County gets bill from health department

Tuberculosis cases keep department busy

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

The Northeast Nebraska Public Health Department has experienced more than its share of work recently, and they presented two bills to the Wayne County Commissioners on Tuesday for their share of the costs.

The bills, totaling $27,373.87, were for work the health department has been doing in relation to an outbreak of a rare strain of tuberculosis that occurred in their four-county coverage area between April and October of 2014. One bill, in the amount of $15,432.87, covered 2014 expenses incurred by the health department, while the remaining $11,941 is for 2015 expenses, although that total is incomplete and could be higher once all of the bills are finalized.

Deb Scholten, chief executive officer of the NNPHD, three significant events over a two-year period, includ- contact with that individual led to 27 more people testing the 2013 and 2014 tornadoes and an outbreak of Avian Flu in Wayne and Dixon counties in May of 2015.

"We had five disasters in less than two years time, so we experienced more than most local health departments experience in a lifetime," she told the board.

The tuberculosis case, which started in April of 2014, involved a rare strain of the disease called mycobacteriumbovis - which is normally found in cattle - and required keeping the patient in isolation for 12 weeks.

"It's unusual to have someone in isolation that long," she told the board.

The patient was on special medication for some time and was not responding to the medications, which made the extended isolation necessary. Additional testing of 12 people who had contact with the individual discovered five more positive tests for tuberculosis shortly before the tornadoes hit in Wayne, Cedar and Dixon counties in the summer of 2014, which spread the department's staff pretty thin, Scholten said.

The rare strain of the virus was eventually traced back 50 years by the Centers for Disease Control, and soon after the first case came out of isolation, a secsaid her department was kept busier than usual with ond case was discovered. Testing of 100 people who had years.

That was really frightening," she said. "We were able to contain it, but it required months and months of work. It could have been a lot worse if the individual had left the area. More people could have been ex-

Board chair Randy Larson took the bills and said he would consult with County Attorney Mike Pieper, who said that state statutes are in place to dictate exactly what part of the invoices the county will ultimately be responsible for.

The board heard two separate presentations at Tuesday's meeting regarding the county's employee health insurance plan, which is up for renewal this fall.

Steve Muir with Elkhorn Valley Insurance told the board that the county's employees have generally been good about working with medical professionals within the network of the current policy, which has helped keep costs down.

The board looked at three plans presented by Muir, all of which consist of significant increases, which Muir said the county has been lucky to avoid in previous

"There have been good and bad years, and you've had some pretty good years lately," he said. "I've seen groups go years with no real big issues and then have a bad year, and it's usually about once every five years."

Judd Allen and Dennis Magart of NACO Benefit Services also presented several possible plans to the county, and the board decided they would recess Tuesday's meeting and reconvene on Tuesday, Aug. 9 at 8:30 a.m. to continue discussion on the topic.

Currently, the county pays 100 percent of employees health insurance, but Larson said a number of counties are now asking their employees to pay a share of their health insurance premiums, and it may not be long before Wayne County has to follow suit.

"The economy is going to force us to do something eventually," he said. "Everybody is scratching and trying to find ways to make health insurance work."

In other action, the board:

- heard from Emergency Manager Nic Kemnitz, who discussed a new notification service that would be available for use by the county and area communities to send out emergency text messages, much like an Amber Alert, for such events as emergency alerts,

Council gets first look at '16-'17 budget

By MICHAEL CARNES Of The Herald

The Wayne City Council spent more than three hours Tuesday evening discussing the 2016-17 fiscal year budget and asking questions of city managers on topics ranging from activity services to law enforce-

City finance director Nancy Braden helped facilitate the extended budget work session as the council looked over a potential 2016-17 fiscal year budget of about $35.7 million, which is a little more than 3 percent higher than the 2015-16 fiscal year budget of $34.4 million.

