Winside is getting ready for 'big' party

City's Q125 celebration kicks off Friday afternoon

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Five years of preparations to celebrate 125 years will all come together this weekend in Winside.

While gallons of paint were splashed about to cover street corners and vacant walls downtown, Jeff Farran buzzed up and down Winside's main street to talk up what is shaping up to be a fun and exciting weekend for the city's Q-125 celebration.

It's a party that's five years in the making, and Farran, president of Winside's Q-125 committee, said the group will be excited – both when the party starts Friday, and when it's over Sunday evening.

"It's the coming together of all the work this committee has done," he said. "We're excited to have it coming, and I think we'll be excited when it's over as well. It's been a lot of work, but it's going to be worth it."

Work on the community's 125th anniversary celebration actually got going in 2010. A huge New Year's Eve dance helped kick-start the fundraising efforts that will make just about everything a free weekend for those in attendance.

"We had an absolute blowout with that first New Year's Eve dance, and we had one every year since then that has been supported very well by the community and by people from out of town," he said. "We also had a tour of homes, and we had some Fun Days weekends during the same weekend of this celebration that were really supported very well."

Farran said the committee has raised close to $40,000 for this weekend's activities. The community barbecue, with meat cooked by the Northeast Nebraska Cattleman's Association, is one of a number of free events that will be taking place beginning Friday evening. Even the fireworks show, which is sponsored by Weible Transfer, is going to be a fun – and free – event for kids of all ages.

"About the only event we're charging for is the dance on Saturday night," Farran said, noting that rock band Judd Hoos will be the only event with an entry charge.

To make all of this happen, Farran said, took the effort of a lot of people. About 20 people served in some capacity on the Winside Q125 committee, doing everything from

Chicken Show is still a go

The Show will go on – the Wayne Chicken Show that is.

Organizers were notified by the Nebraska Department of Agriculture that live poultry will not be allowed to be a part of any festival, fair or other event in Nebraska.

The 35th annual Wayne Chicken Show will take place Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 10, 11 and 12 and all scheduled activities that do not involve live chicken will go on as planned.

Activities such as the Flea Market, World's Largest Chicken Dance, free entertainment, Parade, Cement Chicken auction, Omelet Feed, National Cluck-Off, Chicken Feed, and rubber chicken toss will all be a part of this year's event.

Committee members are working to come up with events to take the place of the Rooster Crowing Contest and Chicken Flying contest, which involve live chickens.

"We have been getting calls in our office about the Chicken Show and have been telling everyone, tongue in beak, that cement chickens and rubber chickens are immune to the Avian Influenza," said Irene Fletcher, assistant director of Wayne Area Economic Development.

Additional details in regard to this year's show can be found at the Chicken Show website, www.chickenshow.com.

Remembering the tornado a year later

Hilda Pearson shared a story she has written following the loss of her home in the June 16, 2014 tornado that moved through the area. Pearson spoke during the remembrance service in Wakefield on Tuesday. Looking on is Pastor Charity Potter of the Wakefield Presbyterian Church who also shared her thoughts and feelings since the tornado. We have a special pull-out page highlighting the one-year anniversary of tornadoes in Pilger, Wakefield and Laurel on Page 7-8B.

Cemetery vandals destroy Hoskins markers

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

HOSKINS – The gravel county road that runs just to the south of the Trinity Cemetery is the only interruption of a quiet, peaceful resting place that has been the target of senseless vandalism in recent weeks.

Fred Krause's family has taken care of the cemetery, located about two miles west of Hoskins, since the late 1800's. Four generations of his family have mowed the grass and kept the markers of those who are buried there clean and neat.

One April day, Krause said he came up to look around the cemetery and found the deeply-embedded tracks of some type of ATV vehicle that had run circles around a group of markers in the northwest corner of the cemetery.

"I had talked with one of the guys from the church, and we felt there was nothing we could do about it," Krause said as he pointed to one of the broken stones, a marker written in German that marked the date of a two-month old baby who had died in October of 1901.

A couple of weeks later, as he came up to mow the cemetery, he discovered that a number of American flags, marking the grave sites of veterans who had served in the military, went missing. Other markers were bent over, creating more damage and frustration for Krause.

"We got a hold of the guys at the Winside American Legion, and they were good enough to bring some more over," he said. "They'd knocked down a couple more stones, and we put them back up before Memorial Day."

A few nights later, more damage could be seen and flags were once again missing, so Krause and a friend installed a game camera that, they hoped, would capture images of the perpetrators if they returned again.

And return they did – only the game camera did more than get pictures – they got clear video images of the perpetrators knocking over stones and tearing up the cemetery with an ATV.

"We could see one of the guys just walking up and knocking one of the stones down, and an ATV was driving through here as well," Krause said.

The stones and monuments that have been damaged, to the point where they will have to be replaced, date as far back as the late 1800's. Why anyone would willingly create this kind of destruction baffles Krause.

"It just blows my mind," he said. "My great-grandpa and grandpa are both buried here, and we've taken care of this cem-

New pool contract is granted

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

The first dip in the new swimming pool at the Wayne Community Activity Center will be taken by a ceremonial shovel sometime next month after the Wayne City Council awarded the contract for the pool at its meeting Tuesday.

Christensen Construction was awarded the contract on a unanimous vote by the Council in the amount of $2.65 million. The Pender-based company has a track record of building swimming pools in northeast Nebraska, having completed projects nearby in Wakefield, Pilger, Plainview, Oakland and Albion. They have also constructed public swimming pools in Stromsburg and Genoa.

The contracted amount is a little below the $2.9 million issue that was listed by the city during a vote for an increase in the sales tax that was approved by voters in 2014. One-half of a cent of city sales tax will go toward paying off the new swimming pool.

Mayor Ken Chamberlain said construction for the new pool is expected to start sometime in mid-July, with a targeted completion date of May 20, 2016.

The Council killed an ordinance under consideration to ban smoking on city property and make it a misdemeanor to smoke in places such as the Summer Sports Complex or other city-owned areas.

Councilman Matt Eischeid led the move to kill the ordinance, saying that it would be an unenforceable ordinance that would waste local law enforcement time and resources.

"What if someone is caught smoking and the police are called? People can just leave," he said. "We are trying to pass an ordinance that has no teeth in it, unless they just voluntarily say they'll hang around and wait for their ticket."

Eischeid said the city could easily remedy the situation by posting signs that say "thank you for not smoking" and that would be enough to get the message to discourage smoking in a public area.

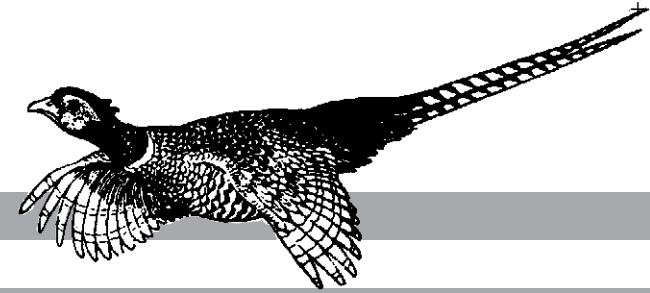

"I saw one person smoking at the (baseball) tournament this weekend, and they were off by themselves so it wasn't a huge nuisance," he said. "I don't think this is the answer to solve the issue of smoking at the softball complex. I think courtesy signs would be a sufficient type of enforcement."

There was no motion to advance to ordinance, thereby killing it on second reading.

The Council discussed concerns with the city library budget with City Library Director Lauran Lofgren and library board president Joel Ankeny.

The library board was asked by the City Council to cut $100,000 from its proposed budget of more than $310,000. Lofgren said she and the board were able to identify about $60,000 in cuts, but anything further would have a negative impact on some of

Piano donation valuable to Wayne State College

Former Wayne resident Joe Nuss, who currently lives in California recently donated a 9-foot Baldwin piano to the Department of Music at Wayne State College.

This is a professional performance instrument which will be used to accompany the choral ensembles in rehearsal and possibly for performances as well.

"It is a beautiful instrument, which was meticulously maintained and plays extremely well. This is a very generous gift which will serve WSC for many, many years," said Dr. David Bohnert, Chair of the Department of Music at WSC.

The piano arrived in Wayne earlier this spring and has already been put to good use in the music department at the college.

Kari Woehlers at Absolute Salon, gave haircuts to Whitney and Liz Hadcock. The two are holding the hair that will be donated to make wigs for cancer patients.

Five year old makes second donation of hair

Two years ago, Whitney and Liz Hadcock donated their hair on National Donate Your Hair Day in November.

This year, in honor of Relay For Life, and in memory of Liz's father-in-law, who passed away in March, the two did it again. Whitney is five years old and this is the second time she was able to donate. Together the two have donated over 40 inches of their hair. The hair was donated to Beautiful Lengths, a program from Pantene and The American Cancer Society, that gives free wigs to cancer patients.

One new Avian influenza case to report

In a report issued Tuesday, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture noted that there has been one new positive case of HPAI to report.

This case is the existing Dixon 4 location which was reported last week as voluntarily depopulating birds due to epidemiological connections with the other Dixon operations.

Dixon 4 was in progress of being voluntarily depopulated over the past week, when ongoing testing showed the remaining birds in that facility as positive for the disease. Depopulation is ongoing.

