Council votes down annexation request

By CLARA OSTEN Of the Herald

On a vote of 5-3, the Wayne City Council voted against annexing the former Pacific Coast Feather property into the city of Wayne.

The decision came during Tuesday's regular meeting of the city council and followed considerable debate, much of that being similar to what the council had discussed when the issue was brought to the council several months ago.

Since the earlier discussion, the 17-acre property has been purchased by the Community Redevelopment Authority (CRA), which made the request for annexation.

Council member Cale Giese, who is also a member of would allow for the property to be divided quickly. the CRA, said the vote from that group was 5-2 in favor of annexation, with he and John Meyer voting against the annexation.

"I believe the land is more attractive to a potential buyer if there are more options (without being annexed)," Giese told the council.

Council member Matt Eischied said he led the push to keep the area un-annexed until there is a potential buyer when the council originally debated the issue, and his feelings have not changed.

Lou Benscoter, with Benscoter Development, told the council that often a company is looking for 5-6 acres of land, not 17 acres, and having the property annexed Council members Kaki Ley, Matt Eischeid, Jill Brodersen, Cale Giese and Rod Greve voted against annexation and council members Nick Muir, Jon Haase and Jennifer Sievers voted in favor of the annexation.

In other action, the council voted to approve an application for a Class D Liquor License for Lutt Oil and Service, LLC and a liquor license manager application in connection with the Shopko Hometwon 670 Wayne store for James E. Larson, the store's district manager.

Resolution 2014-37 was approved for an interlocal agreement between the city of Wayne and Wayne State College for law enforcement resources.

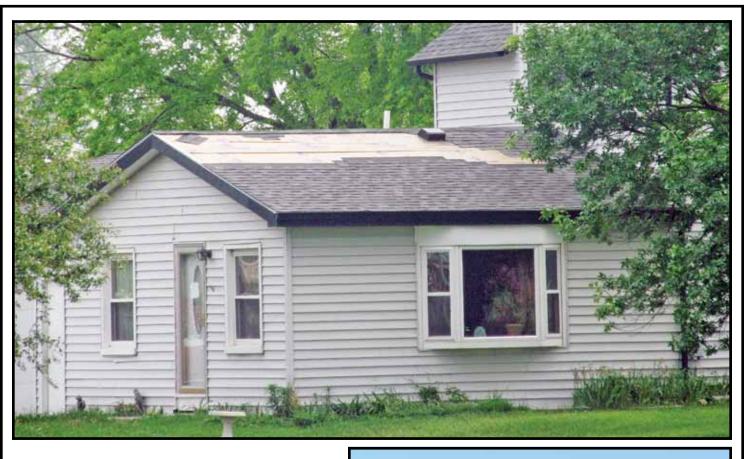

officer to be on the Wayne State College campus for 22 hours per week and a similar agreement has been in effect for several years.

Two ordinances regarding parking regulations in the city of Wayne received second reading approval and two received first reading approval.

The two new ordinances involved parking in the Angel Acres subdivision and on Jaxon Street near the Summer Sports Complex.

During Tuesday's meeting, Mayor Ken Chamberlain read a proclamation declaring June 9-15 as "Men's Health Week.'

The council will next meet in regular session on The agreement will allow for a city of Wayne police Tuesday, June 17 at 5:30 p.m. in council chambers.

Wind-blown weekend

Stormy weather left its mark in the area over the weekend, as straight-line winds of more than 60 miles per hour did damage in Cedar and Wayne counties. In the photo above, the home of Roger and Shirley Haahr in Laurel lost a significant part of its roof. At top right, a cattle shed on the Marvin Hartman property suffered a significant amount of damage. At bottom right, a center pivot near the Marlin Schuettler home was left a twisted mess. More stormy weather hit the area Tuesday, but the damage here was minimal compared to the softball-sized hail that hit communities like Norfolk and Blair, causing millions of dollars in damages.

How close bids on four county bridge projects came to engineering estimates depends on which plan you are comparing them to.

At Tuesday's Wayne County Commissioners meeting, the board opened bids on a package of road and bridge projects and found that the cumulative low bid was almost exactly that of the county's 2013 oneand six-year road plan, but more than double that of the 2014 edition of the plan.

The four projects include three bridge projects along Dog Creek in the western part of the county, and one project located two miles west and 2 1/2 miles south of Wayne. The 2013 combined estimate of the four projects was $1,765,000, but a revised county road plan indicated a total estimate of only $825,000 for the four projects.

