Pool bond issue to be part of Nov. 4 election

By CLARA OSTEN
Of the Herald

Wayne voters will get to decide if the city should move forward with plans to build a new swimming pool following action taken at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Phil Lorenzen with D.A. Davidson and Co. presented information to the council on the proposed ballot language to be put on the Nov. 4 general election ballot. He also spoke of the city's past history with bond repayment, noting the Community Activity Center was paid off early and anticipates the same could happen with the $2.9 million bond for the building of a swimming pool at the Community Activity Center.

Lorenzen said interest rates are currently between 3.5 and 4 percent, and he feels they will remain at this level for the near future. He also stressed that the one-half of one percent sales tax for the building of the pool would sunset when the bonds are paid off, which is anticipated to take place sooner than the 20 years which the city has set as a bond repayment schedule.

Council members also approved on first reading an ordinance which would re-zone approximately 45 acres of land west of Muhs Acres from A-1 (Agricultural) to A-2 (Agricultural Residential).

Todd Luedeke, who owns 25 acres of land to be re-zoned, and who made the application for the re-zoning, spoke to the council and said the neighbors who would be affected by the change are in favor of it. He said he has no plans to develop the property, but said the change would allow for property to be divided into 2.5 acre plots rather than the 10 acre plots that the A-1 designation requires.

City planner Joel Hansen told the council that the Planning Commission approved the request and noted that the city has already expanded into the area, with Muhs Acres zoned as R-1 (Residential).

Council also gave its approval to street closing for a one block section of 10th Street from Main Street to Logan Street on Sunday, Sept. 7 for a Rally Day Sunday School Church Service for Grace Lutheran Church. The street will be closed from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. that day to allow for activities to take place at the Willow Bowl, in the street and at Cup of Grace on the south side of 10th Street.

A resolution appointing JEO Consulting to provide consulting services on projects connected to a Community Development Block Grant Comprehensive Investment and Stabilization Grant was approved. The city has a relatively short time frame to use the grant money for community improvements in the southeast quadrant of the city.

Approval was also given to an interlocal agreement with Wayne County for dispatch services. It was agreed that the fees charged are to be based on the percentage of service calls the city's dispatch handles for the county and would be re-negotiated on an annual basis. The new fees would take effect Jan. 1, 2015 and run until Dec. 31, 2015.

Council members also set a public hearing date of Tuesday, Sept. 16 at 5:30 p.m. for discussion of the city's 2014-2015 budget.

The council will next meet in regular session on Tuesday, Sept. 2 at 5:30 p.m. in council chambers

Traditional ringing of the bell means school is open in Wakefield

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

WAKEFIELD - Longtime teacher and baseball coach Paul Eaton was a kindergartner when a new tradition started in the Wakefield school district.

That time-honored tradition celebrated its 60th year Thursday morning with the annual flag-raising and bell-ringing ceremony that officially kicked off the 2014-15 school year at Wakefield Public Schools.

The entire student body of the school's elementary and junior-senior high school students gathered at the front entrance of the building for a program that included the local Post 81 American Legion Auxiliary Post 81 and VFW Allen Keagle Post 5765, with local Boys Scouts assisting in the raising of the American flag.

Mark Bejot, Wakefield superintendent of schools, said the opening ceremony has long been a special part of the community's school.

"We're probably the only school in the state that has this kind of an opening ceremony that involves the community and the parents and the kids," he said. "It started at the old school in 1954 and it's been part of our start to the school year ever since."

The school's old bell, which stands at the front entrance to the school building, was rang by each of the members of the sixth-grade class, a symbol of the call to students to begin classes.

Increase in budget request trimmed by county board

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

The Wayne County Commissioners went over preliminary requests from a number of government entities in the county during their meeting Tuesday and adjusted one request.

The Wayne County Ag Society made a rather significant increase in their budget request for the 2014-15 fiscal year, asking for a 75 percent increase over what they received for the current fiscal year.

Board members said the bulk of the increase that was being requested was going toward the construction of a new hog and small animal building at the Wayne County Fairgrounds. Of the $122,258.28 requested by the Ag Society, almost half of it was going toward the new building.

County Clerk Deb Finn told the board that the county has traditionally given about $20,000 to the Ag Society for capital improvements, along with assistance for operating expenses. Last fiscal year, the county allocated $69,814.77 to the Ag Society, and the bulk of the $20,000 of that amount went toward finishing the horse barn at the fairgrounds.

Board member Randy Larson felt the Ag Society's request was too high, considering the big jump in valuation in agriculture land the county is seeing for the next fiscal year.

"We just had a 46 percent increase in ag land valuation, and we've had to work hard to keep our budget in line," he said. "I'm just concerned that we're asking for too much at once here and (the new construction) is something that could be stretched out over time."

Finn told the board that, in talking with Ag Society officials, she said that the group was understanding if they didn't get the requested amount.

"They're trying to make the fair better, but they aren't really pushing hard for this amount," she said.

Board chair Dean Burbach said he agreed

Movie on Meyer's life currently in production

A movie about the life of former Wayne resident and college basketball coaching legend Don Meyer is beginning production this week.

According to a news release from Lipscomb University obtained by The Wayne Herald, the movie "My Many Sons" is being filmed by Higher Purpose Entertainment, a production company owned by Lipscomb University alum and former minor league baseball player Casey Bond. Filming took place last week on the Lipscomb campus in Nashville, Tenn., and additional filming is scheduled to be shot in Aberdeen, S.D., where Meyer coached at Northern State University for 11 seasons.

Meyer, who died after a six-year battle with cancer on May 18, is a legend in national coaching circles. he coached at Lipscomb for 24 seasons, finishing with a record of 665-179 and winning an NAIA national title before going to Northern State in 1999, where he finished his coaching career in 2010 with an overall record of 923-324. His 923 wins are

City sales tax figures ahead of last year's pace

Nearly $600,000 collected in FY

August sales tax figures from the City of Wayne showed the city continuing to receive more than their projected average.

August's city sales tax revenue, which is based on June's sale receipts, was $56,965.89, more than $6,000 ahead of the same time a year ago. The August figure was down from last month's record total of $61,652.84.

For the year to date, the city has received $598,290.38 from its city sales tax receipts for fiscal year 2013-14, an average of $54,390.03 per month. That average monthly figure is well ahead of the city's fiscal year projection of $52,260.31 per month.

Northeast Nebraska honors veterans

What started out as a plan by members of the Winside American Legion to take veterans from the Norfolk Veterans Home to view the Vietnam Wall in South Sioux City, turned into a northeast Nebraska opportunity to honor those who have served our country.

A group of 15 veterans from the Norfolk Veterans Home boarded a bus on Aug. 18 to travel to Freedom Park in South Sioux City.

The group was escorted by a number of members of the American Legion Riders, who rode their motorcycles ahead of the bus. As the group traveled, they were saluted by members of the Pierce, Carroll, Winside, Wakefield and Allen Volunteer Fire Departments and thanked for their service.

When the group arrived at Jackson, they were met by members of the South Sioux City Police Department and received a police escort to Freedom Park.

After spending approximately an hour at the Wall and finding a few familiar names, the group was treated to supper, which was organized and served by members of South Sioux City America Legion Post #307. The American Legion District Commander was also part of the group recognizing these veterans.

"We would like to thank everyone who helped make this trip work," said Daryl Mundil, a member of the Winside American Legion. He said that on the return trip, one of the veterans told him "the escort and the firemen on the side of road made them (the veterans) feel very important."

