Fr. Beran: Wayne made him 'feel at home'

"I love to visit and connect with the kids in the school on a weekly basis during the school year," Fr. Beran said.

Another aspect of the community Fr. enjoys is the fact that there is a "whole spectrum of people in the congregation - all ages, all occupations, etc."

AREA TREES HIT HARD BY LATE-NIGHT SEVERE WEATHER

(Staff and reader photos)

Trees bore the brunt of much of a late-night storm that rolled through the area Friday night. Wind speeds in excess of 80 miles per hour tore branches off trees, knocked out power in part of Wayne, and left behind a big mess for area residents to clean up over the weekend. Heavy rains also accompanied Friday's storm, although the heaviest rain amounts were seen farther south in Dodge County.

City Council turns page on park 'libraries'

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

Four parks in the city of Wayne will soon have their own "little libraries" after the Wayne City Council approved a local church's proposal at Tuesday's meeting. Recently, members of Our Savior Lutheran Church opened their own "little library" at the Front Porch, located near Fifth and Main streets. Church members have since built two more miniature libraries and were hoping to set them up in a public spot somewhere in the commu-

"We wanted to try to find simple locations where they can be easy to find and would be more useful," church member Kim Dunklau told the Council. "We're hoping to contact service organizations in the community that would be interested in helping to operate and man those libraries." Dunklau said the Front Porch library was made from recycled materials, including a stained glass window from been constructed, and the idea was to use safe, recyclable materials for the park-based libraries.

Dunklau said the group would like to place little libraries in four city parks, including East Park, Westridge, Sunnyview and Bressler Park. Our Savior would be responsible for any repair work that might be needed, whether from vandalism or any other damage that might be done.

Dunklau said the idea of the little libraries is for people to not only "check out" books in the library, but to leave books of their own for others to "check out" as well. "Books are donated from everywhere," Dunklau said, noting that she has talked with the Wayne Public Library about getting books that are no longer in service, and has also received an offer of book donations from Wayne Com-

"We'll make sure and monitor the (libraries)," Dunklau said. "The theme is to take a book and leave a book." Councilman Matt Eischeid encouraged Dunklau to "put the Old Redeemer building. A second library has since something in the paper so people know what the ground rules are," after the libraries are put in place.

> Dunklau said the park-based libraries would be numbered and registered with the Little Free Library, which provides a national registry and a map of "little library" locations. Councilman Nick Muir suggested that having the libraries in the park would be a good promotional tool for

The City Council gave its approval to the final plat of the Tuffern Blue Estates Subdivision, but tabled action on the subdivision agreement until more discussion was had between the city and the subdivision owner, Todd Luedeke.

Concerns about allowing landowners in the subdivision to hook into the city's water system were addressed during Tuesday's meeting. Two area residents felt the water pressure in their area would be compromised if a hookup was allowed to the city's water line.

Little Library labor of love for Schulz

By CLARA OSTEN Of The Herald

When Vickie Schulz was a child, she often visited the Wayne Public Library. While her mother shopped for groceries, she would stock up on books to read until her next trip into Wayne.

Her love of reading has not diminished and now she is doing something to give others the opportunity to enjoy reading. Schulz and her family have recently installed a Little Free Library on their property at 211 Maple Street.

"Approximately two years ago, I read an article in the Sunday paper about the Little Free Library project and asked my husband, Jason, if we could do something like that," Vickie said.

After visiting the project's website, littlefreelibrary.org, Vickie obtained a book with blueprints for constructing a library and information on the steps necessary to have her own library.

The couple discussed the possibility for some time and discussed options.

"I knew I wanted one with two shelves, one for children's books and one for adult or young adult books," Vickie said.

Coincidently, at the same time the Schulz family was planning to put up a library, several members of Our Savior Lutheran Church in Wayne, of which Schulz is a member, was working to put a Little Free Library on church property.

"After going to a meeting at the church, I decided to just go ahead and do this on my own. We got a charter number and plaque to go on our library and became registered. We are now listed on the Little Free Library website," Vickie said.

It was also at that time that Vickie's son, Nick, visited his family and saw the book of blueprints lying on the table. He told his mother that he had already been thinking of building one for her for her birthday. "Nick has been really thoughtful and worked on building the library in his spare time. It took Nick approximately one month to build, and on June 12 we dug the hole and put up our library. His girlfriend, Kylie

Pet of the Week

The Pet of the Week at Tender Heart Animal Rescue is Jersey.