County Clerk Deb Finn said that the 2014 estimates were based on a trend of lower bids that had been coming in on other road and bridge projects across the state, indicating a desire by contractors who are looking for projects.

Six contractors submitted bids on the four-bridge package, with Dixon Construction of Correctionville, Iowa submitting the low bid of $1,769,960.89. County road engineer Mark Mainelli will take a closer look at the bids and report back to the county before an award is made, giving the county a chance to possibly pull some items out of the projects that would lower the final cost to the county.

A decision on the projects could come at the board's next meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, June 17.

Laurel getting ready for BRAN riders' visit

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

Next Thursday, the town of Laurel is going to experience a momentary population explosion.

The 34th annual Bike Ride Across Nebraska (BRAN) will be making a stop in Laurel on Thursday, June 12, the sixth of eight stops on its 476-mile tour that starts in Rushville on Sunday, June 8 and concludes in Waterloo two days after its stop in Cedar County.

The town of about 1,000 will almost double in size by the time the last of the estimated 800 riders and supporters roll into town from the north on Highway 15, and the community is going to have plenty of activities going on during their one-day stop in town.

"It's a huge group, and we're really trying to encourage local citizens to come out and visit with them and show them a good time," said Luke Virgil, the city's economic development coordinator. "The riders are always curious to get to know the town and the local flavor and culture, and they really feel like they learn something when they come into these communities. If we have more residents coming out and talking with them, it will help them feel welcome and feel like they've had a good experience here." _

Riders are expected to begin rolling into town after a 64-mile trek from Verdigre at about 11 a.m. The riders will be coming into town via Hartington, riding along Highway 84 and catching Highway 15 on the north edge of town.

"I guess there were some complaints that last year's run was too flat and didn't have enough hills, so they put some into this year's run and that's why they'll be coming here from Hartington," Virgil said.

When the riders reach Laurel, they'll have an opportunity to enjoy some snacks and lunch that will be provided by a number of non-profits and local eateries. The Dairy Barn, The Corner Mart and The Saloon Too will all be open for business, as will the United Lutheran Church, St. Mary's Catholic Church and a number of non-profits. The Contemporaries Club will also have walking tacos for sale at a garage near Laurel-Concord/Coleridge High School.

Bikers will set up their camps on the football practice field just north of the high school, and a trolley service will help bikers travel around town to visit a variety of events and activities, from local church tours to quilt displays and oversized board games downtown.

Anne Charles

Anne Mallonee Charles, 88, of Wayne, died Saturday, May 31, 2014 in Wayne.

No services are planned.

Anne Mallonee Charles was born Jan. 18, 1926 and spent her childhood in Raleigh, N.C. During the years after her father's death in 1936, her family moved to Southern California after a brief stay in Florida. Following graduation from Pasadena High School she went on to attend the University of California at Berkeley, graduating with a degree in Public Health. One day in 1945 on the train back to college after a visit home, an attractive young army officer sat down next to her. They chatted, one thing led to another, and a year and a half later they were married. Anne and Don shared life for the next 65 until his death in 2012, firs in Lincoln, where Don finished his graduate degrees, then in Ames, Iowa for nearly six decades and finally in Wayne, near their daughter Laura. Together they raised four children, parenting continuously for nearly 30 years. Anne was an accomplished cook. Both she and Don enjoyed trying new and adventuresome dishes, sometimes to the annovance of their children. Don was a dedicated gardener and Anne canned, froze, and preserved his garden produce in tremendous quantities. Even very late in life, when she could no longer cook, she liked to read recipes and think about interesting things to do in the kitchen. They both loved cats and were owned by a great many during their years together. Her last cat was with her in her final moments. She gave freely of herself to her children and many others, frequently volunteering to lead scout groups, provide cookies for a school bake sale, or anything else for anyone who needed help. Her love of making and doing made her an integral part of Ames' expanding creative community. This included working to support the original Octagon Center for the Arts during its rapid growth through the 1960s and 70s. She helped to organize the first Ames Summerfest and many oth er community activities. Her own artistic talents took her into stitchery weaving, oil painting, batik and various creative pursuits involving fibers fabrics, and other media. She learned to make her own natural dyes and at times spun her own thread from wool. As her children grew up, Anne had more time to help other people and began volunteering at a local nursing home. She quickly recognized that the few services then available to seniors left gaps and were not well coordinated. As always, when she saw a need, she worked to meet it. With her colleagues at the Story County Council on Aging (later known as Heartland Senior Services), she began to define and implement a set of premier adult day services for the Ames community. In the early years she was often the programs' transporter, cook, activity director, supervisor, therapist, fundraiser and - always - visionary. In addition to coordinating meals on wheels and visiting nurse services, the center provided numerous daytime activities, medical support and onsite meals (transportation included). The program, the first such in Iowa, grew quickly, and Anne was instrumental in obtaining a former school building to house its growth. Anne continued to manage the day services and to raise funds from federal, state, and private sources until her retirement in 1986. In later years she received many awards and other recognition for her work. She was described in one as 'The Little Engine that Could'. Anne often said that there was "some good in everyone", and always put people and events in the most positive light. Her attitude was self-fulfilling, consistently bringing out the best in people. She will be sorely missed. Anne was preceded in death by her parents; one brother; husband Don, and their daughter Linda. Survivors include her children, Chris Charles of San Francisco Calif. Laura (Mark) Penlerick of Wayne and Andrew (Audrey) Charles of Naperville Ill.; grandchildren, Jenny, Sara, and Jay Schrader, Brittany and Nick Penlerick, Owen Charles, Lee and Nora Charles, and great-children Alejandro, Alia, and Cruz. Memorials may be sent to Heartland Senior Services at 205 S. Walnut Ave. Ames Iowa 50010.