Testing continues to indicate that the virus is NOT present in Dixon 5; however, due to epidemiological connections with the other Dixon operations, the producer has chosen to voluntarily depopulate these birds in an effort to contain the spread of the virus within their operations.

Crews at Dixon 1 and 3 continue to work to clean and disinfect each building and the equipment found in those buildings.

The current number of farms impacted (confirmed to have HPAI) is five. Six farms located in Dixon County were or are being depopulated and one farm in Knox County is under quarantine as a suspect flock at this time.

In the ongoing process of depopulating the affected areas and proper disinfection of each site, the Department of Ag has issued the following list of procedures to be followed.

After the birds have been humanely euthanized and composted, all organic material (manure, bedding, feed, etc.) is removed from the facility using shovels, brooms and brushes during what is referred to as the "dry cleaning" phase. This material will be composted onsite.

After the "dry cleaning" phase, all areas and items are washed thoroughly with detergent to remove any oil, grease or other films that could interfere with the use of disinfectant. Surfaces will then be rinsed and allowed to dry.

Once dry, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) licensed disinfectant is applied and remains wet on the surfaces for the label-specified contact time. After the contact time, surfaces are rinsed again and allowed to air dry.

In the case of Dixon 1-5, an additional preventative step will be taken to ensure the virus is killed by heating the buildings to 100 degrees for 72 consecutive hours.

Upon successful completion of the cleaning and disinfection process, environmental samples will be collected and tested to confirm that the virus has been eliminated. NDA staff, working in collaboration with USDA APHIS, will determine the number and the frequency of samples that will need to be collected.

Buildings must remain empty for at least 3-4 weeks after the cleaning and disinfection process; after that time NDA and USDA APHIS will consult and determine whether the facility can be released from quarantine and can begin the repopulation process.

NECC board approves Vision 2020

The Board of Governors at Northeast Community College approved a document Thursday that sets the future direction of the institution over the next five years.

Northeast's new strategic plan, Vision 2020, has been created through a comprehensive planning effort built on the foundation of past successes and is designed to chart a new direction to meet the needs of 21st century students and the region, according to Dr. Michael Chipps, president.

"The Board of Governors established the overall direction for Vision 2020 by recently adopting a new mission statement that dedicates us to the success of students and the region we serve, and college goals that focus on student success, student access, a globally competitive workforce, and maximizing resources."

Chipps said Vision 2020 incorporates the principles outlined in the American Association of Community Colleges' implementation guide for Empowering Community Colleges to Build the Nation's Future to redesign students' educational experiences, reinvent institutional roles and reset the system so it better promotes student success.

"America is in dire straits when it comes to increasing the number of people with specialized skillsets. Over the next five years Northeast will continue to experience pressing demands to deliver even more skilled technicians to business and industry that are desperately short of these professionals. Although the College does an outstanding job of producing a highly skilled workforce, there is much more work to be done."

For each of the four strategic goals, objectives have been developed that include performance measures identifying the expected outcomes to be achieved. These objectives are supported by action projects, which prescribe the methods and tasks to successfully complete the objectives.

Chipps said to provide accountability and transparency for Vision 2020, annual communication and reporting strategies will indicate the successes and challenges in achieving key performance measures and completing the action projects.

"Through Vision 2020, Northeast Community College will set the course to continue to empower our work to better address the increasing workforce demand. The implementation of student success initiatives, workforce development strategies, developing a globally competitive workforce, the establishment of new operations across the service area, the development of a 21st century farm and ranch, and creating a connection to technology that Northeast Nebraska has never experienced are just some of the new and exciting projects and services that await our students and constituents. With Vision 2020, this College will continue to advance its efforts by delivering programs and services that will drive the success of our graduates and the economy of our region."

Chipps commended Mary Honke, executive vice president, and the Northeast Community College family for providing essential input for the creation of Vision 2020.

"This is an amazing plan and I certainly appreciate the work that went into putting this process together. Mary has done an excellent job in coordinating the work among board members, faculty, staff, students and others. It is a dynamic road map that the Board and the President will use to move Northeast to meet the growing demands of the region. This one of the best strategic plans I have ever seen!"

Vision 2020 will go into effect July 1. Information on the plan will be accessible on the College website, www.northeast.edu, at that time.

Area shooters setting target on nationals

By CLARA OSTEN
Of the Herald

Seven members of the Sharp Shooters 4-H Club will be taking a trip over the Fourth of July weekend.

They won't be going camping or boating, but instead will be headed to Rogers, Ark., to compete in the National Daisy National BB Gun Championship. This year's event is scheduled for July 1-5.

Club members competing include Austin Arens, son of Kelly and Jenny Arnes of Laurel; Aubrie Edwards, daughter of Justin and Robin Edwards of Winside; Joshua Greunke, son of Darin and Staci Greunke of Winside; Ky Kenny, son of Joe and Kelly Kenny of Carroll; Cameron Muhs, son of Brock and Jamie Muhs of Carroll; Sam Perry, son of Angie Perry of Carroll; and James Simpson, son of Jeff and Colleen Simpson of Wayne.

The team consists of five members and two alternates.

"Overall, our club's goals are first of all, to instill safe firearm and archery handling practices in the youth. Second, we want to instruct that shooting sports are more than hunting. We coach the youth in the competitive style of shooting sports. Finally, we work to inform the youth that shooting sports is a family and lifetime sport," said Darin Greunke, Leader of the Sharp Shooters.

Of the seven youth headed to Arkansas, six have competed at this level in the past, with 12-year-old Aubrie Edwards looking forward to her first trip.

"This is my second year in the club. I also shoot with a bow and arrow and have been turkey hunting. I am the only girl going to nationals. The boys have been giving me advice on what to do when we get there," Aubrie said.

Aubrie said she has a target at home and when she isn't able to get to practices, which are generally held at the Carroll Auditorium or Darin's home, she practices on her own.

Joshua Greunke will be taking part in the national event for the third time.

Other than a nine-hour drive, he says he enjoys the event, which involves competing against youth of all ages.

When asked about what advice he would have for the younger shooters and those who have never been to the competition before, he said "relax and have fun."

"Our goals for nationals are to shoot the best we can for the weekend, to learn all we can and to have fun," Darin said.

There are 68 teams registered to take part in the event from all across the United States. The event is sponsored by Daisy Manufacturing, based in Rogers, Ark.

During the event, the competitors will shoot 10 shots for a score in each of four positions – prone, standing, sitting and kneeling. The youth are also required to take a written test covering firearm safety and the rules of the competition.

Greunke said that a perfect score for shooting is 400 (which is 100 points for each position) and the test is also worth 100 points.

In an effort to fund the trip and pay for club expenses, the group has conducted a number of fundraisers, including working at the Majestic Theatre, conducting a hog roast, working a concession stand at a gun show, Penny A Point sponsorships from friends and family members and several business sponsors.

Summer electric bill could shock

Have you received your first electric bill for the summer yet? Most public power utilities in Nebraska have higher rates during the months of June through September to offset higher costs associated with generating electricity during peak-use periods.

Rather than worry about how fast your air conditioner is making your electric meter spin and raising your monthly bill, wouldn't it be nice to know your system is the most efficient way to not only cool, but heat your home all year round? Read on for the solution.

Also called an earth-coupled heat pump or a geothermal heat pump, a ground source heat pump operates by transferring heat, rather than creating it. Below the frost line, the temperature of the earth in Nebraska stays fairly constant at 50-55 degrees Fahrenheit. Heat pumps provide summer cooling by extracting heat from your home and transferring it into the earth through a mechanical process. In the winter, that process can be reversed so the heat pump extracts heat from the earth and "pump" it into your home. Since it is much more efficient to transfer heat than to create it with electrical resistance or fossil-fueled furnaces, a ground source heat pump can provide up to five units of heating or cooling energy for each energy unit used to run the system.

Ground source heat pump systems generally fall into two categories: closed-loop and open-loop. Most closed-loop systems circulate an antifreeze solution through a closed loop, which is usually made of plastic tubing that is buried in the ground or submerged in water. A heat exchanger transfers heat between the refrigerant in the heat pump and the antifreeze solution in the closed loop.

Open-loop systems use well or surface water as the heat exchange fluid that circulates directly through the heat pump system. Once it has circulated through the system, the water returns to the ground through the well, a recharge well, or is discharged above ground. This option is especially practical when there is an adequate supply of relatively clean water and all local codes and regulations regarding groundwater discharge are met.

Ground source heat pump systems are reasonably warranted by manufacturers and their working life is estimated at 25 years for inside components. The plastic tubing for closed-loop systems will last from 50-100 years. Maintenance costs tend to be significantly less with a ground source system when compared to fossil-fueled heating systems.

Setup costs for ground source heat pumps are higher than for conventional systems, but the difference is usually returned in energy savings within 3 to 10 years. Even faster returns on investment are recognized with federal tax credits and EnergyWise efficiency incentives. Now through the end of 2016, homeowners may claim 30 percent of qualified expenditures associated with installing a ground source system. You may also qualify for cash incentives up to $1,700 from your local utility. With all of that going for ground-source heat pumps, why wouldn't you consider one for your home?

Your local utility and Nebraska Public Power District want to help you make the most of your energy dollar and reduce cooling costs without costing you a fortune. For more ideas on how you can make your home or business EnergyWise, along with possible energy efficiency financial incentives, contact your local utility or visit www.nppd.com.