Braden said the city won't know a final levy until they receive valuaion numbers from the county later on this month, but she told the coun cil that she expects a levy at or below last year's rate of 45.0295 cents per $100 of valuation. The initial budget request for 2016-17 checks in at 44.9325 cents, a drop of about a tenth of a cent. Braden said she will be taking all of the council's questions and suggestions on the budget to come up with a final budget that the Council will consider for approval at its Sept. 6 meeting. The Wayne Herald will have more details on the 2016-17 fiscal year budget in our Aug. 11 edition of the newspaper.

The City Council spent much of the balance of Tuesday's meeting approving a number of resolutions and requests, including a request by Grace Lutheran Church to block off a portion of 10th Street for a Sunday School Rally Day that will be held on Sunday, Sept. 11.

Senior Pastor Mike Feldman told the Council that the church is hosting the Sunday School Rally Day, which got a good response last year with more than 150 participants. The street will be blocked off near the Willow Bowl between Main and Logan streets so that picnic tables can

The council also approved a request from the United Methodist Church on a cost-share agreement to replace part of a 50-foot stretch of alley behind the Verizon building between Sixth and Seventh streets. The council approved a request to pay for half of the cost of the construction,

'Coffee Talk' among new web programs

The Wayne Herald's web page at www.mywaynenews.com will add some new video programming to its site beginning this week. "Coffee Talk" is a new weekly talk show that will be recorded each week at Jason Sears Flooring, which is joining The Coffee Shoppe as co-sponsors of the weekly video webcast.

Wayne Herald managing editor Michael Carnes will be the show's host, and the program will focus on news and events in and around Wayne, interviewing local individuals in the community on some of the big events happening in the area.

"We want to use this program as an opportunity to either go more in depth with an important topic or concern in the community, or have some fun with some of the great events that are happening in our area," Carnes said. "Our goal will be to keep the program fresh and entertaining, like you're having a good cup of coffee with a friend and discussing the news of the day.'

The show, which will be aired weekly on the Wayne Herald's website, will be joined by two regular programs that will return for another season to mywaynenews.com.

The Wayne State Coaches Show will be on mywaynenews.com for its fifth straight year. This year, the program will be shot on campus instead of at The Max, where it had been recorded the last two years. The program will include interviews with coaches and staff of the Wayne State athletic department and highlight Wildcat athletics throughout the 2016-17 school year.

Also back for a second season will be Blue Devil Weekly, featuring Wayne High athletics and activities.

BBB says millenials more likely to get scammed than boomers

Older buyers are more 'scam-savvy'

lady" as a scam victim is wrong, as Millennials are actually more vulnerable to scams than Baby Boom-That's the conclusion of new research by the BBB Institute for Marketplace Trust (BBB Institute). Marketplace scams affect 1 in 4 year at an estimated loss to individuals and families of $50 billion, yet most consumers believe they are invulnerable.

"This research is so vital, not only to stop scammers from hurting consumers, but to help businesses," said Mary E. Power, president and CEO of the Council of Better Business Bureaus. (CBBB). "That $50 billion 'underground' economy is stealing from the legitimate marketplace. Every dollar lost to a scam is a dollar not spent at a lawful, trustworthy business."

The research, Cracking the Invulnerability Illusion: Stereotypes, Optimism Bias, and the Way Forward for Marketplace Scam Education, is based on a survey of more than 2,000 adults in the U.S. and Canada. Participants were asked about their perceived vulnerability to scams, who they think is most likely to be scammed, and about the factors that helped them to avoid being scammed. The participants did not know that BBB was the sponsor of about scam victims - they're usually seen as vulnerable and elderly, or gullible and poorly educated," noted the paper's co-author Emma Fletcher, product manager with the BBB Institute, CBBB's foundation. "These stereotypes are strongly held . . . and they are wrong. We are all at risk, but younger and more educated individuals are actually the most likely to be scammed."

"Optimism bias - the idea that we all think other people are more vulnerable than we are - is associated with risk-taking and failure to heed precautionary advice," said co-author Rubens Pessanha, CBBB director of marketing research and insights. "Seniors may be the one group that does not suffer from optimism bias when it comes to scams. They've heard, loud and clear, that they are at risk. Seniors may very well be more scam-savvy than others. They are also less impulsive buyers than younger consumers,

The stereotype of the "little old and less likely to be making pur- and stigma of victimization with chases online where so many scams take place."

