Weaver gets to work in Wakefield

By Sarah Lentz editor@wayneherald.com

Megan Weaver, formerly executive director of Wayne Community Housing Development Corporation, is settling into a new role as economic development director in Wakefield.

Weaver was hired by the economic development board Wakefield Progressive, Inc., a non-profit organizations that's been looking into growing the community after a set back for the town spurred them to action, according to Weaver.

"One of the catalysts for this position was really the grocery store (the Fair Store)," Weaver said. "When the grocery store closed we had a volunteer group that came together to try to come up with different options."

After some volunteers came and went, Wakefield Progressive was eventually formed with a five-person board, two members from Wakefield's Community Redevelopment Authority (CRA), two members from the City's sales tax committee and one represents Wakefield's business community. Next, they sought out a candidate that could help Wakefield grow.

"Megan has a lot of experience in this sort of field. On the housing side, she's been involved with quite a few things in town as far as economic development goes, before this even, so she was just a good fit already plugged in the community had a lot of experience with the grant writing and things of that nature," Jon McQuistan, Wakefield Progressive board president said. "She just stood out, and we knew she'd be an aggressive, go-getter at the position."

Since hiring Weaver, she and the board have worked together closely.

"We came up with a kind of list of things we'd like to see done. We have some priorities and Megan has those and, but we're always open for new opportunities," Mc-Quistan said. "Anything that pops up, you know she's going to tackle."

The top priority for Weaver is replacing the grocery store that was lost. "We're pretty fortunate here, because we do have Michael Foods, which is such a large industry, and we have about 1,000 people that come to Wakefield every day for work," Weaver said. "If we can get them to maybe stop and get gas or pick up a few grocery items here or there, then that can have a big economic impact on our com-

Weaver said she's also heard from citizens about the desire for lodging.

"One of the other things that we would like to work on is a hotel," Weaver said. 'We have this brand new Civic Center that we hope to be able to host more events in, like weddings and things like that, and we really do need to have some place for those people to stay, and it limits our ability to host any overnight meetings, or small conferences, if we don't have that hotel space."

In addition to specific goals like gaining new business, Weaver is meeting with existing business owners to see how her office can help those already supporting the community.

Though she's only been on the job for less than a month, Weaver said she's feeling good about the new position.

"It's going great," Weaver said. "I've been out meeting with businesses and they're all very excited to have somebody to listen to their needs and to help them make their business more successful, so I'm super pumped."

Weaver's office is located in the Wakefield Civic Center. For questions about Wakefield Progressive Inc. contact progresswake@outlook.com.

Megan Weaver (left) has hit the ground running in her new position as Wakefield's economic developer. On June 25, she met with Nebraska Department of Economic Development representative Lyndsy Jenness to discuss Weaver's goals for the community.

Wayne community has options for those in need

For The Wayne Herald

In the United States, an estimated 15 million households suffer from food insecurity. That means that nearly 12 percent of all U.S. households don't know when or where they're getting their next meal. June is National Hunger Awareness Month.

Those who don't struggle may not see all of the people who do. There are people in Northeast Nebraska who struggle as well. Whether it's poverty, hunger or homelessness: it's not as uncommon as some may think in places like Wayne, but the community is quick to help when

There are lots of resources where those who need help can go. Among the various resources Wayne's First Presbyterian Church has a Food Pantry and the Wayne Family Coalition can also help.

The Wayne Family Coalition, created in the fall of 2016, can help those in the Wayne community with a myriad of issues. The coalition helps those in need connect with the appropriate resources, so even if the coalition can't help, they know who can and will send people to the right spot. In addition they also work with organizations like

Gov. Ricketts celebrates merger of two agencies

Governor Pete Ricketts, along with Director Jim Macy, head of the newly created Nebraska Department of Environment and Energy, celebrated the merger of the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality and the Nebraska Energy Office.

Following the passage of LB 302, the two agencies are merging into the new Department of Environment and Energy (DEE) effective July 1, 2019.