County to look at project

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

The Wayne County Commissioners said they will talk with engineers about proposed changes in a bridge project near Carroll that caused concern for a land owner in the area.

At Tuesday's meeting, the board heard from Keelan Holloway of Monson and Holloway regarding easement on property owned by Darrel Hahn regarding a bridge project that the county is moving forward with.

Concerns about the flow of the water and potential erosion of the road were raised by Holloway, who asked the board to consider an alternative to the work being considered.

"The road is artificially diverting water from east to west until it gets to Deer Creek, and that erosion and water flow is eating at that road bed, and that's kind of what has necessitated that bridge project because there are some structural issues going on there," he told the board.

Holloway said that Hahn would have trouble getting around a corner on the south side of the road if the proposed work is carried out, and weeds and volunteer tress could potentially come out of the ditch and provide an obstruction of the view from the home.

"This is not something Darrell and his predecessors had envisioned when they laid out this home site, and we believe there is a better alternative," Holloway said.

Holloway said the county could go one of two different directions, either by taking advantage of the water's natural path to Deer Creek – which would help avoid maintenance issues on 859th Road and require cooperation from a third land owner; or go a different route on Hahn's property that would not require additional assistance from area landowners.

"When we had this last flood, we had water within 100 feet of my grain bin," Hahn told the board. "If we turn the water north, it will only get worse and the pressure of the water will cut more into the east bank, and we don't need to drop a semi off the end of that driveway."

Board chairman Randy Larsen said the project has seen more than its share of delays, but he said the board could present Holloway's proposals to their engineers and get a determination from them on the best solution for the project.

In other action, the board:

- spoke with Dale Krusemark regarding concerns he had on weed control on and near his property.

- approved a resolution for a hazard mitigation plan that is required for public entities to be eligible for pre-disaster and post-disaster federal funding.

- approved a disaster declaration for flood damage that took place on or around June 6.

- approved a resolution authorizing $1.5 million in highway allocation bonds.

- reviewed a change in the grant guidelines by the Wayne County Convention and Visitors Bureau. The change was brought about by a recent rejection by the county board of a grant application because the event, sponsored by an in-county entity, was taking place two blocks north of the county line in Wakefield. The change allows for grants to be considered for events taking place in Wakefield as an exception to the rule of events taking place strictly in Wayne County.

The county board's next scheduled meeting is Tuesday, July 7, at 9 a.m. at the Wayne County Courthouse.

fundraising to helping erect a new shelter and playground equipment in the city park.

"Tons of work had to be done, and this committee has been great to work with," said Farran, who is joined by fellow officers Trevor Hartman (vice president), Susie Rabe (treasurer) and Kim Jaeger (secretary), along with at least a dozen other volunteers. "We've all worked well together and gotten a lot of stuff done. It's people helping people, and it's exciting."

Downtown Winside is getting quite the freshening up in the days leading up to the 125th anniversary event. Street corners are getting a fresh coat of bright paint, a "Wildcat Pride" logo is being painted on the wall of the old Porky's bar, and the addition of a new building downtown has helped breathe life into the small town's main street atmosphere.

"That's something that our committee feels really strong about," Farran said. "We've been doing a lot of these things and the new Fontenelle Hybrid building downtown really motivated people to do some sprucing up downtown and has really gotten people excited about it. The annual alumni banquet was even rescheduled for this weekend, and we want people to come back to Winside and have a 'wow' reaction to the town when they come back."

About the only thing Farran and the committee haven't been able to plan for is the weather.

"The extended forecast said sunny and 90 for Friday and Saturday," he said. "I don't know if we can trust the weather man or not, but we'd sure take that. If it's like that, we'll have a huge crowd coming to town."

etery for more than four generations. I still remember mowing here when I was seven years old, and I'll be 65 in a couple of days. This is just so much disrespect."

Wayne County Sheriff Jason Dwinell told The Wayne Herald Thursday morning that a suspect has been identified in the crime, but had no other details as the incident is still under investigation.

About 10 markers have been damaged or destroyed by the willful recklessness of those involved in the crime. Krause said he has talked with two Norfolk monument companies, and hopes to have estimates to present to the Trinity Lutheran Church board in a couple of weeks.

One way or another, Krause said the senseless destruction isn't going to destroy the peacefulness of the little cemetery.

"We'll get it back to order sooner or later," he said.

the programs and services the Wayne City Library now offers.

"We've taken action to reduce costs, and we're hoping the efforts that have been taken will meet the Council's approval," Lofgren said. "If not, then we ask for your input on deciding which programs and events we should cut back or eliminate."

Eischeid said he was concerned with staffing at the library, noting that there have been occasions when three staff members have been working while only a few patrons were in the building.

"Especially at certain times of the day during school when the number of young individuals going to the library aren't there, there have been three library personnel working at the same time," he said, noting he had received a complaint regarding this issue.

Ankeny said the people who work at the library do more than help people find materials, noting that they are also involved in day-to-day maintenance, book repair and other duties.

"There are other things they do that they're not getting to right now," Ankeny told the Council. "We've reduced hours in the last month and we'll see how much that affects the services we provide. We'll have to give that some time and see how it overlaps."

Board member Jennifer Sievers said she appreciated the work that Lofgren and the Library Board are doing to make the cuts that have been requested.

"Cutting $60,000 is a pretty good chunk, and if you can still function and make the patrons happy, I think you've made some progress," she said.

Lofgren said she and the board will continue looking at the budget and have more information before the 2015-16 fiscal year budgets are given final approval. In other action, the board:

- approved final readings on several amendments to the city's municipal code.

- approved the application for membership to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department for Codie Rich, a student at Wayne State College.

- approved a supplemental agreement for Phase 2 of the city's walking trail, pending approval by the Department of Roads.

- authorized the city clerk to advertise for bids on the 2015 wastewater treatment facility improvements project.

- adopted a five-year renewal of the Lower Elkhorn NRD's multi-jurisdictional hazard mitigation plan update.

- approved payment to OCC Builders for $45,425 for work completed on the 2015 city's storm shelter project.

- approved a change order for $8,432.78 on behalf of Robert Woehler and Sons Construction for the water main relocation project.

- approved an application for the renewal of a wastewater discharge permit with the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality.

The City Council's next scheduled meeting is Tuesday, July 7, at 5:30 p.m. in Council chambers.

Renovation work for Bleachers

I'm doing something this week that I don't believe I've ever done in 30-plus years as a sports columnist: I'm taking time off for renovations.

Now that's not to say I'm not going to be AT The Wayne Herald for the next few weeks. I'll still be at the occasional ball game taking pictures, will continue to write local sports stories and will keep up with my usual duties here as sports editor and managing editor.

Now is the perfect time, however, to put the sports pen down and give it a rest while we do some work on the clubhouse suites, the artificial turf and the brand new high-definition scoreboard that's going up behind the press box (use your imagination – it's like Wrigley Field, only with better seating and colder beer).

Don't worry, though – fall sports season will be here before we know it, and by that time we'll have the new cushy seats in place and will be filling out those season ticket orders (you can drop your donation off here at the paper... it MIGHT be tax deductible, depending on the creativity of your tax accountant).

Before I wander off, though – a few thoughts from the "Bits and Pieces" file (the non-local version):

- Fans of some major league baseball teams are whining because, at last check, at least seven members of the Kansas City Royals lead the All-Star Game voting at their respective positions.
- I remember back in the 1970's when – if memory serves – five members of the Cincinnati Reds started for the National League. Considering some of the star power the Reds had at the time (players like Pete Rose, Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan, Dave Concepcion and George Foster bring back memories of baseball cards on the floor in my bedroom), it was no small wonder that one team was dominating the All-Star balloting like that.
- If you're a fan of one of the other American League teams and have a problem with all these Royals in the starting lineup, I'd encourage you to do what any good liberal Chicago politician would do – vote early and vote often for the candidate of your choice.
- Catching the end of Golden State's run to the NBA title, I was fully expecting Steph Curry to be named the finals MVP, knowing full well that – in spite of his team losing – Cleveland's LeBron James was the unquestioned most valuable player competing in the championship series. Without James in the lineup, the Cavaliers would have been run out of the series faster than you can say "reverse layup." Let's face it – Cleveland won 19 games last year without James – there is no way they even make the playoffs without him coming back home from Miami.
- So you can probably imagine my surprise when they gave it to, get this – Andre Iguodala????
- Hey, I'm not saying he's not a good player. But the guy had ZERO starts during the regular season and only started the final three games of the championship series (which, coincidentally, Golden State went 3-0).
- Kudos to Mr. Iguodala on the honor – but it just goes to show how clueless those who vote for these post-tournament awards really are sometimes.
- Reason No. 274 why me and my fellow Seattle Seahawks fans are drinking a little heavier than normal in the weeks leading up to the 2015 season: Russell Wilson still does not have a new contract.
- The quarterback who led the Seahawks to a Super Bowl title (and one play shy of a second) is playing out the final year of his contract (getting ONLY $1.5 million) and has taken out an insurance policy that will pay him several million dollars if he suffers a career-threatening injury.
- Seahawks fans are SCREAMING

Frederick Bruno catches a touchdown pass for the Sioux City Bandits during their 83-52 blowout of Amarillo in the CIF league semifinals. Bruno can win a third indoor football title in five seasons with the Bandits if they beat the Texas Revolution in Saturday's league championship game in Sioux City.

