Council debates purchase of Country Club

By CLARA OSTEN
Of the Herald

The possibility of the city of Wayne taking ownership of a portion of the Wayne Country Club was debated at considerable length during Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

The need for action stems from the possibility of grant funding being available to renovate the clubhouse at the Wayne Country Club.

Alyssa Silhacek, grant consultant from the Northeast Nebraska Economic Development District, explained that the city could apply for a 2015 Civic and Community Center Financing Fund grant. The maximum any city can receive from this fund is $375,000, and the grant requires a 50 percent match. The deadline for the grant pre-application is February, with the final deadline in April.

The Wayne Country Club is looking to expand and renovate the clubhouse, but cannot apply for the grant funding, due to the fact that one requirement of the grant is ownership by the city at the time of the preapplication

Jason Claussen, representing the Wayne Country Club, presented a drawing put together by Roy Ley on

"I don't understand why the city wouldn't move forward with applying for the grant. Where's our 'Let's Do' attitude?"

a possible plan for the renovation. He noted that the plan would add 1,700 square feet to the clubhouse, and the estimated cost of the renovation would be between $650,000 and $700,000.

He said the Country Club could deed the portion of the Country Club that clubhouse sits on to the city and then lease it back from the city.

"We (the Country Club board) want to do this without borrowing a dime or without raising fees for those who use the Country Club. We would work to raise the additional money and feel that the renovations might make for a better cash flow," Claussen said.

Amy Miller, attorney for the city, said that she had some concerns with city ownership of the golf course, both before and after the awarding of the grant, including whether the employees at the Country Club would be considered city employees and eligible for city benefits. She noted that a very detailed lease agreement would be necessary to prevent any misunderstandings in the future.

Matt Ley told the council that a city of the size of Wayne is very fortunate to have an 18-hole golf course, and improving the clubhouse would benefit the city.

"Lots of people come to Wayne to golf and the club room can be used by the public. I don't understand why the city wouldn't move forward with applying for the grant. Where's our 'Let's Do' attitude?" Ley asked.

Several concerns were raised on the ability to complete all the necessary requirements for the transfer of the property and the completion of the paperwork before the February deadline and the responsibility of the city if the additional funding is not obtained.

Also part of the discussion was the fact that the Wayne swimming pool could also apply for the grant funding, but only one grant application can be submitted in a year.

If the swimming pool were to receive grant funds, it would reduce the amount of time needed to pay back the bonds being used to build the pool.

No action was taken on applying for either grant. Additional discussion will take place at the council's next meeting.

The council also waived the three readings of an ordinance that will amend the Wayne Comprehensive Plan to include an Environmental Element-Community Sustainability Plan.

City planner Joel Hansen told the council that state statute requires all zoning jurisdictions have an Energy Element in their Comprehensive Plan.

B.J. Woehler told the council he has some concerns with the plan, including the costs associated with implementing the plan and the unrealistic expectation of becoming a zero waste community within 10 years.

Mayor Ken Chamberlain told the council that the city is required to have a plan in place, but it can be amended in the future.

Council members passed a resolution authorizing the purchase of a wheel loader through the State Bid System. The loader being purchased from Titan Machinery was bid through the Nebraska State Bid system earlier this fall. However, all bids received were rejected by the council at its Nov. 18 meeting and the purchase is now being made through the State Bid process.

"Wayne America" will continue to be part of the East Water Tower following council action on Tuesday. Specifications are being developed to inspect, touch up See COUNTRY CLUB, Page 4A

The check for $6,986.51 represented the final payment of a $35,000 loan the Haven House Board of Directors took out three years ago to purchase a house that is used as a temporary home for victims of domestic violence in the Wayne area. The payments to the home were made entirely from donations to Haven House by supporters of the organization, according to Cederlind.

For lucky lottery scratch-off winner, money smells a lot like candy canes

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

Ask Desiree Strivens what money smells like, and she will probably tell you it smells just like a peppermint candy cane.

Strivens, manager of the Casey's convenience store in Wayne, had just checked out for the day Monday when she decided to buy two $10 scratch-off lottery tickets. She purchased the Candy Cane scratch-off tickets and took them back to her apartment.

The first ticket was a non-winner, but as she scratched off the last of the spots, she couldn't believe what she was seeing – she had just won $9,999.

"I thought I was being punked," she said as she helped customers Wednesday morning. "I brought it back to the store and had one of the girls check it, and it was the big winner."

The object of the Candy Cane game is to match three similar symbols, or two symbols and a candy cane for double the matching prize value. Strivens said she bought the tickets because of their unique design.

"When you scratch it, it smells like peppermint. That was the only reason I bought it," she said, laughing. "When I realized it was the big winner, I just had to kind of sit down and absorb it. It took me a day or so to realize I'd won the money."

The winning ticket couldn't have come at a better time with Christmas right around the corner, and she's looking forward to cashing in the ticket at the Nebraska Lottery's claim center in Norfolk.

"Unfortunately, I did all my Christmas shopping on Saturday, but now I can pay off all the credit card bills," she said. "I'll save the rest and do something fun when I get some vacation time."

Ray 'Max' Lundstrom

Ray "Max" Lundstrom, 84, of Des Moines, Iowa, formerly of Wayne, died Tuesday, Dec. 9, 2014 in Des Moines.

