Board members liked the idea of the committee's desire to go with a wood-framed building. The only concern was determining who would handle the upkeep and restaining of the facility, which would need to be done every five years or so.

"I don't want the street department to do it," councilman Matt Eischeid said. "It seems we're asking them to do a little more everv vear."

Johnson told the Council that the upkeep on the stadium would fall on summertime help. The amount of gallons required to stain the wood frame would cost less than it would to repaint every 5-10 years.

The Council also had lengthy discussion regarding the plans, specifications and cost estimates for the Wayne Aquatic Center. An increase in the city sales tax was approved by voters last year, and the engineer's estimate of $2.9 million was cause for concern by council members.

"The concern I have is, if it's over $3 million, and I'm sure you did a great job trying to come up with a conservative number, but if this starts ballooning, we're going to hear about it from the people of Wayne," Eischeid said. "They voted for a certain number, and if it's over $3 million, that would

The board approved the resolution unanimously.

The council unanimously approved a resolution approving an interlocal agreement for the city to share law enforcement resources with Wayne State College, but there was concern raised about changes that were required by the federal government that could lead to the police department being unable to investigate domestic violence or sexual assault crimes that might occur on campus.

According to Jeff Carstens, vice president and dean of students at Wayne State, changes in the language of the agreement were required to satisfy Title IX regulations that, if not followed, could lead to a loss of Pell Grant funding for the college.

According to the agreement, if a student asks college officials that a crime not be reported, the college is not allowed to report

Report power outage with new NPPD app

Reporting power outages just got a lot easier with the introduction of a new mobile outage app.

The app will allow Nebraska Public Power District retail customers in the area to report power outages, check the status of their power outage, and view current power outages on the Storm Center Outage Map.

According to customer services leader Brittney Koenig, "Because the app is tied to NPPD's outage management system, it allows customers to report outages from their phone or other mobile device, and even check their power status when away from home. Customers can sign up for push notifications, which will alert them to their account being part of a power outage, their power being restored, and also let them know if their estimated time of restoration changes by more than 30 minutes.

Besides the main benefit of reporting and staying on top of outages, the app provides one-touch access to the customer's login screen allowing them to see their electric consumption, billing history, pay their bill, and sign up for paperless billing. Other benefits are the ability to view NPPD press releases and blogs, and follow the latest Tweets, Facebook posts,

"Federal is going to trump state statute," Wayne Police Chief Marlen Chinn told the council. "If a student wants to keep it confidential, unless there's a compelling reason to disclose it to law enforcement, federal regulation trumps it."

Carstens told the council that campus security would not take written statements or do interviews in cases where a sexual assault has occurred, as that would be left up to campus staff who are trained in Title IX regulations and would be the ones talking to the victims.

"The potential for this to go downhill is huge," said Eischeid, who works as a patrolman for the Nebraska State Patrol.

Carstens said that, after initial contact with a Title IX coordinator, if it is determined that the college or the individual is under serious threat, it can then get turned over to the college. The agreement would not be used in cases where either the victim or the perpetrator is not a student at the college.

partnered for 10-15 years on mission trips as part of the West Minster Disaster Recovery Team. They generally conduct two mission trips per year, but the Pilger trip was one of the closest to Lincoln, as they generally travel out of Nebraska.

The group consists of several retired persons and others who take a week of vacation to help others.

Prior to coming to Pilger, the group conducted fundraisers and raised at least $8,000, which they were able to use to purchase building materials for the work they did in Pilger.

"We feel we have gifts and we need to use them," said Ken Govaerts, the leader of the group, Govaerts is a retired engineer. Other members of the group included a a mini music concert at the church pastor and a nurse, as well as sev- also.

The two Lincoln churches have eral others with various talents.

Each of the workers pays his or her own way during the mission trip, and because of the relatively short distance between Lincoln and Pilger, several of those taking part drove home each evening.

"We work to find someone who is struggling and help fill their needs. In Pilger, we have found that many of the former residents have left." Govaerts said.

After working from 8 a.m.-4 p.m, the core group drove to Wayne to shower, eat a meal and visit with members of the First Presbyterian Church. They slept in sleeping bags at the church.