Bruno is having a blast with Sioux City Bandits

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

By the time most football players reach Frederick Bruno's age, their days of strapping on the pads and running all over the field are starting to become a distant memory.

For the 26-year-old former Wayne Stater, it feels like he's just getting warmed up.

After coming to Wayne, America from Miami, Fla., the former Wildcat found a place to continue enjoying the game he loves just up the road in Sioux City, where he'll be playing for a third league championship in five seasons this Saturday when the Sioux City Bandits battle the Texas Revolution for the Champions Professional Indoor Football League championship.

For Bruno, playing for a championship is becoming old hat. The wide receiver and kick returner was part of the Bandits' run of back-to-back undefeated championship teams in 2011 and 2012 in the now-defunct American Professional Football League, and the Bandits came up short last year in a 46-41 loss to the Wichita Wild in last year's CPIFL title game.

"This doesn't get old at all," a smiling Bruno said after the Bandits dominated the Amarillo Venom in an 83-52 blowout Saturday at the Tyson Events Center. "We made it to the championship game last year and had to go down to Wichita, and losing there left a bad taste in our mouths. Our goal this year was to get back to the championship game and now we've got that chance."

Bruno joined the Bandits on something of a random opportunity. He had participated in tryouts with the Omaha Nighthawks of the now-defunct United Football League, and also got some looks from a couple of

New rules for women's hoops

Attention, Wayne State women's basketball fans – get ready for some big changes next season.

The changes aren't coming to the Wildcat program in and of itself, but will come in the form of some significant rule changes that were passed down last week by the NCAA that, according to Wildcat coach Chris Kielsmeier, will make the game more exciting for fans.

The biggest rule change will be the switch from two 20-minute halves to four 10-minute quarters. The game format will mirror that of high school and professional basketball, which plays four-quarter games instead of two-half games as colleges have done for more than a century.

"It's going to take a while to get used to, but we're still playing 40 minutes so I don't know how big a change it really will be," Kielsmeier said. "It will be similar from a coach's standpoint, but it should be more exciting for the fans and will offer more chances for things like in-game promotions and music between plays."

The timing change will be very similar to the WNBA, including stoppages of play. Prior to the change, programmed or band music could be played only during time outs. Now, music can be played during any stoppage of play, such as an out of bounds situation or other change of possession with a clock stoppage.

There will also be one media time out per quarter, coming at the midway point of each quarter. This differs from the two-half system where media time outs were called every 4-5 minutes.

Another significant change coming to the women's college game will be with team fouls. Now, opposing teams will shoot two free throws after five team fouls, rather than a 1-and-1 after seven under the old system.

Two other notable rule changes include a clarification on the hand-check of post players down low, and the ability for teams to move the ball to midcourt late in the game after a time out.

"With the post play, now you can have a hand on the player with a bent elbow if their back is to the basket," Kielsmeier said. "They wanted to simplify that rule on the play in the post. It's a minor change, but it makes it easier for everybody to understand what you can do defensively in that situation."

In the final minute of regulation or overtime, teams can call a time out and move the ball to midcourt, provided they haven't inbounded the ball or moved it up the floor. This rule mirrors what is done in NBA and WNBA games.

Cliff steps down as WSC soccer coach

An immediate nationwide search is underway at Wayne State College to replace women's soccer coach Tom Cliff, who resigned June 9 after two seasons with the Wildcats.

"We've formed a search committee and will be getting the job posted and try to fill the position as soon as possible," athletic director Mike Powicki said when reached by The Wayne Herald on his way to an athletic director's convention this week in Orlando, Fla.

Powicki said the school was in a similar situation two years ago when Cliff replaced Molly Grisham as head coach, and felt confident the school would be able to conduct a thorough search to hire the right candidate.

No reason was given for the resignation by Cliff, who was 5-28-3 (4-24-2 NSIC) during his two seasons with the Wildcats.

Baldwin competes

Joey Baldwin of Wayne made the 32-man cut for the bracket of the 48th annual Nebraska State Men's Match Play Championship, held last week in Valentine at The Prairie Club. Baldwin faced Greg Stanek of Bellevue in the first round of match play competition on Saturday and lost, 5 and 3.

Dirt Devil 14's get wins at home

The Wayne Dirt Devils 14-under team swept a home triangular on June 9, defeating Arlington and Tekamah-Herman Gold in league action.

In the first game, Wayne out-hit Arlington 6-4 and took advantage of four errors by the visitors to come away with a 7-3 victory. Wayne broke the game open with a six-run third inning, highlighted by RBI singles from Sidney Biggerstaff and Allison Claussen. Both had two RBIs to lead the Wayne offense.

Tori Kniesche got the win in the circle for the Devils, striking out eight and allowing four hits and three walks in four innings of action.

In the second game, Aviana Doring's two-run triple in the third tied a high-scoring game at 6-6 and helped propel the Devils to an 8-6 win over Tekamah-Herman Gold.

Kniesche and Abby Ankeny each had two hits to highlight an eight-hit attack. Annie Kniesche had two hits and scored two runs, and Claussen added a two-run double.

Tori Kniesche again picked up the win, striking out six and allowing six walks and three hits.

 Canadian Football League teams, but nobody showed any interest.

"It was a thing where they had 100 guys trying out and two coaches watching everybody, so it was hard for everybody to get a good look," he said.

While still finishing his degree at Wayne State College and working at Great Dane, Bruno joined some buddies in heading up to Sioux City for a tryout with the Bandits. The rest, as they say, is history.

"I still had some school left after my football was done at Wayne State, so I figured why not," he said. "It worked out pretty well for me."

Bruno had a hand in two of Sioux City's 11 touchdowns on the night against an overmatched Amarillo team. He caught six passes for 61 yards and a touchdown, then added 17 yards on two carries for another score as the Bandits' offense was not stopped all night while racking up 274 yards against the Venom defense.

Bruno, who is one of four former Wildcats playing for the Bandits (the others include offensive line-man Brent Schlote, linebacker Richard Daniel and kicker Max Martin), is confident his team can handle the Revolution this Saturday, and he's hoping he can continue to play indoor football for the foreseeable future.

"It's something I love to do, and I'll keep doing it until my legs stop working," he said.

Former Wildcat named to NSIC Hall of Fame

Former Wayne State women's soccer and softball standout Sarah (Herrick) Wagenfuhr will be one of eight individuals that will be inducted into the Northern Sun Conference Hall of Fame during the NSIC's 16th annual Summer Kick-off event next month.

Wagenfuhr was an outstanding two-sport star at Wayne State from 1998-2002, excelling in soccer and softball. The native of Elkhorn was a four-time All-NSIC performer in softball and a three-time All-NSIC selection in soccer.

Wagenfuhr is the school's all-time leader in soccer goals with 72, including a school-record 23 goals in the 2001 season. She is also the career leader in assists in soccer with 51. Herrick still ranks ninth in career assists in the NSIC with 18 and 14th in career points (58) despite only being in the league for three years (Wayne State's first year in the NSIC was 1999). Herrick led Wayne State to an 18-4-1 record in the 2000 season and a second-place finish in the NSIC Tournament as a junior. In her senior season, Wayne State was 14-9 and placed third in the 2001 NSIC Tournament. Wayne State's three most prolific years in women's soccer were under Herrick's play in 1999, 2000 and 2001.

Wagenfuhr also held numerous school records in softball, including the career hits leader with 201, while ranking second in career at bats with 606. She was the first Wildcat player to reach 200 career hits and still ranks fourth in the category today along with fourth in career stolen bases with 54. She had 62 hits in the 2002 season, a school record until the 2008 season.

Wagenfuhr graduated from Wayne State in 2002 with a B.S. Sports Management and a minor in coaching. She was inducted into the Wayne State College Athletics Hall of Fame in 2008. Wagenfuhr is the third Wayne State individual to be inducted into the NSIC Hall of Fame, joining athletic director Pete Chapman (posthumously) in 2006 and baseball standout Brady Borner in 2012. She and her husband David have three children, Gabby, Izzy and Trueman and reside in Omaha.

Induction ceremonies will take place on Wednesday, July 14 at the Best Western Premier in Burnsville, Minn.

Juniors post 9-0 shutouts

On Friday, Wayne broke a scoreless tie with an eight-run barrage in the fourth inning to post a 9-0 win over Pierce in action Friday at Pierce.

Neither team scored through the first three innings, but Wayne's big inning in the fourth helped them post the victory.

Tyler Lutt and Justin Dean each had two hits to lead a seven-hit attack. Dean had a double and two RBI's and Lutt scored twice. Adam Bentjen, Mikey Reyes and Brennen O'Reilly also had hits.

Caden Korth went the distance on the mound for the Wayne Juniors, throwing a two-hit shutout. He struck out seven and walked five in the complete-game win.

On Tuesday, the Juniors turned the run-rule trick on Wisner's home field, taking care of the hosts 9-0 in a five-inning matchup.

Lutt twirled a three-hit shutout, striking out two and walking two. His offense supported him with seven hits, including two by Korth, who had a double and an RBI to lead the charge. Payten Gamble singled and scored a run, Zane Jackson doubled, Dean doubled and scored, Tucker Nichols singled, Bentjen and Reyes both singled and scored, and O'Reilly scored two runs.

