Gym floor still awaiting installation as fall season nears

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Sitting in the hallway outside the Winside High School gymnasium is the brand new parquet floor that should have been installed by now, but school officials have not heard from Anderson-Ladd, the company contracted to install the floor, since the middle of June. The first day of two-a-days for area high school volleyball teams is in less than two weeks.

The start of the new school year is fast approaching, and area high school athletes are getting into condition to get ready for the first day of two-a-days when they begin in the next few days.

While most area high schools can do their conditioning in their gymnasiums, students at Winside High School are having to figure out more creative solutions to a rather vexing problem – the lack of their own gym floor.

School officials were hoping to have a new parquet floor in place for the start of the 2015-16 school year, but the Omaha contractors of the Minneapolis-based Anderson-Ladd company have been a no-show at the school for almost two months, creating delays and rescheduling concerns for the Wayne County school district.

“We’ve heard from people in Randolph about how they’ve had to bring this company back twice to redo their floor, and when you hire these people, you sometimes don’t know about these stories,” Winside superintendent Mike Shoff told The Wayne Herald Tuesday morning. “The subfloor was put in on June 15, and we haven’t seen anybody since.”

Shoff said the new gym floor was part of an effort made

A dog-gone good time at the 93rd Wayne County Fair

Whether it was watching an acrobatic canine, enjoying a ride on the merry-go-round, listening to Neal McCoy as he entertains the crowd or getting your face painted, there was something for kids of all ages, shapes and sizes at the 93rd annual Wayne County Fair that wrapped up on Sunday. Almost perfect weather conditions greeted fairgoers throughout the festival's annual five-day run, which concluded with the annual Demolition Derby. Look for photos from the Wayne and Dixon County fairs in Section B in this week's edition, and we will have a full rundown of all the area fair winners in the Aug. 20 edition of The Wayne Herald.

Mountain lion seen near local dog park

Nebraska Game and Parks Commission officials and the Wayne Police Department were investigating reports of a mountain lion that was spotted in Wayne late last Wednesday evening, July 29.

Local residents who contacted The Wayne Herald about the incident reported what was believed to be a mountain lion along the walking trail near the southwest corner of the Wayne Bark Park. The animal was reported to be brown in color and caught the attention of one woman's dogs, who were playing in the park at the time.

Game and Parks investigators were in Wayne Thursday morning and early afternoon and searched for evidence near the Bark Park, the Wayne Softball Complex and east of Cobblestone Hotel.

The Wayne Police Department issued a press release Thursday afternoon, stating that a report had been received at around 8:40 p.m. Wednesday regarding a mountain lion sighting near the Summer Sports Complex. Officers searched the area, but were not able to locate an animal, and called Nebraska Game and Parks to assist.

A second sighting was reported a short distance north and east of the original report around midnight Thursday. Responding officers were unable to locate any animal, due to tall weeds and crops in the area.

Photos that were taken by the first reporting party were submitted to the Game and Parks Commission for confirmation. Game and Parks officials and the Wayne Police Department searched the area of the sightings Thursday morning and afternoon to confirm any possible evidence of an animal in the area. All information obtained has been forwarded to the Mountain Lion Task Force with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission for further evaluation and review.

Although no additional sightings had been reported as of press time Wednesday, Wayne Police Chief Marlen Chinn said his department will continue to patrol the sighting area, and encouraged people to be cautious of their surroundings until the animal is identified or located, and to immediately report any additional sightings.

Council returning unused storm funds

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

With just over half of $500,000 in emergency funding for tornado relief having gone unclaimed almost two years since the Oct. 4, 2013 tornado struck town, the Wayne City Council agreed on Tuesday to return unused funds to the city's LB840 economic development fund.

After the storm struck the east side of Wayne, the City of Wayne set aside the money for emergency funding for businesses in the damaged area. Three businesses – Sand Creek Post & Beam, Innovative Protectives and Otte Construction – applied for a total of $241,000 in emergency funds.

Wes Blecke, director of Wayne Area Economic Development, said that a total of $259,000 was still committed to the emergency funding and had gone untouched. Mayor Ken Chamberlain said he didn't believe any other tornado-related applications for the funds, which were made directly to the city as the applicant, would be coming in the immediate future. The board approved the LB840 Committee's recommendation to decommit the funds and return them to the LB840 committee's account.

In other action related to the LB840 committee, the Council approved a recommendation by the committee to approve a $50,000 loan to Re-zurrected Rod and Kustom for the construction of a new building that will serve as a fiberglass production process that will help them expand to eventually become a full-turnkey automotive restoration workshop.

As part of the agreement, owner Garek Bebee will have to add two full-time-equivalent employees within the next 10 years. He told the Council that he will add one full-time employee to the staff as soon as the new 2,400-square foot building is completed, which he hoped would be by the end of September.

“We'll be ready to break ground in the next 10 days,” he told the Council, adding that his hope is to expand his customer base nationwide.

In other action, the Council: – approved the appointment of Diane Bertrand as the city's Senior Citizens Center coordinator, and Bryce Meyer as the city's new Recreation Services Director. Bertrand is the wife of Pastor Willie Bertrand, who is pastor of churches in Concord and Wakefield. Meyer, a Lawton, Iowa, native, comes to Wayne after serving as the recreation specialist at the Nebraska State Penitentiary in Lincoln.

– tabled a request by the Wayne Airport Authority of $68,680 for the annual asking to run the city's airport. State statute requires airport authorities to come before city and county boards for annual funding requests. The matter

Wayne Family Medicine celebrates 20 years in area

By LAURA ANDERSON
Of The Herald

Twenty years ago Wayne Family Medicine started out as Northeast Nebraska Medical Group at its new location by Providence Medical Center.

"There was no celebration because it's more about the doctors and nurses being there," Kari Baldwin, Physicians Clinic Manager, said.

Wayne Family Medicine just celebrated its one year anniversary with Faith Regional as well on May 1.

The clinic currently has five physicians, three physician's assistants, 18 clinical aides including registered nurses, licensed practitioner nurses, certified medical assistant assistants and limited radiographer technician and nine support positions. This includes all employees at the clinic's four locations in Wayne, Wisner, Wakefield and Laurel.

Before the merger of the two clinics, the Benthack Medical Center was located where Magnuson Hopkins Eye Care is located now. Doctors Walter and Bob Benthack started the clinic and eventually hired Gary West, P.A. and Dr. Ben Martin to help out with the patient load.

The Wiseman Clinic was located where Wayne Sport and Spine currently resides. Dr. Willis Wiseman and Dr. Jim Lindau were the main doctors at that clinic.

Both clinics were on the small side and served patients in the same general area.

"The clinics joined to better serve patients and be more convenient to patients by the hospital," Dr. Mark McCorkindale said.

McCorkindale joked that they merged the two clinics for him, as he was hired right before they started the construction on the building.

Kniesches are Good Neighbors

The Vince and Vickie Kniesche family were honored during the 2015 Wayne County Fair with the Ak-Sar-Ben Good Neighbor Award for their efforts in helping others in the aftermath of the 2013 Wayne tornado. The family was unable to accept the award at last year's Wayne County Fair, so the Wayne County Fair Board decided to honor them this year. Longtime fair judge brings 45 years of show experience

By LAURA ANDERSON
Of The Herald

One Wayne resident has been a part of the Wayne County Fair for over 20 years.

Dwight Anderson, a local dairy farmer, has been involved in county fairs across northeast Nebraska since 1968 when he first started showing dairy cows in 4-H.

Anderson participated in Teen Supreme Judging days and made it to the district dairy show where he qualified for the Nebraska State Fair.

"I made it by chance and it took off and ballooned into more," Anderson said.

Since 1970, he had been helping in dairy shows on and off until he took over county judging in 1980 until 1990. He has been in the superintendent association for 35 years. Anderson has judged in counties across Nebraska such as Wayne, Cedar, Pierce, Madison and as far away as Seward.

"I like to help out counties for an unbiased opinion and a lot of it is volunteer work," Anderson said.

As a judge, Anderson looks for showmanship or how the showman presents the animal to the judge at the halter. There are guidelines for judging and it is called the Unified Dairy Judging Scorecard. There are several classes in a show and judges look for the way a person prepares and exhibits the animal and the quality of confirmation in each of them.