They were able to share their talents during the week by presenting

Allen senior plays with a lot of pain

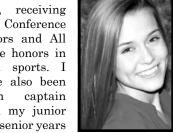

I'm doing something a little different for this week's column and turning it over to Lindsey Sullivan, a senior at Allen High School. I've enjoyed watching her play the last four years for the Lady Eagles, but until reading the story she sent to me earlier this week, I was not aware just what she was playing with. Considering what she's been through, physically and emotionally, that she has played four years of high school sports is quite an impressive story.

I'll let her take it from here . . .

Sports has always taken a huge role in my life. I have been active in volleyball and basketball all four years of my high school career, receiving All Conference honors and All State honors in both sports. I have also been team captain both my junior and senior years for both sports. Track has also taken a small

role in my career, only playing two years. There is nothing I wouldn't do to continue playing volleyball and basketball with my team. Unfortunately, pain is something that I have grown used to over my high school years, from rolled ankles to a dislocated knee cap to something more permanent. My freshman year of high school, I started feeling severe pain in both of my legs. I would feel cramping and fatigue from the top of thighs to the bottom of my feet. Concerned with the pain, my parents took me to the doctor where they told us that the pain is just growing pains.

I continued to play volleyball, basketball, and then track, by the time track started, the pain in my legs was so great that I couldn't run and I could hardly walk after working out. Every night after practices my mom would rub, massage with four different massagers, and ice my legs, these remedies helped, but only temporarily. One night after a hard volleyball practice, I was standing in our kitchen and my legs gave out, causing me to fall on the floor. Because of this accident, my parents and I decided to get my legs checked out again. We visited several doctors and they all were sure that nothing was wrong. I was checked for arthritis, compartment syndrome, and had an MRI; every test came back fine and the pain continued. Later during that same volleyball season, I was walking down the stairs one morning when my legs gave out yet again and I fell down the stairs. I ended up breaking the bottom step and was in a lot of pain. But because of my love for both volleyball and basketball I continued to play and excel.

Finally, my junior year of volleyball started and a great family friend suggested a free vein screening in Sioux City; this screening uses sonogram to check the function of veins and checks for blood clots. The next day, my mom got the details and we headed down to the screening. Talking to the doctor, he told us that it would be impossible for someone my young age of 16 to have circulatory problems or vein issues. But he was proven wrong when the scan showed two improper greater saphenous veins, a type of varicose veins, in both my right and left legs.

The problem with the veins was that they had no valves. Because of this, the blood would pool at the bottom of my legs causing severe pain, fatigue, and cramping. The doctors were unsure if the valves had been previously broken or if I was born without valves in the veins. At the age of 16, I was diagnosed with vari-

AREA'S BEST COMPETE AT NORTHEAST NEBRASKA TRACK AND FIELD CLASSIC

Laurel seniors lead area effort at Classic

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

NORFOLK - If quality trumps quantity, the Wayne Herald coverage area had a pretty good day at the 2015 Northeast Nebraska Track and

Of the 28 area entries in this year's event, 21 came away with medals as some of the area's best athletes went head-to-head with the top track and field competition in all of northeast Nebraska at the Johnny Carson Track and Norfolk High School.

Two of the 21 medal winners came away as event champions, and it was hard to determine which of the two Laurel-Concord-Coleridge was happier with their performance.

Ellie Arduser and Sadie Petersen will both be heading to Nebraska-Kearney to continue their track and field careers in college, and both were first-place medalists in the annual matchup of the area's best, taking top honors in the triple jump and 1,600-meter run, respectively.

For Arduser, it was a welcome relief to perform as well as she did in the triple jump, taking flight for a winning effort of 35 feet, 8 1/4 inches after battling through some soreness in her knee.

"I hadn't been doing the triple jump for a while because of some tendonitis in my knee, so coming back today and getting that jump in was really awesome," Arduser said after her win.

Arduser has the top triple jump in all of Class C heading into the final week of the regular season, and in spite of the knee issues, she's feeling really good about where she sits heading into districts next week.

"It's really exciting right now," she said. "I felt some pressure coming into today, not knowing what I'd do after not jumping for a couple of weeks, but that jump today was pretty good and I feel good about where I'm at Arduser's win was one of three medals on the day for the Lady Bear senior. She also claimed third-place finishes in the 200-meter dash and the 400-meter run on the Norfolk High School track.