"This merger will make state government services more efficient, effective, and customer-focused," said Governor Ricketts. "The two agencies have a number of related functions and similar goals, and their services to Nebraskans will be enhanced by combining their efforts. The newly consolidated agency will be able to take a longer-term, more strategic approach to helping grow Nebraska as we work to be a good steward of our natural resources and promote energy efficiency."

Jim Macy has served as the Director of the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality for the past four years, and he has led the Nebraska Energy Office for several months as Acting Director.

"The two agencies have many common purposes, and we expect to see many positive benefits by combining and unifying our efforts," Macy said. "Merging the two agencies will create greater depth in staffing and minimize duplication of jobs. It also improves the delivery of environmental and energy programs and policies statewide."

The event was held at a construction site in the Fallbrook area of Lincoln, which will be the new location for the DEE in about a year. Macy said the new site will house all of DEE's employees in one location and will also have room for future expansion. He said the move will also provide cost savings compared to having staff and equipment in multiple locations.

Firefighters respond to grass fire

A bull snake was responsible for a grass fire southeast of Wayne on Tuesday. Wayne Volunteer firefighters responded to a call at approximately 4:30 p.m. The fire was five miles east, two miles south and one-half mile west of Wayne. When firefighters arrived on scene they found that a bull snake was on the top of an electric pole and had Firefighters were on scene for approximately 45 minutes and were assisted by Northeast Power District personnel.

No one was injured in the incident.

An unfortunate bull snake met his end and caused a grass fire south of Wayne late Tuesday afternoon. The Wayne Volunteer Fire Department responded to the fire.

Coalition on Human Trafficking, Rotary offer free human trafficking training

In response to the human trafficking issues that have run rampant in the United States, and more specifically in Northeast Nebraska, the Coalition on Human Trafficking and Rotary District 5650 are collaborating to put on free human trafficking awareness training sessions with the first session beginning on Friday July 5, at 4 p.m. in the Wayne City Building.

The sessions are aimed towards teaching hotel owners, managers and staff to realize, recognize and respond to sex trafficking, which occurs most often in hotels and motels. This opportunity is being funded by a grant from Rotary District 5650, and is therefore free and open to the public.

In preparation to teach these sessions, Norfolk and Wayne Rotarians attended intensive training sessions that were taught by members of Nebraska's Coalition on Human Trafficking, and their goal is now to spread this information as far as possible to help protect our communities

The community goal is for both Norfolk and Wayne to be trained and to this end, Norfolk Rotarians hosted training sessions last week at the Lifelong Learning Center, and are looking forward to the opportunity to share their guidance in Wayne as well.

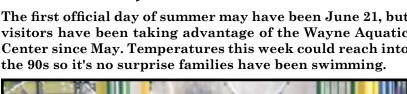

Rotary International believes awareness is the first step in taking action against human trafficking, a global criminal atrocity that is occurring right here in Northeast Nebraska. Recently in our region there have been confirmed cases of human trafficking, most of which involved children. It can be difficult to accept how close to home this is happening; but despite the misconception that this only happens in urban areas, Nebraska's rural towns are just as affected.

Community members are invited to attend one of these free training sessions if interested in learning more about joining the fight against human trafficking. Or contact JoBeth Cox, Norfolk-Wayne Anti-Human Trafficking Coordinator, and Norfolk Rotarian at jobeth@elkhornvalleymuseum.org

Women's golf returns to Wayne State College

By Julia Baxter For The Wayne Herald

Wayne State College is bringing back its women's golf team with renewed fervor as a new opportunity for incoming female players. The team is set to be back in competition for the 2020-2021 school year, with this coming school year set aside to build up a formidable Athletic Director Michael Powicki stated that the reason for the original dismemberment of both the men's and women's golf teams was a combination of a lack of funds and a lack of participation from the students.