"An animal may look good one day and the next day not so much, but I have to judge them on the way they look and behave that day," Anderson said.

As a whole, fairs are having trouble finding dairy judges that are within a reasonable distance. Tyler Mohr came up from Omaha to help out with the dairy show this year. Anderson said that the dairy shows are not that big anymore with maybe 6-20 head and they do not have the magnitude of kids to do dairy judging.

"Distance becomes a factor in whether or not it is worth it to travel four hours away one way when you're judging a 30 to 45 minute show with," Anderson said.

Anderson keeps judging because it keeps him sharp in the aspect of what to look for in livestock. He said that trends change and right now the trend is for cows to look functional and going to shows helps him to adapt to the changes.

"I will keep judging as long as there is a need for a dairy judge and I don't get shot in the process," Anderson said.

This year at the Wayne County Fair, Anderson was asked to help with dairy goat judging as well which was new for him. He said that dairy goats and cows have similar parts and refers to them as mini milk cows.

During the Open Class Dairy Show, there are four other assistant superintendents that help him and he is very thankful for them. These superintendents help bring the cattle to and from the Dairy Barn.

His wife, Pam, has helped Anderson organize the trophies, ribbons and scores throughout the years. Their daughter, Brooke, who is now one of the four superintendents, has been helpful and got her start showing off their dairy cows while she was in 4-H similar to her father.

Anderson grew up on a dairy farm outside of Laurel and had helped his father, Wallace, since he was ten. He said that his family started out using buckets to milk cows and he said he is glad that things have advanced since then.

Anderson and his wife, Pam, eventually started their own dairy farm in 1991. He said that they now milk 80 cows and that it is more than a full-time job.

Area schools get ready for start of 2015-16 year was tabled until after a budget session scheduled at the end of Tuesday's meeting.

In other action:

— Wes Blecke reported on the latest activity on the city's LB840 fund. He reported that no applications to the fund had been made during the first six months of 2015, a first since the funding mechanism was voted for back in 2008.

— answering a question asked by Mayor Ken Chamberlain, Blecke explained that LB840 funding is generated from the city's 1 percent sales tax, with 60 percent going toward capital improvements and 40 percent toward the city's economic development fund. According to state statute, these funds can not be used as part of the city's general operations.

— advanced to final reading and passed an amendment to an ordinance that prohibits storage containers to be used as an accessory structure, such as a shed, although they are allowed as a temporary structure.

— amended the city code to add a handicap parking stall at 115 W. Third Street. The request was made by Connie Hassler, owner of Back In Touch, for her customers.

— approved a request by Wayne

State College to close Highway 15 from First to 10th Street for the school's homecoming parade on Saturday, Oct. 10.

— approved the low bid of $262,983.53 by Rutjens Construction of Tilden for the Main Street Water Main Improvement Project. The project, which will run from the east side of Main Street from Seventh to 14th streets and will include removal of old and unused water mains, will start in March of 2016 and will be finished by August.

— approved the low bid of $1,623,000 by Ericson Construction of Blair for the Wastewater Treatment Facility project, which will be completed by Aug. 1, 2016.

— approved a permanent easement request by Ken Jorgensen for part of a frontage road near his Jug Store building project that is under construction just east of McDonald's on Highway 35. Jorgensen said he's hoping the building will be open for business by January of next year. The extended easement will allow him to extend his parking lot.

— agreed to the reappointment of Curt Frye, Kari Wren and Don Buryanek to the LB840 committee.

County board gets earful from taxpayers as '15-'16 budget nears

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

A standing-room-only crowd of concerned taxpayers visited with the Wayne County Commissioners regarding their concerns about the upcoming budget during Tuesday's meeting.

With the 2015-16 fiscal year budget being worked out, the county board heard concerns from about a dozen local residents who want to make sure the county doesn't get out of line with its upcoming budget requests.

Roger Brandt was among about a half-dozen rural residents who expressed concerns about the county's budget increases, stating that the economy is making things a challenge for them to pay their share of county taxes, which make up as much as a fourth of some taxpayers' total tax bill.

"Last year, my taxes went up $3,668, and I have to make that up somewhere," Roger Brandt told the board. "We've had five years of pretty good crop prices, but we don't have those prices now. We had $7 corn, and it's $3.37 as of (Monday)."

Brandt encouraged the board to "be really conservative" with its budget asking for the coming fiscal year, adding that a 3 to 5 percent increase is more than fair for all involved.

Doug Nelson suggested the board take a look at building some of the bridges that are currently in need of work themselves and forego federal red tape.

"If you could save $200,000 or $300,000 and tell the federal guys to stay home . . . we know how to build a bridge here and we could save money and time and do it ourselves," he said.

Board chair Randy Larson said the budget is a major concern for the board, and he said they certainly are interested in what taxpayers' concerns are.

"We have to give you the services you need, and somebody has to pay for them," he said. "It's a balance that we try to walk, and sometimes we're not successful, but we certainly have to give you access to your fields."

Lee Swinney, who served as a Wayne County Commissioner from 1958-1963, offered some ideas to the current board about how to deal with county roads.

"I had a thought back then that, at the time, I thought was unreasonable, about putting a hard surface on some of the roads," he said. "If you think about how much gravel costs, it's like throwing money down a rat hole."

Swinney suggested that certain roads in the county could be paved, which would make it possible for every county resident to be within two miles of a hard-surfaced road.

"If (certain roads) were paved, it would be a big help to a lot of people," he told the board, referring to a similar paved county highway that runs between Creighton and O'Neill. "I'm not sure what the cost would be, though."

Swinney said that, when he was commissioner, the county board did their road work without any financial assistance from the state, but he wasn't sure that was possible in today's environment.

"It's something worth exploring," Larson said. "I'm not sure what the ramifications are, but there aren't any silly ideas right now."

In other action, the board:

- heard from the Wayne County Fair Board on their funding request for the 2015-16 fiscal year. The fair board is asking for $83,506.98, a little more than $3,000 above last year's request. The board hopes to finish up a new building that was constructed this year and put cover on the existing sheep barn.

- heard from Dwaine Junck concerning his application to the Department of Environmental Quality for a permit to build another lagoon and more yards on his property. Concerns were raised because of flooding that has taken place on the property since the county removed a bridge and replaced it with a culvert approximately 15 years ago. Junck maintained that the flooding on the property did not take place until after the county had replaced the bridge with a culvert that, ultimately, was not able to properly handle water on the property. The county contacted the DEQ and gave its blessing for Junck's permit, with the county being responsible for any studies that may need to take place on the property.

by the school district to upgrade their gymnasium. The floor and bleachers were removed from the gymnasium after the school's graduation ceremonies in early May to make way for a new floor and new bleachers.

"The floor we removed was the original floor that was built back around 1960, and we weren't sure what was underneath the floor and were afraid we were going to have to tear out a bunch of broken cement," Shoff said.

To their surprise, the cement beneath the floor was in excellent shape, with some leveling out in some of the more settled areas required. That initially put the school district a week ahead of schedule, and by the first part of June, the Anderson-Ladd contractors had put in the subfloor, which consists of 2-by-4's and plywood.

Since then - nothing. The new flooring sits in the hallway outside the gymnasium, while the new bleachers were delivered and are now being stored at a downtown business until the new floor is installed.

When that will be, at this point, is anybody's guess.

"We haven't had anybody in our gym since the middle of June," Shoff said. "I've called them a couple of times a week, and my calls aren't returned. I've tried e-mailing the project manager and the sales rep, and those aren't returned. I heard from them on July 28, and that was the first time I'd heard from them in several weeks."

The last correspondence Shoff said he received was from a representative of the company, who expressed apologies for the delays and explained that they are looking for a specific installer who can install a parquet floor like that at the old Boston Garden, which is put together differently from a traditional basketball floor.

"They're saying they can't find anybody to put it in," Shoff said. "I guess there are four other schools who are also waiting for floors to be put in. It doesn't make me feel any better, but at least we're not alone."

Even if construction started tomorrow, Shoff said it would be six weeks before a practice or game could be held on the new floor. After the floor is put together, lines, school logos and other painting has to be completed. After that, two coats of varnish are laid on the floor, and that has to sit for two weeks before the bleachers can be installed.