The new research also confirms some trends noted in BBB Scam Tracker, a crowd-sourced reporting tool. More than 30,000 consumers have reported details of scams to BBB since the site was launched North American households each in late 2015, and reports are shared with law enforcement to drive investigations. Of those consumers reporting scams to BBB Scam Tracker, 89 percent of seniors (age 65 and up) recognized the scam in time, while only 11 percent reported actually losing money. For those age 18-24, however, more than three times as many failed to recognize the scam -34 percent reported losing money. Armed with this information, BBB is calling for a new direction for how society approaches the problem of fraud. The report recommends a three-pronged Leverage Technology, Crowdsourcing and Altruism: Targets of scams feel empowered when they can take back some control by reporting what has happened to them in order to help warn others. This altruistic impulse is the number one motivator for reporting scams. As noted in the report, "The voices and stories of others have the potential to normalize the problem in a positive way, shedding the shame the message that, if it can happen to other people like me, it can happen to me."

- Take Aim at the Optimism Bias: Consumer education must heighten perceptions of personal risk and provide information that boosts confidence in one's ability to protect oneself. Motivation to take protective action requires both the sense that one is vulnerable and the tools to do something about it. Effective public education must take a twofold approach; it must confront its audience with messaging that runs counter to stereotypes and perceived invulnerability, while simultaneously providing information that empowers individuals to avoid becoming victims.

- Provide Preemptive Information: Survey participants, when asked what might have prevented them from being scammed, said knowing about different scam types and understanding common methods used by scammers prior to being targeted would have helped. Nearly 80 percent of respondents identified one of these two factors as most protective; only one in five felt doing research after being approached by a scammer was most protective.

Each friendship can has a welcome note that was made by the youth attached. To introduce the activity, tell the youth that they are working together to make "seeds of friendship" so that new youth will feel welcome and be able to make new friends. Discuss with the youth how hard it can be to be the "new" child. Be sure and watch for friendly behaviors during the activity, comment on it, and encourage it. Another activity idea that can be used during center or club time is playing board games. There is also discussion regarding conflict resolution and how to teach youth to resolve problems they have with other youth using the conflict resolution strategies listed. Books that can help youth deal with conflict resolution are included. Three of the books listed are: A Volcano in My Tummy: Helping Children to Handle Anger by Elaine Whitehouse & Warwick Pudney; The Grouchy Ladybug by Eric Carle; and Stand in My Shoes: Kids Learning About Empathy by Bob Sornson.

An anchor to help with life's storms

Have you ever come across an 'immovable object?"

A couple weeks ago, we moved into a different house here in Wayne and we found a couple items that certainly felt like "immovable objects." Let's just say we have a piano that is now in its permanent resting place. (Or at least until my sons get older and I make them move it).

What do you think of when you think of an immovable object? A brick wall? An offensive lineman? A giant tree? What about an anchor? In Hebrews chapter 6 the writer of Hebrews talks about an anchor as an immovable object.

"Because God wanted to make the unchanging nature of His purpose very clear to the heirs of what was promised. He confirmed it with an oath. God did this so that, by two unchangeable things in which it is impossible for God to lie, we who have fled to take hold of the hope set before us may be greatly encour- promises are the immovable object (Isaiah 41:10)

Feeling afraid? God promises to Feeling heartbroken, and worn out? God promises to be near the brokenhearted and to save the crushed in Spirit. (Psalm 34:18)

Are you in the middle of a spiritual desert? God promises to rescue you and bring you up again. (Psalm 71:20-21)

Feel like sin has overcome your life and that you are beyond forgiveness? God promises forgiveness and redemption by the blood of His Son. (Ephesians 1:7-8)

Feel like victory is impossible and that the devil has won? God promises victory in Jesus. (1 Corinthians 15:51-58)

These promises from God are an anchor for us to hold onto in the midst of life's storms. They are immovable objects that will keep us steady when the storms of life come our way, we simply need to hold fast, and trust in a God who is unable to ever break His promises.