A Celebration of Life service was held at the Urbandale United Church of Christ on Saturday, Dec 13. Memorial contributions may be made to the Alzheimer's Association and the Wayne State College Foundation. A humble and charming Midwesterner who lavished love on his grandchildren, Lundstrom was born on Oct. 1, 1930, in Little River, Kan., to Agnes and Fred Lundstrom. He was proud of his farming roots, growing up in a lively household with three mont. This has been a good camp to brothers and a sister. He later regaled his own family with stories of life on the farm in central Kansas, where he rode his horse Silver to a earned 13 merit badges at that one-room schoolhouse and regularly camp. He said he learned many plopped his fishing pole in the nearby Smoky Hill River. Max, as he liked to be called, relied on his football talent to forge his way through higher education at Hutchinson Junior College any activity, no matter what it is.

and Pittsburg State University in Kansas. He served in the Army in the Korean War. Max loved to tell the story of how an Army buddy gave up his leave so that Lundstrom, then 21, could return to Hutchinson from the war zone and marry his college sweetheart, Margaret Gowans, on

For the next 55 years, the two were inseparable, sharing a love of football, camping, excursions to national parks and church activities.

Max cared deeply about education, receiving a doctorate in education from the University of Kansas. He and Marg eventually settled in Wayne, where Lundstrom worked for 32 years as an administrator and dean of students at Wayne State College. Early on, he was a line coach for the college football team. While in Wayne, Lundstrom was active in service organizations, including the Kiwanis Club and the Wayne Presbyterian Church. Max's passion for fishing eventually became a treasure hunt as he collected odd and interesting fishing reels. A cheerful optimist, he once rolled the family camper up at dusk to the eternally over-booked Yosemite Valley to ask for a spot, only to learn that the park had just gotten a cancellation. He was an unabashed prankster and teller of tall tales, which made him howl with laughter.

Following retirement from Wayne State College in 1990, he and Marg returned to their Kansas roots, settling in Hutchinson near family. There, he continued his mediocre golfing career and could be heard exclaiming, "Oh, corn!" when things went awry. The couple relocated to Des Moines just prior to Marg's death in 2006. Despite living with Alzheimer 's disease, Max never lost his kind and generous spirit, twinkling eyes and deep belly laugh that delighted his family and caregivers.

Survivors include his children, Elaine Lundstrom (David Yurdin) of Urbandale, Iowa, and Marjie Lundstrom (Sam Stanton) of Carmichael, Calif.; grandchildren, Leah and Evan Lundstrom-Yurdin of Urbandale and West Des Moines, Nick and Riley Stanton of Carmichael; brother Cecil Lundstrom of Hutchinson; foreign exchange-student daughter, Rosa Mery Lesh (Kurt) of Colorado Springs, and their children, Kevin (Caitlyn) and Jennifer Lesh.

"Scouting has taught me to be a better athlete by learning how to set goals and work together as a team. Scouting has taught me to be a better student by achieving various merit badges that are similar to my school work. I like to do many activities including cross country, basketball, and varsity band. My favorite subject in school is English because I really enjoy reading."

Liska plans to attend college, although he is not entirely certain of his area of study.

"I don't have real plans yet, but the area of biology and environmental science is interesting. I might major in zoology or herpetology which is the study of reptiles and amphibians. When Troop 174 attended Sea Base in 2013, I really liked the marine biology, too. Therefore, I have an alternative to herpetology if my interests change."

State deer harvest is up slightly

The Nebraska deer harvest is up slightly from 2013. As of Dec. 5, 44,379 deer have been taken in all seasons, compared to 42,562 by the same date last year.

The biggest change from last year is the mule deer buck harvest, which is up by 575 animals (9 percent). Whitetail antlerless harvest has increased by 944 (8 percent), and whitetail buck harvest is up 327 (1 percent). The mule deer antlerless harvest is down 14 (1

"The deer harvest is better than expected," said Kit Hams, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. "As big game program manager, it's nice to see an increase in mule deer buck harvest, too."

The hunter success rate is 37 percent, compared to 35 percent last year. Success on Keya Paha Unit firearm permits dropped from 62 percent in 2013 to 53 percent this year. That area was hit hard by snow during the firearm season, which likely reduced success. Permits with significant reduction in whitetail harvest are the Buffalo, Platte, Republican and Sandhills units, where antlerless whitetail bonus tags were removed in 2014. Harvest success in five permit types remained about the same (plus or minus 1 percent) and success in 10 permit types increased.

Archery season opened Sept. 1 and continues through Dec. 31. Muzzleloader season ends Dec. 31, while the Late Antlerless season is Jan. 1-15, 2015.