Because of the delays, Winside athletic director Mark Tonniges has had to work with schools who were scheduled to come to Winside for volleyball matches in September to arrange for those schools to host the games. Two triangulars and a quadrangular have already been rescheduled, and other home matches could be moved if delays continue.

To the kids' credit, they have adjusted to the situation and are working out in the walkway at the front of the school, taking advantage of cool conditions early in the day to get their conditioning in.

Pallets holding the pieces to the new gym floor at Winside High School sat untouched in the hallway outside the gymnasium Tuesday morning.

"It's been frustrating for the girls, but we're making do as best we can and we're anxious about getting on our new floor and practicing and playing there," volleyball coach Teresa Watters said.

Shoff said the Wayne Community Schools has been helpful in working with the Winside school to make gym space available during summer camps and leagues, and he's talking with school officials in Wayne, Randolph and Pierce about arranging times for the Winside girls to have practices, either before or after school, until the new floor is ready for play.

"This has cost the district a lot of money, and that will be a part of the conversation before the final check is written," Shoff said.

"There's been a lot of frustration expressed by people in the community about this, but we're kind of at (Anderson-Ladd's) whim," Shoff said. "There's a warranty involved, so they have to be the ones to install the floor. Hopefully, once the floor's in, they'll be fair about what they end up charging us, because this has cost Winside taxpayers a lot more money than it should have."

Officials with Anderson-Ladd did not return repeated contacts by The Wayne Herald as of press time.

Australia trip was a blast for Wakefield grad Rusk

By MICHAEL CARNES
Of The Herald

Sometimes you need a fresh perspective on the game you love to play.

For McKenzie Rusk, getting ready for her freshman year at Briar Cliff University meant playing a lot of basketball after graduating from Wakefield High School this past May.

And while she enjoyed playing with her old high school teammates in open gym, a chance to play in a foreign country was too good of an offer to pass up.

The daughter of Jim and Sarah Rusk took part in the Down Under Sports program, playing in a three-day, 10-game basketball tournament in Brisbane, Australia recently. After being contacted by the organization, she decided it would be a once-in-a-lifetime chance.

"It's different in each state, but here in Nebraska they send out letters to everybody who makes all-state," she said after returning home recently from the week-long journey. "I signed up in November and had to raise the money to go by June."

Rusk took a creative approach to her fundraising efforts. A very talented singer, she recorded and released her own CD and held a concert as part of the release of the CD. She also watched 22 kids for area moms and dads during New Year's Eve for a babysitting fundraiser, held a co-ed volleyball tournament and got additional help from friends, family and local businesses.

Once everything was ready to go, Rusk embarked on a 20-hour series of airplane rides, going from Sioux City to Chicago and Los Angeles before making the final 15-hour trek half a world away in Australia.

"They are 15 hours ahead of us, so it was quite an adjustment," Rusk said. "I tried to contact my parents the first time I got down there, and it was like 4 a.m. here when I called."

Once they got settled in and had team meetings, Rusk's team – which included fellow Nebraskan Hannah Carnegy of Tecumseh, five players from Texas and four from Arizona – got a few practices in before playing a series of 10 30-minute games over the three-day period.

Rusk's team wound up playing for the championship against a team from Australia, and they overcame an early 16-2 deficit to hang on for a 31-27 win, becoming the first team from the U.S. to win in the 27 years of the program.

"It was really a cool experience," Rusk said. "I was on the court at the end of the game and two of us are guarding this girl who's throwing up a shot, and the ref sticks his hand up in the air and blows his whistle, and we thought it was a foul. They didn't have buzzers because there were four courts going, and all of a sudden all the American kids stormed the court and there was this massive huddle of us celebrating."

The trip wasn't all about basketball, though. The U.S. kids watched a performance of Aboriginal dancers, visited a wildlife sanctuary and had a chance to do a variety of activities like snorkeling in the Great Barrier Reef, which Rusk said was a fascinating experience.

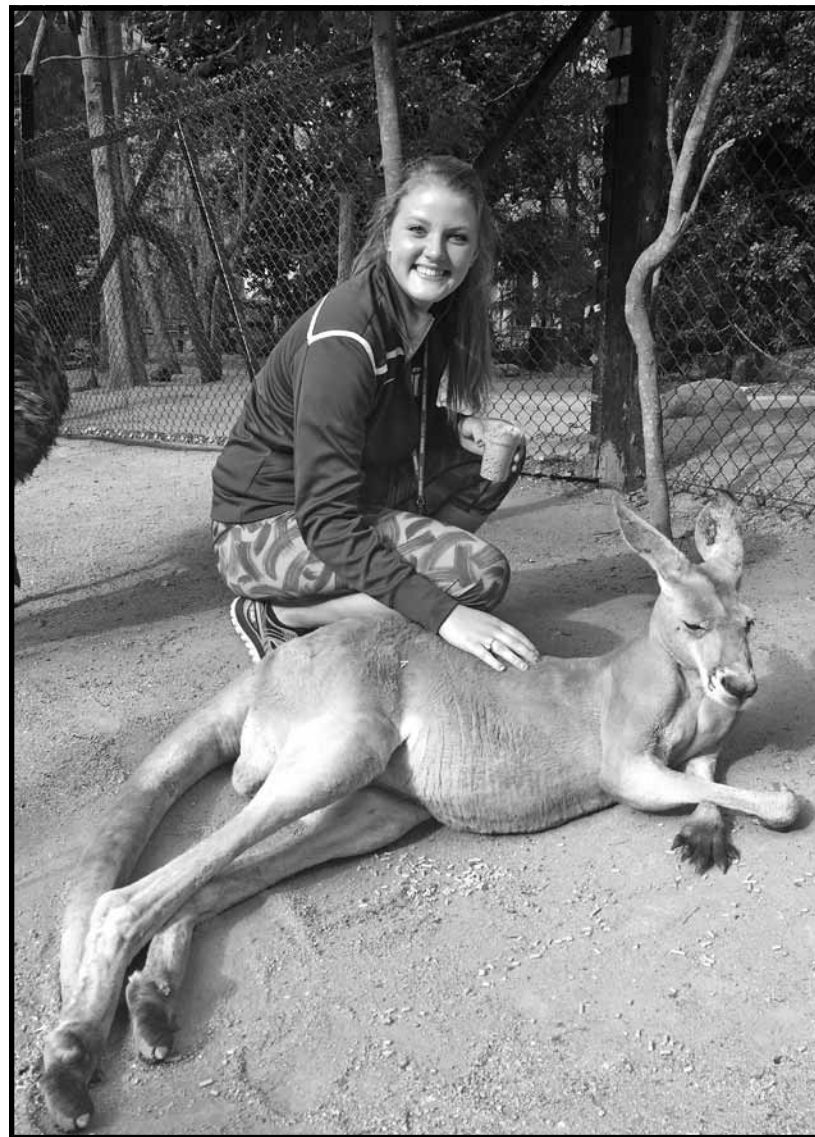

"The island we were on is so small, and I guess it was formed by dead coral reef and molded together by bird poop," she said, laughing. "The sanctuary was really neat, too. We got to see koala bears, the crocodiles were as big as dinosaurs, and the kangaroos would just walk up to you and you could pet them like they were goats in a petting zoo back home."

Their apartment was located near the beach, which made for some interesting people watching as well.

"They said where we were at was like the Las Vegas of Australia, and I think I saw more bachelorette parties going on than I've ever seen in my life," she said. "It was really fun to walk around and watch people mingle."

Rusk and a number of other players and coaches made a quick three-day stop in Hawaii on the way home, and now she'll have a new perspective on the game as she gets ready for her freshman year on the Briar Cliff University basketball team.

"The trip was a lot more than I thought it would be, and it was a chance to make new friends and see some different cultures. It was really a great experience."

USDA Rural Development awards funding

Fifteen Nebraska applicants have been selected to receive $474,974 in grants from USDA Rural Development through the Rural Energy for America Program (REAP). Funds will be used to install renewable energy systems and make energy efficiency improvements that will promote energy conservation.

Among those receiving grant money was Andy Bose of Wayne (Dixon County), who was awarded $25,056 to replace an older, inefficient grain drying system with a new, more efficient model.

"Through these projects, energy consumption will be reduced, thereby making more dollars available to be kept within rural Nebraska and assisting the state's rural economy," said Nebraska State Director Maxine Moul, USDA Rural Development.

