took a liking to even though he's never formally studied it.

"I think I was more interested in the fun stuff I could put on a vehicle," he said.

What began as a vision of stripes along the side of a car has turned into a business that produces signs, banners, decals, magnets, logos, bumper stickers and automobile and window lettering.

Originally, Quality One Graphics & Signs was a home-based project before Schulz moved it to downtown Wayne. Now, it's in the same building as his auto dealership, and he no longer has to run back and forth between the two.

His current office next to Godfather's Pizza is home to an over-sized thermal transfer printer that's eco-friendly and doesn't produce the harsh fumes of a typical inkjet. The machine, along with his two step-daughters – Rachel's a 16-year-old high school student, and Nicole's a 22-year-old graphic design and advertising major at Morningside College – help him meet the needs of his customers.

And, of course, he enjoys every minute of it.

"The main reason I like my job so much is no day is the same," Schulz said. "It's not a very monotonous job because I'm always doing something different."

City Administrator Lowell Johnson told the council that this year nearly 120 notices have been sent to property owners in a process that is time-consuming and costly to the city.

A $90 per hour fee, with a one hour minimum, is assessed to the property owner if the city is required to have the lawn mowed and bagged, has become less of a deterrent and staff recommended the rate be raised to $300 per hour to assist with costs incurred by the city.

The resolution making these changes was unanimously approved by the council.

In other action, council members approved three ordinances which will change the parking along East 10th Street.

Street superintendent Joel Hansen told the council the changes were necessary due to the recent construction along the street. The street is now slightly narrower due to the addition of a wider sidewalk.

Unanimous approval was given for the changes and the council waived the three readings of the ordinances to allow for the changes to take effect when the street is again open to traffic and for the start of the school year.

The council will hold a budget work session on Monday, Aug. 19, beginning at 4 p.m. and the next regular meeting will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 20 at 5:30 p.m. in council chambers.

New WSC coaches should make it fun

This is what we call "Dead Week" in the area sports scene – a perfect opportunity to scour the "Bits and Pieces" file:

– Last week, I had the opportunity to talk with both of the new coaches at Wayne State College, and I'm very excited about the potential Tom Cliff and Brian Dolan are bringing to their respective programs.

One thing you always wonder, when a new coach comes to town, is whether they have an engaging personality and are going to be a good fit for the school and community. It's safe to say, from my meeting with them last week, we'll have two coaches that will make the women's soccer and men's basketball programs at Wayne State College a lot of fun to watch in the years ahead.

Soccer has the biggest mountain to climb right now. Wayne State hasn't had a winning program in some time, and Cliff is anxious to change the culture and build a winner here. He took a bottom-feeding Adams State team to respectability and built Northwestern College in Iowa into a winner at the NAIA level, so his track record suggests that good things are on the horizon on the Wildcat pitch.

Men's basketball isn't near as far from being in the hunt for a regional trip, and the rebuilding effort set up by Paul Combs is going to get a good shot in the arm with Dolan, who took a dreadful Upper Iowa team that transitioned to Div. II from Div. III from 3-25 to a regional trip in seven years. He's a lot closer to that level here than he was when he started at Upper Iowa, so it will be fun to see where this team goes in the next couple of years.

– A couple of funny bits from Dolan's news conference:

First, Dolan made it clear that we do NOT live in a small town here in Wayne, America – at least, compared to where he came from.

"Wayne is 5.6 times bigger than Fayette. You have stop lights – multiple ones," he said to laughter.

He also joked about having former Wildcat standout Amry Shelby as his graduate assistant this coming year. The last time both were in Rice Auditorium, Shelby hit a buzzer-beating game-winner to defeat Dolan's Peacocks.

Asked if he and Shelby will talk about that play, Dolan smiled and said, "That's something that will happen face-to-face. He might have to check all the conditioning drills to make sure the times are right," he said.

– Sometimes, you have to pull some good from a bad situation, and I'm sure there isn't an American Legion baseball coach in the state who isn't going to use what happened to the Waverly program as an example of how NOT to act when you're representing yourself, your family, your team and your community away from home.

From The Bleachers

Six Waverly American Legion players were cited as the result of an alcohol-fueled situation that led to the team forfeiting the championship game of the Class B Seniors tournament in Scottsbluff last week. After bed check, the players snuck out of their hotel and a couple were charged with vandalizing mailboxes, while four others were cited for minor in possession.

To say this is a shameful display is an understatement. These players cast a dark cloud over themselves, their families, their team, their community and American Legion baseball in general with their collective act of stupidity. There is never a good time for something like this to happen, but to do it the night before a state championship game just defies logical thought.

The vast majority of kids that age are good kids who know right from wrong and adhere to the principals that American Legion baseball is supposed to teach the young men who play the game. Here's hoping that these six knuckleheads come to understand the shame they've cast upon a lot of people they care about and that the incident serves as an example to our high school-age athletes of how NOT to conduct themselves when they're away from home.

– Speaking of setting an example, I hope and pray there aren't any athletes in our area who are trying to follow the lead of cheaters like Alex Rodriguez and Ryan Braun.

If you've been following the news, the two baseball stars are among a list of more than a dozen players who have been tied to Biogenesis, a company that has been working with professional and college athletes to help disguise the illegal performance-enhancing substances they have been taking.

There is no room in sports, at any level, for cheaters. If you are taking performance-enhancing drugs to make yourself a better athlete, you not only are cheating the sport and those who participate alongside you, but you put yourself at risk for future health issues that will shorten your life.

Here's hoping that Major League Baseball's actions send a message that such activity is not acceptable at any level, from the pros on down to high school sports.

This 'Cat bleeds Husker red

WSC alum to show 'Through These Gates' here Oct. 8

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

He's a Wayne State alum, but he bleeds Husker red and is bringing his passion for Nebraska Cornhusker football to Wayne later this fall.

Lincoln native Ryan Tweedy, a 2004 Wayne State graduate now living in Hollywood, is making a move back to his home state later this month to market his new documentary about what it means to be a Cornhusker fan.

"Through These Gates" is a documentary about what it means to "be a Cornhusker" and includes interviews with fans, celebrities and Husker legends such as Tom Osborne, Eric Crouch and Tommie Frazier. The film is being shown across the state beginning this month, and will be shown as a fundraiser at the Majestic Theater in Wayne on Tuesday, Oct. 8.

Tweedy graduated from Wayne State in 2004 with degrees in theater and mass communications, and he set out to be involved in the movie industry. He made his way to Chicago and then to Hollywood, where he discovered that some Californians don't know what being a Husker is really all about.