She is an eight month old female cat/kitten. She is gray and orange and one of the sweetest cats I have ever seen. If you sit down, expect her to be in your lap. She has the deepest "grandma" meow. She is absolutely beautiful and would make any home an exceptional pet. She came from south of Wayne and the people who found her felt she was dropped off. She has been spayed and is up to date on all her shots. Someone looking to add another pet to their family would not want to miss out on the chance for this special girl because they won't get better than this.

ACADEMIC TOTE BOARD

Corrected math = awarded bid

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

A math error that prompted a delay in the awarding of a series of bridge construction projects was corrected as the Wayne County Commissioners went ahead with the awarding of a contract Tuesday.

Bids for four bridge projects in the county were opened at the board's June 7 meeting, but an error was discovered on one of the bid documents by county road supervisor Mark Casey that prompted the county to delay awarding the con-

Originally, B's Enterprises of Norfolk was thought to have the low bid of $115,955.64, but after discovering an error in the bid amount submitted by Contech Engineered Solutions out of Lincoln, the board tabled the awarding of the bid until it could determine which numbers on the Contech bid were correct.

Casey told the board that, after confirming that the unit prices in the bid were corrected and the numbers were verified, Contech's bid of $115,840.23 wound up being about $115 less than the bid submitted by B's Enterprises.

"Is it common practice to do the math (on the bid form) and correct it?" board chair Randy Larson, who was absent from the June 7 board meeting, asked Casey.

Board members expressed concern that the delay in awarding the contract because of the math issue will hold up construction of the proj-

"This delay has held us up two weeks already," board member Jim Rabe said. Board member Dean Burbach agreed, adding his concerns about the schedule and stressing that the county's traditional construction time frame is during the summer months.

Contech representative Dick Ludwig, who attended Tuesday's meeting, told the board they would modify their delivery schedule to match the county's expectations.

The county board also discussed an expiring lease agreement with Grossenburg Implement and some changes that will be coming once those agreements run out.

Larson said that he spoke with Dave Olson at Grossenburg and was told the company can no longer offer the lease options as they had been offered previously. Lease agreements on vehicles the county has through Grossenburg will expire in the fall.

Larson said it is tough to determine whether or not the county the plat until its Tuesday, July 5 would be able to purchase used meeting.

"If you have to go to bid, you have to have certain specs, and it's kind of hard to do that when you're buying a used tractor," Larson said.

Board members have until the end of July to make a decision on the issue, and Larson said he would meet with Olson to determine what other options might be available for the county.

The board was presented a subdivision plat for Tuffern Blue Estate by landowner Todd Luedeke and City of Wayne zoning administrator Joel Hansen. The proposed 35-acre plot would include five separate parcels along with a parcel that Luedeke would own.

Larson said he had no problem with the plat as it was presented, but suggested the county wait until the Wayne City Council decided on the issue as it was within their zoning jurisdiction.

"We would have to re-approve it if changes are made anyway, so we might as well wait and see what the city does," Larson said.

The library was painted to match the colors of the Schulz home and purple was added in memory of Jason's mother (Sandra Schulz), who passed away recently.

At the present time, the library contains books from Vickie's own collection, including 25-30 children's books, and 10-15 young adult and adult books. Several magazines have also been included and newspapers are part of the collection.

"The idea is to take a book, read it and then bring it back. There is a note on the side of the door (of the library) explaining that this is a library, not a birdhouse, and how the program works," Schulz said.

She said that after only a week, she has seen people using it, especially children.

Schulz said the books in the library will be switched out on a regular basis to keep the collection fresh, and several neighbors have already asked to donate books to the project. She said the only request she has in regard to book donations is that the books are appropriate for all ages. She especially encourages biographies, auto biographies and novels, as well as children's books.

"I really just want to promote reading. These books can be shared with anyone and while the goal is to have the books returned, if they are passed on to someone else, the library is worthwhile.

"The Little Free Library is not meant to compete with the public library. It is something for our neighborhood and a way for me to promote reading for all ages," Vickie said. "I encourage other neighborhoods to put up their own. I would be happy to talk to them about the process and the benefits.

How's this for paying for your CWS tickets? Florida fans Richard Lovelace (right) and his son, Jacob, had to take a picture so my ticket provider, Sara Naeve, could see who was enjoying the game Sunday.

