Wayne Community Schools will have their state aid reduced by approximately $1.7 million for the 2015-2016 school year. Early estimates indicate the school will receive only $37,000 for the next

This information was presented to members of the Wayne Community Schools Board of Education during the regular meeting on Superintendent Mark Lenihan shared information with the board on how state aid is calculated and noted that high ag land valuations have had a negative impact on the amount of state aid the district will receive next year due to the equalization formula set forth by the state legislature.

Board member Ken Jorgensen said he was upset with legislators in Lincoln, noting, "Those in Lincoln are forcing local communities to raise their levies. Sixty-four percent of districts in the state will have to raise taxes on their constituents. We (Wayne Community Schools) do a good job of managing our money and we are getting Lenihan said the district will have to shift resources to make up for the loss of state aid and "Next year will be a little more difficult. We are cutting back and making only essential purchases. We have only two projects planned for this summer – the Early Learning Center and the track building project."

Lenihan also told the board that the district will need to watch its cash flow, but that there are no plans for cuts in any staff posi-

Also being planned is a 5K Devil Dash/1 mile Fun Run on May 30 to showcase the work that has been done on the Kern Track.

The board will conduct a retreat/work session on Monday, March 30 with the next regular meeting scheduled Monday, April 13.

Love of Hawkeyes lands local resident on Big Ten Network

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

It's not easy being an Iowa Hawkeye fan while living deep in the neart of Husker Nation. Nobody knows this more than Adam Dobbins, who will be the subject of a segment of the "Big Ten Treasure Hunter" program this summer on the Big Ten Network.

Dobbins took the opportunity to have some fun while showing off his massive display of Iowa Hawkeyes memorabilia to John Arcand, host of the show, during a recent taping at the Dobbins' house in Wayne for the 30-minute program, which will begin airing its new season prior to the start of the 2015 college football

Dobbins, 33, has been a fan of the Black and Gold for as long as he can remember. The Des Moines native received his first piece of Iowa fans and were I-Club members, and they would take me to the games," he said. "Every Christmas and birthday, my grandma would get me Iowa clothes and memorabilia and I really cherished those items, even as a little boy. I just kept adding those things to my collection and became a Hawkeyes fan, thanks to my grand-

To say Dobbins has a passion for Hawkeye football would be an epic understatement.

His man-cave in the basement is awash in all things Iowa. Even before you get to the memorabilia, you are graced with photos of Dobbins with friends and family, including his wife, Melissa, from Iowa football tailgate parties, games and of sporting events they have attended over the years, leaving no doubt where his allegiance lies. The framed photos line the walls of the stairway heading down into Dobbins' "Hawkeye Man Cave."

Now, the group, known in Wayne as the Logan Creek Chapter of Pheasants Forever, is celebrating a quarter century of work to establish and maintain habitat for all animals. Nationally, Pheasants Forever (PF) has been in existence since 1982 and Ne-are still active with the group.

Matthes, Schroeder Brummond, who joined shortly after the group formed, met recently to share information about the group's impact on northeast Nebraska, as well as reminisce about

"Our first habitat activity was giving seeds for food plots. We raised money by raffling off a shot gun. We probably had 25-30 people in attendance," Schroeder said.

In 1991, the group's first banquet was held at the National Guard Armory and more than 125 people attended. That year, $1,500 was raised.

"In our second year, we raised $3,500 and were very excited. However, the Pheasants Forever state biologist told us, 'that's a good start' so we kept moving forward," Matthes

City unveils two new natural gas vehicles

City of Wayne officials and staff, members of the Wayne Green Team and several representatives of organizations responsible for acquiring two pickups fueled by compressed natural gas took part in a ribbon cutting ceremony at Wayne City Hall

Late last year, the Wayne power plant and water departments replaced two older gasoline powered pickups with pickups fueled by compressed natural gas.

The city received $30,000 in grant funds from the Nebraska Environmental Trust to help pay the higher initial cost as part of a University of Nebraska survey of performance of alternative fuel vehicles in small city fleets. Staff at Arnie's Ford Mercury worked with the city to purchase the vehicles through the state bidding process.