Answering small business questions

the business may be worth? -

Business valuation is not an exact science. Most sellers and buyers usually have very large variations in determining the value or sales price of an established business. I have had clients who brought a stack of papers itemizing every tangible item the seller is going to sell with the business, termining the value, and adding them up to determine a sales price. The problem with this method is that it does not consider all of the value or the devalue of non-tangible items such as the brand name, the established systems and processes, reputation, long term contracts whether good or bad, and good or bad debt, not to mention costs associated with the transition. The primary objective when valuing a business is to use a set of universal standards. You will find many professionals who will give you their opinion on the value of a business, but the variations on how they are determining this value are greatly different. Therefore, three professional associations have comprised a set of standards to follow when valuing a privately held business. These generally accepted standards are set by the National Association of Certified Valuators and Analysts (NACVA), The Institute of Business Appraisers (IBA), and the American Society of Appraisers (ASA). If a professional is credentialed through one or all of these organizations then a potential buyer or seller can insure that a standard of value was used in determining the value allowing both

Margin is the difference between the price you are charging and cost of the product being sold. Short answer, raising your prices may be required. Second, if prices are aligned with the market, I would then take a serious look at your systems and procedures for running the business. What does that mean? That move requirements and how much means, if you personally are running around doing everything, your employees may not have a clear system to follow. Assuming you ous amount that is a real concern have employees, a system may be required to allow the employees to understand how to serve customers consistently and more efficiently while allowing the restaurant to tential business. If for example, you accept more customers. If you find yourself in the kitchen making everything, you need to have a system in place for a cook to follow freeing up your time to run the business. ## Varley promoted, Jones is hired at F&M Bank

Tim Keller, President of F&M Bank of Wayne, has announced the promotion of Mike Varley to the position of vice president and the hiring of Matt Jones as a vice president at the bank.

Varley was promoted during the bank's November board meeting and Jones was elected during the December board meeting.

Varley grew up in Wayne and attended Wayne High School, graduating in 2000. He attended Wayne State College and began working at F&M Bank part-time in January of 2001 while he was a college student.

Varley graduated from Wayne State College in 2005 and began working full-time at F&M Bank after graduation. He was in charge of the operations of the bank from 2005 until 2011. In 2011, he was promoted to assistant vice president and began working in the lending department.

Varley married Kayla Hahn in 2010. She is employed as a high school special education teacher at Wayne High School. The couple has a daughter, Kinzly, who is 20 months old, and is expecting a baby ooy in March.

Kevan Weldon is more than just a custodian to studentathletes at Wayne State College. He's a fan, a buddy and a shoulder to lean on for the young men and women wearing the Wildcat Black and Yellow.

No doubt about it: Weldon is a BMOC

In the movies and on TV, it always seems the BMOC - Big Man On Campus – is the All-American quarterback or some other super-

At Wayne State College, if you ask a lot of the athletes who have worn the Black and Yellow over the years, they will tell you the BMOC is somebody you probably wouldn't expect, somebody who doesn't fit the profile of an all-world personality who exudes the kind of charisma of the most popular guy in the build-

He's the guy who, as a freshman at Wayne State College in 1997, spent pretty much every free moment of the first semester in his dorm room. The same guy who, after he graduated, would come back just to watch the Wildcats. The same guy who, when he decided he needed to get sober, left the big city to return home and be a positive role model for the young men and women who sport the Wildcat

He's not the stud athlete, or even the best-dressed "man about town" that everybody seems to gravitate toward.

He is – brace yourselves – the custodian.

Fans at Wildcat basketball games will always see Kevan Weldon pushing the broom on the floor during halftime of the basketball games in Rice Auditorium, but he's much more than that to a lot of the young men and women who represent Wayne State in the athletic arena.

Weldon came to Wayne from Genoa and admits to being a homebody that first semester on campus. "I just sat in my room a lot the first semester," he said.

It took a meeting with J.W. Scott, then the manager of the men's basketball team for coach Greg Mc-Dermott, to help Weldon come out of his shell and discover something that has become such a big part of his life today.

"He was working in the cafeteria and he said the men's basketball team is pretty good and I should come to a game," Weldon said.

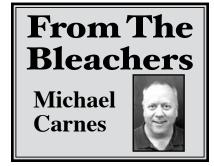

Later, he would become friends with Wildcat men's basketball player Kevin Lingenfelter, whose girlfriend was in Pile Hall, where he worked the front desk. Friendships with other athletes developed as a result, and Weldon became something of an extended family member to a lot of Wildcat alumni.

After getting his criminal justice degree, Weldon would come back to Wayne with the Gassell family. Son Tim was a freshman on the basketball team and daughter Nicole was being recruited to play at Wayne

"I remember getting a picture with (McDermott) after they won the conference title against Duluth up in St. Paul, and then we got on the bus and went to Denver for Regionals," he said. "The parents, the players . . . a lot of them were just like family and I still stay in touch with a lot of them."

Those relationships he developed as a student may have helped to save his life almost a decade later when he came back to town.

Weldon had a run-in with the law while living in Omaha, and he knew the DUI he got in the summer of 2005 was a signal that he needed to do something with his life.

"On Oct. 17, 2005, I said that this is it and I can't take anymore, so I checked into outpatient (rehab) and would go after work a few days a week," he said. "After that, I talked with Bill Dickey and Kevin Armstrong and Eric Henderson and told them I needed to get away from Omaha, and they told me I should move back to Wayne."

He took their advice and came back to town later that year, and now the 48-year-old works as the custodian at Rice Auditorium and the Student Rec Center, where he talks with the student-athletes on a regular basis.

"A lot of them are a long ways from home. I'm their parents' age, but I'm still voung at heart and I understand a lot of the challenges life brings," he said. "Sometimes, they just need a handshake or a hug or somebody to lean on for support."