Ticket giveaway best CWS experience yet

Sometimes, the best games ever played are the ones somebody else witnessed.

This past weekend, my daughter and I were set to do our annual Father's Day tradition of taking in a game at the College World Series. I've been blessed to have contacts who have "season tickets" to all the CWS games, and we were ready to take in the Texas Tech vs. TCU game on Sunday afternoon.

Sara and Mike Naeve have been my ticket contact the last couple of years, and last year they joined Kylie and I for a game. They were going to try to go this year, but Sara's recent bout with cancer forced her to the sidelines, so she got a big hug when she brought the tickets to the

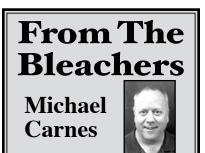

As the day got closer, Kylie and I weren't excited with the prospects of 100-degree temperatures. By Saturday afternoon, we had decided to go with a "Plan B" for Father's Day, enjoying dinner and watching the Saturday evening game at a nearby sports bar with the plan to find somebody at the stadium who was looking for tickets to the Sunday af-

I was hoping that I'd find somebody who would appreciate the story behind the tickets, and as I stood on the corner near the southwest entrance to TD Ameritrade Park, a father and son wearing Florida hats walked up to me and asked if I had tickets for the afternoon game and how much I wanted for them.

Here's the deal, I told them -afriend who has cancer gave these tickets to us, and we'd like to give them to somebody who'd enjoy the game. If you'll take a picture with me that I can send to my friend, the tickets are yours.

At first, they couldn't believe what they were hearing, but as we talked further, I found out that the father, Richard Lovelace, was himself a cancer survivor. He and his son, Jacob, wanted to catch the afternoon game before the Florida game that evening, and the connection was just too good to pass up.

The story gets a little more ironic, though – as we talked, he asked what I did and I told him about my I had any advice for his son, who the bat.

wanted to go to school to be a sports writer. He loves sports and loves writing about it, so I told him how I got my start, encouraged him to follow his passion and I'm hoping that one day I'll see his name in a byline somewhere.

So here I am, getting tickets from a cancer fighter, giving them to a cancer survivor whose son wants to enter my line of work as a career choice. Can this story get any bet-

Why, yes it can.

As we sat at my daughter's home after giving away the tickets, I sent a note to Sara to let her know what had happened and the connections that were made with the tickets. "The story gets better," she replied back. "My other two tickets went to another cancer survivor, so I told her. Maybe they will talk."

Sara later passed on the message that all of her tickets went to fellow cancer survivors, so what started as a simple gesture turned into a pretty special College World Series for a lot of people who, no doubt, deserve the kind of happiness in their lives that a trip to the ball park can give.

Whether they did or not, I guess I won't know for sure. I do know that the Lovelace family were very thankful for the tickets and we all enjoyed our moment together there on the corner outside the stadium. Hopefully, their stay in Omaha is a long one and they get a lot of chances to enjoy the experience that is the College World Series.

As for me, I know that my daughter and I missed an exciting ball game (TCU came back late to beat Texas Tech) - but I don't think we've ever enjoyed a College World Series experience as awesome as the one we had this year. It was a grand slam of an afternoon - even job here at the Herald. He asked if if we didn't get to see one swing of

Wakefield Seniors 2-2 at tourney

The Wakefield Post 81 American Legion Seniors won a league game at home and went 2-2 in tournament action over the weekend in South Sioux City.

On Wednesday, the Wakefield seniors posted an 8-0 win over Ponca, riding the four-hit pitching of Isaac Camarena, who walked two and struck out four in the win.

Camarena helped his own cause with a steal of home on a double steal in the first inning. Jose Sanchez followed with a two-out, tworun single to right that scored Noah Lamprecht and Micah Sprouls to stake the locals to a 3-0 lead and they wouldn't be challenged after

In Saturday's tournament play, Wakefield lost to Tekamah 2-1 and beat Elmwood-Murdock 3-2. In the Tekamah game, the two teams played a defensive gem as neither team could get on the board until the seventh. Wakefield scored in the top of the inning when Sanchez walked, Brodie Mackling sacrificed, Sanchez stole third and scored on Daniel Nuno's suicide squeeze. The lead was short-lived, though, as Tekamah came back with two runs in the bottom of the seventh to come away with the win.

Camarena doubled and Sprouls and Noah Braun both had hits in the losing effort. Sprouls pitched well, allowing seven hits and striking out two.