Returning to Pentagon is the plan

By this time next week, we may or may not – be making plans for the Pentagon. It's all in the hands of the Wayne State women's basket-

A little more than a week ago, the Wildcat faithful saw their team lay an egg in the finals of the Northern Sun Conference tournament. Wayne State stumbled out of the gate and never found their rhythm in a loss to Northern State, casting a shadow over what has been an outstanding season for the regularseason NSIC champions.

Back around Christmas, we were wondering if this team would be able to cash the checks their preseason hype was writing. Wayne State started the year as the No. 5 team in the country and was right behind fellow Central Region foe Emporia State at the top of the Div. II polls after a quick 8-0 start.

Then came the month of December – the basketball equivalent of getting a shovel full of coal in your Christmas stocking. Wayne State entered NSIC play like Foster Brooks on a four-day Southern Comfort bender, stumbling through a seemingly-unthinkable loss to Minnesota Crookston that was sandwiched in between losses to Minnesota State and Augustana.

It all got turned around after that pre-holiday hangover – after a win at Southwest Minnesota State, the Wildcats had a score to settle with a Sioux Falls team that felt they were a team to be reckoned with, especially after upsetting the Wildcats in last year's NSIC tournament.

With that emphatic 21-point beatdown of the Cougars, the light turned on for this team. They won 14 in a row, wrapped up their second straight NSIC regular-season title even after the streak ended at Winona State, and actually looked like the kind of team those preseason pundits thought would show up at Rice Auditorium.

Now, this team has a chance to get back to Sioux Falls and right the wrong they left behind in that 61-45 hiccup against Northern State. Three wins in this week's Central Region tournament, and they'll have the closest thing to home-court advantage you could hope for in the Elite Eight, playing for a shot at the national title just two hours away

The question is - can they do it? There are a lot of "yes, but . . . questions that need to be answered this week in Hays, Kan.

The first question is - are the youngsters on this team ready for prime time?

Looking at this lineup, the Wildcats are not playing with an abundance of senior leadership. Ashton Yossi was a freshman on the 2012 Elite Eight team which had five seniors (four of whom were starters). While Yossi, Jordan Spencer and Millie Niggeling have plenty of experience playing under the bright lights of the NCAA tournament, they are the only ones on this 13-player roster with ANY regional experience. Two other players were on last year's team, but Katie Hoskins was dealing with injuries and Alex Nelson was a redshirt who didn't suit up After that, you have five freshmen and three transfers, and only Sadie Murren saw anv time in an NCAA tournament game (as a backup at Nebraska). After 32 games, including some tough battles against the best of the NSIC, I believe they're ready for this week.

The next question is – can they play consistent, top-quality basketball for 40 minutes, and do it three times in four days?

Not many teams have the opportunity to play this many games in a short amount of time. The Wildcats did it at last week's conference tournament and played 80 good minutes in wins over St. Cloud and Moorhead – but those last 40 at Northern? Ehh, not so much.

Wildcats hope to return to Sioux Falls for Elite Eight

After losing to Northern State in the finals of the Northern Sun Conference tournament, the Wildcats found out Sunday that they'll have a chance to return to the scene of their last loss with an opportunity at redemption – and a national title if they win the NCAA Div. II Central Regional tournament this weekend in Hays, Kan.

The 27-5 Wildcats will open play against Great American Conference champion Harding, who carries a 22-6 record into Friday's 7:30 p.m. showdown at Gross Memorial Coliseum, and Wildcat coach Chris Kielsmeier said that getting into what is arguably the toughest region in the country is the first step final 16 games to claim their second on that road to redemption two straight NSIC regular-season title

"We know this region is as tough as any in the country, so we're really excited to get in," he said. "And we know that whoever gets out of this region has a pretty good shot at winning the national championship, so we need to go down to Kansas and win some games so we can get back to Sioux Falls.

The Wildcats took care of business with wins over Bemidji State, St. Cloud State and MSU Moorhead, but could never get things going in the finals against Northern State, who avenged a late-season loss to the Wildcats with a 61-45 win to claim the tournament title and the automatic bid into the eight-team Central Region bracket.