He was preceded in death by his parents.

Honorary pallbearers were Donald and Barbara's granddaughters, Keli Culver, Alissa Pedersen, Andrea Pedersen and Krista Pedersen.

I have learned that Scouts focuses on the team rather than the individual. I learned that friendship builds, while hatred and conflict destroy. I finally learned never to mess with fire ants."

While in high school, Wren was involved in track, cross country, speech, one-act plays, and musical, as well as varsity band, choir and jazz choir. # Klooz is figuring things out

His scores may not have shown it this spring - but Mitch Klooz is figuring things out.

I've been confused all spring by the scores Klooz rang up for the LCC boys golf team this spring. Some of his rounds the past couple of months were the kind of scores you'd expect out of a talented athlete who picked up golf because he didn't want to run in track and field - not from a two-time state champion, a three-time medalist and a Div. I recruit.

Mind you, Klooz is a talented athlete who has been playing the game for a long time. You don't win two state high school titles and a slew of youth and amateur titles by dusting off the clubs and knocking a couple of balls around every so often. He's amazingly talented and has worked hard to achieve all that he's got on his high school golf resume.

So what's with the remarkably average rounds he's put up this spring? Is he hitting left-handed? Did he tweak a hamstring at his senior prom? Is he suffering from that rare, incurable, frustrating disease of apathy and lackluster play known as senior-itis?

I watched Klooz at the end of both nines on the second day of the Class C state golf tournament last week in Lincoln. I watched him hit two pitch shots on the approach to the 18th hole that looked more like something yours truly is sure to do at this weekend's Catbacker tournament. He two-putted for an ugly triple bogey that took the shine of what was a very good front nine for the LCC senior.

Later, I watched him hit a perfect putt for his last high school golf shot – draining an uphill putt from GRAND ISLAND – Wayne's Kaje Maly was one of 72 golfers in Class B that took part in the Nebraska State Boys Golf Championships last week at Indianhead Golf Club in Grand Island.

The Wayne senior began his 36-hole quest a little on the shaky side with an opening nine-hole score of 45, which included an outof-bounds penalty along with a few of the dreaded three-putts.

The opening nine holes saw him land somewhere near the bottom 15 percent of the competitors. The next 27 holes, however, Maly found himself in rare air as he caught fire and went just one over par. He finished his opening day with a 36 on the back nine to post an 81, which saw him tied for 41st place.

Day two saw much of the latter part of day one as Maly fired a 36 on his opening nine holes and closed out his career with a 1-over par 37 over the last nine holes for a score of 73 and a two-day total of 154. Maly climbed from 60th to earning a medal in a tie for 15th place. He finished his senior year in perfect form, medaling in every meet he competed in.

"I don't think many people were watching one of the greatest comebacks in state golf history," Wayne coach Dave Hix said. "Kaje was at a point where most people would have thought he was out of the mix, but his desire to finish his high school career on a positive note was the only thing on his mind. He marched on, grinded it out and did what great athletes do, have a short an estimated 100 feet as if it's something he has done a million times before. It was one of the more unusual front-back nine finishes I've seen in 30-plus years as a sports writer.