Elmwood-Murdock, Against Wake-field won a back-and-forth matchup, breaking a 2-2 tie in the seventh when Nuno's single to right field scored Lamprecht, who had doubled earlier in the inning.

Ben Klein had two of Wakefield's seven hits, while Mackling and Lamprecht both added doubles. Nuno went the distance, scattering eight hits and striking out three.

On Sunday, Wakefield lost to Worthington 8-0 before finishing with a 10-4 win over Pender. In the first game, Worthington and Substitute Teacher Rates

Discussion: Mr. Lenihan did a survey of the local area schools to compare our breakfast. lunch, and substitute rates and found that Wayne Community Schools compares well with them. He suggested Wayne Community Schools keep all of the rates, breakfast, lunch, and substitute teacher, the same as the previ-

IV.a.I.3. Blue Devil Character Education Program

Discussion: This program will acknowledge positive character traits in the students. If a student goes above and beyond the normal expectations, they will be awarded a card that will be turned in to their principal or the superintendent for a Blue Devil Buck. This "buck" can be redeemed at the concession stand for an item of the student's choice. Younger students may have an alternative option to choose from. Each month will have a different character trait that will be identified Discussion: Mr. Hanson told the Board that the choir trip to Chicago went very well. He thanked the teachers and sponsors for the great opportunity for the students.

IV.a.III. Special Education Director Discussion: Mr. Hight reported on the CPI refresher courses for all of the staff. He noted that he has seen a drop in the In School and Out of School Suspensions since beginning the Crisis Prevention Intervention. Mrs. Beai told the Board that there will be no state writing tests during the 2016-2017 school year. The Early Learning Center qualifies for the USDA Community Eligibility Provision, which means the breakfast and lunches are free for the preschool students for the next four years. IV.a.IV. High temperatures, wind and humidity did not deter enthusiasts from checking out the line-up of cars on display at this year's Winside Old Settlers celebration. The event raised funds for the Winside P.R.I.D.E. organization and park upgrades.

Members of the Winside Sons of the American Legion had several guns on display and sold raffle tickets for the annual 52-Gun Raffle.

Don't get me started

By: Michael Carnes Managing Editor

Still a lot of good people in the world

Time flies by, doesn't it?

It really doesn't seem like it's been two years since tornadoes practically riped the town of Pilger from the map and just missed Wakefield.

It was the first of back-to-back nights of tornadoes hitting the area. The second night, about a half-dozen tornadoes tore through parts of Cedar County, with one particularly daunting funnel cloud just missing Laurel to the north and east by a couple of miles (a tornado that I was fortunate enough to capture on camera, albeit from a safe distance).

Those storms came less than a year after our own bout with the destructive forces of Mother Nature. Between Oct. 4, 2013 and the middle part of June, no fewer than 12 tornadoes had been documented within a 30-mile radius of my front door. I'd always wanted to see a tornado in person and take a photo of one – but this was a little more than what I'd been asking Inevitably, somebody from outside the area will ask about these storms that happened in our back yard and what the experience was like. I can't speak for those whose lives were shattered or forever altered by the loss of homes, businesses and even lives that were experienced, but I do like to share my observations of the people who were involved in the aftermath of these storms and how they AND their communities responded.

You really find out what a person is made of when you see them in a time of major crisis. When seconds and minutes matter, the way people respond to those decisions is felt by those who are relying on these people to get things done and alleviate – if not eliminate – the situation.

I got the chance to watch people like Wayne's own mayor, Ken Chamberlain, as he processed information, met with local, county, state and federal officials and juggled a seemingly endless wave of details, and not once did I see him lose his composure as the days went on. I still remember the news conference he conducted at City Hall just 48 hours after the tornado ripped through the east edge of town, and if he was tired, frustrated or otherwise overwhelmed with everything he'd seen over the previous two days – with very little sleep, I might add – he never showed it.

I remember Pat Garvin showing me a plaque his dad had made that included a story cut out from an old issue of The Wayne Herald when his dad started their business here in town. That plaque was taken by the tornado and deposited in a field about seven miles north of town – and somebody found it in a field and returned it to him. That memory that was captured in that story from 50 years ago is priceless to him and his family – and somebody found it and thought enough of it to return it to him.