While that loss was a painful one for the team to accept, Kielsmeier said it also served as a reminder to

Four Wildcats ready for Div. II Indoor Nationals

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

For Sara Wells and Michaela Dendinger, this week is like a comfortable pair of shoes.

The two Wayne State throwers will be in the hunt for a national title in the women's shot put at this week's NCAA Div. II Indoor Nationals in Birmingham, Ala., and they both hope that all the hard work and training that they've done to prepare for this opportunity pays off with a spot at the top of the All-American podium

Wells and Dendinger are third and fourth, respectively, in the women's shot put among Div. II athletes heading into Saturday's competition, and both are excited about the opportunity to compete for a national title and put the 25th-ranked Wildcats on the scoreboard at the national meet.

"The two girls who are ahead of me are both great competitors, and we'll just have to get in there and see who comes out on top," Wells said. "(Throws coach Brett Suckstorf) has really helped us prepare to get us to this level of competition, and we just need to trust

"It's really no different than any other year. We just want to strive to do our best and we've been working things, and hopefully I can stay relaxed out there and hard all year to get ready for this opportunity," she

Wells will have some friendly faces among the competitors in Saturday's event, as both Dendinger and freshman Shandan Platt will be in the circle Saturday

This is Dendinger's second trip to the indoor nationals, and she'll be the busiest of the four Wildcats athletes competing at the University of Alabama-Huntsville indoor arena. Before Saturday's shot put, she'll compete in the weight throw on Friday at 1 p.m.

"I'm really excited," the sophomore said. "I've made a lot of improvement this year, and it's cool to see how far I've come from that first meet, so I'm excited to see how I compete.'

Dendinger's improvement in the shot put has been quite impressive. She has gone from a gliding approach to a spinning takeoff, and the results have been very positive. "I've added about 3 1/2 or 4 meters this year," she said. "We worked on it over the holiday break and that helped out tremendously and really changed my throw. I've worked in the discus before and it has a lot of the same aspects as the footwork you do for the discus. Dendinger's best effort of 52 feet, 2 3/4 inches has her Kielsmeier said the Bison also rebound well, averaging more than 41 per game, so hitting the boards will be critical for the Wildcats.

"They rebound well, and that's something we're going to have to do as well," he said. 'We're going to need to rebound well and turn this into a fast-paced game and get out into transition and get a lot of transition shots on them. I don't think they like to play that way, and that's something we're going to try and exploit."

The Wildcats will be able to do it either on the perimeter with the shooting of seniors Ashton Yossi (12.2 points per game) and Millie Niggeling (11.2 points), or bang it inside with senior leader Jordan Spencer, who averages 16 points per game for the Wildcats.

"We're going to want to get a great shot, whether it's a layup in transition or a cross-court pass to one of our 3-point shooters," Kielsmeier said.

The play on the inside will also be a key to Wayne State's success, he added.

Wavne State will be able to kickstart their transition with junior guard Sadie Murren, who is averaging almost four assists per game and has started to find her shot on the outside, and they'll also need tournament first-timers like starting freshman Maggie Schulte and Paige Ballinger, Katie Hoskins, Haley Moore, Kacie O'Connor and Alex Nelson coming off the bench, stepping up and hitting their opportunities as well.

A win on Friday would put the Wildcats into a semifinal matchup against either top-seeded and MI-AA regular-season champion Fort Hays State or eighth-seed Minnesota State. Relax might be the buzzword for Wells' and Dendinger's teammate, Shandan Platt, as well as redshirt freshman Braxton Adams, who will represent the Wildcat men in the 60-meter dash on Friday at 4 p.m.

Platt saved her best effort for the end of the season. Her season best of 47 feet, 3 1/2 inches at the NSIC Indoor Championships on Feb. 26 helped punch her ticket for Alabama.

"We had it figured out after I hit my mark at conference, and it was an emotional moment for sure," she and give herself something to shoot

Platt has the 14th best mark in the competition, and she said she is thrilled to have this opportunity to compete among the nation's best.

"I'm not as nervous as I was for my first track meet," she said. "I've been working and training so hard and was praying I'd make it to nationals, so I don't think it's hit me yet. But (Wells and Dendinger) have helped me out a lot, and they're able to help me stay calm and focused."

