Nebraskans urged to register to vote issuing the following reminders for Every state with the exception of North Dakota has a registration requirement for voting.

To register, you need only be a citizen of the United States and be at least 18 years of age on or before the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

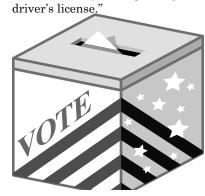

· Updating registration information is important for anyone who has moved, changed their name or had their voting rights restored since the last election.

•Nearly one out of every seven Americans of voting age who are eligible, are still not registered.

Secretary Gale encourages Nebraska citizens to make voter registration a high priority task. Citizens have until 6 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 26 for in-person registration, or Friday, Oct. 19, for the postmark deadline for mailed-in registrations as well as for online, Department of Motor Vehicles, and other agencies (including deputy registrars).

Secretary Gale said, "Our November 6 general election is coming up quickly, and there are many important races on the ballot as well as the Medicaid Expansion initiative petition ballot question. If a citizen has not registered before, is a new resident of Nebraska, or needs to update their registration, there are several convenient ways to do it. According to Gale, any citizens who are new residents, or who have moved in-state since last registering to vote, or have changed their name since the last election, need to act. Also, high school students who turn 18 years of age before November 6 can register to vote.

Citizens can check their status by access to https://www.votercheck. necvr.ne.gov/VoterView/Registrant-Search.do

"It's easy to let this simple task slip," observed Gale. "Now is an appropriate time to take care of those updates, especially in years in which there is a statewide election.'

ous week, it would make sense that one period. the Wakefield offense might be in for a bit of a letdown.

As Lee Corso would say — not so fast my friends.

The Trojans picked up right where they left off in last week's 70-66 win over Lutheran High Northeast, averaging nearly 9 1/2 yards per play and getting two special teams scores to rack up a 74-14 blowout of Omaha Nation Friday at Eaton Field.

"We got out of this game exactly what we needed, which was some quality reps for our starters early and everyone remained healthy at the end of the night," coach Mike Hassler said. "We were a little beat up from the first three games, so it was nice to be able to rest our varsity players, it was sorely needed."

It took about 10 seconds for the Trojans to get on the scoreboard, as Esgar Godinez returned the opening kickoff 64 yards for a score to start a 48-point first-quarter explosion for the hosts.

The big first half, which ended with Wakefield holding a 60-8 lead, gave Hassler an opportunity to give everyone suited up some playing

"We really preached to our starters about execution this week," he said. "We wanted to be as clean as possible and be off the field as soon as possible. Games like this are also a chance for our varsity to repay the scout team players they beat on all year. It's always nice when you can clear your bench and get a look at everyone on your squad. Overall I was very satisfied with how the evening went."

Samuel Nuno scored two secondhalf touchdowns and led the Wakefield offense with 163 yards on 18 carries. Harder also cracked the century mark, finishing with 129 yards in just seven tries.

All of Wakefield's 422 yards in total offense came on the ground, as the team did not throw a pass all night. Erb has 61 yards in four car-Godinez added a 63-yard punt ries, Gabe Lamprecht rushed seven return later in the quarter, Dylon times for 27 yards, Blake Brown Harder scored on runs of 19, 57 and Dawson Samuelson both and 23 yards and Justin Erb added rushed three times for 14 yards, Goa score from 13 yards out to make dinez had one carry for three yards for minus-3 yards.

The Wakefield defense limited Omaha Nation to 211 yards in total offense. Gabe Peitz led the defense with seven tackles, Nick Arenas had five along with two sacks and Charlie Lopez had four along with a pass break-up.

The win puts the Trojans at the .500 mark at 2-2, and they'll get a chance for their third straight win on Friday when they travel to Homer for a 7 p.m. kickoff.

Nebraska State Quilt Guild's annual Threads Across Nebraska 2018 coming up

By County Register

Mark your calendars for October 12 and 13! The Nebraska State Quilt Guild (NSQG) has an exciting show planned this year at the 14th Annual Threads Across Nebraska. The special event is being held at the Buffalo County Fairgrounds in Kearney with 25 to 30 quilt guilds from throughout the state taking part.