"When you leave Nebraska, you always hear from people," Tweedy said in a phone interview from California Tuesday. "I always wear Nebraska gear, and I'll hear 'There's that Cornhusker' or 'What's the 'N' for, knowledge?' It's an identity thing."

He got started in filming documentaries by helping a friend with a documentary in India, and he discovered then just how worldwide the Husker identity reaches.

"I was helping to film a documentary in India, and we interviewed a Buddhist nun who lived in the Himalayan mountains for a decade," he said. After the interview, she asked me where I was from and I said Nebraska, and she said, 'Oh, the Cornhuskers?' My friend turned to me and said it was crazy that no matter where we go, people know where I'm from."

His interest in making a documentary combined with his passion for Husker football, and he began interviewing Husker legends like Crouch, Jerry Tagge and Chas Kelsay.

While talking with fellow Husker fans, he found out something different about their memories of Husker football – it wasn't the games that they remember, but what they were doing or who they were with when those games were played.

"As I was making the project, I started wondering what peoples' favorite Husker memory was, and the story wasn't about football as much as hanging out with family, having a barbecue, that sort of thing," Tweedy said. "It's so much bigger than football itself. It's our culture. This is our theme."

The movie not only features Husker football, but showcases the sense of community that comes with being a Husker fan.

The movie "examines true sportsmanship from a genuine community," the movie's information page states on its website at www.huskerfilm.com. "It's not just a film about watching football. It's a film about people needing each other."

Tweedy spent the next couple of years saving money and borrowing film equipment from a friend to line up interviews. He remembered sitting in Tom Osborne's office and how, in the back of his mind, he couldn't believe he was sitting in the same room talking to one of his childhood heroes.

"I learned a lot about people like that," he said. "They were all great people to talk with and are really just down to earth people."

The movie is a must-see for any Husker fan, and a wide variety of people with connections to both Nebraska and the program are interviewed. Everybody from former players like Crouch and Frazier to coaches like Osborne and Charlie McBride. There are even interviews with Jack Hoffman, the seven-year-old pediatric cancer patient who got to score a touchdown in the Red-White game earlier this year; comedian and devoted Husker fan Larry the Cable Guy; and Jan Berringer, the mother of Brook Berringer, the Husker quarterback legend who died in a plane crash two days before the 1996 NFL Draft.

"Through These Gates" gets its first viewing in front of Husker fans this weekend at a Californians for Nebraska event on the west coast, but he is putting together a tour of viewings of the movie in his home state, just in time for the start of the 2013 season. The first screening will be in Scottsbluff on Thursday, Aug. 22, and the first showing in Lincoln will be held at the Rocco Theater on Friday, Aug. 30, the night before the Huskers open the 2013 season at home against Wyoming.

"Right now, we're getting word out about the film through Facebook, Twitter and word of mouth, and I had some friends do some small screenings in their apartments," Tweedy said. "Huskermax.com has been promoting it like crazy, and we're working on trying to get 40 screenings in 15 states."

The word is getting out, and in places most Husker fans here in Nebraska wouldn't expect.

"We've had people in Oklahoma, Texas and Florida call," he said. "There is also interest in Boston, Colorado, Oregon, and a theater in Happy Valley, Pa., wants to do a screening the night before the Huskers play at Penn State."

Tweedy said he never thought he would get as much support for the documentary as he has, but then says he shouldn't have been surprised.

"I should have expected it because these are Husker fans," he said. "The ultimate goal was to make a film about something I love, and as we started making it, others thought it was a good idea and we got a lot of help with it."

He said he's looking forward to bringing the film back to Wayne.

"I've got a lot of good memories from my time in Wayne, so I'm excited (to bring it here)," he said.

Interesting and unique could describe the display of antique farm machinery at this year's Dixon County Fair. Many of the pieces of equipment were more than 50 years old, with a number of them still in working order.

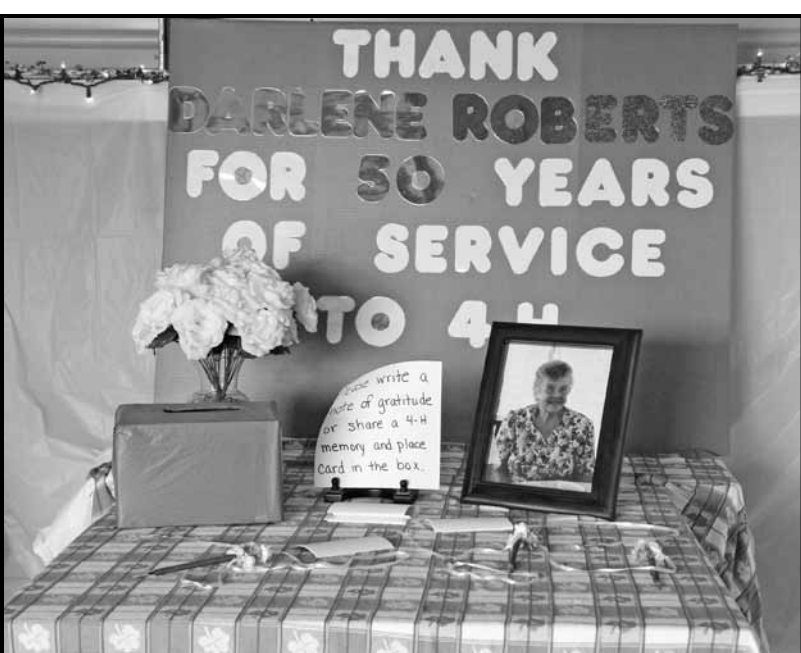

Memorabilia from many of the past fairs was a part of a display in the office of the Dixon County Fair as part of the 100th anniversary celebration.

A special booth with the opportunity to share memories was set up at this year's Dixon County Fair to honor Darlene Roberts, who has served as a 4-H Leader in Dixon County for 50 years.

Several pieces of clothing that were exhibited at the fair during the past 100 years were on display. Each of these exhibits allowed fair-goers the opportunity to reminisce about 'the good ole days.'

Runaway Saws was on the grounds at this year's Dixon County Fair, creating a number of wooden sculptures that were then auctioned off several different times during the fair.

Food always tastes better at the fair and the Dixon County Fair was no exception. The Dixon County 4-H youth took turns serving customers during the four-day event. Several other options in food choices were available on the fairgrounds also.

Hundreds of antiques cars, trucks, tractors and pieces of farm machinery were a part of this year's Dixon County Fair. Each exhibit attracted numerous comments and hundreds of pictures were taken to help preserve a piece of history.

Northeast Nebraska all-star football game returns to Norfolk in 2014

The first-ever Northeast Nebraska All-Star Football Classic, which was held earlier in June, surpassed its expectations and is looking forward to bigger and better opportunities, according to Mike Fuehrer, sports development manager for the Norfolk Area Sports Council.