Her classmate, Petersen, was also in high spirits after her day's effort, which included a win in the 1,600 and a runner-up finish in the 3,200-meter

"I wasn't sure if I wanted to do both, but after I thought about it for a couple of hours I decided to because I've done both events all four years," Petersen said. "I'm really happy with the decision now, because I PR'd in Petersen was relaxed and breezed to a win in the 1,600 with a time of 5:27.13. Although she didn't come home first in the 3,200, her time of 11:59.53 was her first sub-12 minute effort of her career.

"That 1,600 was probably the best race I've ever run," she said. "I felt really relaxed in that event. The 3,200 was a little more challenging but I finally broke 12 minutes, so that was

A number of solid performances were turned in by area athletes, particularly on the girls side.

Savannah Nelson of Wakefield came home with runner-up honors in the 400-meter run, and Audra Corbit of LCC was a third-place finisher in a very competitive high jump. Rachel Rauner had a hand in three medals for Wayne, taking third in the 100, sixth in the 200 and running with Cassie Heier, Tarah Stegemann and Kylie Hammer on the 400-meter relay team that finished fourth.

Josephine Peitz of Wakefield was a double medalist, placing fourth in the 800 and fifth in the 1,600. Hammer won three medals, adding a sixth in the long jump to her effort

She earned three medals at the Northeast Nebraska Track and Field Classic. Sadie Petersen ran personal bests in both distance events, winning the 1,600. Tayib Toussaint highlighted the area boys' effort with three medals, including this one in the 200-meter dash. Kylie Hammer of Wayne created a big splash on this medal-winning landing in the long jump, and also was part of two medalwinning relay teams.

Softball ends year in 2-0 loss

Senior Kelcie Bormann struck out 12 batters, but couldn't get any offensive support as the Wayne State softball team saw its season come to an end with a 2-0 loss to University of Sioux Falls Friday afternoon in the Northern Sun Conference softball tournament.

Bormann allowed just seven hits and two runs, but the Wildcats could manage just three hits, two coming off the bat of Bormann, as they saw their season come to an end with a 34-21 record.

Sioux Falls scored single runs in the fourth and sixth innings, and Breanna Black shut down the Wildcats to help them survive in the losers bracket.

Senior right fielder Kaiti Williams became the all-time runs batted in leader at Wayne State, going 2-for-3 with a homer, two RBI and three runs scored, to lead the Wildcats in a 4-0 win over Northern State Thursday in the opening round of the tournament.

The Wildcats got off to a quick start with Williams making history in the first inning as Lexie Loos led off the game with a single to second base. One batter later, William produced a two-run blast over the fence in left center field, giving Wayne State a 2-0 lead.

The two RBI's moved Williams to 144, breaking the all-time school record of 143 set by Jennifer Radley from 2008-11.

The Wildcats added another run in the third inning thanks to Williams. She led off the inning with a single to second base and later scored on a Melanie Alyea infield single to put the 'Cats in front 3-0. Williams added an insurance run for the Wildcats in the fifth inning to make the score 4-0 as she led off with a walk, moved to second on a Bormann single, stole third and scored when Sam O'Brien reached on a NSU fielding error for the final run of the game. Wayne State had seven hits in the win while holding Northern State to five. Williams led the Wildcats, going 2-for-3 with a homer and single along with two RBI and three runs scored. Loos went 2-for-3 with one run scored, producing her 30th multi-hit game of the season. Bormann was the winning pitcher for Wayne State, improving to 19-8 on the season. Cassy Miller worked the opening inning, allowing one hit with one strikeout. Bormann then pitched the remaining six innings, charged with four hits while striking out five and issuing no walks.

Tournament top seed Augustana sent Wayne State to the losers bracket Friday with a 10-2 loss in the Northern Sun Conference softball tournament in Sioux Falls, S.D. Wayne State got off to a quick start, taking a 2-0 lead in the first on a two-run homer by Williams, scoring Jordan King, who singled. The home run was Williams' 24th of her career, moving her into second place on the school's all-time list.

The lead didn't last long, as Augustana scored three in the bottom of the first and three more in the second to take control at 6-2.

Wayne State's last major threat came in the third when Loos and Williams both singled. The Wildcats could not get another hit after that, and the Vikings pulled away with the win to move on to the next round against Winona State, a 2-0 winner over Minnesota State.