Following the tour of the wall and the supper, the group of tired veterans returned to Norfolk at approximately 9 p.m.

Volunteers help the veterans off the bus upon arrival at The Wall.

The group spent time looking at the names on the wall and enjoying the beautiful day.

Veterans take a break from looking for familiar names while visiting The Wall at Freedom Park in South Sioux City.

Treasurer Stenberg encourages Nebraska State Fair goes to visit Unclaimed Property Booth

Visitors to the 2014 Nebraska State Fair in Grand Island are invited to stop by the Nebraska State Treasurer's booth in the Exhibition Building to search for unclaimed property and to ask for help in filing claims, State Treasurer Don Stenberg said.

Unclaimed Property Division specialists will staff the Treasurer's Office booth from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. throughout the fair, except for Labor Day when the hours will be 9 a.m. until 7 p.m.

"Our Unclaimed Property staff was very busy at last year's State Fair, and we are looking forward to an even busier year in 2014," Treasurer Stenberg said. "The State Fair is one of most important and productive outreach events of the year and is an opportunity for us to reach thousands of Nebraskans who aren't sure how to search our database on their own or who may not know about our service."

More than $52,000 in unclaimed property was returned to Nebraskans at last year's State Fair, including $15,761 paid to a McCook resident. Other larger claims included $960 to an Ashland woman and $900 for a Fremont man. A total of 133 claims were filed during the 10-day fair.

So far this year, the Unclaimed Property Division has returned more than $7.4 million to Nebraskans, former Nebraskans, or heirs. That represents 13,504 claims filed. In all, the State Treasurer's Office is holding more than $125 million for 350,000 owners.

Stenberg said the successful efforts at the 2013 fair indicate that more Nebraskans are becoming familiar with the Unclaimed Property service provided by the state. "We are pleased that our concerted efforts to make our Unclaimed Property program better known and to assure Nebraskans that our service is legitimate and user friendly are paying off," he said. "But we still have significant properties that we would like very much to return to owners or heirs so that the money can be put to good use as originally intended."

At least a dozen properties in the database are in amounts exceeding $50,000, Stenberg said. The largest property in the database is $154,681 from the Webster County Court. The second largest property is $120,247 in a matured policy, endowment and annuity for a man in Douglas County. The last known counties of residence for owners of other large properties include the following:

- Douglas County, $87,897, dividends and shares of stock.
- Adams County, $84,838, dividends and shares of stock.
- Douglas County, $80,871, checking accounts.
- Lancaster County, $73,212, cashier checks and garnishment.
- Sarpy County, $72,522, liquidated funds and stock redemption.
- Gage County, $62,839, savings accounts.
- Frontier County, $53,991, death benefits.

Nebraskans can easily search unclaimed property records any time at the State Treasurer's website, www.treasurer.org, or by calling the Unclaimed Property Division at 402-471-8497 or 877-572-9688 toll free.

First Idea Tuesday is set for Aug. 26 at WSC

The first session of Idea Tuesdays will be held Tuesday, Aug. 26 at 7 p.m. in Gardner Auditorium in Gardner Hall on the Wayne State College campus.

Dr. Catherine Rudin, Dr. Susan Ellis and Lisa Nelson will be speaking at the first Idea Tuesdays event.

Rudin's topic will include her interest in Bulgaria including how it led to a career, a family, friends and lifelong hobbies.

How being aware of sameness could help to become better global citizens will be the topic for Ellis and Nelson.

Rudin teaches linguistics, languages (currently Spanish and German), foreign language methods, dance, and related subjects at Wayne State College. She grew up in Wisconsin and received her B.A. in linguistics from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Her graduate degrees, M.A. in linguistics and PhD in linguistics with a Slavic studies minor, are from Indiana University, Bloomington.

Before coming to Wayne, she taught linguistics at the University of Wisconsin and at Miami University. She has also taught Bulgarian language several times in intensive summer language programs at George Mason University and Indiana University, and has participated as an instructor in University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Indigenous Roots program for Native American teachers.

Rudin's main scholarly interests are in the syntax (formal analysis of sentence structures) of Slavic and Balkan languages, especially Bulgarian, and Siouan languages, especially Omaha-Ponca. Current projects include (1) an online dictionary of Omaha and Ponca (with Mark Awakuni-Swetland) (2) a study of universal concessive conditional clauses in Slavic languages, (3) a translation of a history of Bulgarian dance.

She is chair of the Slavic Linguistics Society and an active member of several other professional organizations, including the Linguistic Society of America, the Association of Teachers of Slavic and East European Languages, and the Society for the Study of Indigenous Languages of the Americas. In addition, she serves as the associate editor for syntax of the Journal of Slavic Linguistics. She is also an avid international folk dancer and performs and teaches Balkan singing and East European music and dance.

Ellis is a Professor of Sociology and Anthropology at WSC. She earned her Ph.D. at the University of Utah, Salt Lake City after earning degrees at Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah.

Her research interests include the Middle East, archaeology, palynology, geographic information systems and Teaching interests include forensic anthropology, religion and culture, demography, and the Middle East.

Ellis has been area director at Abila of the Decapolis and Khirbet Iskander in Jordan. She received the Outstanding Faculty Award at Heritage College.

Nelson is Service-Learning Coordinator on campus and a WSC alumna.

How to overcome 'discomfort' in selling product to customer

By ZACK ZIMMERMAN
Nebraska Business Development Center

I have been running my business for about a year and I have always been uncomfortable "selling" my product when talking to a potential customer. Do you have suggestions? Lincoln, NE

Selling or sales has always been a challenge for most small business owners or entrepreneurs. The term "sales" or "selling", involves either a one on one or face to face interaction with a potential customer. This interaction specifically involves the perceived value of your product or service in the market. Much of the time, the value of the product or service is so obvious to the small business owner that many are taken aback when the customer declines and moves on. This "isn't obvious" sales approach seems to be very common when starting and maintaining a business and entrepreneurs sometimes struggle in figuring out what to change. These changes have to originate from customer feedback. For example, if you are engaged with a customer and you believe the customer is going to turn your product down, knowing the reasons behind the turndown is critical. This is valuable information! Identifying what this customer specifically wants and then knowing the reason why your product is not providing it, can be very helpful for future sales. Try not looking at it as a customer turning your product down, but an opportunity to solicit feedback from the market about your product. First asking the customer why they are turning down your product and then truly listen to their concerns. Essentially, this is the market telling you why or why not your product or service is relevant. This is something you need to listen too. Small businesses are in the unique position to change to market demands very quickly and easily. You should use this to your advantage. Ask the customer, listen intently, and then make changes to your product based on that feedback. The truth is, sales and selling is just like a lot of skills, it can be refined and it takes practice, but you as the owner can make the necessary adjustments very quickly.

I have a product and want to begin selling it. How should I start? Lincoln, NE

The leap between having a product and starting a business with that product is much larger than most entrepreneurs think. With the recent popularity of ABC's Shark Tank, many more entrepreneurs are creating inventions, but find it increasingly difficult to create a business out of it. Challenges such as manufacturing, distribution, marketing, business development, billing, and intellectual property all rear up their heads to create a 7 head monster that an entrepreneur did not originally anticipate. I suggest starting by assessing your personal goal in creating this venture. What is it you truly trying to accomplish? Money? Freedom? Can you do this by selling the rights to this product and moving on to the next thing? Is this product your "baby" and do you have an emotional connection to its success? Can you sell it to a small defined group of people and then assess the next move? Most entrepreneurs have a product they think the market wants, but then find out that the costs associated with the producing this product on a massive scale is just too high and requires too big of commitment. Not to mention, they do not want to be involved in marketing, dealing with manufacturers, finding a way to sell it, and then delivering the final product. These considerations are all very important and I highly recommend you assess and understand your purpose of in starting this venture.