"The Board of Directors realizes there are some tweaks that need to be made, but having sound sponsorships and 2,249 spectators for our first game sets the bar pretty high," Fuehrer said. "It's important to the Board of Directors that we announce next year's date and game time before the start of the upcoming school year. We had football players set personal goals to play in the first All-Star Game before the start of their senior season. We think that will happen again."

Next summer's football game will be played on Saturday, June 14, 2014 at 1 p.m., Fuehrer said. The game will again be played at Norfolk's Veteran's Memorial Field. In fact, the City of Norfolk and the Board of Directors have pledged to keep the All-Star game in Norfolk for at least the next five years.

"This event proved to be a great success this first year," Norfolk Mayor Sue Fuchtmann said. "The City of Norfolk is honored that the board is choosing Norfolk to be the long term home and is very willing to be an active sponsor. From a community of folks that enjoyed a great night of high school football at this year's game, I feel there is complete community support and a desire to continue to see this event grow."

Also stepping forward is Faith Regional Health Services (FRHS), which served as the inaugural Title Sponsor. Tim Auwarter, who is acting as interim CEO and President of FRHS, said his team is pledging to be the Title Sponsor for the next three years.

"Faith Regional Health Services is excited and honored to be associated with such a wonderful athletic event," Auwarter said. "We are looking forward to continuing our community partnership with the Northeast Nebraska All-Star Football Classic and the Norfolk Area Sports Council as together we build a regional program of excellence in athletics and in sports training and rehabilitation."

Fuehrer said he has the full support of the Norfolk Area Sports Council. "This event is right up our alley," Fuehrer said. "Not only did we help with the creation of this All-Star game, our office wants to see it succeed well into the future."

Jeff Bellar, President of the Board of Directors, said it is important to keep in close contact with the 59 area football teams, who are eligible to nominate players for the game.

"We need to keep our options open in terms of the geographic area we want to serve," Bellar said. "As school enrollments change, and as our area schools continue to consolidate or co-op, we need to communicate with our schools."

Bellar said his Board is exploring options to include band, cheerleaders and dance for the 2014 All-Star Game. "We've already had some interest in having a marching band perform," he said. "These are activities we'd like to make happen."

Bellar also encourages football fans to follow developments on its website at nenallstarfootballclassic.com. He said a history link, documenting this past year's game, is available. "Football is obviously important to all of northeast Nebraska," Bellar said.

EMT class to be held at Northeast this fall

Northeast Community College in Norfolk will offer an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) class beginning this fall.

Emergency Medical Technician Part 1, with course number EMTL 1840/13F and CRN #12631 will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays, August 20-December 13 from 6:00-8:30 p.m. in the Ag/Allied Health building, Room 232. The second session of the class will run from January-May 2014.

This course is dedicated to the study and application of the knowledge and skills necessary for an individual to become an Emergency Medical Technician and provide emergency medical care at a basic life support level with an ambulance service or other specialized service. The course will include the first half of the applications/skills needed to apply for licensure as an EMT in the State of Nebraska.

After successful completion of this course and EMTL-1845 the student will be eligible to apply to test for the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technician (NREMT) cognitive examination. Once the student has passed both the cognitive and practical skills examinations of the NREMT, he/she can apply to obtain an EMT license in the State of Nebraska. This class contains the current information found in the National EMS Education Standards as outlined by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Cost for the class, with Landon Grothe and Lance Grothe serving as the instructors, is $466.50.

On line registration for the Norfolk class is currently open at www.northeast.edu.

For more information, call Northeast Community College at (402) 844-7720.

Nebraska's state tree may be threatened

Early settlers and Native Americans in Nebraska used the eastern cottonwood tree for firewood, landmarks and construction materials. Even today, cottonwood is by far the most harvested and processed timber tree species in the state. But that could all change if the tree continues to decline in population, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension forester said.

The eastern cottonwood has been Nebraska's state tree since 1972. It is a native, fast-growing, relatively short-lived tree, dependent on bare soil and good soil moisture reproduce. It is most often found in riparian areas along rivers and streams, often in pure, even-aged stands.

Nebraska's cottonwood resource is threatened because of four factors, Nebraska Forest Service/ UNL Extension forester Dennis Adams said. Flood control, land conversion, livestock grazing and herbicide damage are all causing a decrease in cottonwood population.

"Cottonwood requires bare mineral soil to regenerate," Adams said. "It was prolific in the past due to the periodic flooding that occurred along the state's rivers and streams."

Historically, flooding was a common occurrence along the Republican, Platte, Blue, Elkhorn, Missouri and many other rivers and streams in Nebraska. Since the 1950s, extensive stream channelization and numerous flood control structures have affected the natural stream flow in the state's major rivers and smaller tributaries. Occasional flooding still occurs, but not nearly as extensively as in the past, Adams said. While dams and channelization has enabled many additional uses of previously flooded riparian bottomlands, it has reduced the ability of cottonwood to regenerate.

"There's not much we can do about cottonwood loss due to flood control because we aren't going to take the dams out," Adams said. Adams said it is projected that cottonwood will continue to decrease in both area and number of trees in the future.

"Primarily a result of flood control efforts, the average size and age of our cottonwood trees have increased," Adams said. "Recent forest inventory data indicates that our mature cottonwood stands have virtually no cottonwood regeneration, but are being encroached upon and replaced by other tree and shrub species, often undesirable species like eastern red cedar or Russian olive."

Adams said that one way to help bring back the cottonwood population aside from planting new trees is to allow natural regeneration in riparian areas that may now be in marginal crop land.

Adams also said that farmers should be careful when using herbicides, particularly aerially applied, on adjacent crops and pastures. Herbicide drift can damage cottonwoods, causing leaves to drop or curl, slowing growth and causing dieback of branches. In extreme cases herbicide drift can kill trees.

"If farmers spray when it is too windy or too hot the herbicide can drift or volatilize and can cause damage to adjacent forest land," Adams said. Adams said that the cottonwood provides important habitat for many small mammals and birds, including squirrels, raccoons, bald eagles and great blue herons.

"For cottonwood to continue to be a significant forest resource in the future, intervention by us may be necessary to regenerate this historic forest resource, not only for wood products, but for the important wildlife habitat, watershed protection and other environmental benefits cottonwood forests provide," Adams said.

Opinion

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes
Managing Editor

'Representatives' had better listen during vacation

I'm going on vacation later this month, and I fully intend to spend the time off doing anything NOT related to this job.

That's not to say I don't like my job – it's just that there are times when you need to get away from things and recharge the batteries.