Between 150 and 200 unique quilts created by quilters from across Nebraska will provide a colorful display featuring quilts of all sizes—from miniatures to wall hangings to bed quilts. Viewers will enjoy a variety of styles and designs ranging from traditional to modern to art crafted by quilters of all skill levels from award winners to novices. Quilt show hours are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday. Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for children, ages 4 to 12. Children under four are admitted free. Parking is free. The Fairgrounds are at 3807 Avenue N, Kearney, and a concession stand will be available onsite. Vendors in the popular Merchants Mall will have a variety of products, such as fabric, patterns, books, notions, hand-dyed, painted fabrics, antique quilts, fabrics, sewing accessories and even clothing. Door prizes provided by the Vendors will be given away each hour.

The 2019 Raffle Quilt was unveiled at QuiltNebraska 2018 held in July and will be on display at Threads Across Nebraska along with others from Nebraska quilt NSQG President Elect LeeAnn Meduna explains how the 2019 quilt was created, "When I was asked to be President Elect, the first thing I thought of was the raffle quilt. I have admired all of the raffle quilts through the years and was a little intimidated by the prospect. Although I appreciate all the art and modern quilts, my heart lies with traditional quilts. The first pattern I thought of was by one of my favorite designers, Edyta Sitar, who graciously gave me permission to use it for this vear's quilt.

"Next, my trusty quilty friends and I were on a shop hop and they helped me choose the fabric. As this pattern called for appliqué not my strong suit—I asked Linda Winters, who is a wonderful appliquer and she started on it right away. Because it can be difficult to have several people piece and then try to put the guilt together so I did the piecing and it was fun! I have long admired Kris Vierra's quilting so choosing her to quilt was easy. And, thankfully, Sandy Dahlgren said yes to being the

I am not getting old

By MIKE RENNING

mikesportshome@yahoo.com

Sometimes getting old is a bad thing and sometimes it's a good

For instance, you can forget whether you took your pills for the day and you remember to bring bug spray to a fall football game.

You can forget your anniversary, but you can remember the quarterback for Nebraska in 1991.

Getting old is easy, getting wise is

I take a lot of pride in not being old, I don't act old – good heavens, Lily, Sophia and I can participate in driving their Mother, Nana and anyone else within hearing distance crazy.

Giggling like...well, we're having fun. And isn't that secret to life?

I'll teach them – oh, the heck I will. It's Mom's job to teach them – I'm in charge of having fun.

Back to the old -thing. I am 56, will be 57 on Oct. 12 (If anyone wants to send me a Snickers Bar), and other than forgetting what I had for breakfast – or if I had breakfast once in a while – I am as fit as a fiddle. The fiddle may be old, but it still can play.

What brought all of this to the fore front was the fact I fell again. My younger daughter Mikenzie said if I had fallen that many times in an assisted-living facility in that many months, I would have to leave. My falling is not a product of being old – it is a product of bad judgement and possibly a conspiracy by the Darling Wife.

The batteries in the clock above the stove were no longer working, according to the Darling Wife – every time I looked at it, it was within five hours of correct.

I mean really? They all have a phone in their pockets to know the cor-

Insult to injury, the step-stool I usually use to accomplish retrieving the clock was nowhere to be found.

Or was it hidden?

Here is where the conspiracy theory starts.

Within the past couple of years, the Darling Wife and I have discussed our life insurance situation.

Our four kids have grown and are now productive members of our so-

I think the Darling Wife put worn out batteries in the clock, hid the step stool and bumped up my insurance.

Sounds logical to me.

I got on a bar stool, which was almost as high as the stove - I was playng right into her plan.

While I was climbing, I made sure the stove was off (see I, I'm not that old). Made it onto the stove just fine. Grabbed the clock and turned around to descend.

I put one knee on the bar stool and it left.

The clock hit the counter some eight-feet away and shattered into about

One piece hit the Darling Wife's beagle, Jake, and it scared him enough to "water" the floor. (He's such a brave soul – at least Yippee came up and licked my face to see if I was OK at the end.