While her chances of making the top eight and earning All-American status aren't as strong as her teammates, she's hoping to perform well for in the future.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime deal, and I just want to go down and show everyone how much my training and hard work has paid off," she said. "I'm going to go down there and give it my best."

Wildcats 19th in final regular-season poll

The Wavne State women's basketball team is tied for 19th in the final regular-season USA Today Div. II Coaches Poll, carrying a 27-5 record into NCAA tournament play this week.

The Wildcats fell two spots this week and, oddly enough, are tied at No. 19 with the other Wayne State team in Div. II, Wayne State University of Michigan. The Warriors are 22-5 and dropped three spots from last week's poll.

meier, I think that egg the team laid in the NSIC title game was this team's wake-up call. Any reservations they had about just where they need to be to compete successfully at this time of year were laid to rest in that 61-45 beating. I would be very surprised if this team doesn't leave everything on the floor from here on out, and there are three seniors on this team who will no doubt be there to keep the younger players focused on the task at hand.

Lastly – does this team have the talent to beat everybody they will

A lot depends, obviously, on that first-round matchup against Harding. The Bison have a post player that, I feel, both Spencer and Niggeling match up well against. If the players on the perimeter can keep Harding's outside game in check and, at least, break even in the rebounding department, they'll get to Saturday's semifinals.

Wayne State will have to figure out a way to stop Fort Hays' 6-foot-5 behemoth on the inside if the Tigers beat Mankato. If Mankato pulls off the upset, it presents a much better matchup for the Wildcats, as they split the season series with the Mavericks.

That leaves the championship game. Wouldn't it be nice to get one more crack at Northern for all the marbles? I don't think that will happen, though - Northern will have a tough time with Pittsburg State in the opening round, and I think Emporia State is probably playing better than anybody in the field at this moment, so I look for a Wayne State vs. Emporia State matchup on Monday for the ticket to Sioux Falls.

And, hopefully, redemption for the Wayne State women.

Zimmerman: Grants can be applied for

I have heard that some businesses may qualify for grants for their business. Do you know anything about this? - Nebraska

Grants are available, but they are not common. They are highly dependent on the type of business, the product or service, and the grant funding agency. If you are seeking grants on a federal level, say from the Small Business Administration, then your luck might be short lived. Grants for "for profit" businesses are rare on the federal government level. The most common tool being used are loans. That is not to say grants are not available on the state and municipal levels, but again they might be highly dependent on many factors, such as location of the business, purpose, and economic development such as revitalization in the community. For example, the Nebraska Innovation Grant is a grant from the State of Nebraska intended to assist small business owners in developing prototypes of products that may be manufactured sometime in the future. The intent is create local sustainable jobs throughout Nebraska. Again grants are not common in the small business community, but they are out there.

I have heard a lot about crowdfunding. What is this? - Omaha

The internet has allowed any individual to communicate their business idea and bring a collective group or "crowd" of people from anywhere to fund an idea. Crowdfunding is also closely associated with fundraising or raising money for a specific cause. There are numertheir own set of requirements, but most require a clear vision of what the business is trying to accomplish. This is very similar to a business plan, clearly communicating your to decide if they want to fund it for whatever amount they feel is appropriate. I recommend keeping these expectations reasonable for the area and type of business, while considering the seasonality of the business. This is why market research is so important. ## Week filled with more basketball

I was going to say this will be my very last words regarding basketball, but I can't! There is a men's Big Ten Tournament, and a national Lutheran grade school tourney in Valparaiso, Indiana yet. So you will just have to bear with me. Sorry about that.

All we did last week, really, was read about and watch basketball! The local papers covered all the teams coming to Girls' State, and highlighted the great players. Norris lost in districts, and so did Pierce, but they give out wild card berths depending on a system of points that reflect what is called strength of schedule. In fact, Pierce was a wild card last year and won

This year, Norfolk Catholic beat them in districts and several other teams had to win theirs to allow them in. It happened, and they knocked off Hastings St. Cecilia for the third year in a row, after that team had clobbered Norfolk Catholic in the semis.