Wayne is 8-5 overall and 5-1 in Ralph Bishop League play. They host Battle Creek on Friday at 7 p.m., host Platteview in a Saturday doubleheader at 1 p.m., and host Laurel on Monday at 7 p.m. at Hank Overin Field.

Dirt Devil 18's win thriller

The Wayne Dirt Devils 18-under softball team came away with a big win Tuesday night in league play, posting an extra-inning 4-3 win over Tekamah at the Summer Sports Complex.

The game was tied at 3-3 going to the eighth inning, but Jamie Gamble came through with the game-winning hit, as her single scored Jacques Sherman with the winning run.

Danica Schaefer led the offensive attack with a 3-for-4 effort at the plate. Kiara Hochstein and Abbie Hix both had two hits, and Kennedy Maly added a single.

Ashten Gibson go the win in the circle, striking out four while allowing one hit and five walks.

Wayne is 18-5 on the season and will play in league tournament action beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. in Tekamah.

Kim Schramm, Wayne State College Grounds Arboretum Landscape Manager, receives congratulations from Curt Frye, Wayne State College President for a decade of service to Wayne State College. The Wayne State College Arboretum is a Teaching and Community Arboretum located on the Wayne State College Campus. Steps to become affiliated with the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum began in 1976. The Wayne State College "Tree Committee" was granted status as a "Teaching and Community Arboretum" in July 1977. The Wayne State College Arboretum was formally dedicated in a ceremony on October 20, 1977 with Dr. Charles R Maier as acting curator. An initial inventory of the Wayne State College Arboretum in 1976 listed 87 species of trees and shrubs. Today the inventory consists of more than 280 species, cultivars and varieties of trees and shrubs. The Campus also has many ornamental plantings with the focus being sustainable landscapes using Nebraska natives.

Hix earns scholarship

Hix was also a member of National Honor Society, FBLA, band, Student Council, Spanish Club and the "W" Letterman Club.

Hix plans to major in exercise science and nutrition at Wayne State College.

Crude oil prices down $46 a barrel from last year

With the summer driving season underway, the national average price for regular unleaded gasoline continues to hover near what many expect to be the highest average of the year, but remain substantially lower than a year ago. AAA reports that with the national average at $2.74, consumers are saving 91 cents per gallon compared to this same date last year.

Nebraska's fuel average is currently nine cents lower than the national average at $2.65 a gallon. A year ago, Nebraskans were paying 87¢ more per gallon with unleaded fuel averaging $3.52 a gallon.

Lower crude oil prices are the main reason for the savings at the pump. Crude oil which is currently trading at $58 a barrel in the U.S. market was trading at $104 a barrel at this same time a year ago.

For more information on fuel prices, visit AAA's website at www.fuel-gaugereport.com.

Friend Marlyce in Orlando is now residing in a total retirement community in Oviedo. When I say total, that is what I mean; they are in a house, but there is opportunity to move to assisted living, then to skilled care, and finally, to the cemetery! That is total.

Anyway, it's been quite a process; cleaning closets, throwing things, having a garage sale, putting the house on the market, and then hoping it passes inspection. Her husband is a retired pastor and there was even talk about throwing all his sermons, which I objected to, and their son in law offered to put on a CD. Technology to the rescue!

One evening, during a call, she asked what to do with her wedding dress! They've been married 54 years, so it's definitely not in style anymore. None of the three daughters wore it. It's been in a box since August of 1961. We both laughed and wondered what you can do with an old wedding dress.

Mine is also in a box, and has been taken out twice for bridal shows; that was fun to see it modeled by someone much thinner. It was also on display for our anniversary celebration, but now, it's back in the box.

I went to Pinterest. You can make christening gowns, pillows, tree skirts, handkerchiefs, and all kinds of pretty things with them. But that means cutting them up. I don't like the thought of that.

I'm thinking of donating to a local costume shop. But, for now, I have many other things to get rid of, so will postpone that decision to another day. But it is an interesting question; I have a hunch she moved it to the new residence for now. Let the kids take care of it!

happen on a 10 day trip, but overall it was a fantastic time and I would highly recommend the trip to any youth who is interested, whether through 4-H or some other sponsored trip.

We talk a lot about citizenship and how our country's government works, and about the sacrifices that so many have made for us. The buildings are immense and the monuments are powerful reminders of the sacrifice. There isn't very much free time, there are always things to see and workshops to participate in. Contact your local Extension office if you are interested in a future trip.

As you know, there will be no poultry shows at county fairs or the state fair in Nebraska and surrounding states this year due to Avian Influenza. Nebraska Extension is working to identify options for youth enrolled in poultry projects to showcase their learning and participate in fairs in other ways than having their birds present.

We will have alternatives for poultry shows. This is a high priority and we will be recommending alternatives that protect our bird population and producers in Nebraska.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be offering a Feedlot School at West Point in June. Feedlot employees in that area are encouraged to attend the event on Tuesday, June 23 at the West Point Livestock Auction Market (839 S. Colfax/Highway 275). The goal of this program is to assist with the training of feedlot employees in the

Winside native participates in Masonic band

Connor Lemke-Elznic, from Winside Public High School, is one of 247 high school students from across Nebraska who participated in the 21st Annual Masonic All-Star Marching Band.

The band performed June 6 during Shrine Bowl festivities in Kearney.

Connor is the son of Melissa Lemke-Elznic and Jason Elznic of Winside.

The band members devoted four days of intense practice starting June 2, to learn the music, marching steps and field formations. The band gave their first public performance with a public concert at Harmon Park on June 5. The band led the Shrine Bowl Parade down Kearney's Central and 1st Avenue on June 6, and also performed the pregame National Anthem and during half-time of the 57th Annual Shrine Bowl football game at Ron & Carol Cope Stadium, on Foster Field, at the University of Nebraska—Kearney.

The band members were hosted by the Masons of Nebraska, and were directed by Brad Weber, retired Band Director from Wayne High School, currently Instructor of Percussion at Wayne State College; Dan Sodomka, Band Director at Aurora High School; and Dr. Dave Bohnert, Director of Bands at Wayne State College.

Connor received a scholarship from Wayne Lodge No. 120. The scholarship covered the costs of the camp.

"We demanded a lot of the students during the past week," Weber said. "They responded professionally and worked very hard."

The 21st annual Nebraska Masonic All-Star Marching Band Camp was held on the campus of the University of Nebraska-Kearney (UNK) in Kearney from June 2 through June 7.

The band rehearsed in the mornings, afternoons and evenings in three different areas. Indoor rehearsals were held in the UNK Field House, field marching was held at the UNK Football Field and parade rehearsals were held on several streets in Kearney.

The Masonic All-Star Marching Band performed at concert on Friday evening in the Kearney Municipal Park. On Saturday morning they marched in downtown Kearney for the Shrine Bowl Parade and then Saturday afternoon performed their field show during half time of the Shrine Bowl at the UNK Football Stadium.

The three directors of the Nebraska Masonic All-Star Marching Band were Brad Weber, Retired Director of Bands at Wayne High School and currently Instructor of Percussion at WSC. This is Brad's 17th year as director of this band. Dr. David Bohnert, Director of Bands and Trumpet Instructor at WSC.

This is Dr. Bohnert's 16th year as director of this band. Dan Sodomka, Director of Bands at Aurora High School in Aurora. This is his 16th year as director of this band.

2014 Tornadoes – One Year Later

Troyers thankful for local help after tornado

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

LAUREL – One of the first things you notice when you pull up to Paul and Doris Troyer's home northeast of Laurel is how quiet and still it is. Just a stone's throw south of Highway 20, the peacefulness of the Cedar County countryside stood in stark contrast to the violent storm that destroyed just about everything around them one year ago this week.

A series of tornadoes rocked eastern Cedar County on June 17, 2014, and at least one of the twisters found its way to Troyer's property, destroying everything but the family home and a small out building.

Troyer and his business partner, Dr. Brian Schantz, ran Diversified Management Co., a veterinarian and farm consulting business, out of an old dairy barn that is no more than 20 yards away from the Troyers' home.

Early that evening, Mr. Troyer could see that the storms were heading in their direction.

"I was here alone and went down into the basement," he said, noting that he heard the first warning around 8 p.m. and saw the storm heading his way a couple of hours later.

While he was riding the storm out, Doris Troyer and two of her daughters were headed to Georgia to visit her third daughter, not aware of what was happening until she started getting strange text messages on her smart phone as they were driving through Nashville, Tenn. "I had gotten a couple of text message from nieces who were playing softball in Laurel to see if I was OK, and we didn't know any of this was See LAUREL, Page 8B

Salem Lutheran Church in Wakefield became a modern-day soup kitchen for those who lost their homes in the June 16, 2014 tornado that struck rural homes just south of town. Hundreds of meals were delivered to those who were hit by the storms, as well as the thousands of volunteers who helped with cleanup efforts.

Wakefield community helps out rural neighbors

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

WAKEFIELD – One mile may not seem like much in the way of distance . . . unless it's a matter of your town's survival.

The community of Pilger, located about 25 miles southwest of Wakefield, was all but destroyed by a tornado late on the afternoon of June 16, 2014. That storm didn't stop after it leveled that community, though . . . it continued north and east and took out more than a dozen rural homes, just missing the community of Wakefield a mile to the east.