Augustana outhit Wayne State 12-7. Williams went 2-for-3 to lead the charge. Sara Scheffert took the

Pain

From Page 1B But in some cases, like mine, varicose veins can occur from heredity. When my Great Grandma was in her late 60's she had bypass surgery where it was found out

The procedure that I had done, completely closed off the vein so that no blood could run through. For the procedure, I was injected on each leg with 15 numbing shots before a catheter wire was inserted into my vein from below my calf muscle, through the vein, to the top of my thigh. The wire then began heating the vein shut slowly until the bottom of the vein is reached, where the injection first took place. Two weeks after the procedure, I was able to return to volleyball again if I wore compression tights that went from the top of my thighs to my toes. The procedure was a success and the pain in both of my legs greatly subsided. When I returned to volleyball, the season was in full swing and I was a completely new player. I was not limited and not only could I stand the remaining pain but I conquered it. The procedure fixed more than 80 percent of my pain but unfortunately, my doctor predicted that I would have to have more procedures in the future. The procedures will close of the remaining veins attached to the newly closed off greater saphenous vein, and hopefully remove all remaining pain.

Throughout the search of finding what was wrong, I was greatly inflicted. I would always hear people in my school, and even coaches, saying that I was faking my injury and pain, and for a while, I was convinced the pain was normal. Finding a problem and solution with my leg pain made me grow as a person and helped me learn to fight for myself. I would also get made fun of for the beige colored tights that I had to wear during sports, this "joking" made me feel very self-conscious. People did not understand what they were for and why I had to wear them, instead of asking they would joke to each other about it on social media.

This experience taught me to not be so quick to judge others because you really have no idea what someone could be going through every day of their lives.

Wayne/Wakefield's Alex Conley fires a pitch home during Monday's loss to Arlington.

Wayne/Wakefield team struggles to end season

Wayne/Wakefield's struggles on close until late, when the visitors the diamond continued with three losses to close the regular season.

On Thursday, Wayne/Wakefield's defense struggled late, allowing South Sioux City to break a 1-1 tie and come away with a 7-3 win.

Wayne/Wakefield got a run in the first inning before the hosts tied it in the third. It would stay that way until the sixth, when the Cardinals took advantage of some Wayne/ Wakefield miscues to score six runs and put the game out of reach. Payten Gamble, Jackson Belt and

Alex Conley all had hits for Wayne/ Wakefield. Conley took the loss on the hill, giving up four runs, only one of which was earned. Wayne/Wakefield dropped a 10-4 decision to Platte Valley in action Saturday at Hank Overin Field.

The visitors scored three in the first inning to take the lead for good, but Wayne scored a pair in the bottom of the second to get within range. Jose Sanchez walked and scored on a groundout, and Adam Bentjen followed later in the inning by scoring on a passed ball.

third and two more in the fifth to take control of the game. Wayne/ Wakefield got two more in the sixth when Jack Belt scored on a balk and Conley scored on a Caden Korth scored seven in the top of the seventh for a 9-3 win here Monday.

Wayne/Wakefield tied the game in the second when Conley and Zane Jackson were both hit by a pitch and advanced to third on a bloop single by Korth. Conley came home on a wild pitch to tie the game

Wayne/Wakefield put themselves in position to win with two runs in the bottom of the sixth. Brook Bowers was hit by a pitch and later scored on an error to tie the game. Gamble followed with another unearned run, scoring on another Arlington error to give the locals a 3-2 lead going to the seventh. Wayne/Wakefield couldn't hang on to the lead, however, as two walks, two hit batters, a passed ball and an error helped Arlington cash in seven runs to put the game out of reach, dropping Wayne/Wakefield to 3-13 on the season.

Conley and Korth both had base hits for Wayne/Wakefield. Tyler Lutt took the loss in relief of Conley.

Wayne/Wakefield is the No. 5 Platte Valley added three in the seed for the B-3 district baseball tournament that begins Friday at Elkhorn South High School. Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

How's the baby? Glad you asked

From the "You asked for it" department comes a grandbaby-only version

- The two questions I keep hearing from people lately are "Have you stopped taking your medication?" and "How's the new grandbaby?'

While I'm going to plead the Fifth on the first question, allow me to go into detail on my little Emmie.

I got to spend a few days with her recently, and I followed through on my vow to make sure she's properly versed in all things relating to sports, including the commandeering of the family room for an afternoon of watching The Masters golf tournament and explaining to her every shot situation, the difference between a 3-wood and a 6-iron and why everybody is talking in quiet, hushed voices while Tiger Woods is standing over a 12-footer for par on the 18th hole.