Then, of course, there was the amazing Norfolk team that came in seeded last and promptly beat last year's champions who had been unbeaten all year. No one saw that coming, including Benson's coach, who had obviously not scouted

The Farmer's Wife By: Pat Meierhenry

Of course, we were interested in Dani's team, the Norris Titans. They encountered Hastings on Thursday evening, at Devaney. We could get that on the radio, and Dani started the game with a three! She had another before the night was over, and it was on to the semifinals. She plays with two great seniors, and they had been here all four years of their high school cathe afternoon, and a beautiful day, now, on to the high jump pit!!

Mike ventured out and got to see the Arena. We were facing York for the second time this season, and we knew they could be dangerous. (And I could not claim one relative on that team, for some reason, although a daughter of a cousin was cheerleading.) It was close, but Norris pulled it out.

Then, Saturday's games were all on television, so we could watch in comfort. Crofton, going for four straight, had a little difficulty, and went scoreless for the first quarter. But they showed what they were made of. Norfolk's magic ran out, but they should feel very good about a silver medal and trophy.

Norris had been beaten by Pius by 20 points in regular season, and Dani was up against Maddie Simon, the NU recruit, for some of it. This time, it was Maddie and Kylie Hohlen, our best scorer. And Kylie was shut down. Coach Hagerman used a slow-down strategy, and it had quite an effect. Pius only led by two at halftime, and their coach was obviously frustrated.

But they showed what they are made of, and won the game. Dani ended up with THREE three-pointers, one of which was on the news that eve, and we enjoyed every one So, on Friday, since it was in of them. It's been a great season;

The USDA announced on Friday February 27th an extension of the farm bill deadline for the base and vield update decisions to March 31, consistent with the ARC vs. PLC election decision deadline. All three decisions are inherently linked with each other, so making the deadlines the same and extending today's base and yield deadline is a logical way to handle the current rush and demand for enrollment relative to FSA staffing resources.

Many questions and answers to the new farm bill can be found on the University of Nebraska's Agricultural Economics Farm Bill website (agecon.unl.edu/farmbill). Included on the website are the latest rules and details updates, links to get to videos of presentations and decision making aids (including computer program spreadsheets) and other information to help make the election decision.

If you haven't updated yields and base acres there is no further time to delay. This decision will last and check the website siouxland- through 2018 so now is the time for new farm bill.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Who knew this day would come?

Since we're on "grandbaby watch" here, let's run through the "Bits and

- As you may know (or may not, if you haven't read this column or bumped into me the last nine months), I'm going to be a grandpa later this month. In fact, there's a 50-50 chance that, as you're reading this week's column, I'll be celebrating the big day and basking in the glow of grand-

I was thinking about this the other day, and it's funny when I look back on my younger years and how it never occurred to me that this day would EVER happen. Even when my daughter was a little girl, the idea that she would someday bring a life of her own into the world and that I would one day be called "grandpa" by another human being was as unlikely to cross my mind as what I would do with $100 million after winning the Power-

And yet, here we are – I felt my grandbaby kick when I last saw my daughter a couple of weeks ago. Kylie is MEGA-pregnant right now, and the baby is looking like it's going to be a big one when she makes her debut in the days ahead. It's amazing the gifts God gives us in our lives, and I look forward to meeting my granddaughter in the days ahead.

- One of the things I really enjoy in this job is reading others' work.

Whether it's a letter to the editor or an intern's effort at writing a feature story, it's something that I look forward to doing as managing editor. Sometimes, it seems as if Clara and I are handcuffed to our keyboards, cranking out enough news copy to fill each edition of this newspaper, as well as the various special sections we publish here. By the time the paper comes out on Thursday, the LAST thing I want to look at is the umpteenth incarnation of a story I wrote in 10 minutes with the deadline clock tick-

At the start of 2015, we added a new feature to our Faith section, "A Word In Faith." It is a weekly column that is written by some of the faith leaders in our community, including a number of ministers of local church-

I appreciate the fact that there are people who practice different strands of the Christian faith and want to share their thoughts on the spiritual topics of the day. There is currently a group of seven columnists that we are rotating in the series, giving us a good mix of views on faith-based issues that we all can ponder in our daily lives.

Of all the articles, news releases and columns that come across my desk every day, the next Word In Faith column submission is the one I look forward to more than any other, and I hope it's something you enjoy with every issue of this newspaper.