"The projected number of households powered through this funding package is 309 homes providing (3,351,151 kWh) of energy saved or generated."

Eligible agricultural producers and rural small businesses may use REAP funds to make energy efficiency improvements or install renewable energy systems, including solar, wind, renewable biomass (including anaerobic digesters), small hydroelectric, ocean energy, hydrogen and geothermal. Additional information on the Rural Energy for America Program may be found at [vices/rural-energy-america-program-renewable-energy-systems-energy-efficiency/ne or contact Jeff Carpenter, \[jeff.carpenter@ne.usda.gov\]\(mailto:jeff.carpenter@ne.usda.gov\); \(402\) 437-5554.](http://www.rd.usda.gov/programs-ser-
<div data-bbox=)

Since the start of the Obama Administration, USDA has supported more than 9,600 renewable energy and energy efficiency projects nationwide through REAP. During this period, the Department has provided more than $288 million in grants and $268 million in loan guarantees to agricultural producers and rural small business owners.

Nebraska and Iowa governors announce labeling initiative

Governors of the nation's top two ethanol-producing states jointly announced the launch of a statewide pump labeling initiative to promote the American Ethanol brand.

Nebraska Governor Pete Ricketts and Iowa Governor Terry Branstad have announced the implementation of new fuel pump labels featuring the American Ethanol brand. The American Ethanol brand will provide nationwide consistency in pump labeling for all ethanol blends including E10, E15, E30 and E85.

The American Ethanol brand was originally introduced in 2011 when NASCAR adopted E15 (15 percent ethanol) as its fuel of choice. Nebraska and Iowa are among the first states to introduce the brand at retail locations. Both states are offering new pump labels free of charge to retailers across Iowa and Nebraska. In each state, the new labels have been approved by the state agencies that govern pump labeling.

"This new brand label will provide a consistent consumer experience at pumps across the state and capitalize on the high profile that American Ethanol has enjoyed through the NASCAR partnership," said Governor Branstad. "We want to make it even easier for consumers to find this clean-burning, high-performance fuel wherever they travel."

Governor Ricketts emphasized the clean air benefits of ethanol blended fuel. "When it comes to air quality, American Ethanol-blended fuel burns cleaner," he said. "The new pump labels are a great way to inform consumers of the wealth of benefits American Ethanol-blended fuels provide. It is cost-effective, American-made, renewable and better for our environment."

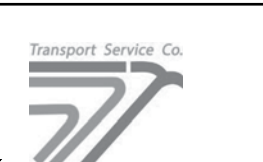

According to the American Lung Association of the Upper Midwest, American Ethanol-blended fuel burns cleaner and improves air quality compared to regular gasoline. When drivers use American Ethanol, they're improving air quality and reducing the causes of asthma, heart disease and lung cancer not only for themselves but also their children and grandchildren. American Ethanol lowers the level of toxic, cancer-causing emissions in vehicle exhaust—reducing air pollution, improving human health, and reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

With 3.8 billion gallons of annual production and 42 ethanol plants, Iowa leads the nation in ethanol production. Nebraska is second with more than two billion gallons of annual production and 24 plants. "The ethanol industry has re-energized rural communities and added value to agricultural production in our states," Governor Branstad said. "Ethanol production has created good jobs, generated tax revenue and helped our nation improve its energy security."

"Ethanol transforms corn into fuel, animal feed and economic vitality all across Nebraska and Iowa," Governor Ricketts added. "In Nebraska, the Golden Triangle of corn, livestock and ethanol gives us a unique advantage for economic growth and national leadership in the production of fuel, food, feed and fiber."

Several retail outlets have already begun displaying the American Ethanol label, helping consumers better understand their choices when they fill up. Any standard vehicle can use E10, a blend of 10 percent ethanol while vehicles 2001 and newer can use E15, a blend of 15 percent ethanol. With nearly 500,000 flex fuel vehicles in Nebraska and Iowa, consumers can flex their option to choose E85, a blend of 85 percent ethanol and make a positive impact agreed both Governors. Selecting American Ethanol fuel blends at the pump is the right choice for cleaner, healthier air—and the American Ethanol label at the pump will help consumers in making that choice.

Discussing the concept of frugality

The oldest member of our church died a week ago, and our pastor was quizzing our Bible study group about her so that he could make her service personal. He mentioned that a niece told him she was frugal; she used tin foil over a time or two. My response was "doesn't everybody?"

Several of the grey heads around the table nodded and smiled. I think he was a little surprised. He obviously does not come from that generation. You know, the one that saves tin foil, and bread wrappers, and baggies.

Actually, I typically don't save baggies. But my niece does; she was here for a couple weeks two summers ago while her Dad was in the hospital; she took a lunch every day and dutifully rinsed those bags and turned them inside out and upside down on the counter each night.

But I always have a bread wrapper or two in the drawer; you never know when they might come in handy. In the musical, Church Basement Ladies, the matriarch of the kitchen in the basement comes in out of the snow wearing one on each foot. Furthermore, when her friend helps her get them off, she cautions, "Be careful, that's a new pair!"

I did line the snow boots with bread wrappers back in the day. They would get wet when the snow was deep and not be totally dry by the time they were needed again. I also burned out a hair dryer once, drying the things! But the wrappers kept the socks dry long enough to do the chores.

Anyway, I'm afraid that kind of frugality is just about gone. I write grocery lists on the backs of envelopes, even though half a dozen charitable organizations send complimentary note paper. I turn the salad dressing bottles upside down until the last drop or two. I save leftovers, and then, after finding them again after a couple of weeks, I do throw them! So far, no one in our family has had food poisoning from leftovers.

And guess what? That frugal lady never married and had no children, so left a tidy sum to the church. We are very glad to receive it, because eventually, we plan to build a sanctuary attached to the school we worship in now. We need more frugal members: without kids and a charitable nature!

Poultry is a no-show at Wayne County Fair

By LAURA ANDERSON
Of The Herald

The Wayne County Fair had a noticeable absence of the feathered variety this year.

Since the outbreak of avian flu in surrounding counties, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture issued a ban on all poultry events across Nebraska through the end of this year, including fairs, live bird auctions, exotic sales and the Nebraska State Fair.

At the Wayne County Fair, there were 17 members in the poultry project and five members that chose to participate. The 4-H members gave a poultry presentation for showmanship. They were allowed to use a stuffed animal or bird, a poster or a video to show their poultry.

Last year, there were 34 poultry entries that were present and shown.

"The 4-Hers have to point out parts when they give presentations to show their knowledge of their animal," Wayne County Extension Educator Amy Topp

"I'm glad that the families were understanding..."

— Amy Topp

They are judged on showmanship, the knowledge of their pets, like what species it belongs to.

This year, Shannon Ahlman came up from Saint Libory to judge the poultry and rabbit shows.

Since the Wayne County Fairgrounds have had some changes to where the buildings are located, the poultry was shown in the swine building where the old horse barns were located.

"I'm glad that the families were understanding and that they realized it was to protect their animals," Topp said.

Taking A Look Back At The

This rodeo clown is a little braver than most as he tries to stare down a bull after a ride during Thursday's rodeo.

Members of the 189th Transportation Company carry in the colors before Sunday's demolition derby.

Dylan Bloom was the opening entertainment at the Wayne County Fair on Saturday.

Julie Couch and the Victory Band performed during a free concert on Wednesday night, including the singing of the National Anthem.

Bill Greve was awarded the 2015 Fair Person of the Year award for his decades-long commitment to the fair. Making the presentation were Ag Society Vice President Kevin Davis and President Dave Jaeger.

Exhibitors in the 4-H Dairy Show concentrate on their animals as the judge makes his rounds, speaking with each exhibitor and examining all the animals.

The action was more in the smiles on the kids faces than in the smash-ups and collisions during the kiddie demo derby.

Hundreds of people waited in line for the annual barbecue meal to be served. Local business persons volunteered to serve the meal of beef and pork sandwiches, beans and chips.

Among the happy fair-goers were Kerry and Dennis Otte, who took advantage of all the fair entertainment.

There was plenty of fender-bending action during the finale of the fair, as the demolition derby was held in front of a full grandstand at the Wayne County Fair.

Not everybody gets the rodeo clown's sense of humor, as this young man demonstrates during the rodeo Friday night.