As I'm falling, I can see the puddle Jake was creating (falls like this take time, like slow-motion, trust me) and then I hit the stool with – well-right pelow my mid-section.

I bounced off the stool and headed for the sink.

I was thinking, why did we want the sink so close to the stove as my elbow hit the faucet?

We had just purchased the HUGE faucet for the kitchen sink - you guessed it, the Darling Wife's idea.

I plopped back to my left side and crashed to the floor in the middle of Jake's excitement. My kids and the Darling Wife all said it was time for me to realize I'm getting old and I had no business climbing on a bar stool to get on the stove and change a battery in the clock.

I tried to plead my case about the life insurance and they all went back to eating supper – which I cooked.

I am not old, but the step stool showed up four days later.

And, you know, I never even found a battery in all the shrapnel from the clock...I'm sleeping with an eye open for a while.

Capitol View

Auditor, auditor, where's the state auditor?

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

By J.L. SCHMIDT

About a month after he blew the whistle on a discrepancy in the State Treasurer's office, a newspaper has blown the whistle on the alleged workday habits of State Auditor Charlie Janssen.

Janssen acknowledged the accuracy of an Omaha World-Herald report that he sometimes spends more of his Lincoln workday at a sports bar 16 blocks south of his Capitol office. The 47-year-old Republican also admitted that he's not perfect but promised that he's taking immediate steps to change.

The newspaper said its threemonth investigation revealed late morning arrivals to work, threehour lunches and afternoon absences from his office. Such activity could have easily been ignored in a state office that wasn't really high profile until Lincoln businessman John Breslow was elected in 1991 on the promise that he would become the watchdog of state government. The Democrat Breslow was the first auditor in 52 years to not be named Ray Johnson. Republican Ray C. Johnson was auditor from 1939 to 1971. Ray AC Johnson, no relation and also a Republican, served from 1971 to 1991.

In a surprise move in 1994, Breslow changed his party affiliation to Republican. He was replaced in 1999 by former state Senator Kate Witek of Omaha, a Republican who changed her party affiliation to Democrat in 2006. She served until 2007 and was replaced by another former Republican state Senator Mike Foley. He managed two terms without changing parties and is currently Lieutenant Governor. Republican Janssen, a former state Senator, defeated former Senator Amanda McGill, a Democrat in Janssen said he sees no problem early because he starts at 5 a.m. at his Fremont home. He also said he conducts business at those lunches and contends the $85,000 annual

Also, there's no specific state rule on employees drinking alcohol over lunch, but individual agencies prohibit employees from being impaired while at work. But are we wrong to expect accountability from an elected official who manages an agency with a $2 million plus annual budget?

Three-hour lunches have been the running joke - or maybe a reality in some circles – of corporate America for years. But, the newspaper contends they saw Janssen take 10 of them in a 20-day period. Excuse me, that sounds like somebody is in denial about a problem bigger than absenteeism.

used state pay warrants to buy candy for a lady friend in another state. He also used a state-owned landline to call that woman numerous times.

Capitol rumors surfaced at that time about one of his predecessors who used to take the daily state receipts in a bank bag and walk them from the Capitol to the National Bank of Commerce, about six blocks away, often stopping at a favorite bar for a mid-afternoon drink, or two. The popular version of the story also included reports that he once left the full bank bag on the bar and a bartender had to "chase him down" so the treasurer would have something to deposit when he got to the bank.

There was also talk - and some proof – that the best place to track office, saying his workday is over ernment. The Platte Institute held their annual Legislative Summit on Sept. 13. This year's focus was on "Working Together" in the Legislature and we were lucky to hear from fellow Nebraska policymakers as well as economists and research fellows from multiple national organiza-

Senator John Stinner, Chair of Appropriations Committee. spoke about our current financial situation and what we can expect in the upcoming legislative session. While we have experienced solid growth so far this year, we will still need to keep a tight belt on legislative spending as we continue to rebuild our state's "rainy day" fund and fund the state's annual budget. Senator Stinner made it clear that legislation that is presented next year should not contain a fiscal note