- A recent bust of an underage party in Omaha has me scratching my head at the seemingly-stupid actions of some parents these days when it comes to minors consuming alcohol.

I'm certainly not one to say that I never drank alcohol before I was legally able to. I will say this, though - my parents never allowed consumption of alcohol in their home by those who weren't legally old enough to consume it, and I was never allowed to go to parties where alcohol being consumed by minors when I was in high school (what TERRIBLE parents I thought they were at the time, because EVERYBODY was there and I was missing that big party).

I was a little less strict with my daughter – although there was this for her to think about: if she was at a busted party and got arrested, the cops would call her parents and she would have to deal with the legal issues AND the penalties that await her at home, which would be much more severe than anything the county judge would throw at her. (Sometimes, the fear of Mom and Dad is a much more effective parenting tool than the

Thankfully, we never had a problem – she attended non-alcohol parties at homes where one of her parents knew the party host families, and we knew that alcohol would not be an issue.

Holding an alcohol-fueled party for minors is a recipe for disaster. Fortunately, the 70 kids who were tagged for minor in possession all got rides home from their parents. Turning 70 drunk kids loose on the streets of any town is an invitation to disaster. Hopefully, the lesson is learned and the adults who threw the party will wind up having the book thrown at them by a judge willing to make this a teachable moment for any adult who thinks it's OK for kids to drink booze in their home

- Annnnnnd finally . . . I think I'm going to throw my hat in the ring for President of the United States for 2016, running under a very simple, specific platform.

And that platform is – eliminating Daylight Savings Time.

As I write this column on Tuesday afternoon, my body is still trying to adjust to the fact that I lost an hour of sleep over the weekend, and it wasn't staying out past last call that is making me feel so rough and

Mondays are hard enough to wake up for without stealing an hour of sleep that I won't get back until November. Elect me as your next President, and not only will I eliminate Daylight Savings Time, but I will locate whoever came up with this stupid idea and lock him up in Guantanamo

Another pipeline debate memory

NEBRASKA

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

Pipelines, eminent domain, federal intervention. If you think all of these topics are newcomers to the Nebraska landscape in the wake of the Keystone XL debate, join me as we roll the legislative time machine back to March 1976. Yes, it was 39 years ago that lawmakers in several states seriously considered building a 1,302-mile pipeline from Wyoming to Arkansas to carry coal-slurry.

Chief proponents in the Nebraska Legislature were Senators Loran Schmit of Bellwood and John DeCamp of Neligh. Schmit, often called the father of gasohol and one of the leading early adapters of alternative energy such as ethanol, led countless hours of floor debate and maneuvering on the issue. DeCamp, a colorful Vietnam War veteran who just happened to sit behind Schmit in the legislative chamber, went along for the ride.

Coal slurry technology involves crushing coal at the mine, mixing the powder with water and pumping the resultant mixture—slurrythrough underground pipelines to distant utilities. The coal would be filtered and dried at the utility and burned to generate electricity.

The Nebraska senators argued that it was not new technology. The first pipeline was a 108-mile stretch built in Ohio in 1957 by an electric utility seeking an alternative to coal trains that had become increasingly expensive. The Ohio pipeline undercut the railroad rates and forced development of new coalhauling technology by the railroads. The railroads' answer was the unit train, a mile-long series of 100 hopper cars dedicated to running coal to power plants in a seemingly never-ending circuit. You've seen them,

President John F. Kennedy had suggested in early 1962 that coal slurry pipelines might represent a way of transporting coal more economically while improving the depressed condition of the coal mining industry. Two such pipelines were put into operation. One was closed after the introduction of the unit trains and approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a separate rate structure for the more efficient form of rail service.

Interestingly, the railroads were involved in the beginning of the Wyoming to Arkansas project. Burlington Northern Inc. (before it became BNSF), one of the major coal-haulers in the West, teamed up with giant construction firm Bechtel Corp. to consider the massive pipeline effort. After a two-year study, the railroad concluded that the idea was impractical. Burlington Northern Chairman Louis W. Menk told the U.S. House Interior Committee the railroad determined the economics wouldn't stand up.