While the tornado missed the small town of just over 1,400 that straddles the border between Wayne and Dixon counties, that didn't stop the city's people from jumping at the chance to help their country neighbors.

Wakefield City Administrator Jim Litchfield said the community knew the storm was coming, but were still shocked by what they saw in the aftermath.

"Even though you prepare for situations like this, we still weren't ready for what we were about to see out in the country," he said. "It was a real eye-opener."

Rhonda Lorenzen, who runs Wakefield's Nearly New non-profit store, lives a mile east of the John Sandahl residence, one of more than a dozen that were destroyed in the tornado's wake.

"When it was over, we got everything loaded into the truck and took off to see if the neighbors needed any help," she said.

Lyle Ekberg, Wakefield's fire chief, heard from one of his firefighters who had gone out to look for the storm that it was only about a mile away from town.

"The storm had hit John Sandahl's residence, which is just south of town, so we decided we should keep blowing the whistle," he said. "After the storm had passed, we had people showing up from all over, so it was a big challenge getting organized and making sure everybody knew what they were doing."

Fortunately, the people of Wakefield had what local minister Charity Potter called "a dry run" eight months earlier when a tornado hit Wayne and came within a few miles of Wakefield.

"Everybody had just gone through with the Wayne tornado, so it really kind of felt like a rerun," the Presbyterian Church pastor said. "We just kind of got busy and everybody started checking on everybody."

And it wasn't long before the community of Wakefield became something of a forgotten entity while, it seemed, the rest of civilization was focusing on the damage that had been done in Pilger.

Lorenzen said people at a church in Fremont had heard about Wakefield's plight, and it wasn't long before people in that community were sending semi trailers full of goods to town.

"A lady in Fremont had challenged her church, and they took it to other churches in town there and they filled two semis full of everything from clothes to toilet paper to dog food to Spam," Lorenzen said. "When they got here, it was like triage and we'd organize everything and get it where it needed to go."

It wasn't long before Wakefield had more things than they knew what to do with – which was both a blessing and a curse.

"We had tubs full of toothbrushes and toothpaste," Potter said. "It seemed like every bag you would open, there would be more toothbrushes and toothpaste."

"We had more than we could possibly need," Lorenzen added, noting that some eventually were donated to U.S. troops overseas and put in the backpacks of local elementary students.

As it turns out, the needs of those who had lost their homes to the tornado were met in a big way. From clothes to gas cards, donations came pouring in from all over – even from Pilger.

"I think that Pilger got overwhelmed with the stuff they were getting, and eventually they were calling and asking if we'd take a truck, and we had gotten organized to the point where we could be item-specific, and if it was a hodge-podge of things, we'd have to pass on it," Potter said.

Organization seemed to be the catch word in Wakefield in the aftermath of the storm. From the organization of the Nearly New store

Pilger is 'back open for business'

PILGER – A ground-breaking ceremony that almost ended with no dirt turned over.

Officials from Midwest Bank nearly forgot the most important part of Friday's ceremony for the new bank that will be built in Pilger, but recovered in time as bank officials and local dignitaries officially got Pilger's comeback started from a tornado that nearly wiped out the town just 12 months earlier.

With the gold-plated shovels turning the soft dirt, the applause of more than 200 local residents and community supporters got the weekend's activities off on the right foot. Bank and city officials were joined by Lt. Gov. Mike Foley and U.S. Senator Deb Fischer to get the weekend's activities under way.

to the city opening its doors to Team Rubicon to get volunteer support where it was needed, the community seemed to come together in a unified effort to support not only those who needed help, but those who were providing it.

"Salem Lutheran Church said early on that they could do the meals, and they were doing it by noon the next day," Potter said. "People could come to the church, or they'd find a way to get food out to people, and you never realize how big a deal that is until you're in a situation where it's 20-30 minutes just to go get the food and you're busy trying to clean up from the storm. Some people would have gone without food, and we knew people needed to stay healthy so we had to get it out to them."

Litchfield said Team Rubicon's headquarters in the city office was a Godsend as far as organizing the volunteer support.

"So many people were coming to help out, and we had so much stuff here that we couldn't get the fire trucks out," he said. "Team Rubicon came in and were able to start organizing the volunteers, and people were coming from everywhere to work. It was really amazing to see."

It would have been easy for the community to pass the effort off since the people who were directly impacted lived outside of city limits.

"This was a county thing, and the city's involvement was really impressive," Potter said. "They didn't have to do everything that they did."

Litchfield said that thought never entered into the minds of those who helped out.

"Whether it directly affected our community or not, these people are still a part of the community and it's important to us to try and help out the people living in the rural area," he said. "We saw so many things that had to be dealt with in a quick manner, and we had some of our own issues as well and between Team Rubicon and the churches and everybody else that came in, it was a really big help."

Now, a year later, people of all ages have a new appreciation for the power and destruction Mother Nature can unleash with a tornado. From tornado drills at the school that were closely followed by the students to the posting of "what to do" maps in every Sunday School room at the local church that could be seen during Vacation Bible School programs, people in the community seem more in tune with the impact those violent storms can bring.

"The day after the tornado, we had to take our daughter on a college visit," Lorenzen said, "and when we came back and pulled up in front of her friend's house, she looked at the school down the street and said 'You know what, Mom? A mile further to the west and my senior year would have been a whole lot different.' This hit so close to town, and I think it really hit a lot of people. That's where a lot of this outpouring of help has come from. People were so grateful that it didn't hit Wakefield. The devastation was unbelievable, but one mile to the west and it could have been a whole different story."

going on," she said. "Paul called about 9:30 and said the tornadoes were just sitting there, and then he called back a little later and said we'd been hit."

"The worst part of it was that it seemed like the storms were out there a long time, and I wasn't sure what was going to happen," Mr. Troyer said.

Mrs. Troyer turned around immediately that evening and headed for home. By the time she was a few minutes away the following morning, she could see for herself what had happened.

"We had seen some satellite images on Google, but then about 10 miles out I started noticing some of the places that had been hit and the trees that were gone, and we came back here and just about everything was flattened."

With papers from the business strewn all over the place, the Troysers said it looked like a bomb had been dropped - but they were more fortunate than some of their neighbors.

"We had some neighbors lose their homes and all their personal belongings, so we were fortunate that our house survived with only some exterior damage," Mrs. Troyer said.

As they were beginning to clean up, the Troysers started noticing people coming from Laurel, and then from other parts of the area, to help them and their neighbors clean up from what the storm had left behind.

"I'm not sure even how many people showed up," Mr. Troyer said, estimating at least 100 being there at various times over the course of the two weeks after the storm. "We had some of our customers come from Humphrey and Lindsay and Lemars, Iowa to help, but we had a lot of people from in town (Laurel) who were helping."

"Some of our friends from in town came out to help and brought in a lot of machinery," Mrs. Troyer added. "One of our friends from in town were working with a guy and realized they didn't know who he was. He was just somebody who came by and wanted to help out."

Mr. Troyer and Dr. Schantz, with the help of employees Trudy Peters, Linda Stewart and Stacie Schutte, found temporary quarters in downtown Laurel, thanks to the help of Dave Kardell, and were able to continue operations until moving back into their new building at the Troysers' home about a month ago. Stewart's son, Jason, helped put the buildings up while Doris' brother, Mike Mestl, came over from West Point to do the interior work.

The Troysers were grateful for the help they, and their neighbors, received from people in town.

"With all the places around here that were hit, it was amazing that nobody was seriously hurt," Mrs. Troyer said. "It's not the kind of phone call you want to get when you're on the road, but we're just grateful for all the people who helped us out and did what they were able to do."

"It was a long year and a lot of cleaning up, but it will definitely be an interesting memory," Mr. Troyer added.

Pilger

The town celebrated its survival after a massive tornado nearly wiped it out on June 16, 2014.

"Pilger is open for business," said Midwest Bank President Doug Johnson, a Pilger native who said it was a much better scene Friday than the one he remembered almost 12 months to the day.

"It bothered me that I couldn't come into the town where I had walked the streets thousands of times as a kid without this badge," he said, holding up an orange identification badge that allowed people inside the community in the weeks following the tornado. "It was necessary, but it was very gut-wrenching to have limited access to your home town. But we can put it away now."

The artist's rendition of the new bank building, which will be built on the corner of Main and Second streets in downtown Pilger, drew a chorus of "oohs" and "aahs" from those gathered on Pilger's Main Street Friday afternoon. The building will be part of what is envisioned as a new downtown district for the small Stanton County community, where a new fire hall, community center and other buildings are being discussed by community leaders.

For Pilger's village clerk, Kim Neimann, the new bank will be a very welcome sight for her.

"I'm so glad the bank's coming back because I can't get change anywhere in town," she said to a laughing crowd.

Neimann noted many of the updates on reconstruction and rebuilding projects taking place in the community one year after "The Town Too Tough To Die" was nearly destroyed. More than 40 building permits have been issued in recent weeks, 17 of those for residential housing.

Other highlights include the opening of the city's swimming pool - made possible by an anonymous $25,000 donation to help cover expenses for the summer - new street signs are being put in place, streets are being fixed and the piles of debris that were left on the west edge of town will soon be a distant memory.

"There's lots more to do and the village employees are trying to take it a day at a time and not get overwhelmed," she said, asking those in attendance to be patient as the city continues its efforts.