I am thinking about hiring a past contractor as an employee, what is the difference between hiring him as a contractor and having him as an employee? Omaha, NE

The difference is subtle but it is very important. Numerous businesses find themselves in trouble with regulatory agencies because who they originally thought were contractors should actually be employees. The distinction lies in the task being performed and the management of that task being completed. If you have a well-defined task for an employee that needs to be completed by the specific date, and you are requiring not many stipulations on how the task is being completed, then they may be considered a contractor. If task the somewhat general, requires specific management on your part, and you are requiring specific preferences are how these tasks are completed, they should be considered employees. For example, if you contact a person to cut down a tree, that is a very specific task on a specific tree, you don't care when that person does it or essentially how that person does it, as long as that tree is cut down by a predetermined date for a predetermined fee. Now let's say you want that person to cut down a tree, but you would like them start at 7am and work until 8pm and by the way, they need to them to wear a uniform of your preference and act in a certain manner on the job site. Plus you will be on site watching them, to verify that the tree is going to be cut down exactly the way you would like it to be, in the manner you would like it to be and you will pay them on an hourly rate. This would be considered an employee.

among the most in college basketball history, regardless of level or gender, and won the 2009 ESPY Jimmy V Award for Perseverance.

The film will focus on the relationships he forged with players throughout his career and the impact he had on generations of young people, according to the news release. The film is being shot by students in Lipscomb's film and creative media graduate studies program.

Bond, who was drafted by the San Francisco Giants and played in their minor league system, acted in the movie "Moneyball" and said he was inspired by Meyer's story.

"I had a coach like Coach Meyer when I played baseball," Bond said in the news release. "That coach had a great impact on who I am today. I know how important a coach's influence can be on a player. Coach Meyer's story is fascinating. Everyone needs to know who he is and the values he stood for on and off the court. His servant leadership is a great example for all of us."

Bond is co-producing the movie with Brad Wilson. The movie is being directed by Ralph E. Portillo.

that the Ag Society has done a great job in improving the Wayne County Fair, but echoed Larson's concerns about the excessive request.

"I know they're trying to make the fair better and they're doing a great job with it, but people are really watching their budgets right now and I think 75 percent is just too much," he said.

Larson suggested an increase to $80,500 for the 2014-15 fiscal year, which would be an increase of a little more than 15 percent, with that extra money going toward capital improvements.

The Ag Society request was the only one of the seven requests that was adjusted. The three county libraries in Winside, Carroll and Wayne will be getting $13,000, a 30 percent increase over the $10,000 they've received for a number of years. Fire districts in Carroll, Wayne, Hoskins, Winside and Wakefield will receive smaller increases in their 2014-15 tax requests. Carroll ($68,340) and Wayne ($61,700) both have increases of 13.54 and 12.28 percent, respectively, Winside has a 3.5 percent increase to $38,006 and Hoskins is up 2.04 percent to $110,086.

Wakefield's overall tax request is $87,500, an increase of 20.44 percent, but their tax request is spread out between Wayne, Dixon and Thurston counties.

Winside's new superintendent admits to being what some would call a "Nomadic Nebraskan," and he's happy to have finally found his way to this part of the state.

Mike Shoff was born in Scottsbluff in the panhandle of western Nebraska, grew up on the other side of the state in Auburn and has spent a considerable part of his career in south central and southwest Nebraska before taking over the superintendent job at Winside this summer.

"I was down in the southwest part of the state for a lot of years, so this is the first time I've lived in Northeast Nebraska," the 51-year-old Shoff said. "Hopefully, this is the last move for me. We're excited about being here and this is a great community and the people here have been great in welcoming us."

Shoff has spent a considerable part of his career in the Cambridge school system. He taught art and coached football, wrestling and track for a lot of years before moving into the administrative arena.

After spending a few years in principal and athletic director positions in Sutton and Ogallala, he returned to Cambridge as the principal and athletic director, where he stayed for three years before taking the Winside superintendent job that came open after Jeff Messersmith stepped down last spring.

Shoff had taught previously at Cambridge before returning to the school in an administrative capacity, which he said was an opportunity to continue a family tradition.

"My dad graduated from Cambridge in 1956, and he was a teacher and a principal and eventually became a superintendent, so I'm kind of following in his footsteps," Shoff said. "I wanted to do something that kind of took the big picture into consideration and this opportunity came open."

Shoff said he is excited about the opportunity at Winside, a school that is trying to buck the trends that are slowly killing off small-town school districts in the state.

"It's a small school district, and a lot of schools in the state that are this size are looking at consolidating," he said. "They want to grow here and want the enrollment to grow and the school to shine, and there are some things that I think we can do. We're going to work hard with our school improvement process and try to get better academically."

Shoff said that keeping a small school going is not an easy task, but one he feels comfortable attacking.

"Trying to keep a small district going and thriving is a challenge, but they have some great academic and athletic traditions here and I'm looking forward to the opportunity."

The school districts in Wayne

County recently received their valuation information from the county, so Shoff is anxious about getting his first budget taken care of in the weeks ahead.

"It's kind of a big thing right now, and the valuations are going up in Wayne County, which is a concern for our taxpayers," he said. "We need to find out what the right amount is to do the things we want to do academically without burning the taxpayers, because they're the ones footing the bill."

Shoff's wife, Chris, is helping out with technology issues at the school, and their youngest son, Cory, plans on playing football and wrestling. His oldest brother, Mike, was a three-time state champion and four-time finalist who is now playing football at South Dakota State, while the middle brother, Brock, was part of York's state runner-up football team and is now playing at Nebraska Wesleyan.

 well with it," Johnson said. "That's kind of the way it's been in our program the last few years, where we have people waiting in the wings to step in and take over."

Some good younger golfers could make a name for themselves as well this season. Johnson said junior Jewel Kneiff and freshman Megan Keiser are both showing some good things on the practice range, and freshman Elizabeth Junck could see some action this season as well.

"We have a lot of youngsters who could step up," Johnson said. "Jewel could do some good things for us, and Megan is looking pretty good for a freshman. I expect our younger players to step up and play a huge role for us."

The Blue Devils should be a competitive bunch in the 2014 season, and with the combination of experience and solid play from the younger players, Johnson is excited about the team's chances to compete for a trip to state.

"Emma and Holly both have played two years at districts and have a year of state competition under their belts, and that's huge," he said. "We'll be looking to them to help the other girls see what it's like and what they need to do."

The Blue Devils open the 2014 season Thursday at the West Point-Beemer Invitational.

White Dog Pub Gold wins league to shortstop and Schaefer coming in from center field to catch.

"Those are two big positions up the middle and you want to be solid there, so we're moving our two most experienced players into those positions," Sweetland said. "We're also moving Kiera Hochstein over to center to take advantage of her speed, so I feel pretty comfortable with our defense up the middle."

Sweetland is also comfortable with his two-man tandem of sophomore hurlers, Hannah Belt and Ashten Gibson. Belt held down most of the pitching duties last year and went 16-8 with a 1.86 earned-run average and 175 strikeouts, while Gibson saw some spot relief action and has developed her arm with a solid effort in summer softball.