A few weeks ago Mike and I were unless it is an absolutely necessary expense, it is incredibly important that we ensure every dollar is spent

> Senator Stinner also cautioned attendees of the dangers of the Medicaid expansion proposition that will appear on the ballot this November, at the moment we do not have money to fund the preliminary projected costs of expansion. Soon the Legislature will have a better projected cost of expansion, but the number is expected to be higher than previously thought, leaving many of us in doubt that we add expansion costs to our current budget. If we are to fund Medicaid expansion, it also drastically reduces the possibility of the Legislature achieving property tax relief and comprehensive tax re-

The Platte Institute also facilitated a discussion about property tax relief at the summit with Senator Curt Friesen (LD34, Transportation Committee Chair), Senator Mike McDonnell (LD5, Appropriations Committee member), Jay Rempe of the Nebraska Farm Bureau, Joe Young of the Chamber of Commerce, and Jared Walczak of the Tax Foundation. All generally agreed that more Senators need to come to the table to discuss property tax relief and that compromise will be needed to get something done. Next month, the forecasting board will meet to produce the state's revenue projections for the upcoming year. Once we receive the forecast we will have a much better idea of our financial restraints going into the 2019 legislative session.

While the Nebraska Supreme Court recently ruled that the Medicaid expansion question is constitutionally sound to appear on ballots this November, I strongly urge my constituents to learn more about ents to reach out to me, I look for the impacts this would have on our ward to hearing from you!

Nebraska Proposition 126 is misleadingly worded, sounding as if the Federal Government will foot the entire bill of expansion for the foreseeable future. The proposition states that policymakers must "... maximize federal financial participation to fund their care." While federal dollars are still your tax dollars as well, the proposition and its implementation necessitates that Nebraskan taxpayers are responsible for a large portion of funds.

Medicaid expansion in Nebraska would likely begin implementation in 2020, per the Affordable Care Act (Obamacare), starting in 2020 the federal government will only pay 90 percent of expanded Medicaid costs. Should the federal government decide to dial back funding of Medicaid expansion following 2020. Nebraskans could be left in a much dire funding situation than the current projections which already look bad for the budget.

While Medicaid expansion and health care coverage is a multi-layered issue that we must continue to discuss, it is clear that Nebraska does not have the money fund Medicaid expansion this year and I fear we would need to cut funding to current programs or drastically raise taxes should this proposition pass. Please consider all of the implications of this reform when heading to vote this November.

I want to encourage my constitu-

Wakefield Balloons 'N BBQ

Wakefield's Balloons N' BBQ took place Sept. 21-23. Though high wind speeds kept the balloons grounded throughout the weekend, gracious pilots inflated their balloons for spectators on Saturday morning. Other activities included a parade on Main Street, kids' activities like an "Amazing Race"-style bicycle scavenger hunt and buried treasure dig. BBQ fans could also watch chefs whip up wings on Main Street. Also featured this year was a Theodore Roosevelt impersonator and a Wayne State College baseball exhibition game.

It was the custom in ancient Greek games that a judge would stand at each of the finish lines. These judges would be holding laurel leaves made into a wreath which were given to the winners. That is the idea behind the phrase "looking to Jesus" as written in Hebrews 12:2. We keep our eyes on Jesus, our judge, savior and giver of eternal life.

That is why we strive in life, why we minister to others in His name, why we go for the goal. Not for brownie points, not for applause nor notoriety. We can't earn our salvation because Jesus has already provided for it, he laid down his life for

However we do it, we strive for that goal because Jesus is standing at the end. And so, the next time you get discouraged and feel your race is long - look to Jesus, keep your eyes on Jesus. Because, ultimately, we run this race of life for Northeast has had a presence at Husker Harvest Days in Grand Island for a number of years, but in 2018, the College added an outdoor exhibit in addition to staffing its regular indoor booth.

"This is the first year we had our Precision Ag simulator trailer and some mobile trainings that feature the use of our two-row planter our staff built and a spray application simulator," said Corinne Morris, dean of agriculture, science and math. Remembering Glen Knosp

Remember my question a couple of weeks ago? How do you want to be remembered?