"When I was hired in 2012, we had both men's and women's golf, they'd both been varsity programs for a number of years, and both programs were struggling, but specifically the women's program was really struggling in a number of ways," Powicki said. "It all boils down to the institutional support that we were providing the program in all aspects."

The Experiential Learning Process

It is important that youth are aware of the learning that takes place as they are involved in experiences. As they reflect on these experiences, they can identify what was most important and how that knowledge can be applied to other life situations. Through 4-H youth programs, adult volunteers can help youth develop these reflective skills. The Experiential Learning Model provides ive steps to assist with this process.

The adult volunteer can begin by: · Setting aside enough time for re-

 Asking the right questions; ·Planning developmentally appropriate experiences that lead to reflec-

 Listening carefully; • Supporting each youth's unique flecting on the experience;

Step 1: Experience: The hands-on action step. · Youth do their project before they are shown or told how to do it; · As leaders, "do you sit on your hands enough?" Do not rob youth of their discoveries; · Youth experiment with new ideas, interests, projects, etc.

Step 2: Share: Describe what was

Step 3: Process: Identify common themes and discover, what was most you had throughout this project/acimportant, (the life skill), about project work.

Questions to ask youth: What did you learn about yourself by doing this project?

· How did you make your decision? What steps did you take?

What did you learn about making decisions?

What were some of the common themes or thoughts you had? What problems came up over and over? How did you handle them? · Why was this an important/useful thing to do?

What suggestions would you have for someone else who wanted to do a similar project? What made this a good project?

· What life skill(s) were you developing through your project? Why is the life skill you practiced important?

What did you learn through sharing with others?

Step 4: Generalize: So what? Identify how to use what's been learned in real life.

These questions transition the experience or "product" itself to the yourself? Others? skill being practiced in "real" life. They explore the nature of the life skill, reflect on how the life skill has been developed through their work have you experienced before?

and set the stage for application of the life skill in new situations. Questions to ask youth: What key points have you learned?

• What similar experience have tivity?

· Where have you faced similar challenges in your life?

How is this life skill important to · Where might this situation occur in the future?

· What did you learn about your decision-making skills? · What did you learn about your own skill in communicating with oth-

· What are some ways you like to · What advice would you give to someone who wants to learn about this life skill?

Step 5: Apply: What's next? These are the questions we've been building towards: You can help youth show that they have gained new knowledge and practiced the life skills learned rather than solely focusing on the subject matter or product development skills.

Questions to ask youth:

· What did the project mean to your everyday life? What have you learned about What principles or guidelines can you use in real-life situations?

· What other situations like this

• How can you use these skills in 11:30 a.m. different situations?

•In what ways do people help each other learn new things?

What are some ways you can learn new things?

· Why was this project important to your life?

What are qualities that you think are important in a leader? · If someone helped or mentored you in this project, what would you tell them you learned and the difference it has made in your life? Adapted from: Questions for Guid-

Where is God when tragedy strikes?

I'm sure that most of you have heard about the four young women from Gretna who died in a car accident last week. I can't imagine what their family and friends must be going through.

As I have been thinking about this local tragedy I can't help but think about all the other tragedies that are occurring in our country and world. It seems every day we hear about mass shootings, wars, poverty, floods, tornadoes....the list could go on and on. At any given moment, your phone could buzz in your pocket or purse with tragic news that could instantly change your world.

In moments like that, our minds Thursday: Bible Study and Com- Wednesday: "No Limits Youth are filled with all kinds of questions and emotions. We may ask, "Why did God allow this to happen? Why do bad things happen to good people? Why is there so much pain in the world? How can any good possibly come out of this?"

I don't have answers for any of these questions. I honestly don't think anyone has the answers.

The following is a quote from C.S. Lewis' book "The Problem of Pain":

"When I think of pain—of anxiety that gnaws like fire and loneliness that spreads out like a desert, and they are the same as yours.'

We are all acquainted with grief and sorrow. We know the sting of pain. Sadly, some know it in far more tragic ways.