There are five Nebraskans, however, who'd better be busting their behinds during the vacation they're on right now, because their inability – or unwillingness – to do the job we elected them to do has put our nation on the edge of destruction.

The five "representatives" Nebraska has in the House and Senate are on their August recess this week, and if there has ever been a more undeserving group of people to take a vacation right now, it is the group that includes Sens. Mike Johanns and Deb Fischer and House of Representative members Lee Terry, Jeff Fortenberry and our representative in this area, Adrian Smith.

For far too long, the 535 "representatives" we elect to the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives have been distracted by several things – corporate lobbyists, influential favor-seekers and their own re-election campaigns, which seem to get started minutes after they are sworn in to their seats in the halls of Congress.

All five Nebraskans now "representing" their constituents in Washington had better not spend one second during this August recess on their re-election campaigns. They need to spend this time receiving a much-deserved earful of comments, complaints and concerns from the people who sent them to Washington and are not the least bit happy with what is going on in Washington at this moment.

Of course, Johanns and Co. will be quick to criticize the gross incompetence of the Obama regime and the "representatives" from the other side of the political aisle. And while the Democrats and the President of the United States clearly have their share of the blame to shoulder here, that does not, in any way, excuse the five Republicans who were elected by Nebraskans from carrying more than their share of the fault.

Our nation is $17 TRILLION in debt right now. By the time you've read this column, it will have gone up several hundred thousand dollars more. And it will continue to go up because of the gross mismanagement of our tax dollars that has been executed by BOTH the Democrats and Republicans who are "representing" the people of this great nation in Washington. The federal deficit has been in play for decades, but it hasn't been near as bad as it has been in this century, where it has been skyrocketing upward. It has more than doubled during the current regime, and if Johanns, Fischer, Terry, Fortenberry, Smith and their fellow "representatives" don't do something about it, the day is going to come when the United States will default on this debt, which will send the world's greatest economy into a tailspin the world has never seen before.

There is a government shutdown that could come as the Obama regime looks to once again raise the country's debt limit, which could also jeopardize what has been a slow, methodical recovery from the near-recession Obama's predecessor, George W. Bush, left us with after his eight years of what passes for leadership. There are so many more issues and non-issues being dealt with in such an incomprehensibly childish manner to discuss, but my space here (and my sanity in writing this column) is limited. Suffice to say that both parties' "representatives" are not doing the jobs we sent them to Washington for.

The two parties have weaved a web of incompetence and inefficient work, thanks in large part to the fact that the far-left lunacy of "representatives" like Nancy Pelosi and Harry Reid, combined with the Tea Party insanity that has overtaken what was once known as the Grand Old Party. This has rendered Congress inept at handling even the simplest of issues, as both parties appear to be hell-bent on a level of mutual destruction that four decades of the Cold War tensions between the U.S. and the former Soviet Union couldn't touch. Neither side wants what's best for America – they want what's best for THEM, and it can only happen if the other side is defeated.

All five "representatives" are home for the August recess, and it would be good for them to hear from us at any and every town hall meeting and meet-and-greet event they attend over the next several days. They will nod their head and proclaim their shared frustration of the way things are in Washington right now, but don't let them off that easy. They need to understand that their return to Washington must be followed by a shared interest by ALL 535 "representatives" in getting things done in a manner that is in the best interests of ALL the American people. Not just Republicans. Not just Democrats. We are ALL in this together, and the days of divisive incompetence, passing itself off as representation of the people, by the people and for the people, must stop now.

Partisan politics, forced ideology, special interests and re-election efforts must take a back seat to what is best for America. Those "representatives" need to hear from us, and those who are unwilling to listen must be removed from office in the next elections.

Capitol View

How important is personal finance?

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

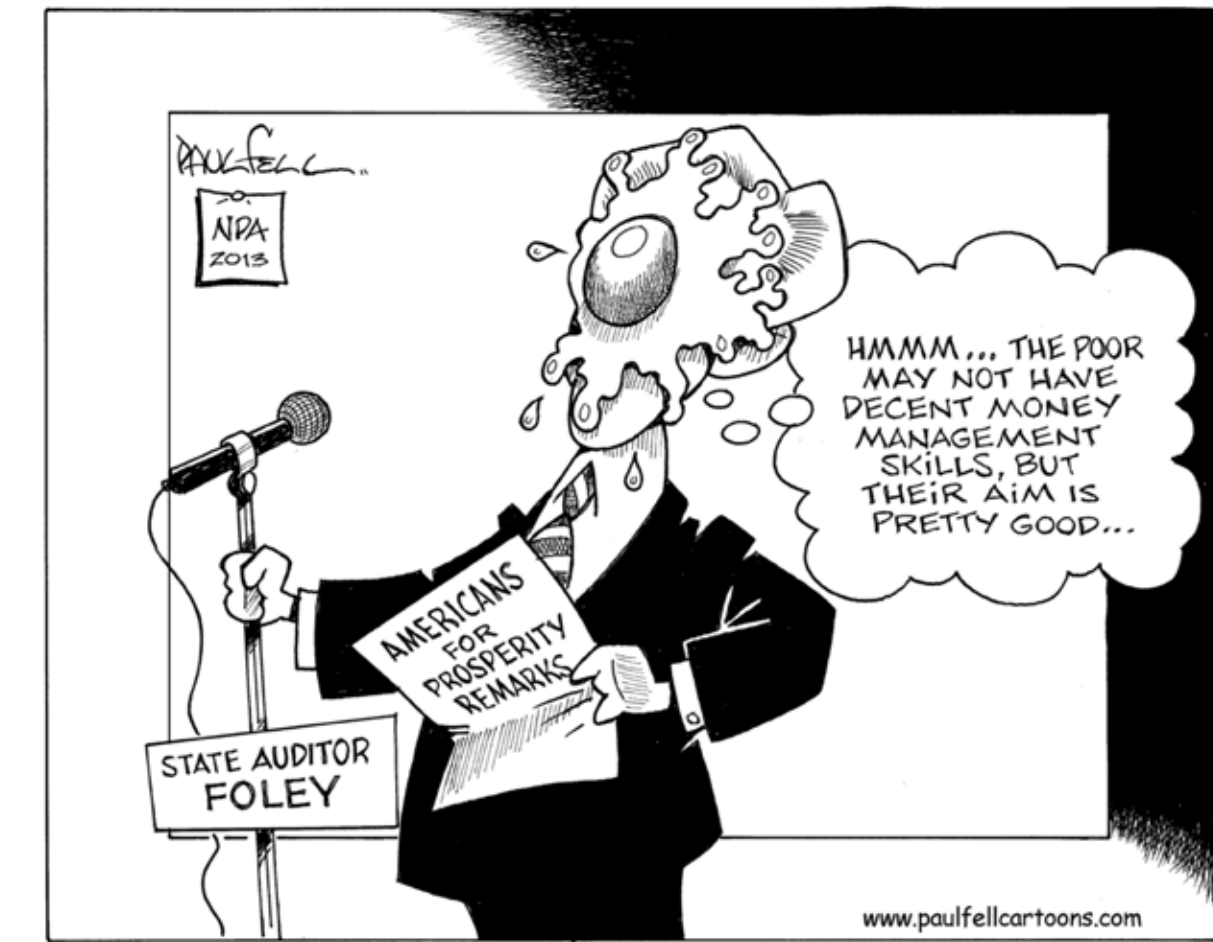

During a week when State Auditor Mike Foley apologized for inappropriately characterizing low-income people as poor money managers, a national report gave Nebraska high schools a failing grade for the way they teach personal finance.