Of course she is paying close attention to Grandpa Carnes the whole time as I'm explaining this, sucking on her pacifier as she looks at me and listens intently. When I was done, she let the pacifier fall out of her mouth and began crying. I wasn't completely sure I had it translated accurately, but it sounded like the "I can't believe Sergio Garcia can't win a major" cry. It was either that or "Why won't mom and dad get cable so we can watch the NHL playoffs?

As far as warping her mind to make sure she's as big a nut about sports as her grandpa is concerned, we shouldn't have any problems until football season rolls around. My daughter is an avid Saints fan and my son-in-law roots for the Patriots (I did NOT know about this before I agreed to let him marry her), so getting little Emmie to cheer for the Seahawks is going to take some creative acts of subliminal suggestions (kind of like playing a Black Sabbath record backwards, only more sinister).

- Little Emmie has had clear sailing throughout the post-birth process, out things haven't been quite as smooth for mommy.

My daughter had some issues relating to the incision for her C-section, so it's been a little slow going for her in the recovery phase.

There is a silver lining to this particular cloud, though, because it gave Great-Grandma King the chance to make a trip to Omaha to help out and spend some time with Emmie. I know my daughter appreciated having her grandma come up and hang out for a couple of days and give her a muchneeded hand with things, but I was a little concerned that my mom might be slipping a little bit.

I can never recall a time when my mom didn't go on some kind of shopping excursion when there were babies involved. When it comes to babies and clothes, my mom is never more than an arm's reach from a credit card and within 20 minutes of the latest sale. That was not the case this time, though. I fear this may be the early onset of dementia – or she may have just forgot to bring her purse along.

- They grow up fast, as these pictures will attest. I'm going to spend my birthday weekend with the little one, and will be hanging out at their place the weekend of the state track meet as well, so I'll have more pictures in a future column.

Budget a time to remember

By J.L. SCHMIDT Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

As Nebraska lawmakers grapple with an $8.7 billion two-year budget, it's a good time to recognize why the state is in the black and able to provide adequate services at a time when many other states are

This year's budget was crafted by an Appropriations Committee headed by "veteran" Senator Heath Mello of Omaha who has seven years under his belt. The nine-member committee also has three freshmen this year with Mello and fellow Omaha Senator Jeremy Nordquist (also with seven years) as the experienced guys.

In the minds of veteran reporters and seasoned observers, budget time goes back to Senator Jerome Warner who was Appropriations Committee Chairman for 14 years (1977-1991). The Waverly farmer was best known for a mumbling style of explaining the mundane to his colleagues during floor debate. One could tell the important issues because he would always speak slowly and articulately.

But, more importantly, Warner was the chief proponent of a twoyear budget cycle that allows for more planning as well as the Constitutional Amendment that requires the state to have a cash reserve of 3 percent of the total budget. That money is sacred and only few have ventured to tap the so-called rainy day fund. That unobligated balance is what has kept Nebraska from being forced into deficit spending.

One can only wonder what Warner would have to say about this year's controversial proposal to raise the gasoline tax to pay for road projects. As Speaker of the Legislature in 1969, Warner introduced 16 bills on highways that, among other things, would establish a road classification system.

Warner led the way for a variable gas tax to be set according to the roads budget approved by lawmakers. That removed the uncertainty in funding during the Arab oil crisis of the 1980s when people bought less gasoline and gas tax revenue, upon which road funding depended, plummeted. He also pushed for long-range planning of road development. Instead of making plans two years in advance, the Roads Department now makes them 20 years in advance. Many of those early plans were written by Warner's

As Appropriation's chairman, Warner changed the committee process to allow the full Legislature to have the entire budget in front of them before making decisions. That's also when the timetable for considering the budget was expanded to two years.

wife, Betty, who died in 1994.

It was during Warner's legislative tenure that the Nebraska Economic reduction measures and reflect Forecasting Advisory Board came into being and started to play a crucial role in the budget process. The out that the 3.1 percent spending board meets twice a year to set income predictions from several levels of taxes that feed into the General Fund and comprise the brunt of the state budget. Projections from the group can impact budget decisions to the extent that lawmakers may make cuts during second-round debate on the package of budget bills. The other option is to increase taxes, but given the pushback and promised veto of the proposed gas tax hike, that's unlikely to happen.

features property tax relief and more money for education and corrections. It would leave nearly $49 million for other spending and tax he left for his fellow Nebraskans.

an increase of 3.1 percent annually in state spending. Mello points growth is well below average. In fact, he says this is the best budget in which he has participated in

The spending increase and recommended $60 million in the Property Tax Credit Fund mirror the budget proposal of new Governor Pete Ricketts. That doesn't make the budget bulletproof, but it's a step in the right direction.