The miracle putt capped a 1-over 71 that took some of the sting off a rough opening-day round of 86, leaving the LCC senior three shots shy of a fourth state medal. It was the Jekyll-and-Hyde kind of play over the course of two days that would disappoint and discourage most golfers his age.

But not this kid.

"I've got to keep looking at the bigger picture. That helps keep me grounded," he said after his final high school round. "If I got caught up in the scores, it would get to me, but this is just gearing up for the future.'

Klooz said a lot of what we've seen on his scorecards this spring has come because he has changed some of the swing thoughts that helped him get through his first three years of high school golf. And rather than deferring back to his old ways when things got tough, he said he's tried to stay disciplined and work through whatever trouble he's found himself in.

"I know some of my scores haven't been good, but I'm learning something with each tournament and just trying to use this to help me get better and be at the top of my game next fall," he said, referring to his upcoming move to Virginia to play golf at Div. I Liberty University.

"The last couple of years, I've gone with whatever swing that I've had, and this year I've tried to stick with one swing and not try to change anything at the last minute that won't help me out in the long run," he said. "On paper, it doesn't look like a success, but I look at it as a stepping stone to help further my game for next fall."

Klooz played two of his best rounds of the season during districts and the second day of the state tournament, sandwiching those impressive rounds with a humbling 86 on the first day of the state tournament. Even with that chipping hiccup that I witnessed, he still carded an impressive 1-over par 71 in his final round as a high school golfer.

Ups and downs lead Bears to sixth-place finish at state

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

LINCOLN - The start and the end of the line for two of Laurel-Concord/Coleridge's four seniors seemed to say all that needed to be said about the Bears' hopes to compete for a state golf title.

A disaster of an opening hole and an amazing career-ending putt provided the opening act and the final finish for the Bears on the second day of the Class C Nebraska State Boys Golf Championships at Mahoney Golf Course, as LCC shot a 323 on the final day of the two-day tournament to place sixth overall with a 661.

After shooting a 338 in Wednesday's opening round, the second day got off to a horrible start for the Bears' No. 1 golfer, Jamy McCoy, who found sand on the first hole and couldn't get out of trouble. By the time he putted out on the opening hole Thursday, he had carded signed his position late last week.

Wayne State athletic director Mike Powicki made the announcement Thursday, as Disch will step down after a 15-year relationship with the college's baseball program to take a mathematics teaching job at Norfolk High School.

Disch has been a player, an assistant coach and the head coach at Wavne State College, beginning in 1999 when he joined the team as a player. He earned first-team All-NSIC honors as a senior in 2004, hitting .301 with 11 homers and 38 RBI's and was named the MVP of the conference tournament in leading Wayne State to the tournament title.

After his playing days, Disch spent five seasons as an assistant under former coach John Manganaro, serving as the team's hitting coach. During that time, the Wildcats won five straight conference regular-season titles and advanced to the NCAA tournament each season, highlighted by a trip to the finals of the Central Region tourna. the NSIC, including a 27-24 (18-15 ment in 2009.

Suckstorf named national assistant coach of the year

Wayne State assistant track and field coach Brett Suckstorf has been named the U.S. Track and Field and Cross Country Coaches Association (USTFCCCA) National Women's Assistant Coach of the Year. He was also honored as the USTF-CCCA National Assistant Coach of the Year during the indoor season in March.

Suckstorf, a native of Pierce and in his fourth year as an assistant throws coach with the Wildcat track and field program, coached four athletes who qualified in seven events at last weekend's NCAA Div. II Outdoor Track and Field Championships in Allendale, Mich. He coached a pair of All-Americans as junior Sara Wells placed second in the shot put while senior Carly Fehringer took third in the hammer throw, helping the Wildcats tie for 18th in the team standings with 14 points.

Suckstorf also coached a group of throwers that scored 59 of Wayne State's 60 points at the NSIC Out-

It would be easy to get caught up in what he wasn't able to accomplish during his senior year. He certainly is talented enough that he could have contended for a rare third state title (only three high school golfers in Nebraska have pulled that trifecta off). He definitely had the quality of game that should have put him on the medal stand for a fourth time. For most people with that kind of game, shooting in the mid 80's in the biggest meet of the year and finishing out of the medal count would be looked upon as a major disappointment.