And they more than return the favor. I mean – how many 48-yearold guys do you know who can get a bunch of college athletes to show up to his apartment for a party?

And this isn't your textbook, wildand-crazy, people-hanging-fromthe-balcony kind of party - but a sobriety party.

"Every year, I have a sobriety gettogether and the baseball, basketball, volleyball kids, they all come over and help me celebrate," he said. "The kids are why I do what I do and why I enjoy coming to work every day, and I want to be a positive role model and somebody that they can look up to."

His dedication is hard to question - he's been sober for more than eight years now, and it's not out of Wayne State game when they play on the road.

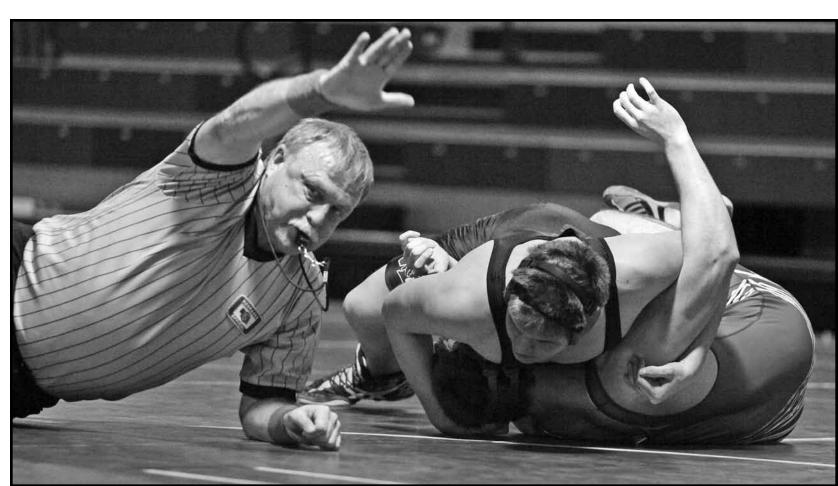

He's so much a fan of these kids, that he actually traveled last season in a blizzard (with the parents of one of the players) to Minot and Bismarck, N.D.

"They really appreciated seeing somebody show up who is a fan and just loves the team," he said. "I just like being supportive and help peo-

I've had the pleasure of getting to know "Big Kev" over the last five years, and you'll not run across a friendlier guy on campus. And his status as THE guy reaches beyond our community - he and I went to a Creighton basketball game last year and saw Doug McDermott torch the opposition for a gazillion points.

After the game, we tried to make eye contact with Greg as he shook hands with the opposing team, and he turned and waved in our direction - smiling and pointing squarely at Big Kev.

Now THAT'S a BMOC.

STANTON - Sometimes, it's not how many medalists you finish with so much as where they finish that determines your final team stand-

The Wakefield wrestlers came away with just three medalists, but still finished a solid sixth out of 17 teams at the Stanton Invitational as all three reached the champion-

Brothers Caleb and Cody Thomas both earned first-place efforts to highlight the area showing at Stanton High School. Caleb Thomas won a tight 2-1 decision over Nick Arlt of Oakland-Craig to take top honors at 160 pounds, while younger brother Cody was a 4-2 winner over Hunter Randles of Madison to step up to the top of the podium at 182 pounds.

The elder Thomas' match was one of the highlights of the final round. Thomas was in the down position in the second period, but scrambled to get a reversal on Arlt to take the lead. He did allow an escape, but neither wrestler could score from there and Thomas went on to get

Winside teams stung by Bees

The Bloomfield boys ran past Winside in Lewis and Clark Conference action Friday night, as the Bees trounced the Wildcats 85-34.

Bloomfield got out to a big lead early and held a 44-20 advantage at intermission. They came out on fire in the second half, racking up 30 points and cruising to the easy win from there.

JaShaun Vyborny was the only Wildcat in double figures, finishing with 11 points. Bryce Meis added nine, Brandon Watters put in five, Dylan Brogren had four, Caleb Kampa scored three and Kieth Mundil had two.

In girls action, Bloomfield was a 55-22 winner over the Lady Wildcats. Winside highlights and statistics were not available at press

The Wayne State men's basketball team played two conference opponents tough over the weekend, but are still looking for their first win in Northern Sun Conference play this season.

On Friday, the Wildcats trailed by 13 midway through the second half, but whittled that lead down to one possession before visiting Minnesota Crookston hit some key shots down the stretch to come away with a 61-57 win at Rice Auditorium.

The visiting Golden Eagles used a 10-2 run to take their biggest lead of the half at 24-16 with 7:55 to go, but Wayne State answered with a nice run of their own. Kendall Jacks' layup capped a 13-2 rally that gave Wayne State a 29-26 edge with 3:28 to go in the first half.

Crookston bounced back and forged a 30-30 tie at the half, then went on a 15-4 run to start the second half and take a 45-34 advantage with 14:04 left.

The Golden Eagles led by 13 with just over 7 1/2 minutes to go when Wayne State made its last big rally. They cut the lead down to three points at 56-53 when Jamie Pearson drilled a 3-pointer from the left wing with 1:46 to go, making it a one-possession contest.

Crookston worked the clock and found an opening with time winding down on the shot clock, as Derrick Redd drilled a three from the right corner with about 1:10 left and the Wildcats would get no closer than four after that.