One can only imagine what War-The proposed 2015-2017 budget ner, who died in 1997, might think about this budget effort. But it certainly speaks well of the conservative, yet forward-thinking, legacy my honor to have Pastor Earl Fuoss, Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod of Wayne in Lincoln to deliver the prayer at the beginning of the Legislative Session. This was the second time this session Pastor Fuoss has given the opening prayer.

Legislative Update Beginning of late nights in Legislature

This week also marked the beginning of late nights for the Legislature, meaning the session is drawing closer to the end. On Thursday, April 30, we started debate on the

On Wednesday, April 29, it was constitutionally we must do during the session. On the same day, the Economic Forecasting Board met, projecting that we would have an additional $9.7 million available this year. The projections were better than anyone thought and it did not take any time at all for senators to start figuring out ways to spend the money. I, however, am more cautious. These are projections; they are not solid numbers that we can take to the bank. I and others tra money to the property tax credit fund and give it back to the people.

We did give the $8.6 billion budget bills first round approval. The budget, which covers two years, has an increase in the annual state spending of 3.1 percent, which is relatively low. Key points to the approved budget include $200 million a year being set aside for property tax credits. (We still cannot seem to provide any serious tax reform, so providing more money for the Property Tax Credit Fund will have to funding for K-12 and higher education. The two-year budget includes an increase of $47.7 million for the K-12 state aid formula (something else that needs a serious overhaul). The University of Nebraska, state colleges and community colleges will see an increase of 3 percent.

We did spend a fair amount of time discussing $8 million that has been allocated for services and equipment for the training of dental students. We spent time on this because the money would be going to Creighton dental school in Omaha - they currently provide charity services and they are planning to build a new clinic so they are able to treat more patients as well as train more future dentists. (Keep in mind that Creighton University is a private, Catholic University in Omaha.) Proponents of this bill argued that this money would be well spent and would encourage dentists to get their degree and then move to out-state Nebraska, where they claim there is a shortage of dental providers, to practice. This is hogwash, (there is nothing in the bill that requires any practice in out-state Nebraska) this appropriation does no such thing but it would give $8 million to a private university.

RC&D Council plans projects

The Northeast Nebraska Reoffice in Plainview recently and offered up a full list of activities and projects designed to reach out to citizens in their service area.

The "Motivated & Marvelous" volunteers of the Council were thanked and recognized with an M&M's treat as part of National Volunteer Month.

Two more new projects were approved. Joan Alexander is chairing this summer's Grandparent -Grandchild Day which is designed to give kids a fun and interactive day outside with their grandparents. Tentative plans include fishing and rock hunting. A "Pork & Cork" fundraising event is being planned for late September at Nissen's Winery & Outlaw Trail Center. Following the food and winetasting, two Humanities Nebraska speakers will tell through story and song about Arlo Guthrie's outlaw character--because he was indeed

"out" there. The Council accepted a $20,292 grant from the Nebraska Environmental Trust (NET) which will allow them to hold three E-Waste and three Household Hazardous Waste collection and recycling events during 2015. Additional the Northeast Nebraska RC&D will be requesting that they become the official sponsor of a $100,000 NET grant for the Continuous No-till & Soil Health Education program. Previously this has been supported by the PrairieLand RC&D, but they are no longer able to provide that service.

The RC&D Council looks forward to continuing their service to citizens through projects that will make life better for people in Antelope, Cedar, Dixon, Knox, Madison, Pierce, and Wayne counties.

Divorce is hard and sometimes the only option, but parents should keep in mind that children should come first despite emotions, anger and frustration that the end of a relationship brings. During divorce, many children lose the constants in their lives. Some move, lose one parent, lose their social support and so on. Parents need to keep as many things constant for the child as possible so that children go through as little disruption in their lives as possible. Both parents staying in the picture is best. Parents need to communicate to the child that he is still loved by both parents even though they divorced. Parents also should agree to try to get beyond their own issues in order to put the child's needs before theirs. They should maintain positive communication, especially in front of the child. Using the child to hurt each other or taking their negative feelings out on the child are definitely not acceptable.