You get the feeling, though, that Klooz is thinking on a different level. He's a valedictorian and wants to be an actuarial scientist when he graduates from college. He's disappointed he didn't get to finish his warding game – the game of life.

"I was 12 over after three and it didn't get much better," the disap-- Mitch Klooz pointed senior said after his final round of 87. "I got a little momentum on the back nine and kept it in the 30's on the back, so at least I finished it well."

McCoy had trouble getting out of one sand trap and eventually hit into a second on the first hole, leading to his bumpy start.

"I hit three times out of the same game completely figured out, I don't trap and then hit into the sand on the other side of the green, so with four shots in the sand it's tough," he said. "I struggled until I made birdie on the sixth hole and was able to settle down some."

> While McCoy stumbled on the second day after a good first round, two-time state champion and threetime medalist Mitchell Klooz made a solid comeback from an openingday 86, overcoming a triple bogey on the par 4 18th midway through the round and finishing with an amazing birdie putt on the par 3 ninth hole to card a 71, leaving him just three shots short of a fourth medal.

> Klooz's only stumble came on the 18th, when his tee shot went into the 17th fairway and he needed three pitch shots to find the green before finishing the first nine with a triple bogey.

The LCC senior made up for it on his final golf shot, stroking a birdie putt from about 100 feet away and finding the bottom of the cup to shoot a 1-under 34 on the back nine and finish the day 1-over par.

"The kid before me had a putt beside mine and I was able to get a little read off of his putt," Klooz said after the round. "All that was going through my mind was getting it to the hole. I thought about taking (my) driver out because it was that long of a putt, but once it had gone about 25 feet I knew it was in. There was no way I could finish it any different.'

Klooz, Brendan Groene and Cory Peterson each shot better rounds on the second day to help LCC improve by 15 shots from their firstday round of 338. Brendan Groene scorched the front nine to finish with a 34 on the back and a 79 for the day, bettering his first-day

"We weren't at our best, but we had some good individual performances here and there," LCC golf coach Scott Petersen said. "I hope it won't take away from a great season where we won seven tournaments, and these four seniors have won 15 tournaments the last two years, so it's been a good run."

Petersen said he was disappointed that his top two golfers couldn't put back-to-back solid rounds together.

"They both got off to slow starts on different days," he said. "Mitch had a slow start in the first round and couldn't get it back and shot 86, and Jamy had that horrendus start on the first hole and never recovered. They're both great players and showed a lot of character and battled to the end, so you have to give them credit.'

Petersen was happy to see Groene and Peterson improve their scores on the second day.

"We had a better second day and the kids hung in there, and that's all you can ask of them," he said.

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

NU prez chase is reason to resign

It wasn't all that long ago that a member of Nebraska's executive branch in state government was forced to resign for misuse of state property for personal gain.

You may remember former lieutenant governor Rick Sheehy. He was pretty much the man who would become governor, according to the Omaha-area media, once Dave Heineman's 10-year run as the state's leader was finished. By all accounts, he looked the part, dressed the part and said all the right things. He was a sure fit to be the next governor of Nebraska.

However, Sheehy had a little personal issue that came out of the darkness to send his political career straight into the sewer. A check of his cell phone records uncovered a little secret he had been keeping from some noteworthy people, including the governor and – his wife.

Sheehy was making time with another woman on the side, using his state-issued cell phone to engage in long, late-night – uh, let's just call them "conversations" - with his mistress. When all was said and done, Heineman asked for, and received Sheehy's resignation.

Fast forward a year or so, and it would appear that what's good for the second in command may not necessarily be the same for the leader of the band.

There has been talk for some time about Heineman's interest in the job as president of the University of Nebraska. The governor had not denied his interest, and the speculation continued until recently, when Heineman wrote a letter – on the stationary of the Governor of Nebraska – to the Board of Regents, expressing his interest in applying for the position. He also used the state's resources when he announced his desire to be the next NU president, holding his news conference at the State Capitol and making use of the room and audio equipment available.

Now, I'm sure you're wondering what the big deal is. He took a piece of paper with the governor's insignia and applied for the job, then made the announcement in a location where he traditionally holds news conferences as governor. No big deal, right?

I guess not – that is, if you're not interested in having EVERY member of our state's government held to the same standards.