"Ashten pitched a lot of innings this summer and worked really hard, and we've seen quite a bit of improvement with her," Sweetland said. "Hannah has been nursing some injuries and hopefully we can get her back to where she's throwing like she's capable. We have two really good pitchers, which not a lot of people have around here, and we're comfortable using either one. It's like a two-headed monster in the circle for us."

The Blue Devils have a good nucleus of returning players from last year, including senior Maddie Morris and sophomores Rylee Bessmer, Sierra Scardino and Taylor Gamble. Freshmen Jamie Gamble and Kennedy Maly are also expected to make contributions to this year's team, Sweetland said.

"A lot of those sophomores who were freshmen last year got some playing time, so they're not new to this and we'll expect them to fill their roles like a veteran player should," he said. "We've got some young players that can come in and contribute right away, so we have a good mix of experience and youth this year."

The Blue Devils won't have to wait long to see what kind of team they have, as they open play Thursday with a home battle against perennial Class B power Blair. The Blue Devils also host a five-team, double-elimination tournament on Saturday at the Summer Sports Complex.

"Blair is a good first test to see where you're at, and if we can hang with them and play well, that should be a good sign of things to come," Sweetland said.

against the rest of a tough Class C field remains to be seen, but they should face some challenging competition in the area this season.

"Guardian Angels will be solid and Tekamah-Herman has some good, young players back, so I'll expect them to be competitive as well," Sweetland said. "A number of teams in our class have some good players back as well. Southern has their pitcher back, Bishop Neumann has a bunch back and Wahoo will be solid."

Whether the Blue Devils get back to state or not remains to be seen, and that's a little ways down the road for Sweetland to worry about.

"With our youth, we have a lot of work to do, so we're certainly not looking ahead that far," he said. "We need to try to get better each day."

WHS hosts softball tournament Saturday

Wayne High's softball team will host a five-team, double-elimination tournament on Saturday at the Wayne Summer Sports Complex.

Northeast, Bellevue University outline plans for course offerings

As groundwork literally gets underway this fall on the new Northeast Community College Extended Campus in O'Neill, academic teams at both Northeast and Bellevue University (BU) continue to lay the foundation of a new articulation agreement between the two institutions.

The presidents of Northeast and BU signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) earlier this year that will allow Northeast Nebraska residents the opportunity to take additional college level courses through Northeast Community College and Bellevue University. The MOU will allow Bellevue to offer upper level undergraduate and graduate level courses and programs for constituents in the Northeast Community College service area with a primary focus on non-traditional working adults.

"Creating opportunities for transfer to four year institutions is part of the role and mission of a community college," said John Blaylock, vice president of educational services at Northeast. "It makes sense to partner with an institution like Bellevue, who has reached out to an adult market. That's a significant portion as to whom we want to serve in North Central Nebraska."

Blaylock said Northeast Community College will offer programs and classes in areas such as agriculture, allied health, applied technology (welding in particular), business, and general academic transfer programs. Students may get all of their 60 credit hours through distance learning through the O'Neill extended campus or at the extended campus itself.

"Students will be able to get their entire academic transfer degree face-to-face in the classroom," he said. "The value of that, as well as any other training that we would offer, is that it is credit-based and would transfer to a Bellevue program of study with its very flexible transfer program of accepting 78 credit hours."

Bellevue University has similar articulation agreements with several community colleges in Nebraska and across the nation. The first of the partnerships was created 24-years ago.

"More than anything, Bellevue University's partnerships allow students to utilize the flexibility and affordability of their local educational resources. Both parties benefit from these agreements," said Eric Nordmeyer, director of satellite operations at BU. "We're able to work with students to ensure that they're getting the best quality education and a level of service that they wouldn't otherwise get if they did not have someone right there at the community colleges."

"And obviously, being able to bring classes to the community allows students to finish a four year degree without having to leave the area where they live."

Nordmeyer said the articulation agreements are ensuring there is an educated workforce in the communities and regions they serve. "When students move away from their hometowns to attend to college, it can often be a challenge to bring them back home."

Blaylock said things change for the better anytime education is brought to the people. "It provides opportunities for them to improve skills, improve advancement in their place of employment, increased production, increased efficiencies within an operation, and it provides training that, in some cases, is just not there. It could simply be a business finding an entry level employee that has the skill level it needs."

Blaylock cites examples of expanded economic development opportunities after such agreements were established. "After the community of Ord brought Central Community College to their region, they saw significant increases in economic development opportunities through entrepreneurship and other areas. When Mid-Plains Community College built its extended campus in Broken Bow, that area saw other entities invest in business and retail sectors while professional services expanded greatly as well. I would anticipate those same types of things happening in O'Neill too," he said.

The Northeast Community College Center for Enterprise (CFE) will also play a role in establishing programming needs with Bellevue University. Eric Johnson, associate vice president of the CFE, said "The Center for Enterprise is looking forward to working side-by-side with Bellevue University in designing short-term training needs to offer a menu of services that we each do well. We are continuing to discuss opportunities in our partnership with Bellevue that will not only expand CFE training opportunities, but develop workforce training needs across the entire 20-county service area."

Johnson said discussions are presently underway on a program that Bellevue has successfully piloted in other areas that provides higher education opportunities to business and industry in the region it serves. He hopes to announce more on the program in the coming weeks.

Nordmeyer said a key to their program offerings is student demand. "Most of the classes we offer are in the areas of business, behavioral science, and criminal justice - those seem to fit best because that tends to be where the student level of interest is at the community college level. We also look at areas that will be most beneficial to the community and region," he said. "When we do get involved, we try to work with the entire community. Many times, we will offer classes based on the needs of corporate partners that the community college is working with as well."

Bellevue University has hired Amanda Avidano as the full-time coordinator to assist in building programming needs to be offered in the Northeast region. She has an office in the Lifelong Learning Center on Northeast Community College's campus in Norfolk and will also have an office at Northeast's new extended campus in O'Neill. In addition, Bellevue University programs and services will be made available at Northeast Community College's Extended Campus in West Point.

Northeast will provide lecture, laboratory, and distance learning classroom space for Bellevue University's upper level undergraduate and graduate credit courses.

Nordmeyer said BU presently has students in the O'Neill area who are enrolled in on-line classes that will start this fall. He said they are also in the final stages of identifying business type programs that will actually be held in the Northeast Community College Extended Campus in O'Neill beginning in spring 2015.

Nordmeyer said, "Our partnership with Northeast is set to work with transfer courses, so we will not duplicate anything students take prior to attending Bellevue. We are building programming based on the quality education they receive from Northeast Community College."

For additional information on Northeast Community College offerings in O'Neill, call Merri Schneider, director of the extended campus, at (402) 336-3590. For Bellevue University programming information, contact Amanda Avidano at (402) 690-9698.

Local piano students take part in summer field trip

Several students of Mrs. Marcile Uken of Wayne took part in the annual summer field trip. The group journeyed to Sioux Falls, S.D. Students going on the trip were Brooklyn Bierbower, Alex Frank, Faith Junck, Ky Kenny, Emily Matthes, Ashton Munsell, Ben Sandoz, Lindy Sandoz, Orion Spieker, Andy Wibben and Ethan Wibben.

Parents and family members on the trip were Priscilla Junck, Pam Matthes, Cory Sandoz and Carol and Dan Wibben.

The first stop on the trip was Cookie Jar where the group learned about making of the cookies and then were given a 6-inch cookie to decorate.

The next activity was a trolley ride around the city of Sioux Falls with the trolley driver giving information on the interesting and historical places in the city.