Here are a few thoughts that have helped me through the pain

Totally Yours

Approximately 50 youth are taking part in this summer's Totus Tuus program at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Wayne. "Totus Tuus" is Latin for "Totally Yours." The five-day program runs through June 28 and includes catechetical instruction, daily Mass, songs, games and recess. Separate programs were held during the day for younger students and at night for junior and senior high school students. Above, teachers Mary Miller, Joshua Heywood and Leslie Thayer walk the students through prayers that are part of each Mass.

Commission approves 2020 mountain lion hunting season

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission approved a mountain lion hunting season for 2020 at its meeting June 21 in Alma.

The season will provide a harvest opportunity for up to eight mountain lions in two sub-units within the Pine Ridge of northwestern Nebraska. The season will allow the population to remain resilient and healthy, while halting growth or moderately reduc-

Pine Ridge to one similar to that of other states that allow mountain lion hunting. The season will be similar to that of 2019, except hunting on public lands will be allowed in both sub-units, shooting hours will be sunrise to sunset, opening day will be Jan. 2, and proof of gender must be naturally attached to a harvested cat when ing the population size. This will initiate a reduction of the population density in the Season 1 will be Jan. 2-Feb. 29, 2020. The use of dogs will not be permitted during this season. Hunting will be allowed only in two sub-units in the Pine Ridge: a north sub-unit (north of U.S. Hwy. 20) and a south sub-unit (south of U.S. Hwy. 20). Subunits are designed to distribute harvest throughout the Pine Ridge. Up to four mountain lions, and no more than two females, may be harvested in each sub-unit.

If the limits and/or sub-limits have not been reached in a sub-unit by Feb. 29, then a limited number (equal to the animals remaining in the limit) of permittees will be allowed to hunt with the aid of dogs in an Auxiliary Season. Permits for the Auxiliary Season, which would occur March 15-31, 2020, will be granted to unsuccessful permittees from the initial season via a lottery. The Auxiliary Season will close immediately if the annual harvest limit or female sub-limit is reached before March 31.

The application period will be Sept. 3-27, 2019. 320 permits will be issued in each sub-unit by drawing.

Summer is time to think hunter education

Summer has just started, but now is the time to start thinking about obtaining hunter education certification - well in advance of fall hunting

Hunter education courses are available year-round, but most traditional classroom courses and Hunt Safe Sessions are offered in the fall and spring. Mid-August through mid-November is packed with course offerings throughout the state. February and March also offer many classes.

Firearm and bowhunter education covers the safety aspects of firearms and archery equipment, as well as the conservation management and ethics that go with hunting.

Demand for these classes increases significantly into late September, October and November, so space in these classes can fill quickly," Hunter Education Coordinator Jackson Ellis said.

In Nebraska, all hunters age 12 through 29 must carry proof of successful completion of a firearm hunter education course when hunting any game species with a firearm or air gun, or proof of successful completion of a bowhunter education course while hunting deer, elk, antelope or bighorn sheep with a bow and arrow or crossbow. Although hunter education is not the extended campus in South Sioux $\,$ required until age 12, students can tional, 10-hour classroom course for firearm or bowhunter education is available. A 14-hour dual class that includes the curriculum for both firearm and bowhunter education also is offered.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission also offers online hunter education. Students age 16 and older may complete all of the course requirements online. Students age 11 to 15 may also complete their hunter education online, but they also are required to take a two-hour Hunt Safe Session. During the Hunt Safe Session, volunteer hunter education instructors spend face-to-face time discussing the most important safety aspects of the course.

For a listing of posted traditional classroom courses and Hunt Safe Sessions, and information for the online courses, visit huntsafenebraska.org. All traditional classroom courses and Hunt Safe Sessions are free of charge.

Baseball, rain and funeral are topics for the week

Mike is watching Michigan defeat Vanderbilt in the CWS finale. It sounds like all the fans in the stadium are from Michigan. I guess we have to root for the Big Ten, right? After all, we northern players can't even practice outside until Mav!