Granted, one piece of stationary is a lot less costly than a cell phone account with thousands of text and voice messages to a woman who isn't your wife. However, the governor is applying for a position he already has control over, and the job he is applying for pays significantly more than the position he now holds as governor.

This is an unquestionable conflict of interest and is, in my opinion, the epitome of dubious ethical behavior on the part of someone who, as governor, is supposed to be held to the highest of standards.

Also, take into consideration the fact that Heineman holds a tremendous amount of influence over a significant portion of the current Board of Regents. He has appointed two current members and helped a third in the 2012 campaign. In a very small world where one hand washes the other, it's very easy to see the possibility that almost half of the sitting Board of Regents could find themselves in a position where they feel compelled to return the political favor.

Capitol View Lesson from botched execution

By J.L. SCHMIDT Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

The Wayne

Count me among those people who have changed their mind about the death penalty.

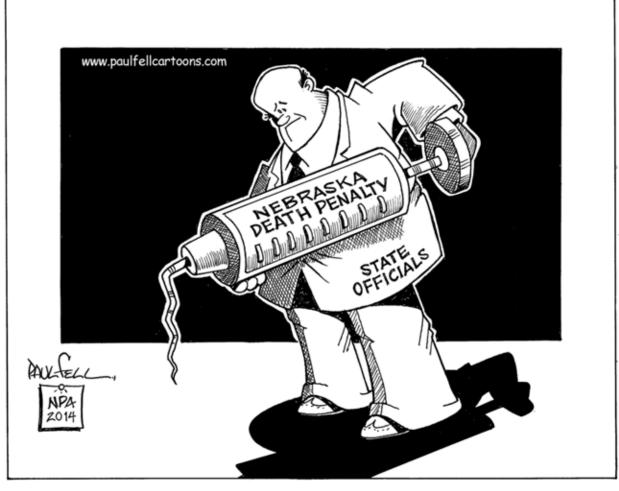

Sure, the recent bungled execution of Clayton Lockett in Oklahoma had something to do with it. Sure, listening – repeatedly – to the arguments against the death penalty by Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha had something to do with it.

Sitting through two days of Pardon's Board testimony about Willy Otey in the summer of 1994 had something to do with it. He was executed. Spending time at the Governor's Mansion with Ben Nelson and a couple reporters in July 1996 awaiting word that John Joubert had been executed played a part.

Narrowly missing an assignment to witness the execution of Robert E. Williams in December 1997 and report my observations to the world had a giant impact. But having my first-born son incarcerated for three years, and the in-depth look at the criminal justice system that gave, me probably turned the corner for me.

Researching the death penalty in Nebraska about a year ago gave me the final push when I ran across the story about the hanging death of William Jackson Marion back in 1887. He was convicted and executed for the murder of John Cameron. However, Cameron turned up alive in 1891. Marion received a posthumous pardon by Nebraska Governor Bob Kerrey on the 100th anniversary of his execution.

You don't have to be a reporter to pause and wonder if Marion was the first and only mistake in Nebraska among the 37 executions in Nebraska's history and how many others there might be in a year in the United States. But when you get to know the system, you understand that we are all humans, and humans make mistakes.

trials and the convictions and the executions of the last three in the 90's. I know that the bodies of the victims were found. We can assume, based on extensive reporting, that the same holds true for the 11 men currently on death row.

In 2008, the Supreme Court ruled that death by electrocution in Nebraska was cruel and unusual punishment. The Legislature approved death by lethal injection in 2009. Capital punishment remains on the books in Nebraska, but the supply of the execution drug sodium thiopental ran out in December. The drug is nearly impossible to buy because like most drugs used in executions, it's produced by European-based companies that are prohibited from I reported on the crimes and the exporting drugs used for capital punishment.

There are those, some of them death penalty proponents, who believe that there will never be another execution in Nebraska. While they believe the punishment is appropriate for the most heinous crimes, they understand that the constant legal challenges to the method and the appeals process for the convictions are just too costly.

Couple that with the fact that government has yet to prove that it's up to the task of administering the death penalty fairly and constitutionally, and one can make a strong case for locking them up and throwing away the key.

Governor Dave Heineman has said that the botched Oklahoma execution was unfortunate but threat- most humane for all concerned.

ened to overshadow the woman who was murdered.

Chambers has fought for decades to abolish the death penalty. Lawmakers passed his repeal in 1979, but then-Governor Charles Thone vetoed it. A similar proposal didn't get past first-round debate this vear.