The 59-year-old Foley, a native of New York and former Nebraska state senator (2000-2007) is in his second term as state auditor. In early July he told an audience at an Americans for Prosperity gathering – "Now, if you are a low-income person, you're probably not managing your money very well anyway. Sorry to stereotype, but that's true."

In a public apology, requested by at least one state senator and the chairman of the Nebraska Democratic Party, Republican Foley noted that his statement "has now received wider circulation and has generated considerable controversy." On its website, Americans for Prosperity calls itself a grassroots movement of over 2.3 million activists nationwide who advocate and promote limited government, lower taxes, and more freedom. The group claims 38,000 members in Nebraska.

"By not choosing my words carefully and by speaking with a sweeping generalization, I gave the impression that low-income persons probably have poor money management skills," Foley said in his written apology. "Deficient money-management skills plague citizens at all income levels, and there are societal costs that need to be acknowledged. It is indisputable that many low income Nebraskans do an excellent job of raising their families and contribute to society through creativity, thrift and a remarkable work ethic."

Omaha Sen. Jeremy Nordquist, who was the first to call for Foley to apologize, said he believes Foley's apology was sincere and the auditor did the right thing by acknowledging that he misspoke. Democratic Party Chair Vince Powers of Lincoln characterized the apology as half-hearted and said he longed for the day when "we'll get a politician who will actually admit they're wrong rather than say, 'If I offended anyone ...'"

Meanwhile, on a related front, the Center for Financial Literacy at Champlain College in Vermont, issued a report counting Nebraska as one of 11 states earning an "F" for the way personal finance is taught in high schools. The Center said the study was based on the curricula offered to students and whether or not it was mandatory. Center Director John Pelletier said the study gave the highest grades to states that offer the classes and require students to take them and schools to test for proficiency.

A University of Nebraska instructor disputed the findings because Nebraska allows local control of secondary education. Jennifer Davidson, director of programs and community development for the Nebraska Council on Economic Education, said the state deserves credit for efforts by such organizations that are working on financial literacy. She faulted the study saying it measured only state mandated programs.

Pelletier noted that his own state, Vermont, is a local control state that received a D grade. He said nothing diminishes the need for requiring personal finance courses and proficiency testing.

Perhaps Foley has actually scratched the surface that there is a need for better financial management training to impart the knowledge of money-management skills to all Nebraskans.

In his apology letter he wrote: "Our dignity as human beings is never to be measured by the size of our incomes or quantity of assets, and many of us are only a serious medical incident or employer downsizing away from severe financial stress that can justify public assistance. But for the grace of God, there go I."

Good words Mr. Auditor. Let's hope they come to mind the next time you are asked to give a speech and aren't just being used for personal gain as you deliberate your political future.

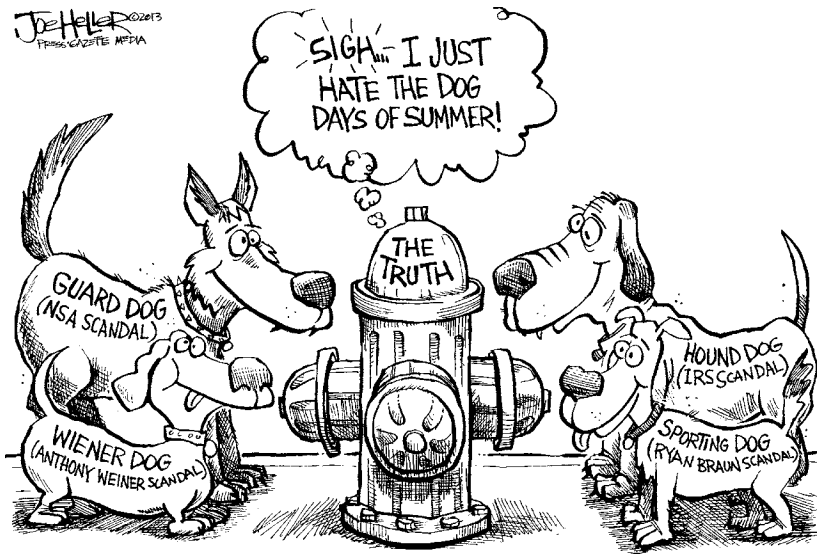

Concerns about NSAA, NRD addressed

There are two primary issues that I would like to address with this newsletter.

First, I want to bring your attention to the Nebraska School Activities Association (NSAA) meeting that will be taking place in Lincoln on Aug. 21. This meeting came to my attention in early June when it was reported the NSAA board had voted on and passed a policy regarding transgender athletes.

First, it is important that you understand the NSAA is the organization that runs high school sports within the state. According to the NSAA website, the NSAA was formed when the public and non-public high schools in Nebraska voluntarily agreed to form the organization that would focus on: creating and implementing policies to cultivate citizenship, fair competition, sportsmanship and teamwork which would then compliment member schools' programs and provide uniformity of standards in interscholastic activities. Additionally, the mission statement says that the NSAA is to organize, develop and regulate an interscholastic activity program which is equitable and promotes the health and welfare of all who participate.

Legislative Update

By Dave Bloomfield
State Senator, District 17

In December, the NSAA board of directors discussed a policy addressing transgender students but no policy was officially adopted like originally reported in early June. The policy, which would allow a male student who identifies himself as a female to participate on a girls' team, will actually be voted on at the Aug. 21 meeting. If passed, this policy would identify the steps which a transgender student must take in order to participate on a team with which they claim to identify. If this policy is adopted, Nebraska will become one of a handful of states that have such a policy.