The afternoon was spent at the Washington Pavilion where the group went to the Wells Fargo Cine-Dome and saw the film "Walking the T-Rex." They also had a Science Demo "Suits in Space" where they learned about space, how an astronaut suit was made and about the planets. The rest of the time was spent in the Kirby Science Discovery Center with more than 100 inter-active hands on activities on the various floors of the science pavilion.

The group enjoyed a treat of bars made by Emily Matthes and Lindy Sandoz and then they returned to Wayne.

Sukup
Pvt. Sukup graduates from basic training

Pvt. Rochelle Sukup graduated from National Guard basic training at Fort Leonardwood, Mo. on Thursday, Aug. 7.

Sukup was awarded the Certificate of Achievement for her determination to meet and exceed all standards of performance as a soldier. The Sergeants of the Platoons bestowed this honor on her. She was chosen for the award from 180 other soldiers.

Sukup graduated from Wayne High School in May of 2014. She follows in the footsteps of her sister, Ashley, who graduated from Wayne High School in 2010, enlisted in the National Guard and has achieved the rank of Corporal.

Sukup is the daughter of Jeff Sukup of Wayne and Diedra Hoising of Coleridge. Her grandparents are Dan and Connie Sukup of Wayne.

Q & AS: MEDICATION SAFETY IN CHILDREN

Curiosity kills more than the cat... Did you know that medications are the top cause of poisoning in kids? Together, we can help change that! To get started, here are a few answers to some questions parents commonly ask about medication safety for kids.

1. Where should I store medications? People may call it the "medicine cabinet," but it's not a good place to store medications. Bathrooms are moist and can lower the strength of a medication. Plus, they're a little too easy for little hands to get into. Instead, keep drugs, eye drops, and vitamins out of sight and out of reach of children. Try a high place, such as a hall closet or kitchen shelf. Don't forget that a curious kid may easily find medicine in a purse or dresser drawer.^{1,2}
2. How should I measure medicine? With young children, it's especially important to get the dosing right. Always use the dosing device that comes with the medicine. Measuring spoons or other home utensils aren't the same as a medication syringe or cup.¹ If you use a syringe, try squirting the medicine on the inside of the cheek where there are fewer taste buds.⁴ If your child takes the wrong dosage, call me right away. I can tell you whether or not it's cause for concern. Or call Poison Control for assistance as well.
3. Does a spoonful of sugar help the medicine go down? Some medicines can taste pretty nasty to a child! It may be okay to mix a liquid medication with chocolate or maple syrup. However, don't do this for babies. If they don't finish a bottle, they won't get the right amount of medication.² And check with me before crushing and mixing a tablet or capsule with food.⁴
4. Is it okay to share prescription medications? No matter how similar their symptoms, don't have your kids share medications.² And never repackage them. Keep medications in their original childproof container.
5. How long can my child use a medication? Be sure to not use drugs past their expiration date. Most drugs lose their strength after about a year. If you have any question about whether or not to use a drug, talk with your child's doctor or me.²
6. Are OTC drugs safe for kids? Be sure to read labels. Not all over-the-counter (OTC) medications are safe for children of all ages. Of course, never give aspirin to any child—it can cause serious illness, even death.³

Make sure you know a drug's potential side effects. But stay alert to any adverse reactions. Kids can be more sensitive to drugs than adults. For example, cold medications can cause excitability or severe drowsiness in kids, even at lower doses. The FDA recommends that you not use OTC cough and cold medications in children younger than age two.³ Rest, clear fluids, and a humidifier may be the best route to recovery from colds and flu.⁴

Remember: There's no substitute for getting your specific questions answered. I'm here to personally talk with you about your child's medications. I can also suggest OTC drugs and discuss any concerns you have about side effects. If you don't remember a question until you're home, that's okay. Just give me a call.

Nothing herein constitutes medical advice, diagnosis or treatment, or is a substitute for professional advice. You should always seek the advice of your physician or other medical professional if you have questions or concerns about a medical condition.

Nebraska State Fair opens Friday in Grand Island

Visitors to the Nebraska State Fair Aug. 22-Sept. 1 at Fanner Park in Grand Island can view more than 10,000 4-H exhibits from 2,500 exhibitors across the state, representing all 93 Nebraska counties.

The Nebraska State Fair is the capstone event for 4-H'ers to showcase their educational experiences that have taken place in the past year, said Shane Potter, assistant extension educator in 4-H youth development.

Exhibits will be displayed in close to 43 project areas, including animals, foods, clothing and textiles, robotics, computers, environment, vet science, heritage, leadership and many more, Potter said.

Also in 2014, Nebraska 4-H will be celebrating Extension's 100th birthday at the Nebraska State Fair, where inside the 4-H Exhibit Hall visitors can get a party hat to celebrate.

Other activities inside the 4-H Exhibit Hall, include several free, interactive activities for kids. This includes exploring careers, biological systems engineering, "ag-citing" science and learning child, animal science, healthy lifestyles, community engagement and science.

"Visitors to the 4-H Exhibit Hall can participate in their first class from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln," Potter said. Nebraska 4-H and UNL academic departments teach activities.

4-H also will be participating in Nebraska's Largest Classroom on Aug. 25, 26 and 28.

Nebraska's Largest Classroom is a self-guided field trip where students and teachers can take part in activities and educational content at the fair.

Dozens of contests, including the Companion Animal Show, Tree ID Contest, Presentations Contest and more also will be taking place during the State Fair. For more information, including schedules, visit 4h.unl.edu or statefair.org.

Also in the 4-H Exhibit Hall, the 4-H Foundation will have a photo booth available, where visitors can take a photo with fun 4-H props and share through social media, said Tracy Pracheil, associate extension educator in 4-H youth development.

A Nebraska State Fair 4-H app also is available to keep track of events, results, latest news and a fair map. Visitors also can scan symbols across the 4-H Exhibit Hall and see videos of 4-H'ers talking about their projects that are on exhibit at the State Fair.

The app can be downloaded at 4h.unl.edu.

The app also can be used to play the seek and scan game at the fair. There are 36 static 4-H exhibits which feature videos. These videos will provide fairgoer's with a glimpse of the learning that took place behind the 4-H exhibits they see at the fair. To play the Seek and Scan game, fairgoer's should download the Nebraska State Fair 4-H app and scan the symbols placed on the signs next to the exhibits at the State Fair. Prizes are available.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes

New title coming soon - Grandpa

I've been called many things during the course of my 48 years of existence - some good, some bad and there have been the occasional moments of really horrible things said about me (but enough about my family reunions).

Next March, I'll earn a title that I've never been called before...

Grandpa.

Yes, ladies and gentleman, yours truly is about to join the Old Fogies Club. Break out the pipe, the slippers and the walker - ol' Mikey C is gonna be a gramps.

The news came in an early-morning phone call a few weeks ago. My oldest daughter, Kylie, asked if I was ready to be a grandpa.

Now THAT is a wake-up call.

When she and her husband got married five months ago, we had a conversation about grandchildren, and the impression I got was that I was going to have to wait a little while. They wanted to spend time together, have some fun, not worry about children or anything like that.

Not a bad idea, I said. Her mom and I spent the first three months TRYING to have children (don't worry, I won't disgust you with the details). Nine months and three weeks later - there she was and our lives would never be the same.

So much for the wait.