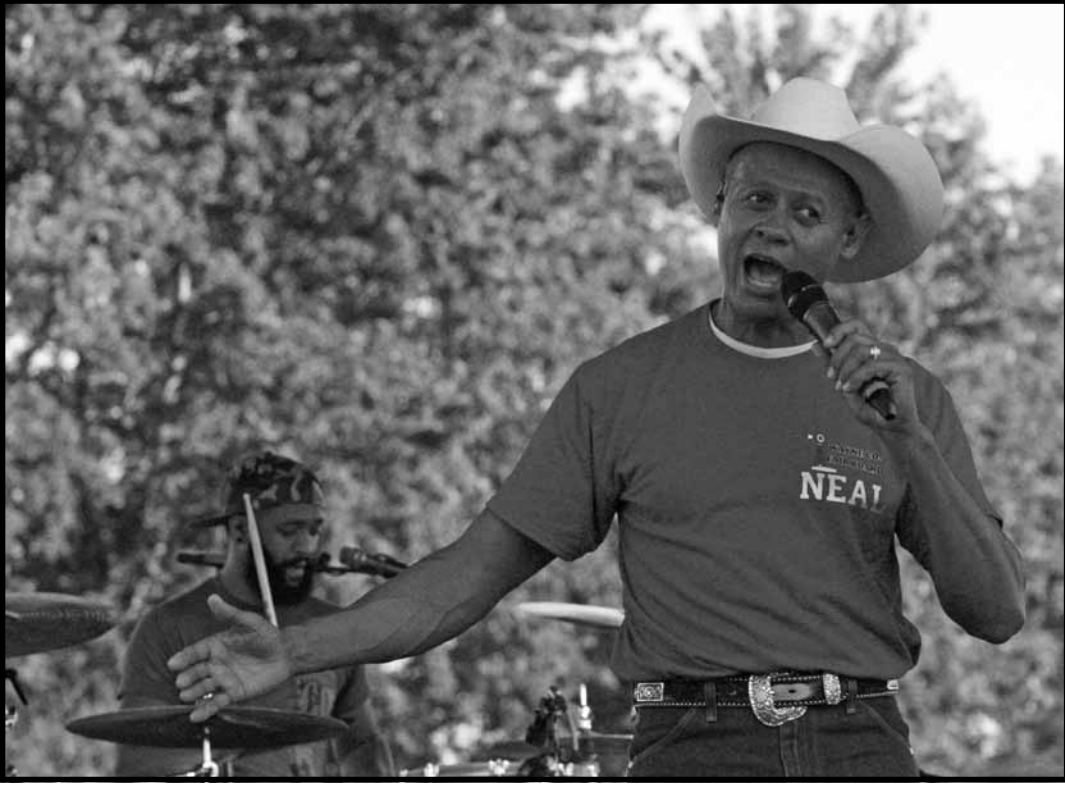

93rd Annual Wayne County Fair

Horticulture exhibits, from peppers to rhubarb, tomatoes to squash, potatoes to onions, were on display in the 4-H Building.

You definitely have to have your eyes open to compete in the Wayne County Rodeo. This cowboy is about to find out the hard way what it means to come flying out of the chute as he competes in the bronco-riding competition.

Country singer Neal McCoy kept the fans entertained with a fantastic show on Saturday night at the grandstand.

The alligators at the Wildlife Encounters program were a hit for fair-goers of all ages.

The tractor pull was full of sound, fury and smoke as area pullers competed in the grandstand at the Wayne County Fair.

Smiles were aplenty among fair goers who took part in the many rides that were operating on the midway at the Wayne County Fair.

New rec area now open near Hubbard

An estimated 300 people attended the grand opening Saturday of the new Danish Alps State Recreation Area, located a little more than a mile south of Hubbard. Grand opening activities included kayaking, boat tours, fish shocking demonstrations, critter corner, a family fishing clinic and hayrack rides. The ribbon cutting took place on a hill looking down on the new Kramper Lake. The new rec area has 26 pads in its equestrian campground, 41 more pads in the main RV campground and 22 tent sites.

Children's Theatre Caravan to perform at Wayne State

The Wayne Community Theatre is once again sponsoring the Missoula Children's Theatre (MCT) Caravan during their summer performance in Wayne.

The performance will be "King Arthur's Quest" in Ramsey Theatre, located in the Peterson Fine Arts Building on the Wayne State College campus on Aug. 8 with shows at 3 and 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children and students.

The MCT is a nationally recognized professional children's theatre company who bring all the sets and costumes needed to put on a show with local child actors volunteering to be in the show.

Children who have completed kindergarten through age 7, and ages 12-18 will participate in the program.

The program began after Jim Caron and Don Collins became friends and organized a company of adults to perform plays for children in a movie theatre. The plays, as well as the idea of developing live theatre for kids, were well-received in Missoula. Soon, nearby Montana and Idaho communities requested performances of their own.

During the 1970s, the company began casting kids when it seemed appropriate, such as in Hansel and Gretel or Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. In 1972, February performances of Snow White were booked in Miles City, a small Montana community located an icy 500 miles from Missoula, Caron and the other directors were not excited about traveling with seven children across the state and decided to take a radical step. They would attempt to find cast members from the children in Miles City.

The directors traveled across the state a week before the rest of the company. When 450 children arrived, the astonished team auditioned the huge group and cast the seven roles. The success of that week—obvious major interest among kids, parents, teachers, and the press, as well as an excellent production and sold-out performances—opened the eyes of the MCT staff and the doors to the future.

The lessons learned in those early days, especially the rewards of involving children as cast members, set the stage for today's International Tour, Performing Arts Camps, a strong local children's season, Missoula Community Theatre, and the magnificent home base theatre facility.

Missoula Children's Theatre company brings the arts to all 50 states, five Canadian Provinces and 16 countries. The MCT staff envisions helping children grow into confident, successful citizens using the positive results of our programs.

The group strives to share what they've learned about developing life skills in children with the world—in Japan, Australia, Africa, Ireland, and other countries. Kids are kids, no matter where they grow up. Children in China, children in small towns, and children with special needs all have something in common: a desire for opportunities to express themselves, learn and have fun doing it.

Maybe I'm just an old fogey now

I must be at that age where I'm prone to dismiss remakes.

If you listen to music or watch enough movies, you know what I'm talking about. A "remake" is a newer version of an old song or movie that is either copied verbatim or is a newer, more modern look of an older version.

We hear it all the time in the music world. One of my favorite songs during my teen years was "Come On Feel The Noize" by the heavy metal band Quiet Riot. I was not aware, at first, that the song was actually a remake of an original by the 70's band Slade (and found out, in later years, that the boys in Quiet Riot recorded the song at the demand of their producer and were hoping to do it so bad that it wouldn't be included on their album — and then the song and album both became huge hits and ushered in the genre of heavy metal into the mainstream).

Over the years, before and since, there have been plenty of newer versions of older songs. Bands from The Rolling Stones to Aerosmith to just about every rap "artist" on the planet have remade old songs and offered newer versions to become popular hits in the music world.

Now, Hollywood seems to have run out of ideas for movies, as we're seeing more and more remakes of old classics.

The latest regurgitation of an oldie-but-a-goodie film is the classic 80's comedy "Vacation." The original starred Chevy Chase as a mean-to-do-well bungling dad who takes his family across the country to see the infamous Wally World theme park. Beverly D'Angelo plays his wife, Anthony Michael Hall is in one of his first roles as the younger son, and legendary actors like Imogene Coca, Randy Quaid and a young Jane Krakowski made this movie one of the best comedies of all time.

The newer version, from reviews that I've read, pales in comparison to the original, although Chase and D'Angelo do appear in the movie as owners of a bed and breakfast in San Francisco. From all indications, the 2015 version of "Vacation" is a weak, ill-conceived version of the 1983 classic that, many believe, was better left untouched.

There are some remakes that do pay homage to the original and offer a fresh version of the classics. The one I always fall back on is the late Stevie Ray Vaughan, who did a remake of the Jimi Hendrix classic "Voodoo Chile (Slight Return)" and actually does it one better. Vaughan grew up listening to the classic blues guitarists of yesteryear and was heavily influenced by everybody from B.B. King and Buddy Guy to Hendrix, and it wasn't uncommon to hear an old blues classic redone by the late Stevie Ray.