Life in prison without parole would limit the length and expense of the appeals and remove the false hope of victim's families. It would also take the pressure off a system that struggles, at best, to do some things right. In the end, life in prison without parole is probably the Board of Regents chairman Howard Hawks has gone on record as saying that Heineman will not get any preferential treatment, rejecting Heineman's request for one-on-one meetings with each of the Regents, chancellors and other administrators. Will that be enough to sway legitimate, capable and reputable candidates for the position who have the background that is needed to execute the duties of Nebraska University president? These are all qualities that Heineman is sorely lacking in, and the college needs to have a proven leader with a track record of success in the academic arena – not the political one – to continue the progress the school has made during the tenure of outgoing president J. B. Milliken.

Heineman already has a dubious history when it comes to dealing with the University of Nebraska. He has taken the school's leadership to task on several occasions and, at the very least, heated up a number of bridges during his 10-year tenure as the state's governor. That he already lacks the educational qualifications necessary for this position is bad enough without having to spend time healing whatever wounds his relationship with certain university officials over the years has created.

The University of Nebraska needs a capable leader who can continue building on the school's level of excellence. It needs somebody with a background in education. It needs somebody who can steer the school without playing political games. Dave Heineman has none of these attributes. He has done little to help the post-secondary education community as a whole; and despite his assertions to the contrary, Heineman is a wellconnected political game-player who will damage the reputation and the integrity of the University of Nebraska system if he is named the college's next president.

The Board of Regents needs to do the right thing for Nebraska, not for its political buddies. They need to reject Heineman as a potential finalist and hire a legitimate, reputable candidate with the proper education background to lead the University of Nebraska in the future.

As for Heineman, he needs to make the right ethical decision and step aside as the state's governor. If misuse of state resources for personal gain is cause for dismissal of a lieutenant governor, the same should hold true for the state's highest office as well.

Honored to be part of wall dedication

I was honored on May 28 to have those who were there know it was a replica "Vietnam Wall Memorial" at Freedom Park in South Sioux City.

As a veteran of that war I was allowed to speak to those gathered. I was impressed by the number of Vietnam veterans (brothers and sisters all) who attended the dedication. This is a great thing, for not only the tri-state area, but for the Midwest and, indeed, the whole na-a small part in the dedication of the war) were not kind to our national soul. It was a time of upheaval in our beloved America. The men that were sent to fight in this battle were not always treated well when they returned. Those of us who served and returned to homes in the Midwest were not treated as poorly as our brothers in other parts of the nation. While we were generally treated with respect in Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota and other Midwest states, we still felt the sting of by the Vietnam War (some will call a nation that questioned what we did or in many minds failed to do.

Men were sent to war and then were not allowed to win that war. "Rules of Engagement" were set that virtually guaranteed failure. One celebrity (whose name I shall not put in print) traveled to Vietnam and spoke against our soldiers. Political leaders spoke volumes opposing not only our involvement in the war but insinuating that our 471-2716 or e-mail dbloomfield@leg. men were nothing more than vi- ne.gov.

cious killers. Chants of "ho-ho-heyhey how many kids did you kill today" still ring in the ears of many men who risked their lives to defend freedom. For many civilians, it has been easy to place blame on the soldiers who served during this war.

If there is blame to be placed, it does not fall on the veterans! Blame (if any) lies directly at the feet of the politicians who would not allow the best trained and best equipped military in the world "to take care of business!"

I thought we had learned a great lesson in 'Nam that a pulled-punches war is a war likely lost. Apparently, we have as a nation forgotten that lesson. I see political leaders again cutting the "legs" out from under our fighting men and women. I see our military being decimated and our veterans poorly treated. The Department of Veterans Affairs that is supposed to be taking care of our heroes is wrapped in scandal. Please, as this whole mess unfolds, let us not again blame the warriors.

Blood glucose control is just one aspect of preventive care. Following a meal plan, being physically active, losing excessive weight, keeping your blood pressure and cholesterol levels in check, quitting smoking and taking aspirin are all important ways to prevent future health problems.

Good control requires both diligence and willingness to try new strategies. Learn new strategies by attending Control Diabetes for Life where the focus will be on Getting in Touch with Your Diabetes Self-Management.