Patrick Kurth led the Wildcats with 14 points, eight rebounds and a career-high four blocked shots, while Joel Heesch had 13 points, seven rebounds and five assists. Pearson also got into double figures

DEBTORS PRISON

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

What I want from Santa Claus is . . .

Dear Santa.

I know you've been keeping tabs on us, taking notes and everything. And I'll be the first to admit, I've strayed from the straight and narrow more times in 48 years, seven months and one day than I can even begin

All of that being said, I'm going to keep my "want" list very short for you this Christmas season. In fact, when it comes right down to it, the one item on the list won't even take up much space in your bag of goodies. You could probably even slip it under the front door and save yourself the potential health hazard of trying fit your rotundness in my chimney.

All I want for Christmas is this – Peace.

You know – that feeling that we used to share as a semi-civilized society back in the days before things like greed, lust, power, corruption, violence, war, drugs, booze, Internet porn, steroids, Congress and Justin Bieber started screwing up the kind of life we all deserve to live?

Yeah, that thing – just a little peace.

Quite frankly, I'm sick and tired of all the crap that's going on in the world today. I got rid of cable and/or satellite TV because all the news programs keep overhyping, overselling, or otherwise outright lying about everything from politics to gang violence to terrorism in lands a world away. There are too many morons, passing themselves off as TV journalists, spinning the truth in such a vile and disgusting manner that I sometimes wonder if I should take a shower and start working on a new career with a more noble service - unfortunately, I can't talk fast enough, nor do I have the outlandish wardrobe that is required of a good back-alley pimp.

I'm tired of all the politicians who claim to "represent" us when I know full well that no big-name member of either of the two major political parties could spell "ethics" if you spotted them the first five letters. Some say that voting for one party or the other is the lesser of two evils. How is that possible, when BOTH parties are made up of the same slimeballs who think of nothing more than doing whatever benefits them personally, financially, carnally or whatever other "-ally" best suits them?

I'm tired of the gang-bangers, the drug lords, the rapists, the sex traffickers, the welfare cheats and all the other protoplasmic hiccups that have soiled the American Way that we, our fathers, grandfathers and forefathers all worked so hard for. Millions have died so that we can enjoy the freedoms we have today – and then the scum of the earth has to come along and screw everything up for us and our children and our grandchildren (including the one I'm looking forward to seeing in a few months).

When you hit the house with my goodies, my dear Santa, I would greatly appreciate it if you'd bring the special sack - the one where you take all the broken stuff back to your shop for the elves (who, I'm assuming, aren't teenage sweat-shop workers and are paid a good union wage with full benefits and a rock-solid IRA) – and take all of the aforementioned garbage off our hands. Fix it if you'd like, but don't be in a rush.

After all – there are children in this world who have been extra-nice this year. And my dog is over and above when it comes to being on the good side of the ledger. Give them that bright and shiny toy you were saving for me in the event that I ever put a solid year of nice behavior together although we both know that, if it hasn't happened by now, it never will.

Merry Christmas, Santa! Your slightly rebellious friend,

P.S. – Don't forget to avoid the cookies in Denver or Tacoma. After all – a buzzed Rudolph is a stoned Rudolph.

Thanks from Museum Friends

The Wayne County museum Friends would like to thank everyone who purchased tickets and attended this year's Holiday Gala at the museum. It was a very enjoyable evening.

We thank those who contributed monetarily or by assisting in any way to the success of the evening. This includes our room decorators – Jill Belt, Chele Simon Meisenbach, members of the John G. Neihardt chapter of The Questers, and members of the Museum Friends committee. And thank you to Ken Jorgensen of The Max and Bill Melena of The White Dog for donating beer for the evening. A big thank you goes to Randy Petersen of The Diamond Center for his continued support of the museum by donating a pair of diamond earrings for our raffle. And another thanks goes to everyone who purchased tickets. The winner was Ginny Otte of Wayne.

Because of the generosity of the Wayne community, we were able to raise $4,800 for the museum. These funds will be used to refurbish and add display cabinets to the military room. The Historical Society is still accepting donations, which can be sent to P.O. Box 85, Wayne, Neb., 68787. With your help, our museum will continue to be a great asset to our community.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to everyone.

More problems in corrections

TRADITIONAL JAIL

SYSTEM BELONG.

By J.L. SCHMIDT Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Just when you thought you'd read everything there was to write about problems with the Nebraska prison system, new revelations indicate a nagging intrusion from the governor's office.

Parole Board Chairwoman Esther Casmer of Omaha has told a special legislative committee investigating the scandal-plagued Department of Corrections that she felt threatened by comments from Gov. Dave Heineman's Chief of Staff Larry Bare. Both Heineman and Bare deny pressuring the Nebraska Parole Board to release unqualified - and sometimes violent – prisoners to relieve overcrowding.