Well, the Big Farmer, who had fifty first cousins, lost another one this month. Glen Knosp was 94, the oldest cousin on his mother's side. I attended his funeral in Elmwood last week. And the friend who gave the eulogy certainly reminded us of Glen's goodness and what he called his legacy.

In fact, he elicited five things he thought Glen exemplified, and we would all do well to imitate them. often find myself taking notes during a funeral, I hope those in attendance did not notice..

Glen Knosp grew up in an EUB parsonage, where sometimes, the minister was paid in chickens, and often, the minister's family was Anyway, he served the community of Elmwood for 36 years, and I think of that one. I have three a lot of former patients were in attendance. He was one of the last of the docs who made house calls, and his three daughters alluded to "daddy time" when they got to go along, staying in the car reading, and then stopping at the A and W stand on the way home.

His friend suggested there are just five activities to a successful life: Live, and I do mean live life fully. Experience as much as you can, with as much enthusiasm as you can, as often as you can.

Then, Laugh.. You all know what files and a three ring folder I have accumulated in fifty years of talks about the value of laughter. Glen appreciated laughter, and had a wonderful sense of humor.

Finally, Leave a Legacy.. His was a life well lived, which the poet calls a precious gift. Again, I ask you, how will you be remem-

Essential Fertility Decisions for 2019

XBank www.fmbankne.com

As we find ourselves in the early stages of the 2018 harvest, we also find ourselves making decisions about our 2019 crop. We have been deciding how to market, or more specifically, not market our 2019 crop for the past few weeks and months. Along with our marketing decisions, we have also been evaluating and deciding on our 2019 crops. Are we going to see more corn on corn, an increase in wheat acres, or the status quo planted in 2019? But as we work ourselves through all of these decisions and more, we need to be mindful of the other choices that need to be made to accompany our 2019 intentions.

ACS Manager

I think that it is pretty safe to say that in almost any year, we agonize more over our fertility rates and what we spend on fertility than any other input on the farm. If we combine all of the nutrients together, it is the second biggest expense on the farm on a yearly basis. Therefore it stands to reason that we would want to be as efficient as possible, and buying, and what you actually need when you look at your fertilizer budget. When you are fully informed, you make your best decisions. Nitrogen: As you well know, this is your single biggest line item expense that we have in inputs every year. You and your trusted advisor make the antagonizing decision each year look for areas to save money when we can. So today, I wanted to break down what you are about what is the right rate. Is it 1.1 pounds of N per bushel, or 0.8 pounds of N per bushel? I know that from afar, I am certainly not well enough informed to answer this question outright as many factors go into this decision. But, if I use some rough numbers, we can talk about your budget. If I cut back my N rate by 10%, I will reduce my Nitrogen rate by 20 lbs. 20 pounds of Nitrogen will cost between 2 and 3 bushels for the next growing season. Is the gamble of cutting nitrogen back by 2-3 bushel worth the risk?

Phosphorus: As the second biggest expense in fertilizer on a year in and year out basis. I know the inclination for some of you is too completely cut out Phosphorus when budgets get tight. But at the same time, we know that Corn uses 0.37lbs of P per bushel, Soybeans, just over 0.8 lbs/bu, and Wheat just over 0.5lbs/bu. When you have high phosphorus levels in your soil, you can probably get by with cutting back on your Phosphorus spend. But, when levels are below 20 ppm, you are taking a chance when reducing your rate. If I were to look at cutting back my Phosphorus application by 50% this fall, I could save just over $20 per acre at current pricing on corn. That would be roughly 6 bushels at today's Dec 19 cash price. Cutting back crop removal to save on soils with average to low Phosphorus levels is a big risk for a 6-bushel savings. Instead, I might urge you to consider that if you need to manage your spend on fertilizer this year, perhaps the best bet is to suspend the building of your Phosphorus levels and instead focus on full crop removal Potassium: This is a tough one for most of you because soil test levels seldom say that we need K on most of our soils. But at the same time, tissue tests almost always say our crops are short on K. We know potassium does not release into the soil solution fast enough to meet our peak demands in late vegetative growth stages that can be up to 15lbs per acre per day. Experience in the last ten years on corn has taught us that Potassium improves late plant health (because it is essential to stalk strength) and yield when we use it, and on corn, it is about a $20 expense this year. Again, it's an easy place to cut, but at 6 bushels, it is also a pretty low-cost insurance policy.