Recently, I happened upon a CD from a classic band called Whitesnake. The band's lead singer, David Coverdale, was a member of Deep Purple in the mid 70's and created some amazing music with that band, and he took a bunch of songs he sang during his time in Deep Purple and retooled them with his current band. Songs like "Burn" and "Stormbringer" rock even harder than the originals, which were pretty solid in their own right when they were recorded 40 years ago.

I guess it all comes down to who's doing the remake and what kind of creative talents they truly have that determines whether a remake stands up to the original or not. I sometimes wonder if maybe this generation's creative talents haven't paid close enough attention to the details that made the classics the timeless pieces of art that they are.

Or maybe I'm just turning into an old fogey.

Speaking against death penalty

The people of Nebraska are at a crossroads. We have the power to determine the future of another human beings life or death.

Sometime ago, after our legislators voted to ban the death penalty, governor Ricketts wrote an article wondering whether our state legislature has gone soft. Is it soft to condemn a criminal to life in prison without parole? I believe the answer for a murderer is life in prison without parole not the death penalty. Have we not grown as a society or are we still in the "eye for an eye" mindset. Is revenge what we want to teach our children? It seems to me we are promoting a culture of death. There is so much violence in our society when is it going to end? I totally sympathize with the relatives of those who were brutally killed in Norfolk, but if we turn around and kill the killers are we any better?

Glen Ford a Louisianan who was exonerated 30 years after his sentence said it most eloquently, "the clear reality is that the death penalty is an anathema to any society that purports to call itself civil" he writes, "it is an abomination that continues to scar the fibers of this society and it will continue to do so until this barbaric penalty is outlawed. Until then, we will live in a land that condones state assisted revenge and that is not justice in any form or fashion."

One can argue that the death penalty is a deterrent for future crimes. Research has not proven this argument.

Also, over 4 percent of those that were executed in the U.S. were innocent. What about their families? (taken from an article in "the Guardian" research finding led by Samuel Cross, University of Michigan law school)

Fellow Nebraskans, I ask you please rather than respond in retaliation, please seriously consider what we are about to do; not only for this generation but for generations to come.

Changing the culture of the Nebraska Department of Correctional Services is a necessary and daunting task that could take some time.

I applaud new director Scott Frakes for initiating the process by scheduling a survey of random employees while promising anonymity. Let's hope that works. Let's hope even more that the attitude change starts from the top down.

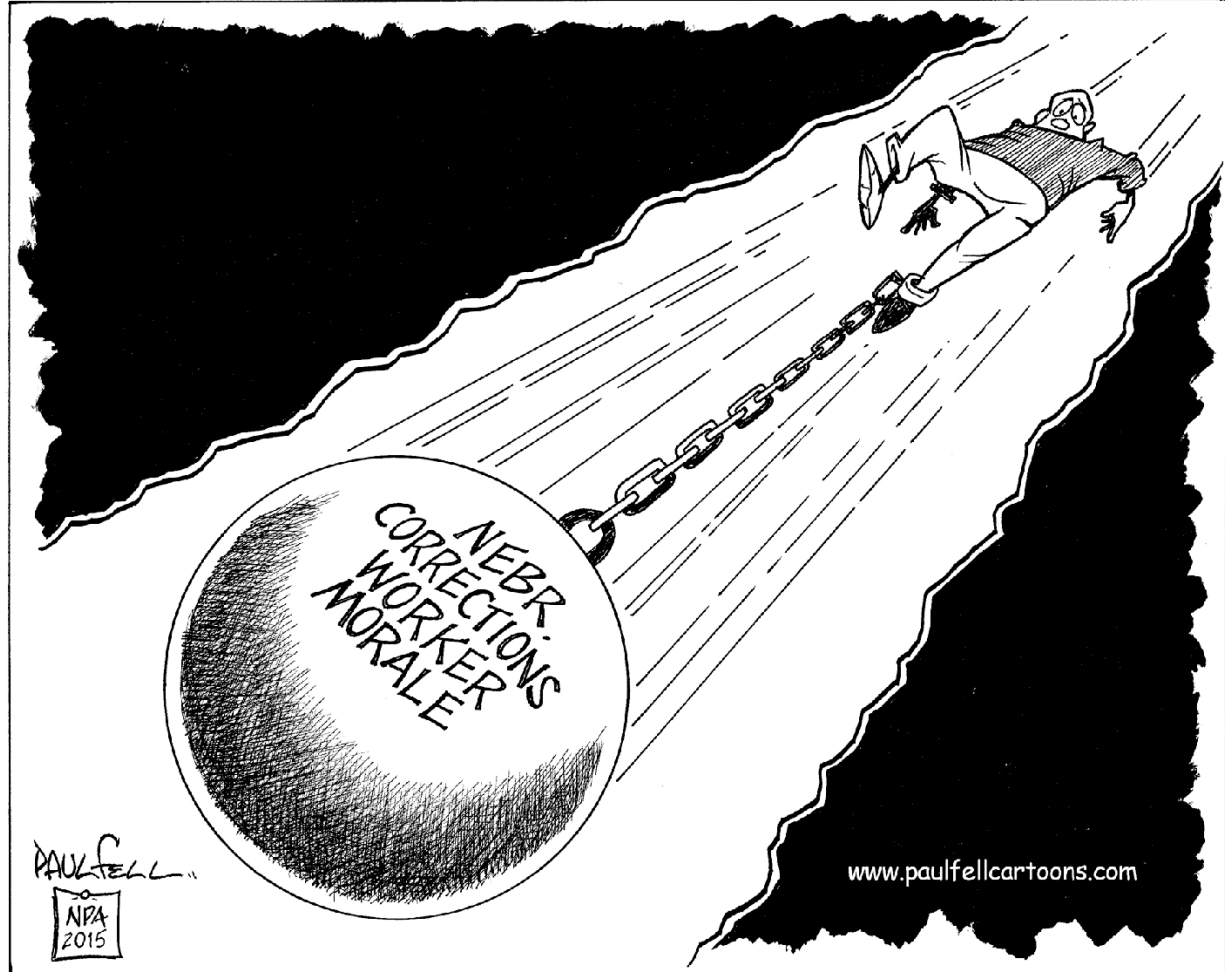

Frakes has characterized the situation as a culture of fear. The stories we get are of guards "forced" to work overtime for fear of retribution. Their higher-ups say the overtime is necessary because the 13 institutions in the system are short-staffed. They are short-staffed because people hear the stories about staffing and overtime.

Prisons, not unlike the police agencies that are responsible for rounding up the very folks who often wind up on the other side of the bars, are para-military organizations. Guards answer to sergeants who answer to lieutenants who answer to captains who answer to wardens who answer to the director who answers to the governor.

There's nothing fundamentally wrong with that structure except that it tends to promote a culture of fear. Written or not, each level has its quota system and the people working at each level know what they have to do to succeed, or advance in the organization. The same is true — to an extent — in other government agencies and the corporate world. Who among us hasn't had a fearful moment in our working life.

But, it's a different problem in corrections where the product is not merchandise or sales or service. The product is people, people who have been stripped of their freedoms and are at the mercy of the system and the people who run it. The guards and officers have to have a certain amount of apprehension hanging out every day with some of society's worst. No doubt that leads to some attitude problems on both sides of the bars.

Kudos to Frakes for wanting to understand the staff. He knows the system because he worked his way up the ladder in the Washington state prison system. Surely he remembers his days as a guard and an officer on his way to the top. He should have some idea of how the people he wants to interview think and react.

Governor Pete Ricketts' chief human resources officer will lead the study. Frakes says about 300 randomly selected staff will be interviewed. I'd be more comfortable if an independent person or group was leading the way. Remember how you felt when you got called to the principal's office where good things rarely happened? And to whom does the human resources officer answer?

For that matter, to whom does the governor answer? The people? And how do the people have any say beyond the ballot box? The Legislature? Well, we all saw how well that worked out during the governor's first session with the 49 who were elected to represent the views of Nebraskans.

Frakes says the state Department of Health and Human Services will design the interview and staff from the departments of revenue and labor, administrative services and the Nebraska State Patrol will do the interviews. No one from the Corrections Department will interview staff.