I watched people here, and in Wakefield, and in and around Laurel, as they worked to pick up the pieces of what was left behind. People were coming from all over – neighbors helping neighbors, fire and rescue volunteers from all over the place, church groups from other communities bringing equipment and resources, truckloads of supplies and clothing and toiletries for those who were suddenly without homes, even a guy who drove all the way from northern Minnesota and showed up at city hall after the killed four individuals within a reins as governor and was instantabove-mentioned news conference just to see if anybody needed any help with anything – while my focus was on reporting the news and trying to keep readers (both in print and online) up to date on what was going on – I couldn't help but be touched by the selflessness and the togetherness of people from all walks of life coming together and helping one another.

Of course, if you've lived in small-town America long enough, you know that none of this is much of a surprise. This is standard-operating-procedure kind of stuff on this part of the planet. If somebody is in need, no matter who it is or what the need, people here will help out. And it doesn't matter who that person is - you might see two neighbors who've never seen eye to eye working side-by-side to help another neighbor out, and to see them working together like that, you'd never know that they were on opposite sides of the fence. This is how we roll here in the small-town

This sense of "all for one and one for all" is something you don't see a lot of when you watch stories involving disasters in big cities on the national newscasts on TV these days. The local TV stations in Sioux City, Lincoln or Omaha will cover some of these "people helping people" small-town stories, but it's a rare thing to see on the national newscasts.

To watch the national news, you'd think the world was full of "me first" people who were more interested in covering their own backsides than helping those in need. How many times do you see some kind of disaster hit a big city, and one of the first things you see are people looting businesses, stealing from their fellow man rather than offering a helping hand? To watch the national news on TV, you'd think that the big city is full of people who could care less about their neighbor. It's every man (or woman) for himself (or herself) and only the strong survive.

What I saw during these severe weather events two years ago was proof that, even in this world where it seems like everything's going to Hell and nobody cares about anybody other than themselves anymore, there are a lot of good people still around who are concerned as much about the health and happiness of their neighbor as they are with themselves.

Time does fly by - but here in the small town, it's great when you spend t hanging around good people.

Convention has Nebraska twist

NO, NO...

By J.L. SCHMIDT Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

There is speculation that the upcoming Republican National Convention could be one for the history books. It wouldn't be the first time. In fact, this marks the 60th anniversary of an RNC gathering that made headlines because of the actions of one Nebraskan.

The headline in the August 23, 1956, Chicago Tribune said "Nomination of 'Joe Smith' Convulses G.O.P. Parley."

Credit the late Terry Carpenter for what the Tribune called a "one man drive to nominate Joe Smith of Terrytown, Neb., for Vice President." Carpenter, a former U.S. Representative (as a Democrat) and a longtime member of the Nebraska Legislature, threw the mythical Smith into the race against incumbent Vice President Richard Nixon. He admitted that he was bored and wanted to stir things up a bit.

Widely known throughout his political career as Terrible Terry, Carpenter had his 15 minutes of national fame as folks back home -- myself included -- watched the whole thing unfold on black and white TV. Despite assurances from the permanent convention chair and the leader of the Nebraska Delegation -- Hazel Abel of Lincoln -- that the nomination would be taken seriously, Carpenter decided to pass.

"I've been shut out. Who said this was an open convention. I won't vote for Nixon," Carpenter told the Chicago Tribune. "His candidate, Smith, could not be reached for comment," the paper reported.

So, who was Joe Smith? The paper said that Carpenter received several telegrams in the hour folmen named Joe Smith, including at nomination and offered to send a U.S. Senate.

biography. Carpenter later opened bar in Nebraska called "Joe

Legislative Update

Correction issues need to be addressed

Three years ago, Nikko Jenkins In 2015, Pete Ricketts took the bery and assault convictions. His killing spree and parole catapulted the Nebraska Department of Corrections into the spotlight.

While we had known that the facilities within the Department of Corrections were severely overcrowded we had no idea how many issues there were. It would not take long for us to discover that we had a major problem that could no longer to see the situation worsen.

While Director Frakes received great support from the Legislature and especially the Judiciary Committee, the relationship is becoming strained to say the least.