Casmer's allegations were corroborated by retired board member James Pearson of Lincoln, a former state trooper. Both said that former corrections director Bob Houston would visit Casmer's office frequently and that he indicated he was visiting with Bare daily. Bare also met with Casmer and Pearson at least once. Nebraska's prisons have long been overcrowded and the state could be forced by the United States Justice Department to build more rooms to accommodate the overload. The state could also be sued by any number of inmates on a basis of cruel and unusual punish-

For his part, Bare has said he never threatened Casmer with losing her job if a parolee messes up and gets arrested and imprisoned again. He said he urged the board to work more efficiently. But Casmer claimed that Bare made it clear that the board was not paroling enough prisoners. As a result, prisoners were often let go before they had completed their rehabilitation. In some cases, prison rules were changed or overlooked to get more inmates out the door.

The whole thing drew public attention earlier this year when it Joe Kelly concluded that there was won't be back. Here's hoping somewas learned that prison officials had mistakenly miscalculated sentences of several hundred inmates and released them from custody too soon. That was followed with revelations that inmate Nikko Jenkins was denied the mental health treatment he repeatedly sought and was paroled anyway. He is awaiting sentencing on a conviction that he killed four people in Omaha within days of his release. Several highranking prison officials retired rather than being fired for the mess.

Legislative Update

No doubt - Nebraskans are overtaxed

From property taxes, income taxes, sales taxes, road use taxes, tax credits and tax incentives there are a lot of taxes we can talk about. All of these and I haven't even mentioned fees yet.

What this boils down to is that Nebraskans are overtaxed. While taxes have been a main topic of discussion over the last few years, I would say little has been done to move towards good solid reform. This week was another one of those weeks where the talk of tax reforms took center stage. On Thurs-

Taxes, taxes and more taxes. day, the Legislative Performance Audit Committee released a report looking at the tax incentive evaluation process. LR444 created The Tax Incentive Evaluation Committee as a result of questions raised in a 2013 Legislative Performance Audit Committee audit of the various tax incentive programs.

> Nebraska currently has six primary tax incentive programs: the Nebraska Advantage Act, the Nebraska Advantage Rural Development Act, the Nebraska Advantage Microenterprise Tax Credit Act, the Nebraska Advantage Research and Development Act, the Beginning Farmer Tax Credit Act and, the Angel Investment Credit Act. These six programs provided $175 million in tax refunds/credits in 2012 and 2013 alone. There is also a list of sales tax exemptions, such as food, manufacturing inputs, agriculture crop inputs (seed, fertilizer, etc.) and last year we took the sales tax off of farm machine parts and repairs. There is also a property tax credit which is way too small.

While there is value to all of these programs, the report emphasized the need to have specific and measurable goals for each of them. As with anything, significant benefits often come with significant costs. We need to make sure that these incentives are providing the state with the most for your money.

Recommendations from the committee suggest the following items be considered. 1) The cost of the program to the state. This includes administrative expenses, costs as- 471-2716 or e-mail dbloomfield@leg. sociated with application and com- ne.gov.

benefits are seen by the state as a result of tax revenue from jobs that are created by the program. 3) How many jobs are created versus how many there would have been without the incentives. 4) What is the quality of the jobs created, looking at the pay and benefits. 5) It suggests looking at the investments and innovations made by the companies receiving incentives. Additionally, what is the longevity of the business in the state compared to similar businesses that do not receive the incentives. 6) What is the job creation in the rural parts of the

The report suggests reviewing each of the programs on a three-year cycle. It also encourages that the review be done by legislative fiscal analysts and auditors and input from the chair or members of the Revenue Committee with the Legislative Performance Audit Committee having oversight.

There are definite benefits to these programs, but we need to be able to evaluate them and insure that the money spent on them is doing what it was intended to do. We need to be responsible wards of your tax dollars, and if programs are not performing we need to be aware of it so changes can be made. I think this review was long overdue and that we will be joining the 11 other states that since 2012 have improved their own methods for evaluating tax incentive programs. The whole thing gets rather complicated, but I still think President Reagan had it right when he said "It's not that people are taxed too little, it's that the government spends too much." We must have money to run the state, the question is, and has been, how best to do that.

eet Lorie, one of our hometown people

When you're looking to set up a trust, you want to have trust in the person doing the work. That's where the head of our Trust Department comes in: Lorie Bebee. Originally from Laurel, Lorie's been with State Nebraska Bank & Trust for over 40 years so she knows nearly everyone who walks through our door. When she's not managing trusts or IRAs, you'll catch her bowling or golfing in Wayne, and if you're lucky, she'll even be on your team.

Want to learn more about trusts or even golf, then stop in to see Lorie today. She's one of our hometown people, helping each other grow. That's what it's all about.

How to reduce holiday stress

Humbug! If you are like most people, your reactions through the holiday season fall somewhere between Santa and Scrooge. It is hard to make it through the coming days and weeks without some stress and frustration.

Here are some suggestions about how to cope with holiday stress:

You may need to reflect on why

'Tis the Season to Be Jolly; Bah, you are celebrating and what your priorities are. When asked what they like best about the holidays, people give the following: celebrating a religious holiday; spending time with family and friends; cooking special foods and entertaining; buying and giving gifts; decorating surroundings; giving to charities and spreading goodwill; finding time to relax and get away. All of these may be important to you and your family but you need to decide which are most important. Getting rid of or reducing what you think you should do will help you determine your priorities. Then put the majority of your time and resources towards the most important things.

A big stressor for many people is gift exchanges. For many there is genuine pleasure in gift giving, but it can also mean a financial burden, not to mention the commercialism that surrounds the holidays.