I was actually told about my upcoming promotion a few weekends ago, but was forced under a variety of threats of physical and/or emotional violence to not "go public" with the news until she had her first ultrasound, which occurred late last week. (And, just so you know, it's NEVER a good idea to toy with the emotional faculties of a pregnant woman dealing with morning sickness and the inevitable bloating feeling that comes with pregnancy.)

Well, now that I've gotten my first glimpse of my first grandchild - I'm going public.

It's funny, because I'm still getting used to the fact that the little girl that I brought into this world and watched as she grew into a beautiful young woman is, in fact, married and is now expecting.

It wasn't all that long ago that her mother and I each held her hand as she skipped - her bright blue polka-dotted dress with a big red bow in back bouncing with each skip and a matching bow corralling her beautiful blonde hair - into the classroom for her first day of kindergarten. The smile on her face that day was priceless - and the hug I got when I picked her up after school that day was one I'll always remember.

I remember the road trips after the divorce when her mother and I would meet in Scribner to make the exchange. We'd drive along Highway 275 back toward Norfolk, and she would point to the cattle feedlots between Beemer and Wisner and say, "Daddy, look at all those cows."

"Those aren't cows," I'd tell her. "They're beavers."

"They are NOT beavers, Daddy," she'd answer back, but I would always insist that they were. To this day, if we're in the car together and we drive past a feedlot, she'll point out the "beavers" and we'll have a laugh about it.

As she grew into her teenage years, I always fretted about her becoming a mother before she was ready. I've seen the challenges teen moms and young single mothers face while trying to raise their children, get an education, keep the mouths fed, etc., and I prayed more times than I care to count that my daughter not go that direction.

We had a lot of daddy-daughter talks about the topic. I know that it was probably the last thing she wanted to talk about, but I knew that there was something great waiting for her down the road and I didn't want anything to stand between her and that opportunity. She would always assure me that she got the message and she was going to make sure that didn't happen to her.

Thankfully, it didn't. And, as it turns out - I was right. She IS going to be part of something great about seven months from today. She is going to bring a new life into this world - a life full of promise and energy and enthusiasm. Whether it's a boy or a girl, that child is going to have a wonderful set of parents who are anxious, excited and hopeful that they can be the kind of parents they grew up with.

Seven months from today (due date is March 21 of next year), they will have the opportunity to perform one of God's truest miracles. They will bring life into the world and give me a new job title, one that I am so excited to add to my personal resume.

My days of directing, feeding, nurturing and providing are done. Now, I'll be listening, playing, encouraging and enjoying this new addition to the family.

It's the job description that only one person can fill - the one they call:

Grandpa.

Capitol View

Another historic auto auction

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

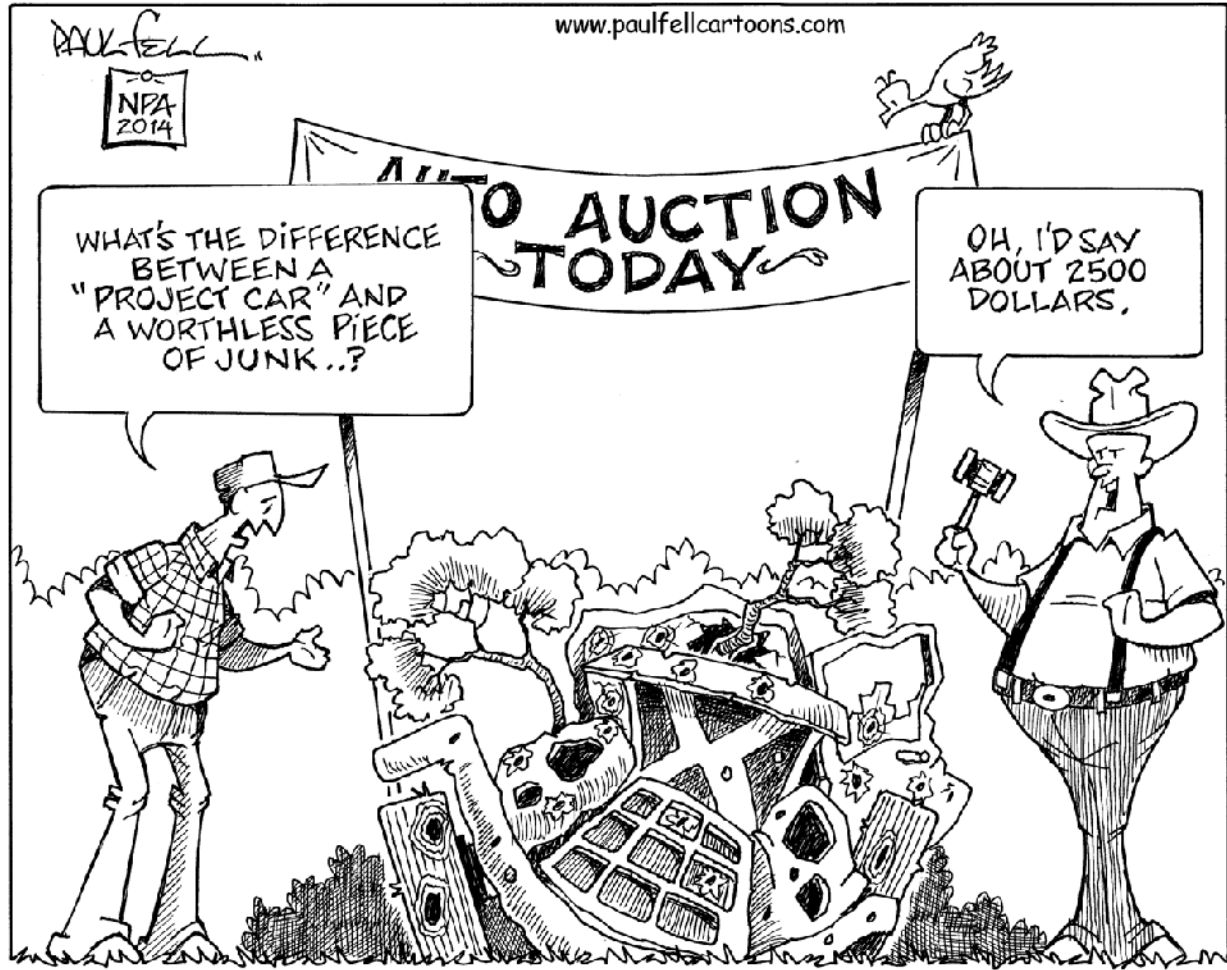

Perhaps you remember the excitement almost a year ago when the sale of cars from a recently closed Nebraska car dealership drew thousands of people and national attention to a small town - Pierce, population 1,745.

The folks at VanDerBrink Auctions in Minnesota were hired to sell a number of low-mileage cars - some with one or two miles on the odometer, a few that had never been titled nor left the dealership building. Others in the inventory of several hundred cars had been left to sit in a farm field. The story of World War II veteran Ray Lambrecht, who came home and started and ran a car dealership for 50 years, was a real attention-grabber for the media. The "new" Chevrolets from the 50s, 60s and 70s brought out the deep pockets and the big bucks. The whole thing was filmed and shown on national television.

Well, VanDerBrink is prepping for another big sale, this one on September 6 in another small town - Grant, population 1,148. The Bullock GM Dealership Auction doesn't have the low-mileage cars or the volume of used cars that the Lambrecht Chevrolet auction had, but there is an equally fascinating story about a family of entrepreneurs who ran several businesses first in Madrid, Nebraska, and then in Grant and a couple other states.