Minerva Club discusses New Jersey ed purchasing some litter baskets

Mary Ann Denaeyer hosted eleven members of Minerva Club at the Senior Center on April 27. New Jersey facts were read for roll call.

President Joyce Mitchell opened the meeting by reading several situations with responses so good that 'you could have heard a pin drop.' Historian Hollis Frese reported club activities for the late 1960's includfor the Wayne downtown area; cash donations in lieu of gift exchanges and the donation of several library books. In 1969 members helped Mrs. Bright celebrate her 100th birthday. Members signed up for their choice of hostess/programs for the coming year. Mary Ann Denaeyer reported that the settlement of New Jersey began in 1609 by a visit from Henry Hudson. An employee of the Dutch East India, he came looking for a passage from North America to Asia. From 1611-1614, three Dutchmen surveyed an area along the Atlantic coast called New Netherlands. Even after the British took over in 1664, the Dutch influence remained.

Part of southwestern New Jersey was settled by the Swedes in 1638 and called New Sweden. Relations between the Dutch, Swedes and the Indians were good until 1655 when trading became profitable. By 1660, the Dutch had forced most of the Swedes out. After England took control of the area in 1664, they tried to run the land as a profitable business venture. In 1675 the Colony was divided into East Jersey and West Jersey. The Quakers settled in West Jersey. By the end of the 1600's, the people began to argue about who owned the land. They resented paying rent. In 1702 England united the two colonies. By 1760, unrest grew, and in 1776 the Declaration of Independence was signed on July Several major battles in the Revolutionary War were fought in New Jersey. One famous battle happened at Trenton when Washington and his Army crossed the Delaware in a snowstorm and surprised the Hessians. Nine hundred prisoners were taken in 90 minutes. On Dec. 18, 1787, New Jersey became the third state to ratify the United States Bill of Rights.

The annual club outing is scheduled for Thursday, May 14. Plans are to leave Wayne at 11 a.m. Any member unable to go should let Phyllis Rahn know.

Detours in life are a part of God's plans

OK, folks – how many of you have ever been riding in a car and you are constantly either telling the driver what to do or you want to tell them how to drive?

I know this will seem like a lie, but I actually am not one of those passengers who tries to direct the driver. My philosophy has always been with driving that we are never lost – we are just taking detours.

I think that we can use this imagery for life. We might not get to our destination as quickly as we wanted but eventually we get there with OK – that being said, I might be an awesome passenger only because I want to drive! I want to be in control and direct the path that I am taking. I'm sure that I am not alone in this feeling. Don't many of us think that we know what is best for ourselves and our future?

If you are like me and you have this philosophy that you know best - I am sure you have been disappointed time and time again.

We all need to realize that life can't be directed by a GPS. We need to understand that new construction and detours might have just begun moments before our journey watched the beautiful scenery as we ventured down the road and felt absolute peace? I'm not sure if I am ever going to be able to fully answer why I keep trying to drive alone and be so darn stubborn. I'm sure that my family would love that answer!

We need to believe that there is a God out there that truly knows what is best for us. We need to allow God to drive us through life. I'm not saying that we need to sleep during the entire journey, but instead, trust the driver while being an alert and active passenger.

I am constantly being reminded that I am not in control of this thing we call life. I do pray that, somehow, I can just trust and be OK with the path God has put before me.

I challenge all of you to let God take the wheel. Granted, this can be hard, especially when life is tough and you're not sure where the road may lead. However, moment by moment, if you choose to trust Him and let go, you'll find peace, rest, contentment, and love filling you up.

Phones still causing distress

It doesn't seem like May, thanks to all the rain & cloudy weather. The sun did come out while we were in Seward for a grade school track meet on Saturday, so we both got a little red; just have not been out much yet.

Phones are still bugging me! When I first got a small cell. I had trouble keeping track of it. Usually, I could find it by ringing its number. You know, the very first cell I had, about twenty years ago, looked like a brick. And, some days, it acted

The second one was a bag phone in the car that required an antenna, and there were an awful lot of dead spots in Cass and Otoe counties. I finally graduated to a flip phone, which is the one I had trouble keep-

And, last year, I upgraded. Plus, I have this handy little holder on the kitchen counter, courtesy of Temme Manufacturing, a metal fabricating company here in town. So, ordinarily, I keep better track of this one.