Last May there was a prison riot at Tecumseh State Prison that left two inmates dead and then on Friday, June 10, two inmates escaped from the Lincoln Correctional Center. The two escaped, stole a vehicle, led police on a chase before crashing the vehicle and then evading police. One was arrested Saturday (June 11) in Lincoln and the second one was finally arrested on Wednesday (June 15) in Omaha. By all accounts, it appears that the staff at the Lincoln Correctional Center that led to the escape did not follow proper procedure – this is a problem that we have to fix and it cannot wait until January. I do not feel that this is a time to call for the resignation of Director Frakes, like some of my colleagues, but I do feel that we need to get serious about

Laurel celebrates Ag Days

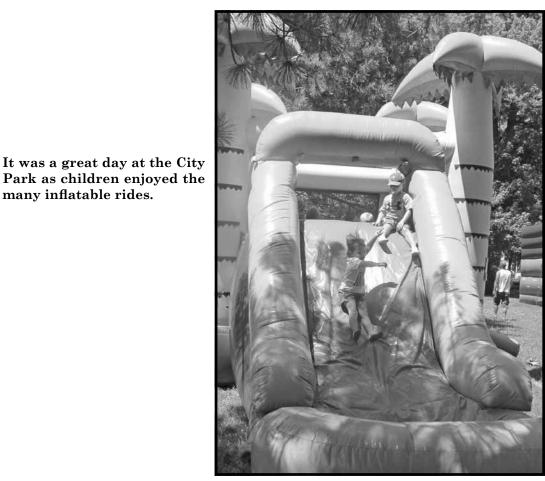

Sixty years and going strong! Members of the Laurel Class of 1956 gathered to ride in this year's parade.

Gary Anderson represented Gary's Food Town well with this classy pickup.

Five Generations of the Ebberson family of Belden represented farming in Cedar County.

The Class of 1971 was the biggest class to graduate from Laurel and still showed up in large numbers to ride in the parade.

Many people enjoyed the BBQ served at the Laurel City Park.

A familiar scene in Laurel was Bill Heitman riding his favorite International tractor.

Members of the Class of 1941 were represented in the parade as they celebrated their graduation 75 years ago.

Representatives of Learning Tree preschool took time to enjoy the food at the park.

Irv Haisch took his grandchildren for a ride in the parade in this classic car.

Ditch diets forever with mindful eating need to lose weight, you may be swayed by the plethora of magazine stories devoted to weight loss or TV shows highlighting biggest weight The problem with dieting is that it can promote an obsession with

Dieting is a multi-billion dollar market. Even if you don't think you food and weight, and feelings of failure, guilt and deprivation. This can become an endless cycle of dieting, throwing in the towel and eating anything, dieting again and so on. If you want to lose weight but would rather ditch diets forever, it may be time to try mindful eating. The Control Diabetes for Life program on Wednesday, June 29 will be offered from 1:30-4 p.m. at Northeast Nebraska Public Health Department, 215 N Pearl St., Wayne. Participants are asked to pre-register for Control Diabetes for Life by calling Nebraska Extension in Wayne County at (402) 375-3310. Please register by Monday, June 27, so the proper number of handouts may be prepared. Debra Schroeder, M.S. and Nebraska Extension Educator will review how you can become a mindful eater taking control of what you eat, the amount of food, and when you consume food. These hints will help you determine your hunger level and if you are eating because you are hungry or just because the clock says it is time to eat. The people you are with can also cause you to eat more than your hunger level. Mindful eating teaches you that food is nourishment and eating should be enjoyed but we should not use food to cope with life's stressors. Some have called food an emotional cure-all. If you are feeling anxious or stressed, chomping your way through a bag of chips may temporarily decrease your anxiety. If you are bored and lonely, you might turn to food for comfort. How do you start eating mindfully? Join us for the June 29 session of Control Diabetes for Life. The first step in mindfully eating is to throw out the idea that some foods are "good" while other foods are "bad". Make all food permissible (unless there are medical reasons you need to avoid some foods). Quit counting calories, measuring food, and "dieting". Instead, sit down at a table without distractions (no multitasking) and enjoy the experience of eating and your company.

Topics that will be addressed during the program are: More than Skin Deep: Foot Care; Discovering Hidden Carbs and fighting Cravings; and Mindful Eating with Healthy Kitchens along with other helpful hints. Participants will receive recipes for diabetic appropriate foods. Team-teaching the program will be Deborah Willcox, R.D. and L.M.N.T., and Stacie Petersen, B.S.N. and Certified Diabetes Educator both of Franciscan Care Services in West Point and Debra Schroeder, Nebraska Extension Educator in Cuming County.