Those who came - and came back - to Pilger on Saturday and Sunday were greeted by a host of activities, including a walking tour of the community with stops at several model homes that were being rebuilt in the community. The tour started in the city park and wound its way around the community, including the site of the old school building that, aside from the front door that was left standing, was completely gone.

On Sunday, dignitaries and a large group of area residents were on hand for the dedication of a new flag pole in front of the Pilger Library as part of the events celebrating the one-year anniversary of the tornado.

Among those speaking were Foley, Nebraska senators Paul Schumacher, Lydia Brasch and Dave Bloomfield.

All praised the efforts of the residents of the village during the past year and said that the community has the opportunity to move forward and redesign the community and make this area ready for the 21st century and the challenges of feeding a changing world.

"Since the tornado, I have seen lots of courage, strength and kindness in this community. You are a people who will not give up and everyone is helping each other," Brasch said.

The program on Sunday afternoon was organized by the American Legion and Nebraska's American Legion Riders, with a large number of motorcycle riders part of the crowd.

The village was presented with a flag that had flown over the nation's capital that had earlier been presented to American Legion Post 1 in Omaha. The American Legion Post then decided to give the flag to the village of Pilger.

A new flag pole has been installed with the base having significance to the date of last year's tornadoes - June 16, 2014.

Neimann spoke to those in attendance and said the flag "means so much, including the resilience and strength of the town of Pilger."

American Legion officials making comments during the ceremony were Michael D. Helm, National Commander of the American Legion, Fred Craige, Department Commander and Dave Salak, American Legion State Adjutant, who served as master of ceremonies.

Don't get me started

Father's Day and other thoughts

Some thoughts and observations before they come to take me away for what could politely be called "A long overdue time away from the office".

Father's Day is coming up this weekend, and it's going to feel a little strange for me to not be spending it with my oldest daughter.

As you can see from the picture below, Kylie shares her dad's love for sports (to say nothing of our ability to mug for the camera). We argue about the NFL, yell at the TV when the Huskers lose, and will occasionally call each other during major sporting events to discuss what we're watching. Our favorite shared activity, though, is making the annual trip to the College World Series to watch one of the games during the two-week tournament.

It's become a tradition for us, one we started after I moved to Wayne several years ago. I had acquired a pair of tickets from Galen Wiser and took Kylie to the game, which happened to fall on Father's Day. We had so much fun that we decided to make it an annual tradition (also a part of the tradition is the photo you see — which should give you some indication as to whose sense of humor she inherited in her DNA).

This year, the first weekend of the College World Series happened the week before Father's Day, so we moved our annual trek up a week (and thanks to Mike and Sara Naeve for the great seats). We always pick a team to root for — she asks who I'm picking, then goes for the other team . . . I seem to recall she's better at picking the winners, which is funny because I'm the one that follows sports for a living. Last weekend, we took in the first game on Sunday, a matchup between LSU and TCU. I went with the Tigers, who have a long and storied tradition of coming to Omaha. Kylie went with the Horned Frogs, which was a relief for her because she didn't want to have to root for Texas A&M (who lost to TCU in a 16-inning thriller in their final super regional game last week).

And the winner was — once again — my daughter. She picked TCU, and the Horned Frogs came through with a 10-3 beatdown of the Tigers.

Next weekend, she is going to take the idea of Father's Day to a new level, as she and my granddaughter will be helping the new daddy in the family celebrate his day. I'm not at liberty to discuss details of what will be happening, but suffice to say it will be a special first Father's Day for Dan.

Unless he's rooting for LSU, of course . . .

There's a special place in purgatory for those who are committing the unthinkable vandalism that has taken place recently at the Trinity Cemetery just west of Hoskins.

I had a chance to go out there and take pictures of some of the damage for a story this week. To say the damage that has been done out there is disappointing would be a grand understatement.

Exactly what would cause somebody to think that knocking over grave-stones and stealing veteran's memorials is a good idea is on so low a level of human intelligence that I can't possibly comprehend. This is such a complete lack of respect for the dignity and life of another human being. The Wayne County Sheriff's Office is investigating the case, and I hope that they will be able to bring these thoughtless, evil, pathetic examples of the human race to justice.

Having a small slice of family history in Winside, and having visited the town a time or two, I'm fully aware of the community's capabilities when it comes to showing an out-of-towner a good time.

If you go to Winside's Q125 celebration this weekend and don't leave with a smile on your face from the fun that you're going to have there — something is really wrong with you.

There will be a lot of fun things for people of all ages to enjoy, from bounce houses for the kids to tractor pulls for the adults and everything in between. The people involved with the celebration have put in a lot of hard work getting things ready for this weekend, so you should have no problems enjoying yourself this weekend in Winside.

If you don't — that's your problem.

Something wrong with this?

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The state treasurer, a state senator from Omaha and a senior adviser to the governor walk into the Nebraska Secretary of State's office. It's not the set-up for a joke. There is nothing mildly amusing about it. In fact, it's a matter of life and death.

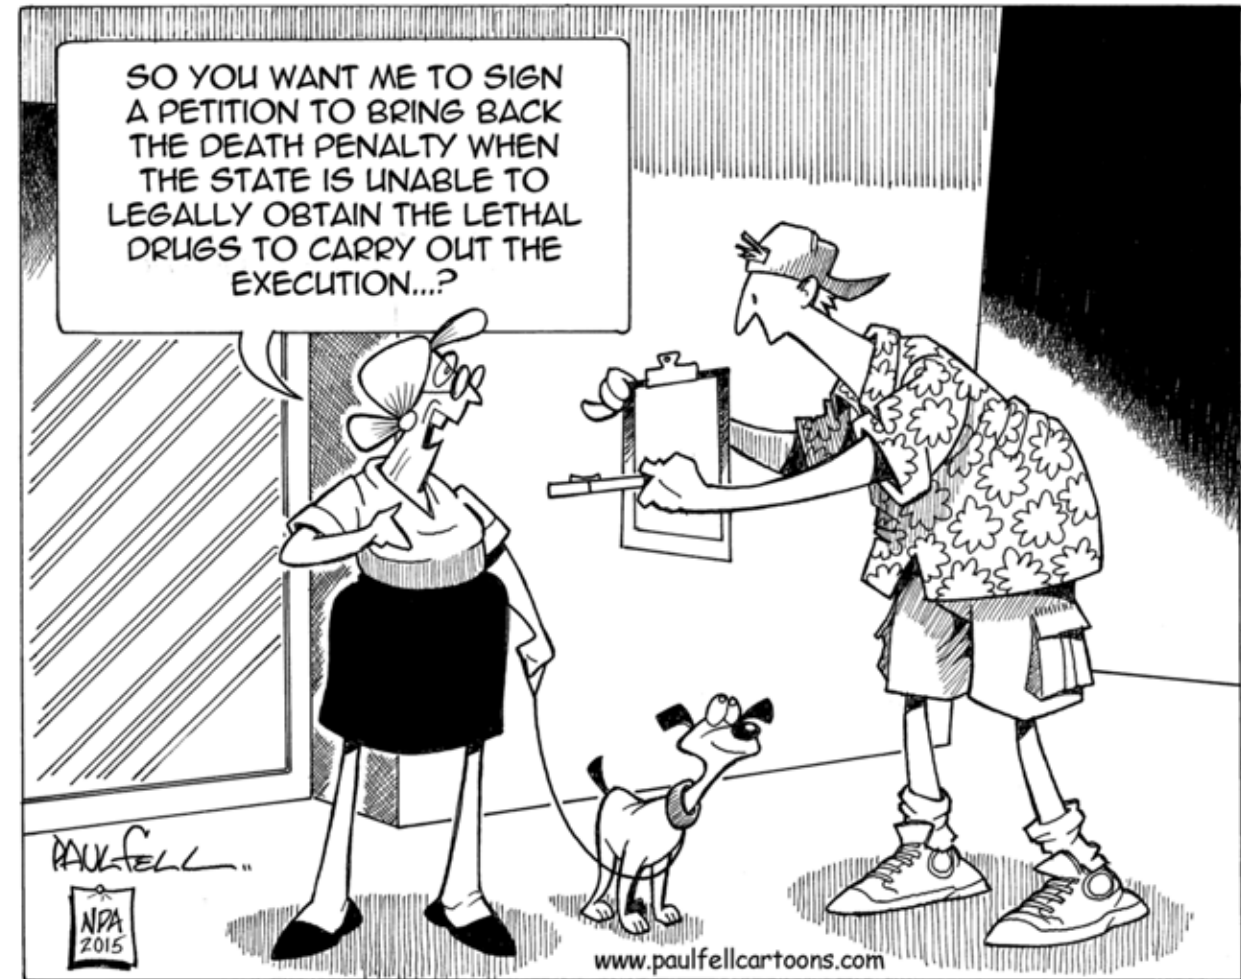

Treasurer Don Stenberg, state Sen. Beau McCoy and privately paid adviser Jessica Moenning are doing the bidding of Governor Pete Ricketts, whose attempt to keep the death penalty on the books was thwarted by a legislative veto override during the waning days of the recently completed session. McCoy and Stenberg are the co-chairs of Nebraskans for the Death Penalty and Moenning — who is paid an undisclosed amount by Ricketts — will be the campaign coordinator of the attempt to put the death penalty question on the ballot.