Sulfur: Don't cut it. We don't get as much out of the atmosphere as we used to, and it needs to be in balance with your Nitrogen applications. If you cut it, you will have yellow Undoubtedly this seems like a bias opinion coming from someone who works for a company that sells fertilizer. But, as an Agronomist, I can tell you that I know one thing for maintenance amounts is to cut back on yield goal. Even if for next year you completely cut out all Phosphorus and Potassium needs and spread zero of those products, for a 220 yield goal at current prices, your cost savings comes out to 17.5 bushels on corn. On a 65-bushel soybean crop, cutting all P and K applications comes out to 7 bushels of October 19 soybeans. Consider the risks to your crop yield from not feeding it next year, and weigh those against the savings, and talk budgets with your trusted advisor before any decisions are made.

Fire safety at harvest

Harvest is always a busy time of year. A few local farmers had just started harvest, but after things dry out after the recent rains, I anticipate harvest will shift into high gear. Crops are maturing rapidly and if we don't have a lot of weather delays, we should have a very early harvest this year. However, we can't let the rush to get crops harvested come before safety.

Besides my job for Nebraska Extension, I have another job... that of a volunteer firefighter and EMT for over 35 years. Each year we discuss problems we are likely to encounter because harvest is a time when we have an increased number of fire

The majority of calls we get at this time of year are for field fires. Combines present problems unique to their operation. Operators of these machines should check for:

- The buildup of combustible crop residue around the engine and exhaust system.
- Concealed drive belts and pullevs which can overheat due to friction when there is an accumulation of crop residue around them, and
- Worn or frayed electrical wiring which can cause sparks and ignite grain dust, crop residues or fuel

Preventative maintenance is key to preventing many of the fires that occur on farm equipment. Good preventative maintenance not only pro-

A couple of other safety suggestions during harvest include:

· When starting to harvest a field, start on the downwind side. That way if a fire does occur, the flames will be pushed towards the harvested portion of the field.

 Always carry a cell phone or alternative for communicating with others in case of an emergency.

 Know the location of the field in relationship to letters or numbers on county roads. This seems obvious, but in the excitement of the moment, it's easy to not be able to recall this information. More than once we have been paged for a field fire "northeast of town" and had to look for the smoke.

LOWER ELKHORN Natural Resources

Natural Resources District

Sign-up begins underway for new irrigated acres

Farmers within the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) boundaries have an opportunity to apply for new irrigated acres for 2019.

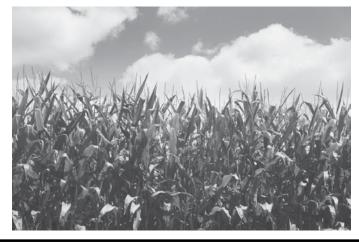

The LENRD board voted to allow up to 2,500 acres of new groundwater irrigation development in the Hydrologically Connected or 10/50 Area, and to allow up to 2,500 acres of new groundwater irrigation development in the Non-Hydrologically Connected or Non 10/50 Area under the district's standard variance process for 2019.

LENRD Assistant General Manager, Brian Bruckner, said, "The board voted to allow for the approval of standard variances district-wide, from areas that fall within the top five Potential for Development categories as provided on the Classification 4 Map provided by Flatwater Group."

Bruckner added, "The board suggested an annual limit on the amount of groundwater withdrawal from wells associated with approved variances, determined by board policy, which is subject to future modification if conditions warrant. In addition, a minimum soil score of 90 must be met for any standard variance to be considered for approval."

The board established a sign-up period to receive applications for Standard Variances. The district will receive applications for standard variances until Wednesday, Oct. 3, 2018. Contact the LENRD for more information.