That's a good start, but these are all folks who answer to folks who ultimately answer to the governor. What's to say that the culture of fear doesn't exist in this situation as well? Who will do the analysis of the collected data? Who will interpret it?

How about the inmates, the people on the other side of the bars who are also affected by this culture of fear. Where is their voice? Wasn't that lack of being heard one of the things that caused the recent riot at Tecumseh that left two inmates dead and hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage?

Would it be that difficult to interview 300 inmates? Would it be out of line to have the information analyzed by independent psychologists and sociologists?

Will the information be released in a written report presented to the media by the governor and the director? Or will it be explained in a series of statewide town hall meetings with the families of inmates and prison workers invited to participate in question and answer sessions.

It's a great idea to try to change the culture, Mr. Director. But don't do a superficial job and tell the rest of us it feels better. Show us something.

ties, and running government more like a business. All of these play a role in shaping an overall strategy for Growing Nebraska, and they serve as the inspiration for and creation of initiatives that my administration is already undertaking.

In the coming weeks and months, I will be hosting a series of town halls across the state so that I can continue to listen to you as we shape the state's priorities. This past week, I kicked off this journey with two very well attended town halls in Northeast Nebraska in Wayne and Laurel. They were both great opportunities to listen to the hopes and concerns of many hardworking Nebraskans. Questions and comments covered a lot of ground ranging from workforce development and education funding to the death penalty and cutting the growth in state government. It was especially encouraging to hear from young Nebraskans at the town halls who wanted to learn more about the future of higher education and healthcare in our state.

It is important to remember that you make up the second house in Nebraska. Our Unicameral Legislature is a one-of-a-kind legislative body made up of a single-house citizen legislature. This unique legislative body requires that the citizens of our state act as the second house, making their voice heard to their elected officials. I encourage all Nebraskans to take the opportunity to attend public events hosted by their representatives so that they can share their views on issues and hopes for our state.

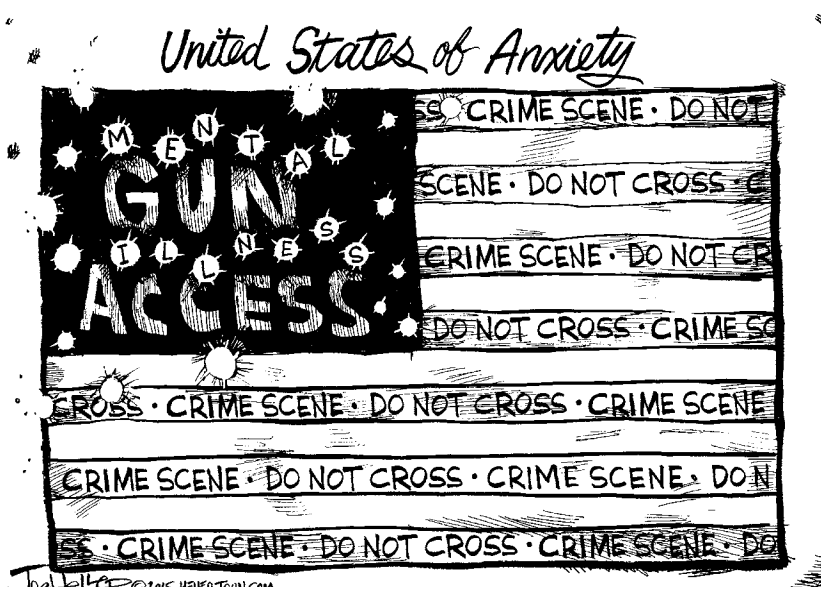

This week, I will be hosting town halls in Nebraska City and Falls City in Southeast Nebraska before heading west for additional town halls in the coming weeks. I hope that you will consider joining one of these events so that I can hear directly from you. The feedback I receive at these events will help me as I continue to build a strategy to Grow Nebraska and to put together new initiatives to achieve the major priorities on which my administration is focused.

Be sure to check Facebook, Twitter, and my website at governor.nebraska.gov for all the latest information on upcoming town halls across the state. If you are not able to make it to one of the upcoming town halls, I hope you will take some time to share your thoughts by calling my office at (402) 471-2244 or writing to pete.ricketts@nebraska.gov. I am always looking for your thoughts and feedback as we continue to work together to Grow Nebraska.

Throughout my first six-plus months as Governor, I have spoken frequently about my goal of Growing Nebraska. To make this goal a reality requires the input and support of the citizens of our state. Growing Nebraska necessitates that we as Nebraskans come together to build a strategy to move our state forward. That is why over the past two years I have spent so much time crisscrossing Nebraska, visiting communities, holding town halls, and listening to taxpayers.

These travels have shaped the focus and priorities of my administration. Those priorities include growing good-paying jobs, lowering taxes, pushing back on regulation, expanding educational opportuni-

The Exhibit Hall at the Dixon County Fair was filled with flowers for this year's fair.

The goats in the Love-A-Lop Petting Zoo were very popular and well-fed as many young children took turns petting and feeding them.

Monday night was the free barbecue, and a great turnout enjoyed some fantastic pork and beef sandwiches, sauerkraut, beans and a cold drink.

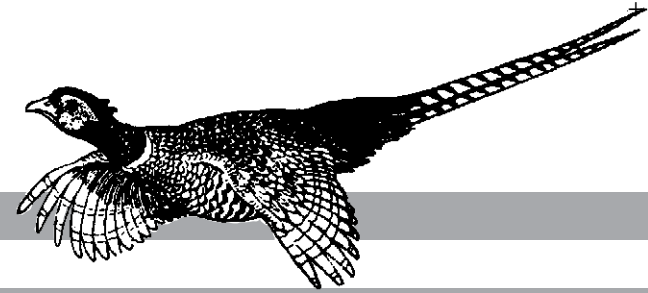

Chainsaw artist Jeff Klatt demonstrates his skill as he carves another sculpture for the Dixon County Fair. His works were then auctioned off to fair-goers.

A down pour Tuesday night sent fair attendees running for cover. The rain shortened the tractor pull and created mud puddles throughout the fairgrounds.

The emotional side of losing weight

The prospect of losing a significant amount of weight can be discouraging. We want to look and feel better quickly with little sacrifice. However, people who lose weight gradually and steadily — about one to two pounds per week — are most likely to avoid regaining those extra pounds.

The best weight plan includes adopting an ongoing lifestyle through eating smart (e.g., more fruits and vegetables) and staying active. It takes self-confidence and a fresh attitude. For many people, overcoming the emotional challenges of losing weight is essential to reaching weight-loss goals. Start by strengthening your resolve to succeed.

Here are five predictors that can make a positive emotional difference:

1. Be ready for change. Ask yoursugars and portions; and track your results.

3. Allow time to adapt. Rather than rush to reach unrealistic goals, patience can help you handle the challenges and minor setbacks along the way.

4. Stay positive. Even a modest weight loss of 5 to 10 percent can produce several health benefits, including improvements in blood pressure, blood sugar and cholesterol levels.

5. See it as a journey, not a final destination. While the overall goal may seem huge and faraway, remember you want sustained change.

And always learn from your previous attempts.

Weight loss is the outcome but it's the process that leads to success.

Have you been seeking God lately?

Finding God is kind of like playing hide-and-seek with a toddler.

A toddler will hide but is easy to find because if you ask where he is, he will tell you. "Are you under the bed?" "No." "Are you in the bathtub?" "No." "Where are you?" "I'm in the closet." Toddlers aren't very good at hide-and-seek because they want to be found. And so does God.

The prophet Azariah tells king Asa, "The LORD is with you when you are with Him. And if you seek Him, He will let you find Him; but if you forsake Him, He will forsake you" (2 Chronicles 15:2). As you continue to read the text you discover that "he sought Him, and He let them find Him" (v. 4). And again, they "sought Him earnestly and He let them find Him" (v. 15).

When you're playing hide-and-seek with little kids they will hide in some strange places. Sometimes they hide right out in the open, right in the middle of the living room. Sometimes they hide in obvious places, like under their bed. Sometimes they will actually find a great hiding spot, like the linen closet. But even then, if you ask, if you're seeking, they will let you find them.