We are also following the new coaching staff at Nebraska. I personally do not remember Will Bolt, but we have followed Jeff Christy for years, since he was catching for NU. His mother was Mike's cardiac nurse practitioner when we went to Bryan Heart for follow up visits. Jeff is one of a set of quadruplets, and his mom was none the worse for it!

I saw her two weeks ago at the Bryan nursing reunion, and though she's retired, she does not look any older. And now, she can go to Nebraska games again, and see how her son does as a paid

The Farmer's Wife By: Pat Meierhenry

Somehow, when you know one of the players, or one of the coaches, or even one of the band, the game gets more interesting.

We had three and one half inches total of rain last week! It just keeps coming. The grass and the hedges and the few flowers I have on the patio look wonderful, without my doing anything to them. And the forecast for this week is for hot days, which we almost, but not quite, be grateful for. I just like to see the sun occasionally.

Something kind of neat happened in Lincoln this morning. You know, hospice nurses read obituaries, and I noticed one last week that said a veteran had died and there were no survivors. His wife had died over 30 years ago. So, the mortuary asked that members of the community come to the service. They did! They filled the chapel at the mortuary and the Patriot Guard Riders were out in force. There were a lot of flags, and five members of the extended fami-

into soybean fields from these ar-

Governor Ricketts attended, as did Senator Sasse, and it was all done up in true military fashion; Taps, a 21-gun salute, and the flag presented to a gray haired lady seated under the canopy. It was totally neat, and as someone said, he would have been so surprised, and so honored. It's just too bad that his family had not known about his illness sooner; I think they would have been here.

It made me think about how important it is to keep loved ones informed, even when they are not especially close. As families become more and more far flung, that becomes even more important. The days of growing up surrounded by aunts, uncles, and cousins are no more. It's too bad, but it's the way it is now. But this was one veteran who had a crowd at his service. God bless him, and all the folks ly had seen the notice on social me- who were there this morning.

Soybean gall midges emerging in Nebraska

The soybean gall midge (SGM) has been found in Nebraska for several years, but 2018 was the first year it caused significant yield reducing damage in some

Last year it was found in 23 counties, including every county east of Highway 81 and north of Highway 30. So it was very common in northeast Nebraska, but significant damage seemed to be concentrated in isolated pockets. Damage from this pest in 2018 seemed to be found along field margins, either where a soybean field bordered a road ditch or where it bordered a field that was in corn in 2018, but had been in soybeans in 2017 and had a history of SGM infestations.

In extreme cases, these fields had 90-100 percent yield reduction the first 100 feet in from the edge of the field and had a 20 percent yield reduction 400 feet into

On June 14 -15, SGM adults were detected in Cass and Otoe counties, and based on growing degree day models, they will likely be emerging in northeast Nebraska this week. New detections of SGM adults will be posted on the CropWatch website (https:// cropwatch.unl.edu) as they occur. While this should not cause concern for most soybean growers, those who experienced significant damage last year should be prepared to treat at-risk fields

Because this is a new soybean pest, we do not have researchbased recommendations. However, we have developed some preliminary recommendations based on our recent SGM observations. Those who have experienced sigticide with residual activity. This application should be made as soon as possible after adult

Research is currently being conducted on the timing of insecticides relative to the emergence of SGM to determine a window of efficacy for insecticide applications. Closely related insects to this species have a very short life span as adults so we expect that all of the egg laying will be done

However, they should watch for this pest in 2019 as we anticipate it will increase its range as it is a relatively new pest in Nebraska. Growers should watch for dead or dying plants with a dark discoloration near the soil surface that can extend up to the unifoliate node. These plants easily snap off near the soil surface and orange to white maggots are often found feeding within the darkened area of the plant.