The program is offered free-of-charge and will help participants learn to control diabetes and prolong the onset of complications from the disease. These sessions are designed to supplement the education that you receive from your local diabetes education team and are not a substitute for diabetes classes through your local health care providers. Nebraska School Food Service Association has approved this session for two hours of continuing education credits for food service staff

PMC Memorial Service held

PMC held their 27th annual Memorial Service on June 12, at the First United Methodist Church, with nearly 100 people in attendance. This event is held annually in remembrance of deceased loved ones. A special service is held and then attendees go outside for a balloon release. Providence Medical Center staff and volunteers join together with family members and friends for this annual service conducted in memory of deceased loved ones.

When it comes to temptation, He knows

There's a curious verse in the New Testament book of Hebrews. It says, "Because (Jesus) Himself has suffered when tempted, He is able to help those who are being tempted" (Hebrews 2:18). In Hebrews chapter 4 we are told that Jesus has been tempted in every way like we are. He has experienced every type of temptation that is common to Jesus had physical desires like you and I have. He had hormones like we have. He was tempted to give in to the desires of the flesh. He was tempted to take the easy way out. Tempted to cut corners. Tempted to abuse His position of author-

Since He was tempted, He understands our temptation. And since He never gave into the temptation, He is able to help us when we are tempted. He overcame temptation. And because He overcame, so can you. He not only paid the penalty for your sin, He also broke the power of your sin. In every temptation you face, you are promised that He just look for it and trust Him (see 1 know; I know."

Tree trouble all around town

Tree damage was prevalent all around the area Saturday morning after severe storms blew through the area Friday evening. Wind gusts in excess of 80 miles per hour snapped branches off and deposited them in streets and yards all over the area. City and county work crews and local residents spent a good part of the weekend picking up the fallen limbs and surveying the damage left behind.

Moving from basketball to summer sports

Well, LeBron finally did it; the Cavaliers are the basketball champs. Funny, I told the Big Farmer when Golden State got by the Thunder by the skin of their teeth, I thought Cleveland was finally going to do it this year. Then, in the first two games, the Warriors won so convincingly, and in Cleveland, that I rethought it.

I've decided that Green is truly a dirty player, and in fact, he got one last foul in the last seconds so that James could seal the deal, and that Tyronn Lue is quite a coach! He almost had me in tears as the camera showed him on the bench, wrapping his head in a towel, and sobbing!! You just don't realize how much emotion is involved.

Well, that stops that game for awhile, so we can concentrate on baseball. The Royals are back to the W column, and now, we have the College World Series to watch, too. With the Swim Trials coming back to Omaha, I should think that motels will be full. That's all good. deal.

That was the year I graduated from high school, and I do not remember it being so hot. In fact, there are some old black and white photos of a bunch of us having an evening picnic on the Blue River, and we all look pretty cool! Ha! Friend Marilvn. who had been here the summer before, came back because she had such a good time the summer of '55.

Friend Marilyn and I have been pen pals since about 1946. That's seventy years! I don't think that's any kind of record or anything, but it is a long time. Of course, we typically communicate by email or phone now, and no longer write letters, but we have been in touch continually since then. Everyone's talking about the Naperville, we had a place to stay. In fact, we helped to celebrate her husband's fiftieth birthday. They had traveled in a camper to Apex farm, and many years later, to the Farm House B&B.

After Lee retired, they moved to Phoenix, where, tragically, he died of cancer. But both their children lived there, so Marilyn stayed. We got there to visit about twenty years ago. She stayed at the Band B a couple of times, and two years ago, her daughter and she stayed here. Each time, we take up where we left off.

Did I tell you we share the same birthday? Does that account for compatibility? I don't know, but it's been a fun friendship, and we both have gained much from it. I just read an article about the value of relationships, and how we need to nourish them face to face, not just with technology, and I believe it. Maybe I'll go to Phoenix, but not as When Jon high jumped at the long as it is 115 there!! I don't care

Q: Do rescue treatments

A: Sidedress N has been a standard practice for years. The difference between it and a rescue treatment is that it goes on before plants are yellow. While much research has shown that sidedress is effective, new research is studying "realtime N application," which means is past the point of "hidden hunger" would be a fairly high rate, there used for real-time applications. Research in Missouri shows that visibly yellow corn will respond to N when applied up to tassel. Across a number of tests, the average yield increase in corn from the nitrogen rescue treatment was 34 bu/ac. The yield increase from the rescue treatment for various stress categories was: high stress - 57 bu/ac; medium stress - 42 bu/ac; low stress - 14 bu/ ac. (For more details see Nitrogen Loss and Late-Season N Application for Corn by Peter Scharf of the University of Missouri.)