And, again, the same is true with God. Sometimes we find God in obvious places, like singing at church or watching a sunset at the lake or hiking a mountain trail or listening to a baby laugh. Sometimes He's right out there in the open. But then there are times when we find God in the strangest of places. Sometimes you find God in an ICU waiting room. Sometimes you find God in the loneliness of your bedroom after your spouse has walked out. Sometimes you find God in the tears you shed as your child walks away from the values and faith you hold so dear. Sometimes you find God in the scars left over from the wounds of the words your father spoke in anger. Sometimes you find God in the chaos and messiness of parenting toddlers or teenagers. Sometimes you find God in the quietness of an empty nest. Sometimes you find God in the strangest of places, but, as Jesus promised, "seek, and you will find" (Matthew 7:7).

The apostle Paul reminds us that "from one man [God] made all the nations, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He marked out their appointed times in history and the boundaries of their lands. God did this so that they would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from any one of us" (Acts 17:26-27).

So, let me ask: Have you been seeking God lately? Have you been looking for Him only in the obvious places? Where is the strangest place you have found God? Have you discovered that He is right there beside you? Seek Him, reach out for Him, and you will discover that He will let you find Him.

Questions about service-based businesses, SBA loans and grants

Recently I have started a service based business, but am having trouble with the process of billing and collecting money from customers. How can I correct this? - Beatrice

A service based business has always created another dimension to the point of sale process.

Unlike traditional forms where a position of property, usually a product is exchanged for money, a service business has no tangible good so the point in which money is exchanged can be murky. The remedy can be summed up in by having a clearly written narrative of expectations. Some business owner call this an engagement letter, letter of intent, purchase order, or contract.

Whatever you call it, this will clearly define the process for which the sale transaction will be completed. This allows the business owner and the customer to be clear about the expectations for the service to be provided and then completed. This contract should be detailed with specific actions performed, by certain dates, as well as describing the payment procedure communicating when money will be exchanged. This may require the customer to pay 50% up front before anything is performed or that the service provider may have certain restrictions in performing the task, such as a roofer not roofing at night. This process can help with payment processing as well. Maybe you as the business owner require 33% up front, then 33% in the middle, and 33% at completion. A defined sales process may also help in the litigation process if you feel that is necessary. Whatever system you settle on, having a clear and defined process and then putting those expectations on paper can help.

How do SBA loans work and how can they help my business? - Norfolk

The Small Business Administration does not directly fund loans for small businesses. In most cases, these loans are funded or "originated" by traditional banks, but there are certain types of loans that the SBA will endorse and therefore guarantee. More simply, a bank might say "we don't want to do this loan because this small business is too risky and we might not get the money back", the SBA will then guarantee a portion of the loan to the bank allowing the bank to look at that loan more friendly and ideally encourage more funding to small business. Sometimes the perception is that the SBA is doing the loan, but in actuality they are just guaranteeing a portion which allows the bank to be more aggressive than they would otherwise. The specific process depends on the bank. Certain banks have a larger success rate when dealing with SBA loans and since the SBA only guarantees a portion the bank is still taking a risk of losing some money. This risk level is different for every bank and therefore locating a bank which is experience with this type lending is important in determining the process. These are considered "preferred lenders" and are listed with the SBA and have in the past been successful with SBA loan programs.

I have heard of grants and interest free loans available for veterans who want to start small businesses? Is this true? - North Platte regardless of the gender or veteran status of the owner. The only governmental sponsored grant which I am aware of are for specific areas under significant economic duress. For example, maybe you want to start a business in an urban area that has experience a high level of vacancies. Specific government programs have been created to give these business owners preference in accessing capital. This access usually comes in the form of financing not grants. At one point in time The Small Business Administration (SBA) had a program that waived fees associated with specific types of SBA loans, but now this loan is available to all participants regardless of veteran status. There are specific programs designated for Women, Minority, and Veteran owned businesses to receive preference concerning governmental contracts. Also some larger organizations will also give preference to businesses that owned and operated by women, minorities, and veterans, but I have not heard of specific grants or interest free loans for veterans. Many grants vary by governmental department, but are funded by tax dollars and require very detailed compliance and reporting measures. Grants listed through the Federal Government can be found on www.grants.gov. Some private foundations may offer grants available to a specific genders or race, but usually these monies are designated to non-profit organizations for a specific purpose.

Governmental funded grants for for-profit business are extremely ra-

Zack Zimmerman is the Associate Director of the Nebraska Business Development Center located at Southeast Community College's Entrepreneurship Center in Lincoln, Nebraska. NBDC is a State and Federally funded agency dedicated to assisting small business in Nebraska. If you have a question for Zack please contact him at zzimmerman@southeast.edu.

Grace LLL celebrates 75th year

Lutheran Laymen's League at Grace Lutheran Church was chartered as The Men's Club of Grace Lutheran Church-Wayne in November 1939. The designated purposes were to support the Lutheran Hour broadcast and solicitations of the LLL Roll Call, as well as supporting other mission outreaches.

In 1963, after 24 years, these men wanted this work in the Lord's mission to continue and requested that Duo Club (a Couples' Club that had existed since 1951) assume the charter. In October of 1963 Duo Club (which adjusted its structure to welcome single memberships also) received the new charter and became an official chapter of LLL.

For over 50 years, Duo Club LLL has been an active mixed group that is also a service club for many additional activities in the local church as well as supporting district and synod wide efforts. The annual ice cream social, Tree & Treats and the Golden Age Dinner are examples of local events sponsored by the Duo Club LLL.

Today some of these activities are no longer held, but the current members continue to help sponsor The Lutheran Hour (heard on KTCH at 7:30 a.m. Sunday mornings) and the Rose Bowl Parade Lutheran Hour float and to volunteer at Orphan Grain Train in Norfolk as well as other district and synod outreaches.

The July monthly meeting is traditionally a "no host" meeting and in the past had been an outdoor picnic. This year on Monday, July 27, in observance of the 75th anniversary last November, a "no host" indoor picnic was held at the church. The hot dog, coleslaw and chip picnic supper was enjoyed by 21 members and Faith and Heath Feldmann. Supper concluded with homemade ice cream and cake. A time of reminiscing followed the meal as the archives were available for everyone's sharing.

"We are thankful to God for the many years of Christian fellowship and service we have enjoyed over the past 75 years. We pray in the name of Jesus that the great mission work of the Lutheran Hour Ministries continue to be heard and touch the hearts and souls of all people throughout the world," Pastor Mike Feldman said.

PUBLIC NOTICE

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

In accordance with the National Primary Drinking Water Regulations, the City of Wayne, NE3118104, public water system in WAYNE County, is hereby making public notice of the violation of drinking water microbiological standards. The violation consists of three (3) total coliform samples testing positive during the month of July 2015. The standard is that no more than one (1) sample per month may be positive for total coliforms for systems that collect fewer than 40 samples per month.

What Should I Do? You do not need to boil your water or take other corrective actions. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants and some elderly may be at increased risk. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. Coliform bacteria are generally not harmful themselves. Coliforms are bacteria which are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other potentially-harmful bacteria may be present. Coliforms were found in more samples than allowed and this was a warning of potential problems.

What Happened? What Is Being Done? Usually, coliforms are a sign that there could be a problem with out treatment or distribution system pipes. Whenever we detect coliform bacteria in any sample, we do follow-up testing to see if other bacteria of greater concern, such as fecal coliform or E.coli are present. We did not find fecal coliform or E.coli present.

The City of Wayne public water supply system is continuing to test and is working with the Drinking Water Program to identify the source of the problem and to return the water supply system to compliance. We have done an extensive check of our system and taken over 30 samples that were negative since the violation. We believe the samples must have been contaminated when they were taken. Extra precaution is being taken during sampling to correct the problem. The Water Department has been in contact with the Nebraska Health and Human Services field representative for this area and to date we have found nothing wrong with our system. For additional information regarding this notice interested persons may contact:

JEFF BRADY - PHONE # 402-375-6250 Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail. (Publ. Aug. 6, 2015) ZNEZ

This is also an opportunity for parents to return previously mailed out forms at the end of their visit. Students in grades 7-12 will need to go to PowerSchool to see a copy of their schedule for this year. Credit checks have been completed for all students in grades 10-12. Drop and add can be done through the office during the first full week of classes (until Friday, Aug. 21), but it would be best if students would discuss schedule changes both at home and with Mrs. Oswald to make sure all requirements are being met.