Start with a plan. Let people know early what your plans are for giving gifts. Have a budget and be realistic about what you can and cannot do. Keep track of everything you spend including gift wrapping, shipping charges, cards, etc. Stay within your budget so you will not have holiday stress hangover.

Ranking high on the holiday stress list is spending time with family and friends. The stress does not come from lack of desire to do this but the difficulty in getting together. Families are more separated than in the past. Maneuvering travel arrangements - including the cost, finding vacation time, weather conditions and sharing visits with various family members - can make getting together on the special day a real stressor. And then, there is always the chance that someone will become sick and plans will need to

Wishing things were like they used to be or like you want them to be will not reduce holiday stress. One thing families can do is find new traditions and new ways to celebrate. Talk to all family members to see what they would like to do. Try new things but if they do not work out, don't fret. Just try something different next year.

Remember, as much as things change they stay the same. Keep what is best from the past and strive to enhance the future. The past is day is a gift - that's why we call it and Owen Frideres. he "present." Wishing you and your family a contented holiday season! Resources: Robinson, J. & Coppock Staeheli, J. (1991). Unplug the Christmas Machine. New York: William Morrow & Co. ## Don't let the holidays get your tinsel in a tangle

The holiday season is a time for celebration and happiness. Research shows that the number of poisoning incidents involving children rises during the holiday season. During the hustle and bustle of the holidays it is easy to overlook items in the home that could cause

The Nebraska Poison Center would like to offer a few tips on how to make this "the most wonderful time of the year."

- Visiting relatives may bring their medications. Over 50 percent of the calls to the Poison Center involve medications. NEVER leave medications on a nightstand - make sure to store these up and out of

- Toys may contain disc batteries. If swallowed they can become lodged and cause serious injury or death if not removed. They may be found in games, watches, remotes and musical greeting cards. Also, avoid purchasing toys that contain magnets.

- Alcohol is found in holiday drinks and in gifts such as perfume and cologne. It is important to clean up immediately following all holiday parties. Remove all items that may contain alcohol and keep out of reach of small children. Remember to empty all ashtrays – it only takes a few cigarette butts to send a child to the Lamp oil in candle lamps is frequently used this time of year. These fuels look like pretty beverages to small children but can cause serious consequences if swallowed. Aroma and fragrance oils commonly used during holidays smell good and attract small children, but can cause vomiting and seizures in large amounts.

- Keep small children and animals away from seasonal plants such as mistletoe, holly berries, yew plants and poinsettias. Poinsettias are not the fatal poison that they were once believed to be, but in large amounts can cause upset stomach.

- Be mindful of icicles or tinsel as both can be a choking hazard if swallowed. Snow sprays help with holiday décor, but the pressurized container may cause eye damage if sprayed directly in the eye.

- Remember your pets this holiday season. Chocolate, raisins, grapes and some nuts can be very toxic to animals.

Prevention is the best treatment for poisonings. The Nebraska Poison Center offers tips on holiday safety and poison prevention as a free community service to the public. If you have questions, contact the Nebraska Poison Center at (800) 222-1222.

Grace Lutheran to host Blue Christmas service Dec. 22

A Service of the Longest Night (Blue Christmas) will be held at Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne on Monday, Dec. 22 at 7 p.m.

The church is located at the corner of Ninth and Logan streets.

Following the service, there will be snacks and fellowship time.

The service, focusing on the promises of God, is more quiet and meditative than traditional Christmas Services. There is a time during the service when anyone can light a remembrance light in memory of a loved one or other item of sorrow, and at the conclusion of the service, home-knitted prayer shawls are given as gifts.

For those who have suffered the loss of a loved one or other loss, the words of Elvis Presley's classic "Blue Christmas" express a very real pain that is felt during a season marked by joy and celebration. The feeling of loss, during the time when the world says "to celebrate and party", makes the season extra difficult for many, and that is why the Stephen Ministers of Grace are sponsoring this seventh Blue Christmas Service.

The service this year may have special significance to anyone who suffered the loss of home, business, or injury due to the second year in a row that tornados brought significant destruction to the Wayne area.

Alison Van Eenennaam, a Cooperative Extension specialist in animal genomics and biotechnology in the Department of Animal Science at University of California, Davis, will speak at 7 p.m. at the Nebraska Innovation Campus conference center, 2021 Transformation Dr.

The title of Van Eenennaam's talk is "Genetically Modified Animals: The Facts, the Fear Mongering and the Future."

The first genetically engineered animals were produced almost 30 years ago, although to date no genetically engineered food animal has come to market, Van Eenennaam said. A comprehensive regulatory evaluation is required for such animals, triggered by the use of recombinant DNA technology in their development.

All required regulatory studies for the fast-growing "AquAdvantage" Atlantic salmon, the first food animal to undergo regulatory review, were completed in 2009. However, the application has been lingering in regulatory limbo for more than four years awaiting a decision

Van Eenennaam received a bachelor of agricultural science degree from the University of Melbourne in Australia, and both a master's in animal science, and a PhD in genetics from UC Davis.

Van Eenennaam particularly works with the beef cattle industry and has developed a variety of extension programming for producers on topics ranging from markerassisted and whole-genome enabled selection. She is currently working on several active USDA NIFA beef cattle genomics grants.