Q: Are there any concerns with rescue treatments?

A: In some instances, depending on when and how much N was applied, leaf burn can result from a rescue treatment. This can look pretty ugly in the short-term, but corn will usually grow out of it. Scharf found that when applying a was no significant damage to 1-foot corn plants. UAN solution damage started at 2-foot high plants (14 bu yield reduction), increasing to 61 bu/ac vield loss in 4-foot corn. Urea caused less damage at all heights; loss was only 4 bu/ac in 4-foot corn.

To estimate possible yield loss from leaf burn, see the charts used to estimate potential yield loss from hail in Nebraska Extension EC 126, Evaluating Hail Damage to Corn.

Use Table III on page 6 to estimate corn yield loss due to leaf damage at various growth stages. Determine growth stage, using the method outlined in the resource, and estimate percent leaf area destroyed. Be sure to do this over the whole plant not just the injured leaves. For the earlier leaf stages the loss will be minimal. For example at the 14-leaf stage, there needs to be 45 percent leaf area loss to

UNL experts offer advice on protecting ash trees

Experts from the Nebraska Forest Service, Backyard Farmer and Nebraska Extension are urging homeowners not to prematurely rush into treating their ash trees after the recent discovery of the invasive emerald ash borer in an Omaha park.

"The recommendation is not to treat trees until it's known that the bug is within 15 miles of you," said Justin Evertson, green infrastructure coordinator with the Nebraska Forest Service.

The Nebraska Department of Agriculture confirmed June 8 that the emerald ash borer, which attacks and kills all species of North American ash trees, was found during a site inspection in Pulaski Park in south Omaha. Nebraska is the 27th state to confirm the presence of the insect species, and the state's taxpayers and homeowners are expected to spend more than $961 million on ash tree removal, disposal and replacement.

The current treatment consideration zone extends from Fort Calhoun to Plattsmouth and from Gretna to east of Council Bluffs, Iowa, Treating outside of this zone will result in unnecessary exposure of the environment to pesticides, experts say. For anyone outside of the treatment zone, it's important to take an inventory of ash trees and determine if it's worth the cost of treatment.

Ash trees have an opposite leaf pattern, which means that leaves, buds and stems are located directly across from each other. Ash leaves are compound and typically consist of five to 10 leaflets. On average, ash trees grow to between 50 and 60 feet tall.

A variety of treatments are available for controlling emerald ash borer, including trunk injections and soil treatment. Professionally applied trunk injections involve pressure-injecting an insecticide into holes spaced around the lower trunk. All injection methods cause some internal damage to the tree. In general, the smaller the hole and amount of product injected, the less damage to the tree. Soil treatment is applied as a drench, by injection into the soil and as granules. Treatment is taken up by the roots and carried throughout the tree. Distribution in large trees may be uneven, resulting in inadequate control.

The cost of treatment can range from $100 to $200 per application, depending on the size of the tree. Each of the treatment methods has advantages and disadvantages that should be discussed with a certified arborist. While several factors come into play when deciding whether to treat a tree for emerald ash borers, the vast majority of ash trees are not worth treating, experts say. The best candidates are high-value, healthy trees properly sited in the landscape. If a homeowner in a treatment consideration zone wants to pursue treatment, it's important to contact a certified arborist because he or she will have access to a wider range of products.

In addition, the yearly window of time that is recommended for treating an ash tree is closing. Soil treatments applied after mid-June will no longer be effective enough to control emerald ash borers this year. Also, trunk injections after mid-June will have quickly diminishing effectiveness the later they are applied because any tunneling by the insects will block the movement of the insecticide, and older emerald ash borer larvae in July and August are more difficult to kill. Instead of applying treatments in July and later, trees will see greater benefits if treated the next spring. Experts remind homeowners that treatments are not a permanent solution and those outside of the treatment zone do not need to consider the option at this time. "Treatment will not save the tree forever: it only extends the time until the tree dies from either the treatments themselves or is overcome by EAB," said Eric Berg, community forestry and sustainable landscape program leader with the Nebraska Forest Service. The alternative is tree removal. Again, experts recommend contacting a certified arborist to examine the tree to determine whether it has emerald ash borers or another insect or disease problem. As trees are removed, they should be replaced with a diverse selection of trees to help avoid another significant loss of tree canopy when the next serious pest arrives, according to Evertson.