Guy Bullock started it all with a homestead near the Stinking Water Creek and the Texas Trail, which was a major cattle drive route from Texas to Ogallala, Nebraska. In addition to grazing cattle, Bullock also started a hardware store and funeral home in Madrid and then expanded to Imperial and Maywood. He had three sons and the business ventures expanded to include the sale of farm machinery, furniture, a gas station and tank wagon service, trucking, race cars and airplanes.

Guy's son Ward helped his dad with the businesses. Noel built and raced race cars and flew planes and Wayne flew planes and built an airport and started an airline in Boulder City, Nevada. Noel won the 1922 Pike's Peak Hill Climb, Class 1 (the smallest engines) in a modified Model T Ford. His 19.5 4/5 minutes was not a track record, but he beat out two Chevrolets and 2 Essex to win the race. While most of the other participants' cars were shipped via railroad to the race site, Bullock drove his Ford all the way from Perkins County, Nebraska. He later ran a tool and die shop in Los Angeles and was killed in a 1934 plane crash.

The auto bug had bitten the Bullock family and at age 19 younger brother Wayne Bullock traveled to Omaha and acquired an Oldsmobile franchise and opened a dealership in Madrid, south and east of Grant. After a couple years in business, the folks from General Motors visited Wayne and discovered he wasn't old enough to have a franchise. He convinced them that if they'd send him the cars, he would sell them. He added Chevrolet in 1936 and Pontiac and Buick in 1962.

Wayne and his family survived the Depression and the Dirty 30's by running a custom wheat combine crew from Canada to Texas. The dealership in Grant was built in 1946 - about the same time that Lambrecht was building in Pierce - and a grand opening was held in 1947. Wayne had a son, Noel, who hung around at the dealership and then came back to Grant to run the business after college. He received many sales awards, including the John DeLorean Award from Pontiac for selling the most 1965 GTO's in the country. Yep, right there in the middle of wheat land in the middle of the United States. His sons Scott and Brett were also involved. In 2002, the family ended their franchise with GM but continued selling used cars and did car restorations.

Unlike Lambrecht, the family doesn't have any leftover new inventory, but like Lambrecht they have a lot of parts that date back to the 1930s. They also have a number of rare, collectible automobile project cars waiting for a new owner to finish. They also have New Old Stock parts for GM products.

There's everything from a Model A Deluxe pickup to a rusty 1936 Ford school bus, a rare 1948 Oldsmobile Woodie station wagon and a 1959 Cadillac hearse. For car lovers, it'll be a dream event, one that will again put Nebraska in the national spotlight.

Legislative Update

Talk about special session premature

There has been a lot of talk in Lincoln about having a special session to address issues within the Department of Corrections. State Sen. Brad Ashford, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, of Omaha has asked Governor Heineman to have a special session after more concerns came to light recently.

A number of problems within the Department of Corrections have come to light thanks to the very high-profile case dealing with the release of Nikko Jenkins. Upon his release, Jenkins went on a killing spree in Omaha. We spent a considerable amount of time discussing the Department of Corrections this past session and a special investigative committee looking into prison issues was created. LR424 established the Department of Correctional Services Special Investigative Committee of the Legislature,

Legislative Update
By Dave Bloomfield
State Senator, District 17

chaired by Sen. Steve Lathrop of Omaha.

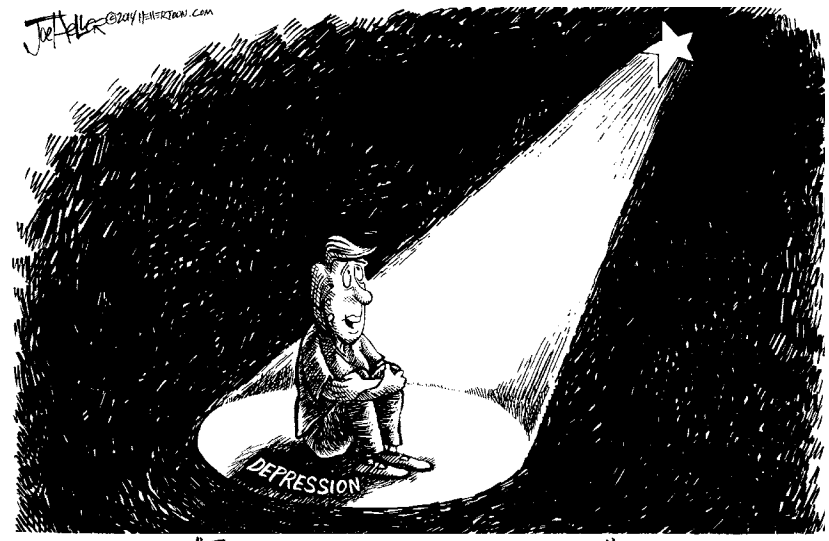

While the creation of this committee was initially in response to the Nikko Jenkins case, it is able to look at the Department of Corrections on a larger scale. It has become very clear that there are several issues that need to be dealt with within the department. Early on, the talk centered around the fact that we needed to revamp the Good Time Law, but as more and more facts are coming out, we are discovering that the problem may not be with the law, but rather with how the department was applying the law.

We have laws on the books addressing prisoner releases, the Nebraska Supreme Court has handed down rulings on the subject and it is up to the Department of Corrections to follow the laws and rulings. It appears as though this has not been happening.

In addition to the department's investigation and the legislative committee looking into the department, we now have a criminal investigation taking place. Governor Heineman and Attorney General Jon Bruning have announced that they have requested the Nebraska State Patrol pursue a criminal investigation into the miscalculations and early release of prisoners.

Having a special session is not the answer. We need to allow these three investigations to play out and once we have the findings we can make decisions on how we should proceed. Sen. Ashford has been chair of the Judiciary Committee for eight years, and if more legislation was the answer to the problems within the department, he has had ample opportunity to pursue it. At this time, there is no need for a special session which would cost taxpayers thousands of dollars. This call by Sen. Ashford could conceivably have the smell of political opportunism around it. He is, after all, running for the U. S. House of Representatives.

Lifestyle

The Wayne Herald

Community vitality connects state

Fostering the future of Nebraska is the underlying mission of the newly formed Community Vitality Initiative (CVI) launched by UNL Extension.

The Community Vitality Initiative is focused on expanding partnerships to build communities where businesses thrive, entrepreneurs have access to the resources they need and young people want to return. Currently, multi-disciplinary teams include faculty from the Departments such as Ag Economics and the Department of Child, Youth and Family Studies and will include

Faculty from all the University campus and service providers from outside of the University.

An important component of Community Vitality Initiative is to connect people with resources and resources to people. To keep the Initiative grounded we have adopted the following operating principles: Community-centered capacity building;

Educational opportunities that are relevant and research-based; Collaborative networks to address opportunities and challenges of rural people and places;

Collective impact – together we make a difference.

The initiative will expand UNL Extension's network and programming base across Nebraska, focusing on the following three outcomes: Create 21st Century Communities that Attract and Retain People;

Communities exhibit a healthy and vibrant environment where people of diverse backgrounds want to live, raise their families, work and grow their businesses;

Community institutions and infrastructure are available to support entrepreneurship and business development;

Community members are involved and/or engaged to create their vision for the future;

Leaders generate ideas, projects and goals to implement the community vision;

Develop and/or Grow Rural Nebraska Businesses;

Rural Nebraska Businesses Develop and/or Grow;

The creation and growth of rural Nebraska businesses;

The creation and retention of jobs for rural Nebraska;

An increase in the number of young people in rural Nebraska;

Business resources transferred to maximize community wealth retention;

Ag and Natural Resource Enterprises Start and Flourish in Nebraska Communities;

The expansion of agriculturally-based profit centers within the food and natural resource industry;

Food access and quality are improved through the production, processing, and marketing of local food and agricultural products;

Eco- and agri-tourism opportunities attract more people to rural Nebraska;

Resources transferred to maximize community wealth retention and sustainability;

Engage Youth and Young Adults in Rural Communities.