Stenberg was the Attorney General during the only three executions since 1959 when mass murderer Charles Starkweather died in the electric chair at the Nebraska State Penitentiary. The state killed Wili Otey in September 1994, John Joubert in July 1996 and Robert E. Williams in December 1997. They were the first executions since 1976 when the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty.

There hasn't been an execution since. There are currently 10 men on death row.

The group formed less than a week after lawmakers voted to override Gov. Pete Ricketts' veto of a bill (LB268) to abolish the death penalty. Ricketts endorsed the campaign on June 2. His senior adviser, Jessica Moenning, will serve as the referendum effort's campaign coordinator. Moenning has managed Ricketts campaigns since 2006.

Moenning, first appointed several months ago by Ricketts, is officially a privately paid senior adviser. That arrangement has prompted questions about a private employee, paid out of the governor's own pocket, being involved in public policies. To whom is such an employee accountable? Ricketts says she is accountable to him and he is accountable to the voters.

It's called political patronage and is legally defined as the practice or custom observed by a political official of filling government positions with qualified employees of his or her own choosing. It's been done before. Governor Ben Nelson hired campaign director Sunny Foster to head the Department of Administrative Services. Governor Mike Johanns hired his neighbor and good friend Lori McClurg to head DAS. Governor Dave Heineman hired campaign manager Carlos Castillo to head DAS. But those people have all been public employees, paid for by public funds.

Ricketts said Moenning's position fits with his pledge to run state government differently. Keeping her on his private payroll, rather than the state's, will allow her to better focus on long-term strategies and setting up advisory committees to provide broader input on policy decisions.

Well, excuse me Governor. Does that mean that Nebraskans for the Death Penalty is an advisory committee and that allowing the state to execute the men on death row is a long-term strategy? Forgive me, I thought it was all just a knee-jerk response to the Legislature voting to override your vetoes of the death penalty measure and two others.

I must admit that your comment that you need someone like Moenning who can really be divorced "from the day-to-day . . . and not get caught up in the urgent things that happen every day" really has me confused given the urgency that you have portrayed in needing to get enough signatures quickly to allow you to execute people before the public has a chance to vote on the issue.

Silly me, I would have thought that addressing the crying needs in the Corrections System in the aftermath of a bloody Mother's Day riot that left two dead in Tecumseh would be more of a long-term strategy issue. To say nothing of the new round of appeals that will be filed on behalf of the death row inmates in an effort to further derail your blood lust.

And, while we're at it, surely state Treasurer Stenberg has some fiscal things to deal with and Sen. McCoy has more pressing constituent issues to address.

Legislative Update

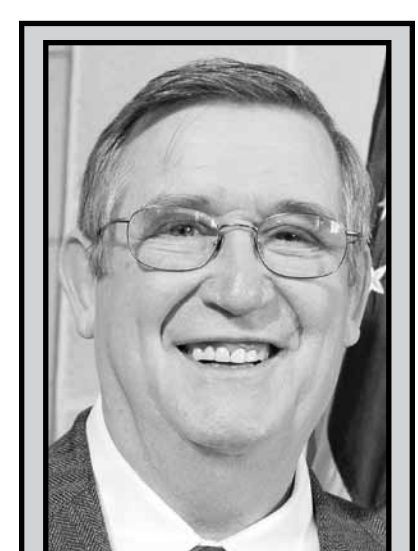

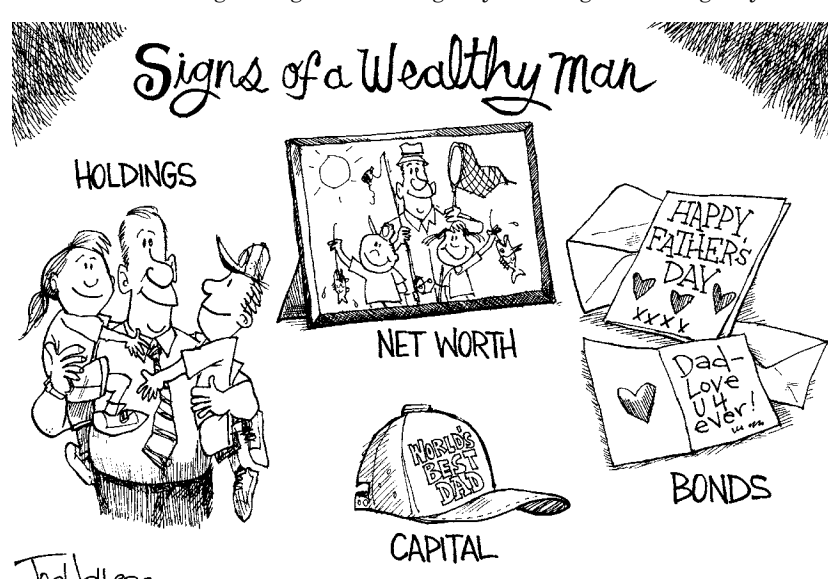

Governor traveling on European visits

June 7-15 marks the first international trade mission for Governor Ricketts. This mission is taking him to the European Union (EU) with visits to Belgium, Denmark, and Italy with the hopes of strengthening existing relationships while building new ones.

Trade missions are going to be a priority for the governor and his administration. The governor has made it clear that growing the economy here in Nebraska is important for not only future generations but also to ensure that our economy stays strong. Fostering relationships on a global level is going to be key to ensuring that we stay strong in years to come.

While the governor is out promoting Nebraska and Nebraska agriculture, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture and Nebraska Emergency Management Agency continue to monitor the Avian Flu outbreak in northeast Nebraska. While nationally, it appears that we are seeing a slowdown in the spreading of the disease it is still too soon to say that we are in the clear here.

Four million young and laying hens have been euthanized here in Nebraska, after finding the Avian Flu in three commercial and one small flock of less than 100 birds. A flock of three million laying hens is in quarantine based on an initial positive test. All of the flocks impacted thus far have been in Dixon and Knox counties.

As a precautionary measure, all poultry events that were to have been held in Nebraska have been cancelled for the rest of 2015. This includes county and state fairs, swap meets, exotic sales, exhibition shows and live bird auctions.

The process of gathering signatures to put the death penalty issue to a vote of the people has begun. I will try to have petitions with me when I am at public events like parades and fairs. If you would like to sign one, look for me and ask. The "hate mail" continues to come in from both sides. It seems that this issue really points to a divide in our state.

Good sportsmanship is important

The beginning of a new 4-H year brings out good intentions from many of us, members and leaders alike. We enroll in 4-H projects and set a goal for ourselves. They identify the actions or events we desire to attain or achieve throughout the year.

Involvement in competitive events such as athletics, speech, drama, music and 4-H, is a cornerstone in most of our communities. We are a nation that thrives on the participation in competition. While it is often thought that such participation builds good character, it doesn't automatically happen. Just as a coach or 4-H leader has a plan for each game/event and for the 4-H year, we need to develop an action plan for learning good sportsmanship through extracurricular activities like 4-H.

Parents, coaches, 4-H leaders youth, and fans all need to be involved in creating an atmosphere that fosters good, positive sportsmanship. When the entire community gets involved, building stronger character through good sportsmanship becomes the norm.

The 4-H logo stands for these 4 H's. Keeping them in mind when making good decisions will also support being a good sport.

HEAD – Living your life according to your beliefs; being honest.

HEART – Being loyal to friends,

Kim Bearnes
Extension Educator

family and community.

HANDS – Carrying out what we say will do.

HEALTH – Resisting peer pressure.

There are pillars of Character that our youth have heard a lot about in school and in 4-H. What are the Six Pillars of character and how do they apply to sportsmanship?

Trustworthiness

A good sport has Integrity, is honest, loyal to friends, and keep their promises.

Respect

A good sport treats others the way they want to be treated.

Responsibility

A good sport is accountable for their actions and show self-restraint.

Fairness

A good sport treats all people fairly and plays by the rules.

Caring

A good sport shows concern and compassion for others.

Citizenship

A good sport gives service to their club and community

SPORTSMANSHIP, 4-H, and character go hand in hand.

Members of the Wayne Eagles Auxiliary recently made a donation to the Wayne Public Library. The funds will be used to purchase books for the library's large print collection. Roadway fatalities up 22 percent

On June 9, the death toll on Nebraska roadways climbed to 100. Tragically, the fatality rate in Nebraska is up 22 percent compared to the average reported for the same period for the previous four years.

With the start of the summer vacation season, AAA reminds all motorists to stay focused when behind the wheel. Avoid distractions as driving should never become a secondary task to conversations, food consumption, or making adjustments to onboard electronics which can cause a driver to lose focus.

Many of the fatal injuries may have been prevented simply by buckling-up. A review of the Nebraska crash records show that of the 79 vehicle occupants who died in car crashes this year, 72 percent were not using their safety belt.

AAA also wants to remind motorists to be observant to pedestrians, motorcyclists, and bicyclists in the traffic mix. So far this year, six pedestrians have died on Nebraska roadways, up from four reported last year. All of the pedestrians who were struck and killed were adults.

Three bicyclists and 11 motorcyclists also lost their lives in roadway crashes; more than twice as many compared to the previous year.

For helpful driving tips, and to review regulations and rules pertaining to operating a vehicle on Nebraska roadways, visit www.dmv.nebraska.gov and click-on the Nebraska Driver's Manual.