While I am all for the principles on which the NSAA was originally founded, I do not think that Nebraska needs to be on the so-called leading edge of transgender policies for our high school students. It is my belief that most parents of high school girls in Nebraska would not be wild about high school boys suddenly deciding that they would really prefer to be female, then signing up to play girls basketball and possibly having to share the same locker room with their female teammates. I have brought this to your attention, what you choose to do with that information is pretty much up to you. You can contact the NSAA at (402) 489-0386 or at nsaa-home.org.

The second topic that I would like to discuss is LR226. Recently an article was published in the Dakota County Star regarding the opposition that the Dakota County Commissioners have to LR226, which was introduced by Sen. Lydia Brasch. The idea of LR226 is to examine concerns surrounding the representation on and operation of the Papio-Missouri River Natural Resource District (Papio NRD).

I did sign on to the resolution and feel that it is worthy of the time we will spend looking at it. As a representative of Dakota and Thurston Counties, which are in the Papio-Missouri River Natural Resource District, I do have concerns especially with the representation on the board of directors. If you look at the website for the Papio NRD (www.papionrd.org/) and look at the board of directors, you will notice that all of the members are from Omaha. It seems a little strange to me that an organization that claims to represent all or part of six counties (Dakota, Thurston, Burt, Washington, Douglas and Sarpy) would have all 11 board members from Omaha.

LR226 is a study to promote a discussion and it is a discussion that I welcome. The NRDs receive the vast majority of their funding from property taxes. The fact that the bulk of the area lays outside of Omaha causes me to wonder just how well we are actually represented. The Papio NRD has apparently mounted a full scale campaign against this study. (Wonder why?) It has been my experience that when any organization is this strongly opposed to an evaluation, one may need to be concerned about what it is that they don't want to be seen.

This discussion may discover that the organization and operations of the Papio NRD are the most efficient they can be or we may discover that there are changes that could be made to make the district more effective. If you have had interaction with the Papio NRD, good or bad, I wish you would contact my office and share that information. I also do not believe that you elected me in order to let Omaha decide what takes place within our counties.

As always, if we can be of any assistance, contact our office at (402) 471-2716 or e-mail dbloomfield@leg.ne.gov.

Missionary Benedictine Sisters contribute to NECC scholarship

Single mothers will benefit from a scholarship established by a local religious order to obtain a degree in nursing through Northeast Community College.

The Missionary Benedictine Sisters Foundation created an annual scholarship to assist the women from Nebraska or bordering states who are challenged financially to obtain a degree in nursing. The Sisters have been providing scholarships for approximately two years, both in northeast Nebraska and for their own Sisters in poor countries where they serve.

Sofia Artigas, Norfolk, and Lindsey Sievers, Randolph, will receive the proceeds from the $2700 scholarship to attend Northeast Community College beginning this fall.

"We know how important education is for these young women so that they can improve their lives and the lives of their children," said Sister Pia Portmann, prioress of the Missionary Benedictine Sisters. "It is also important that healthcare in our area remains strong. Providing quality education for nurses is part of that goal. The Sisters are very happy to help them with these scholarships."

The Missionary Benedictine Sisters are no strangers to health care. The order established Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital in Norfolk in 1935. In 1996, in an effort to more effectively meet the health care needs of Northeast Nebraska, the Lutheran Community Hospital Association (LCHA) and the Sisters entered into an agreement to merge their two hospitals to create Faith Regional Health Services (FRHS). In 2008, the Sisters divested their 50 percent sponsorship in FRHS to the LCHA.

Building parent-child relationships

Having a strong parent-child relationship can really make it easier to parent, and to guide your child to the kind of life you wish them to live.

However, like with every relationship, it can be difficult to find the right balance.

The following is a look at some tips for how to develop a strong parent-child relationship.

Tip one: Know where to draw the line. Being a friend and a cool parent is great, enjoy concerts together, shopping, playing video games, etc. but encouraging your child to drink, take drugs, or enabling their bad habits is crossing the line, and will undermine the parent-child relationship rather than strengthen it. Make sure your child knows that while you want to have a fun relationship with them and be their friend, you are their parent first.

Tip two: Set boundaries. While your child may relish the idea of having all kinds of freedom to do what they please, good parent-child relationships include rules, boundaries, and consequences that are attached to the said rules. You can let your children go out at night with their friends, but they should be back by a reasonable hour. You can give your child free reign when it comes to when they do their homework, for example, let them do it when they want rather than on your time line, but if they start ignoring it and their grades drop, you step in. The list goes on.

Ruth Vonderohe
Extension Educator

The idea is that your kids should have freedoms, and be allowed to make choices, but within acceptable boundaries. Rules show your child you love them enough to not let them screw up their life.

Tip three: Have fun with your child. Parenting can seem like endless rebukes, enforcing rules, and hounding your kids about their choices. It can be difficult to get a good relationship with your child when most of your interaction seems to be negative in nature.

So, improve the relationship, and help make it strong by mixing a fair amount of good and fun into the parenting. Let them know they have to spend time with the family, but make that time fun. Take your kids to movies, the beach, to do things they enjoy, etc. Life does not have to be all work and no play, and your family and child or children are the best people to play with.

These three ingredients are going to make a huge difference in the strength of your parent-child relationship. Take the time to sit down with your child and establish rules they will follow, and consequences that will be enforced when those rules are broken. Then, be sure to have fun with them, talk to them, and know what is going on in their life.

As a parent it is your job to make sure they are not engaged in things that will hurt them, damage their future, or inhibit their potential.

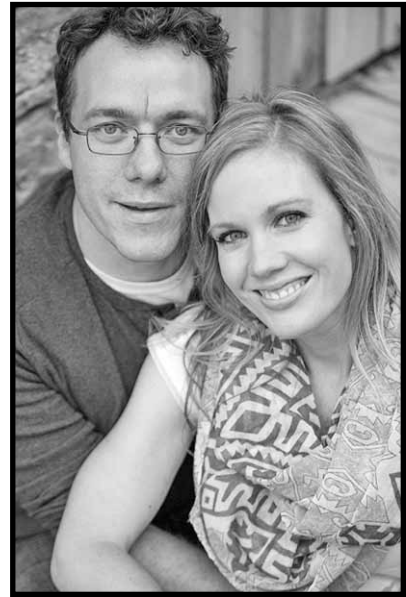

Engagement

Piano students go on the road

Several piano students of Mrs. Marcile Uken of Wayne traveled to Golden Living Center in Norfolk, and presented a program of piano duets and solos. The group then returned to Wayne and presented the program at "The Oaks" for the Assisted living and Independent living residents during the dinner hour. Taking part in Duets on the Road were (front) Andy Wibben, Ethan Wibben, Lindsey Kallhoff, (back) Ky Kenny, Sarah Wibben, Lindy Sandoz, Breanna Kallhoff and Emily Matthes.