Selecting corn hybrids for silage By RUTH VONDEROHE UNL Extension Educator

Choosing the right corn hybrid to plant for silage can be tricky. You know what to look for when choosing corn hybrids for grain yield, standability, maturity, and pest resistance, but what should you look for in silage?

Of course, yield is very important both grain yield and forage yield. But since we feed whole plant silage hybrids based on forage quality.

to livestock, forage quality or feed value of the silage is especially important.

Historically, we thought high grain hybrids would produce the best silage, but now we know we were wrong. Characteristics good for grain, like fast kernel drying and hard texture, are bad for silage. Fortunately, genetic advances by corn breeders have helped improve silage feed value so you can select quality traits, primarily look for high starch digestibility and high NDF digestibility. Starch digestibility is affected by many factors, but hybrids with soft kernel texture and slow kernel drying tend to digest easier and preserve better.

High fiber digestibility also comes from several traits. One trait is called brown midrib. It helps livestock on high silage diets perform better, although brown midrib hy-

When comparing silage forage brids tend to yield less and lodge more than regular hybrids. Regardless of source, though, high fiber digestibility is desired.

> If you feed silage to high performing livestock, it may be profitable to sacrifice some yield for higher quality. If you're planning to plant corn for silage, select for the best traits for the intended use.

Remembering Green Stamps

Does anyone remember Green Stamps? And Blue, and maybe some Red ones? We observed Thanksgiving with my brother and his wife three years ago. There, we heard the story of their engagement for

It was understood that they would marry, from the time they started dating in high school. One year out, she was working in Lincoln, and he was a new Navy man, stationed in Washington.

He had a week's leave in June, and they decided he would come home, they would tie the knot, and she would go back with him. It didn't give her mother much time to make the dress, but she did it! I think my Mom made some of the other dresses

Well, since they had not been formally engaged, they drove to Lincoln to buy the rings, including a diamond. We learned they bought it at Gold's, because "they gave green stamps, and we used them to get a toaster!" Such common sense!

We all got a laugh out of that, and reminisced about how we saved those stamps, and put them in books, and took them to the redemption place. One of my high working years in that redemption store in York.

By: Pat Meierhenry

The lady at our church who has headed the daycare there since its inception retired this spring. Then, to make it official, they moved from their house to a townhome. Guess what they found when packing? Thirty-seven books of green on the little squares. I'm just as glad stamps! And, guess what? They can we don't get them anymore. But it's school friends spent her entire still be redeemed. If you get on line, been fun talking about them!

you can find lots of information on them; plus, how they can still be redeemed, even by companies like Barnes and Noble, and LLBean. They now go by points, and it takes a lot of them, but you can still use

I thought that was amazing! Not only did Gold's give green stamps, Miller and Paine, down the street on O Street, gave blue ones. Some local stores had their own; often, they were red. We faithfully collected them all, and pasted them in the little books. I used some to get my Betty Crocker cook book when I knew I was marrying a farmer.

Now, those cook books are collector's items. Everyone in our book club owns either that one, or the Better Homes and Gardens one. And we still use them, and we won't give them up. They will be a legacy to our daughters.

And keeping those darned stamps was kind of a pain. You could tell folks like me from the Type A personalities by the way they put their stamps into the books; the latter had to have them perfectly lined up

Management info for farmers

I hope the farm bill meetings helped out a little. Here is some more management information available for farmers.

The UNL Crop Production Budgets released this week by Nebraska Extension offer the chance to examine and compare crop production costs for 14 crops and 69 systems. Developed by a team of ag economists, crop production, and pest management specialists, the budgets provide a framework for decision-making. They are provided in both PDF and Excel formats.

No two farmers will manage their farms the same way and no two farms will have the same production costs. These cost-only budgets are representative of typical systems, so don't get too worried if they are different from yours.

The Excel version of each budget allows you to input numbers specific to your operation to better approximate your costs. They also allow for would affect total production costs. Budgets for 2014 are also available for reference. In reviewing this year's budgets, no one cost category was significantly up or significantly

Engler scholarship applications are due

Students passionate about becoming an entrepreneur can now apply for scholarships to the Engler Entrepreneurship Program at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Incoming and current UNL students are eligible to apply.

Scholarships are awarded annually to Engler Agribusiness Entrepreneurship students ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 with some awards renewable up to three years dependent on student performance, said the program's director, Tom Field.

To apply, students must complete an application and series of essay questions at engler.unl.edu. Applications are due by Feb. 15.

The authors use an average machine age of 5 years for many implements, 10 years for irrigation equipment to do their calculations. If you assume the machine is newer (for example, five years old), it has more depreciation and fewer repairs than one that's 15 years old.

In one example, the cost per bushel for irrigated corn in rotation with soybeans in a no-till system is $4.15 per bushel. This cost includes opportunity and depreciation costs in addition to the cost of purchased inputs. The per bushel cost considering only cash costs is $2.38 per bushel. This compares to $3.56 per bushel total and $2.17 per bushel cash cost to produce no-till dryland

Dry land soybeans are also cheaper to produce than irrigated soybeans. The total cost per bushel for irrigated, no-till soybeans is $11.14 per bushel compared to $8.63 for dryland. The cash costs are $5.12