Youth, and young adults, will:

- Pursue career opportunities in Nebraska communities;
- Become contributing members of Nebraska communities;
- Own and/or manage more businesses in Nebraska communities;
- Communities will have a healthy structure for fostering community involvement;

Youth and adults will create a shared vision for the community's future;

Extension alone cannot achieve these goals and increased efforts will be made to build networks with communities and organizations that are interested in addressing these goals. To begin building these networks, transition leaders have been identified for each of the outcomes.

Opportunities to Engage

You can be engaged in the conversation! Have an idea to explore? Want to learn more? Please review the framework at go.unl.edu/mdoz or feel free to contact: Connie Hancock, CVI Coach/Extension Educator, chancock1@unl.edu, or one of the transition leaders:

Create 21st Century Communities that Attract and Retain People. Transition leaders: Phyllis Schoenholz, Randy Cantrell;

Develop and/or Grow Rural Nebraska Businesses. Transition leaders: Marilyn Schlake, Jessica Jones;

Engage Youth and Young Adults in Rural Communities. Transition leaders: Angela Abts, Linda Dannehl, Nancy Eberle, Dennis Kahl, Sue Pearman, Shane Potter.

Grace Lutheran Laymen's League volunteers at Orphan Grain Train

The Grace Lutheran Church Lutheran Laymen's League group from Wayne, recently volunteered some 30 hours at the Orphan Grain Train (OGT) in Norfolk. This organization depends upon dedicated volunteers for sorting and packing clothing that was donated and is shipped to many countries. The mission of OGT is to provide humanitarian relief worldwide.

"The OGT is thankful for the many, many faithful, dedicated, hard-working volunteers that serve/donate towards their mission," Grain Train officials said. Individuals of any age are welcome to assist with sorting, boxing clothing, or loading trucks at 601 W Phillip Avenue in Norfolk. The number is (402) 371-7393 to schedule a working shift. Donations are accepted for clean and gently used clothing during Monday through Friday business hours; a tax-deduction receipt is given upon request. The OGT has a "Four Stars" highest charity rating through Charity Navigator.

Methodist Church hosts bikers

On Aug. 9, members of Winside United Methodist Church hosted a rest stop for bikers from the Seven City Century Bikers group from Norfolk. Of the 160 registered bikers, 120 of them stopped for a break and refreshments of water, juice, bars, bagels and fresh fruit. Church members enjoyed visiting with the bikers and noted that one biker was from as far away as Mesa, Ariz. The group also made stops in Hoskins, Carroll, Belden, Randolph, and Osmond during their two-day trip.

Summer Fun Night planned in Concord

Concord AWANA Clubs will kick off the year with their annual Summer Fun Night, Sunday, Aug. 24 from 5:30-7:30 p.m. in the Concord Village Park.

A picnic supper will be provided as well as a "Bigger & Better" Bounce House, Kiddie Train, wagon & pony rides, kickball, corvette rides and sno-cones. Clubbers, families and area residents are welcome to attend and encouraged to bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on.

AWANA will officially begin on Wednesday, Aug. 27, with a Registration/Meet and Greet at the Evangelical Free Church, 617 Broadway in Concord. Registration will run from 7-8 p.m. for parents followed by ice cream sundaes. Clubbers will participate in games (7:30-9 p.m.) and handbook time (7:30-8 p.m.), followed by ice cream bars.

AWANA is a non-denominational organization. The Clubs feature Bible stories, Scripture memorization, games, songs and treats. Participating children earn Bible and activity awards to be displayed on Awana vests or jerseys.

The Concord Evangelical Free Church provides Clubs for ages 2-3 (Puggles), ages 4-5 (Cubbies), grades K-2 (Sparks), grades 3-4 (Truth & Training Adventure), grades 5-6 (Truth & Training Challenge) and Junior High (Trek).

Beginning Sept. 3, Awana Clubs will meet Wednesdays from 7-8:30 p.m.

For additional information, contact Becky Bloom at (402) 256-9333, Barb Oswald (402) 635-2232, Pastor Todd Thelen (402) 584-2396 or Deb Dickey (402) 375-2469.

AN UPDATE FROM DAVE

Barry was joining us this week for our update. Everyone is in the new building now. The phones are ringing and the computers are all hooked up and working. We're doing business in the new building. Not everything is totally done. We still have to stay out of a few of the areas, but it won't be long.

Where to park — probably on the road and in the east parking lot for now. We'll be striking and painting the parking lot some evening. Customers should park in the parking right east of the north door.

Barry said he doesn't get down every week, but says the building looks good. He says you'll be impressed when you come see it.

We're planning for an open house after harvest, probably in November sometime. It will be a combination open house and John Deere Days. We didn't have John Deere last winter since we didn't have a building. We'll be combining 2014-15. There will be a dance and feed and will go on into the night to celebrate.

Work continues as usual. There will be a little bit of lag for batteries and hoses, until we get them moved, but otherwise everything else is in the new building.

Everybody's in the new building and the phones are working. Call us at 402-375-3325 or if there is an emergency, the after hours number is 402-369-0255.

THANK YOU

to all who Participated in ANY WAY for the Open Class Exhibits at the Ag Hall at the Wayne County Fair. It was greatly Appreciated.

Cindy & Delores

Thank You....

We can't tell you how much we appreciate the more than 50 volunteers we had this year for 12th Annual Sweet Corn, Pulled Pork and Hamburger Feed held in Pilger, NE.

Volunteers, your time and energy spent husking & cleaning the sweet corn on Wednesday, and serving the sweet corn, grilled hamburgers, pulled pork on Wednesday evening was not easy task and we can't thank you enough. We know that without your help this would never be possible. Approximately 1,300 people were served and 3,000 ears of sweet corn were cooked and buttered. We also wish to thank all the people from Pilger and the surrounding communities for their continued support and generosity of this event. Thanks again to all that were involved and donated in anyway.

Sincerely, Ron & Barb Wolverton

A very special thank you to Dr. Sam Recob, Hillcrest Care Center and Providence Medical Center in Wayne for taking great care of LaVera. You helped us through some difficult times by going above and beyond your call of duty. Your kindness and compassion will never be forgotten. Dr. Recob, your knowledge of medicine and compassion for LaVera and our family is out of this world. We are so thankful to have you in our lives and community. We would also like to thank all of our family and friends for your support, prayers and love for LaVera during her illnesses and passing. Thank you for the memories, memorials, flowers, plants and to those who prepared the food, visited and called. We have been overwhelmed lately and apologize for not recognizing everyone that helped us clean up during and after the tornado that hit our homes and farms. A "BIG" thank you to each of you!! May God Bless Each of You!! With Love and God's Blessings,

Caring People Needed

Supplement your income and share your homemaking skills assisting families in caring for their aging loved ones. It takes a special person to be a Home Instead CAREgiver, not a special degree. We provide non-medical care to the elderly. Enjoy training support, flexible shifts that fit your life, and a job that nurtures the soul.

Please call 1-800-732-2577 or apply online at www.homeinstead.com/104