Rural Nebraskans favor spending on public services

Most rural Nebraskans support continued or even increased spending on a variety of public services ranging from public broadcasting to roads, education and safety, according to the 2013 Nebraska Rural Poll.

The 18th annual University of Nebraska-Lincoln poll was sent to 6,320 households in Nebraska's 84 nonmetropolitan counties in March and April. Results are based on 2,317 responses.

Among the issues this year's poll explored were rural Nebraskans' opinions about spending on various major public services. It found that most rural Nebraskans would like to see no change in the level of spending for the following public services: public safety (police, fire, etc.), 69 percent; hospitals and health care, 64 percent; natural resources, parks and recreation, 63 percent; corrections and rehabilitation, 61 percent; housing and community development, 61 percent; workforce training, 60 percent; public broadcasting services, 59 percent; roads and bridges, 56 percent; and medical assistance to the poor, 53 percent.

The only public service for which a majority of respondents - 51 percent - supported less public spending was unemployment compensation.

Thirty-eight percent of rural Nebraskans supported increased spending on roads and bridges, and 35 percent supported more spending for education. No other public service garnered more than 21 percent support for an increase in public spending.

The poll did not ask Nebraskans to make choices about which public services they would choose to fund over others, noted Eric Thompson, director of UNL's Bureau of Business Research and a member of the Rural Poll team. Still, the poll's findings could be interpreted as belying rural Nebraskans' reputation for being stingy with public funding, he added.

As for the one category for which a majority supported less public spending - unemployment compensation - that could be interpreted as a desire there was less need for it, Thompson said. Another interpretation could be that the issue doesn't resonate much in Nebraska, as a historically low-unemployment state.

Many of the demographic differences in answers were logical, Thompson said. For example, the 19-29 age group was more likely than those 65 and up to support more spending for education - 47 percent to 21 percent. People with jobs in agriculture were more likely to support more spending on roads and bridges than other demographic groups.

Overall, 94 percent of respondents supported the same level or more spending for roads and bridges, the largest total in the survey. And, indeed, that's now occurring, thanks to legislation passed by the Nebraska Legislature.

"See, democracy works," Thompson said.

Younger respondents also were more likely than older ones to prefer less spending on unemployment compensation - 66 percent compared to 42 percent - and more likely to say no public funds at all should be used for medical assistance to the poor. About 32 percent of those in the 19-29 group felt that way, compared to 12 percent of those 65 and older.

"For the young, healthy, and employed, it can be difficult to find support for such public spending. A lifetime of experiences may eventually sway how they feel," said Brad Lub-ben, UNL public policy specialist.

The poll also asked respondents to imagine the state is rethinking how to fund certain major public expenditures. Forty-two percent supported funding primary and secondary education with property taxes, one-third supported funding it with sales tax and 27 percent supported using income taxes.

Thirty-five percent said user fees - tuition in this case - should be used to fund higher education, with about 20 percent saying no public funds should be used for higher ed.

The funding question addressed major spending categories including education, public safety, roads and bridges, and medical assistance to the poor. While multiple responses were allowed, most respondents checked just one choice for funding sources for each category. The resulting mix of funding sources is reflective of the current mix of funding for public services in Nebraska.

"As the state considers potential tax reform, the funding sources, the spending priorities, and the matchup of sources to uses will be a complex equation to solve," Lubben added.

The Rural Poll is the largest annual poll of rural Nebraskans' perceptions on quality of life and policy issues. This year's response rate was about 37 percent. The margin of error is plus or minus 2 percent. Complete results are available online at ruralpoll.unl.edu.

Soybean Field Day is Aug. 15

The 15th annual Soybean Management Field Days Aug. 13-16 focuses on staying competitive in a global marketplace, increasing profits and meeting the world's growing food and energy needs starting right here in Nebraska.

The field days are sponsored by the Nebraska Soybean Board in partnership with University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension in the university's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources and are funded through soybean checkoff dollars. The efforts of the checkoff are directed by the United Soybean Board promoting progress powered by U.S. farmers.

A field day is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 15 at the Mike Krueger farm, southeast of Pierce. The farm is located just east of the intersection of Highway 13 and 852nd Road on the south side.

The field days, which run from 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m., will offer producers unbiased and research-based information to improve their soybean profitability.

The event consists of four stops across the state, each with replicated research/ demonstration plots, lunch and time for questions. Producers can obtain ideas and insight about the challenges they face in producing a quality crop at a profitable price in today's global economy.

Topics include: adjuvants and water quality; fungicide and insecticide inputs - yield effects and risks; soybean nutrients - high nitrogen study - micronutrients; row spacing; irrigation management; the golden triangle - Nebraska's livestock production past - present - future; and your Nebraska soybean checkoff investment.

"The field days feature integrated studies that combine several potential yield enhancing practices in pest management and agronomy," said Greg Greving, chairman of the Nebraska Soybean Board of Directors.

As part of the biodiesel giveaway, two drawings will be held at each field site for 300 gallons of a biodiesel blend. Official rules are online at ardc.unl.edu/soydays.

By participating in the Soybean Management Field Days, producers will see their checkoff dollars at work bringing leading technology and ideas to producers.

Presenters include university specialists, educators and industry consultants.

Agronomists, plant disease and insect specialists will be available to address production-related questions. Participants can bring unknown crop problems for complimentary identification.

For more information about the field days and maps to sites, visit the Soybean Management Field Days Web site at ardc.unl.edu/soydays, or contact the Nebraska Soybean Board at (800) 852-2326 or UNL Extension at (800) 529-8030.

Maintain beehives on CRP acreage to protect pollinator habitats

Farm Service Agency (FSA) Director, Dan Steinkruger reminds Nebraska producers and landowners about the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) pollinator habitats and how this may benefit beehive locations and their ability to be placed on CRP acres.

Pollinators are essential to the production of an estimated one-third of the human diet and to the reproduction of at least 80 percent of flowering plants. Insect-pollinated agricultural commodities result in significant income for agricultural producers and account for over $20 billion in annual U.S. agricultural production. Honeybees, the predominant animal pollinator for United States agriculture, require an ample and diverse supply of pollen and nectar to thrive.

CRP provides millions of acres of vital habitat for honeybees, and has since 1986. CRP is viewed by numerous stakeholders in the pollinator community as providing essential habitat in a landscape that has been rapidly changing, often in ways that have depleted habitat well suited for honeybees.

The Food, Conservation and Energy Act of 2008 encourages the inclusion of pollinator habitat in all USDA administered conservation programs. The CRP practice of "Pollinator Habitat" was developed with pollinator partners to meet this goal.