We've had a cordless phone for years, and really appreciate that we can keep it by the recliner when we don't want to have to get up to answer it. Or, we can carry it around the house if engaged in a lengthy to trouble with it!!

Twice, last week, I lost the darned thing. Which makes me very nervous when it rings and I can't find it to pick up. Plus, the man in this house who usually can't see things that are in front of his nose, found it both times! That's embarrassing. Once, it was laying on the sofa arm, and they are about the same color. The second time, it was on the conversation. That's where I get indon't remember taking it in there.

This is the same handset that had cookie dough in it last year. I guess I'm going to have to get a blue tooth. Would that be the answer?

Changing the subject, this week I'm reading a book called Sharpie. It's about Evelyn Sharp, the 16 year old aviatrix from Ord, Nebraska, who was killed during the war in a big old military plane she was ferrying across country. It mentions Andy Risser, our local "barnstormer" and Karl Stefan, for whom the Norfolk airport is named. It's quite a story about the early days of flying in Nebraska. I think they had to be very brave.

It makes me realize again just how pioneering my Dad was, in his little Piper Cub. He did graduate to a Cessna, but when some friends were killed while coyote hunting from their plane, he sold it and quit the whole business. I don't think hunting things on the ground from a small plane would be very smart. I do know all those small planes carried hay to stranded cattle during the blizzards of '49. And I do remember how fun it was to be in one. Today, I don't even like to be in a commercial plane Age does that to you, I think. Anyway, that's what I'm counter in the bathroom, and I sure blaming it on. That, and a lot of other things, like misplacing phones!

Information shared on ground squirrels

I've been getting calls recently on damage in lawns and gardens that I believe is from thirteen-lined ground squirrels. Thirteen-lined ground squirrels are very common in Nebraska, and, as their name suggests, have 13 light stripes with rows of light spots that run the length of their backs. The background color is tan or brown and the belly is white. This color pattern helps them blend into the landscape, thereby providing some protection from predators. Thirteen-lined ground squirrels are usually about 11 inches long, including a 5- to 6-inch tail. Adults weigh 4 to 5 ounces in the spring but will double their weight by the fall in preparation for winter hiber-

Although often called "striped gophers," thirteen-lined ground squirrels actually belong to the squirrel family, which includes chipmunks. ground squirrels, tree squirrels, prairie dogs, and woodchucks. True (pocket) gophers belong to a different family of rodents.

"Thirteen-liners" prefer low-grass vegetation and thus are commonly found in golf courses, cemeteries, parks, yards, roadside ditches, and other open areas with manicured lawns. Agricultural and residential development have actually increased the range of the thirteen-tive season, especially in the fall, in preparation for hibernation. Other plants they consume include grasses, garden vegetables, and flowers. "Thirteen-liners" are not strict vegetarians. Researchers have found that ground squirrels will eat the eggs and young of ground nesting birds, earthworms, lizards, mice, and insects to obtain protein. In fact, during the summer, insects can constitute up to half of their dietary intake. They are particularly fond of grasshoppers and the larvae of beetles and moths.

These rodents are native to Nebraska and prey to several predators, including badgers, coyotes, hawks, weasels, and a variety of snakes. Thirteen-lined ground squirrels can cause problems when they create burrows in lawns, golf courses, cemeteries, parks, and earthen dikes; dig up newly planted seeds; consume sprouting seeds, and damage garden vegetables. Do powerful bite.

THANK YOU

Thank you for all the prayers for Marisela and her family over the past months! The prayer groups are so faithful to remember her.

Thank you to those who brought food to the house and gave monetary gifts. Also, for the visits and time spent with her at home.

Thank you to all our friends and family who donated and attended the benefit and to the families who organized, prepared and served the food. We are very fortunate to have a community willing to do this to help with Marisela's care. She is now at the Tulsa Cancer Center of America in Oklahoma. "It is all in God's hands.'

We would like to thank Lowell and Kathy Johnson for sponsoring the Elderfest dance in April. What a fun evening of dancing and mingling in with friends. The food provided by Geno's and Tacos & More added to the festivity. We also enjoyed mixing in with the college students and youth who were great hostesses. An added bonus was a gift certificate from Swans. Know Cinda that your organizational skills of the event are appreciated. We are blessed indeed to live in such a caring community. Elderfest fans ~ Darrel and Phyllis Rahn

We made it to 70 and now 50 years of marriage. It has been a "whirlwind year." We thank everyone for all the cards & support.