Remembering Sam Foltz – a friend

A week ago today, Sunday, we began seeing a scroll across the bottom of the TV screen to the effect that a Nebraska football player had been killed in a crash in Wisconsin. At first, it made no sense. What would one of our players be doing there? As the day went on, of course, I went to the computer. There, we got the news: Sam Foltz, NU punter extraordinare, had been doing a camp there, and he and a punter from Michigan State were driving in the rain and hit a tree. Unbelievable. But, sadly, very true.

Then there was a vigil at the sculpture of Brook Berrringer, another player with NFL prospects, gone all too soon. Big, husky football jocks looking very sad and distressed. As I said to the Big Farmer when Tommy Armstrong broke down, "you know, he's just a kid." For some of these guys, it may have been the first time they have had to deal with the death of a dear friend. In fact, I guess I would hope it was his best friend; he was supposed to important in this state." An underbe the best man at three weddings! But I was impressed by the first line of his bio: "Friend of Jesus." They say his priorities were his faith, his family, and football. I would add the fourth letter F; friends.

And maybe even a fifth; farming. We have a plaque at our house that says "Faith, Family, Farming. For each, his passion." I got a kick out of the on going conversation with the boy from DeWitt, also from a farm. Each claimed hardship; Sam telling him that at Greeley, they just planted in sand. Because, that's what farmers do, each trying to make you believe his life was the toughest.

Every time I read more about him, I ended up crying. Shoot, I didn't even know him! But we all feel as though we know our players, don't we? After they have been there for a couple of years, we know And, apparently, Sam was a them by their first names, or their friend. In fact, they will tell you, he nick names. As I told a sales per-statement, for sure.

With seven bus loads of athletes, coaches, and administration from Lincoln, it's a good thing that church was very large. I also had to smile when I read that the good ladies of Greeley were concerned there would not be enough food, and so, they brought their salads and cakes to accompany the barbecued sandwiches. Isn't that also what we do? Heaven forbid that anyone should leave hungry, especially those 300-pound football players!

Their priest had the best suggestion for honoring Sam this season. Instead of not having a punter show up on fourth down, thus getting a delay of game penalty, as suggested by one of the sports writers, how about never needing a punter; no fourth downs? Now, that is what I call an excellent idea! Rest in Peace, Sam. As your mother said, "He's already at the next level." Let's be sure we meet again.

Legislative Update Shootings of police a disturbing trend

It is with a great deal of concern that I write this newsletter. We are seeing a disturbing trend in our country – the shooting and killing of law enforcement officers.

While data from the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund shows that the firearm related death of officers are lower than they were in the 1970s, in 2015, there were 39 officers fatally shot and there have been 33 so far in 2016. These shootings are happening at a frequency (on average, one a week) that must end.

The sheer numbers are bad enough, but what really concerns me is how the media is handling and making "rock stars" out of the villains that are doing the killing. There is also a numbing affect to all of the reporting as well. After the reporters spend weeks "keeping the story alive" by shoving a camera in the face of anyone who might have ever met the killer, we are no longer not in the media. surprised when the next one hap-

Our law enforcement officers have a job to do, a job to protect each and every one of us. While there have been instances of officers that have not used good or wise judgement in the heat of the moment, there is no reason for officers to be lured to locations and ambushed. There are even a few cases of outright abuse of power, these cases need to be prosecuted fully, but in a court of law, ne.gov.

Update

How many millions of dollars worth of property have been destroyed because the media rushed to get the story first, rather than get it right? I proudly stand with our law enforcement, they have a tough job to do and often have less than seconds to make life and death decisions.

A great big Thank You to the Wayne County Fair Board and the many volunteers that helped put on this year's fair. I've been going to the fair for more years than I care to admit, and this one ranks right up there with the best, starting with the C.J. Jenkins Bull Riding Tour,

BBQ, the Tractor Pull and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band's

50th anniversary tour show, and the Demo Derby. Oh

yes, and the Big Guy for giving us perfect weather.