The beehives may be stored on CRP acreage to maintain benefits similar to other benefits brought forth for soil, water and wildlife goals of CRP.

Ensuring the long-term viability of honey beekeeping requires the development of both suitable habitat for foraging bees, and access to this habitat for beekeepers.

"We want to encourage landowners enrolled in the CRP program to provide, as might be negotiated in the conservation planning process, access and space for beekeepers to place their hives," said Steinkruger.

Producers are encouraged to contact their local FSA office for more information on CRP pollinator habitat. Additional information is also available on the web at www.fsa.usda.gov/ne.

Chris Johnson Memorial donates to Sharp Shooters

The Sharp Shooters 4-H Club accepted a check for $1,000 from Randy and Lorraine Johnson of Wayne in memory of their son, Chris Johnson.

The Chris Johnson Memorial is a fund set up in memory of Deputy Chris Johnson, a Wayne native killed in the line of duty on Aug. 29, 2009. Chris had a dream of someday returning to Wayne to serve the community and to start a shooting range. His memory is living on by helping educational shooting programs and local law enforcement departments.

Money for this fund is raised through golf tournaments and poker runs.

The Sharp Shooters will use this money to purchase range equipment.

'Don't tell my kids' is popular phrase

My typical antidote to stress is going to lunch with a friend. One of these, Dorothy, likes to scope out the newest and most unique, and we probably hit one of her finds about once a month.

Last week, while enjoying a blue cheeseburger and some black bean soup at Greta's Gourmet, she confessed about a slip of memory and then commented that her daughters were starting to look at each other and shake their heads and roll their eyes. I know what she means!

Neighbor, Shirley, did a dumb thing the other night and said, "Don't tell my daughter!" I would never do that, because then she might tell mine. This seems to be a new topic of conversation with my peers, the times we aren't exactly "playing with a full deck" and the fear that our kids will find us out.

For instance, our garbage pick-up comes on Tuesday and Friday. I had had a hectic and busy week, and Friday came and went for me. I put out my white garbage bag on Saturday; later, that morning, Shirley called to ask if we were going to be gone. I said that we were not; then, she told me that it was Saturday and the garbage had gone the day before! I hurried out and dragged it back into the garage, before anyone else might notice. It's stuff like that.

By: Pat Meierhenry

This is just another hazard of age. And there are many. Besides, the fear of falling, the fact that our hearing and eyesight are going, and our memory is not what it used to be; now, we have to worry about when our kids will decide these things all add up to "time for the old folk's home." I remember the motto on the wall of the office at the Louisville Care Center, "Be kind to your kids; they pick your nursing home."

The clearing out of stuff in the basement is progressing rather slowly; the main reason being that I find so many things to read! For some reason, I kept several senior essays and an autobiography I wrote at the ripe old age of 17. There is also a day-by-day account of our family vacation to the Black Hills when I was 15, complete with the fact that gas was 30 cents a gallon, and we stayed in a motel in Hill City without indoor plumbing for $5 a night. It did have a stove and refrigerator, and that dear mother of mine cooked most of our meals that week.

What kind of vacation is that? There are also all kinds of newspaper clippings; again, that have to be read and reviewed before throwing them. Some had to do with the farm crisis of the 80s, and they brought back vivid memories that were not good ones.

There was an old magazine, printed in 1925, called What Farm Women Want. I thought it would make a great column, until I found a copy of a column I wrote about it 20 years ago! So much for that idea. Another thing not to tell my daughters! Anyway, I'm plugging away; it's kind of fun, but slow going.

Meanwhile, we had more rain, none of that wind in the west, and more cool weather. Heavenly!

Corn Rootworm Field Day scheduled for Aug. 12

Nebraska farmers, agronomists, and crop consultants are invited to participate in a corn rootworm field day at the Dinklage Center on the Cuming County Fairgrounds in West Point on Monday, August 12.

Between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m., UNL Extension personnel will be on hand to perform tissue testing for Bt traits and do a rootworm injury assessment on samples. This is an excellent opportunity for one-on-one training on using the corn rootworm injury rating scale, as well as discussing management options with UNL Extension. Attendees are asked to bring their own or customer corn samples with them.

There is no fee to attend this program. Registration will be done on-site upon arrival.

Corn rootworm is a major pest of corn in the United States. In the last decade, Nebraska farmers have seen many changes for managing corn rootworm. With the commercial release of transgenic Bt-rootworm corn in 2003, many farmers reduced or eliminated soil-applied insecticides to manage larvae. Western corn rootworm is adapting to transgenic technologies throughout the Corn Belt. Some continuous cornfields have larvae that can now survive at high numbers and cause severe root injury to Bt corn.

- Sampling instructions:
1. Collect samples one day prior to the field day;
 2. Record the legal description and township or GPS location of the field and the corn hybrid and traits planted.
 3. Walk beyond the end rows and dig up a corn plant.
 4. Shake off excess soil and cut the stalk off about 24 inches from the base.
 5. Walk at least 6 rows in a different direction and collect another plant
 6. Repeat until you have collected a total of 10 plants for that field.
 7. Soak roots overnight in 5 gallon buckets filled with water.
 8. Bring collected roots to the field day for your FREE rootworm injury evaluation.

In-field training session to be held August 28

Improving and maintaining soil quality is essential to the productivity of land for current and future use. University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension's physical, chemical, and biological properties of soil and water clinic will provide hands-on training.

The Aug. 28 workshop will be conducted at the UNL's Agricultural Research and Development Center near Mead. This training session is conveniently located a short driving distance from Omaha, Lincoln and Wahoo.

UNL Extension educator Keith Glewen says the in-field training is ideal for agribusiness professionals and those who work with soil and water management.

"The training provides 7.5 total Certified Crop Advisor credits in nutrient management and soil and water management. It can be challenging to find that many credits focusing on these topics. We have a well-versed line up of speakers addressing soil and water topics which, of course, are the cornerstones of our food production system."

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m. The training begins at 8 a.m.

Pre-registration required. All registrants will be sent a confirmation letter, receipt and finalized schedule. Space is limited and registration is not guaranteed unless payment is received. Cancellations received one week before the clinic will receive a full refund.

In the event of program cancellation by UNL, pre-registered participants will be contacted and will receive a full refund. UNL is not responsible for any expenses incurred by registrants.

Registration before Aug. 21 is $160; $210 after. Fees include training, lunch and reference materials.

For more information or to register, contact the ARDC CMDC Programs, 1071 County Road G, Ithaca, Neb., 68033, call (800) 529-8030, fax (402) 624-8010, e-mail cdunbar2@unl.edu or go online to ardc.unl.edu/2013CMDCSoils.