A PRETTY AND PROGRESSIVE COMMUNITY

His timely message on Sunday morning spoke specifically to the individuals who try to do everything by themselves; and these individuals, he said, "are destined to fail." King Solomon in the book of Ecclesiastes has some significant things to remind us - even today in 2014:

The best outcome is to pair up with someone else and do it with joy and purpose;

There is a level of generosity that is given when we work together;

Help is needed – and it is welcome:

We all need warmth; and we all need love;

It is always good to have a back up person for protec-

And, of course, as in all things that pertain to life and eternity, the pastor reminded the congregation of these two points: 1) God has a big plan for each of us, and 2) we must start with a shared relationship with Jesus. The Church (capital "C") is based on the foundation that Jesus is the Lord. Philippians 2:10 tell us that there will come a time when every knee shall bow and every tongue will confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord.

The common denominator among all who say that they are part of the Family of God is that precious relationship with Jesus.

Sunday, June 8 is a celebration of "Pentecost Sunday", a reminder of that wonderful event that marks the birth of the Church (recorded in Acts 2). This will be followed by the noon fellowship dinner called "Cafe 2:42" (from Acts 2:42). Everyone in the community is welcome to attend.

I just baked four dozen cookies because I've been asked to bring three dozen to church for a funeral tomorrow. The strange part is the funeral is for the lady who was always in charge of the funeral lunches at church! You know, like the matriarch in the Church Basement Ladies who kind of runs the show and they call it the Dead Spread!

Arleen was tiny, but determined, and she knew how she wanted us to do it. When my Mom could no longer stand long enough to serve the coffee, I took over that job. I wanted to move the table out in a different (easier) way, but Arleen would not let me.

Arleen also made the best pickles! And she always brought them to lunches at church, funeral or otherwise. Plus, she made great lemon meringue pies, and they were usually sold in the parking lot before she got them inside for a bake sale. She has beaten cancer three times: the first was colon and she was left with a colostomy for many years; the second, breast, and the last, not that long ago, was some kind of lymphoma that required radiation to her neck. None slowed her down.

She had a quilt frame up in her basement at all times, and my mom and Alice were there on Monday and Tuesday mornings, quilting. Then, them. Never let it be said that they too, will be missed.

they would all go to the local Senior Center for lunch. They quilted for pay, and donated the money to the building fund at church. (Which is where the money from bake sales went, also.)

NAMES OF CONTRACTOR

The family of Gladys Rohde would like to express appreciation for the sympathy, and support for us in the passing of our loved one. We were deeply touched by the outpouring of cards, visits, food, flowers, memorials and kindness shown to each of us. All were a great comfort to us as we said goodbye to Mom. A special thanks to Pastor Fallon and Pastor Goodman for always being there for Mom, and to Pastor Goodman for the beautiful service. We appreciate the wonderful care that Dr. Lindau gave Mom for the past years, also the care from Colonial Manor Staff and the Asceracare Hospice Team. Thank you to St. Paul's Ladies Aid for serving the funeral luncheon, to Connie Oberle for the beautiful music and to Scott Hasemann for his professional services.

All of these kindnesses will always be remembered.

Lella (IIy) & Jerry (Butch) Arduser, Bonnie & Ronald Halleen, Dennis & Alice Rohde, Ronald & Verna Mae Rohde, Donald & Patricia Rohde

Words cannot express our gratitude for the phone calls, cards, visits, food and support given to us during my husband, and our dad's illness and the days following his passing.

Thank you to Dr. Rosenkrans, Dr. Doddabele and staff at the June Nylen Cancer Center for their care and expertise. We could not have asked for a better team for Rod's treatment.

Thank you to Siouxland Hospice and Synergy Home Care staff, without whom, we would not have been able to fulfill Rod's wish to come home.

Thank you to Pastor Gretchen Ritola for all of her "kitchen table chats," comforting words and the wonderful service. It is truly a blessing to have had you here at this time in our lives and Rod's life.

Thank you to the "Rod Larson Country Music Tribute Band" who provided music at the services. It was a beautiful tribute to Rod's memory.

Thank you to Albin Moore for the aerial tribute, a very meaningful and touching display.

Thank you to Tony Smith of Munderloh-Smith Funeral Homes. Without your help, we could not have given Rod the celebration of life that he wanted. You made an unfamiliar and difficult task much easier to deal with.

Thank you to all who sent flowers, memorials and gifts; as well as all who attended the visitation, prayer service, or funeral.

All of this love and support is very much appreciated and has been an enormous comfort to all of us.

With heartfelt gratitude and thanks.