Bechtel moved forward without the railroad and joined two other companies to form Energy Transportation Systems, Inc. for the sole 800 miles. It turns out that the major trouble with building the pipeline came from eight railroads that owned property the pipeline would have to cross. Then came a series of rejections by state Legislatures. Nebraska and Kansas lawmakers voted "no" in March 1976.

In the Nebraska Legislature, eminent domain concerns took a backseat to concern over how much water the pipeline would require. That concern also reached the federal level when the Western Governors Regional Energy Policy Office passed a resolution of opposition. Pipeline opponents argued that the process would require as much the railroads. After postponing a water as coal and that the water would stay at the utilities to be terior and Insular Affairs Commitused in the generating process. The policy office argued that western states could ill afford to have wapurpose of developing the massive ter sucked away from agricultural, pipeline with plans for at least three industrial and recreational needs. others ranging in length from 180 to Proponents figured that federal legislation would facilitate coal slurry pipeline development by allowing them to bypass the railroads and reluctant landowners. They asked Congress to grant them eminent domain, the right to take private land in the public interest. Such federal preemption would eliminate the need for the pipeline to be built around states that didn't grant eminent domain and would also limit states' powers to influence the development of the pipeline. The eminent domain legislation was at the center of a lobbying storm in the 94th Congress that was settled temporarily in favor of decision for months, the House Intee voted on June 30, 1976, to table a pending eminent domain bill (HR 1863), thus killing it for the year.

That rightfully ended the debate in Nebraska and other western

will continue to fight it on the floor. I am convinced that allowing the packers, most of whom are foreign owned, to control the production side of the market equation will do irreparable damage to the independent hog producers.

Another frustrating moment came when The Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committo the full Legislature. LB106 allows the Department of Agriculture, with input from an advisory committee, develop a scoring matrix to approve or disapprove a proposed or expanding livestock operation. The amendment would allow individuals 21 and older to decide if they want to wear a helmet or not. If they decide not to wear a helmet, they would have to have eye protection.

LB479, a bill that I introduced to allow communities to honor veterans was advanced from committee this week as well - it is my hope that this will be on consent calen-

LB303, another bill I introduced which would task the Department of Education with creating a model child sexual abuse policy that schools could then adopt if they wanted to, will have its fate decided by the Education Committee this week. I would like this bill to come tee that I serve on, advanced LB106 out of committee unanimously so that it can be considered for consent calendar. I am also requesting that it be considered for a speaker prior-

Labels are good – for soup cans

I will admit, I have had a difficult time writing my article this week.

I always want to write things from the heart that will hopefully inspire others, but I have struggled. I realized this was in part due to the fact that every time I open the paper, listen to the news, read social media posts, etc., it is filled with negative comments. As someone who feels things deeply, I realized that the negativity was having a profound impact on me. Instead of seeing the beauty in life, I had been focusing on the negatives. So, I decided to write on how perhaps we all can start to see the beauty in each other instead of focusing on the neg-

I remember when I was in kindergarten and I came home crying. I went to a small school in Dakota City, and all of the kids one day decided to make fun of my best friend Stevie because of the color of his skin. I didn't understand why they were making fun of him. I didn't see anything wrong with Stevie and his skin color. I told my mom that there was nothing wrong with him - he had just been out in the sun too bels that people would put on him. ing" but I'm trying to get better. I'm trying to look at people for who they truly are, how they make me feel and what I sense in their hearts. It isn't easy and it takes a lot of work! I'm not perfect, so when I find myself wanting to judge someone because of their so-called status or label, I ask myself "What would Jesus do?" Who better to try and emulate than the man who died on the cross for us? Perhaps we don't always agree with what he did or said because he challenges us, but hopefully most agree that he always had a love for others – no matter their "label" in life.

"But the LORD said to Samuel: Do not judge from his appearance or from his lofty stature, because I have rejected him. God does not see as a mortal, who sees the appearance. The LORD looks into the heart." (1 Samuel 16:7) God truly looks into the heart of each and every one of us, so shouldn't we do the

I challenge everyone one of you to stop "labeling" people and to look at their hearts. Labels are for soup cans – not people!

God bless!