Once plants have reached this stage, there is nothing you can do for it this year. However, you will want to make note of these fields as the SGM is more likely to appear in this field or adjacent fields in the future and if the damage is significant, growers should consider a timely insecticide treat-ticide application. Also, be sure For more information on SGM, visit the CropWatch website at https://cropwatch.unl.edu or con-Most growers will not need to tact their local Nebraska Extenworry about treating fields if they sion office.

Sidedress, Topdress and Fertigation

Central Valley Ag offers many options to supplement your nitrogen program with inseason application of nitrogen fertilizer products. Two common options are topdress urea fertilizer through a row crop machine, with either spinner or air boom delivery systems, and fertigation of UAN through a pivot. Either technique helps growers use nitrogen more efficiently to limit loss to the environment while taking advantage of the most yield opportunity. Many of us have heard that today's corn hybrids use more nitrogen later in the growing season than the hybrids we used back in the 1980s and 90s. Research has shown this to be true. To keep this nitrogen available for late season grain fill, it makes sense to move back a portion of the nitrogen we apply to match these late season needs.

Another option CVA is able to help growers with are the Y-drop sidedress nozzle systems from 360 Yield Center. The 360 Y-drop nozzles give growers a more precision option for applying UAN later in the growing season. The Y-drop system places N and other nutrients near the plant where roots can access the nutrients while the corn plant gathers rainfall to help wash those nutrients into the soil. You can contact your ACS Equipment Specialist with questions on how to use this equipment on your own high clearance sprayer or even a traditional liquid toolbar.

When applying in-season N to corn consider other nutrients such as sulfur, potassium, or boron, which may compliment your N application by adding stalk strength or improving yield. Talk to you local Central Valley Ag Field Sales Agronomist or ACS Regional Manager with questions about which nutrients might be the best fit on your fields with your fertility levels. If you do not know your fertility levels as well as you should, now is an excellent time to get fields scheduled for grid sampling next fall. Now is also a good time to take that first tissue sample to see what the plant is telling you it needs. These nutrients can be added to your in-season application plan.

LOWER ELKHORN

Natural Resources District

Hazard mitigation plan to be updated this year

For every $1 spent on hazard mitigation, $4 in post storm cleanup and rebuilding is saved, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). Proactive hazard mitigation planning allows a community to take actions to reduce or eliminate threats from natural disasters. To help guide future hazard mitigation projects, the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) is updating their current Hazard Mitigation Plan.

Hazard mitigation plans (HMP) are a requirement of the Disaster Mitigation Act of 2000, administered by FEMA, and once a community, county, or district is part of an approved plan they become eligible for up to a 75% cost share for a wide variety of projects listed in the plan. Hazard Mitigation Plans are required to be updated on a five-year cycle and the LENRD's HMP is required to be updated in

A hazard mitigation plan is a publicly-guided document that identifies vulnerability to natural disasters such as flood, drought, earthquake, wildfire, winter storm, tornado/high wind storm, dam failure, etc. The plan sets goals, establishes mitigation alternatives, and prioritizes projects which may alleviate potential damages to property and provide protection when future disasters occur.

The planning effort to update the plans across the 15-county district are being guided by a Planning Team consisting of representatives from the LENRD, Counties, the Cities, several schools, Nebraska Department of Natural Resources (NDNR), and the Nebraska Emergency Management Agency (NEMA). Public input will be gathered throughout the duration of the plan development through online tools and public meetings. All communities, Counties, Sanitary Improvement Districts, Tribal Nations, and School Districts within the LENRD are eligible to participate.

The LENRD hired JEO Consulting Group, Inc. (JEO) to assist with the plan development this year. JEO assisted in completing the LENRD's original and current Hazard Mitigation Plan, in 2009 and 2014. This hazard mitigation plan update is funded by a FEMA planning grant. The cost is shared 75 percent through federal funding and 25 percent through a local match. For this plan update, the LENRD provided the 25 percent local match.

For more information on the Hazard Mitigation Plan, contact LENRD Projects Manager, Curt Becker.

eople rely on indoor and outdoor grills to prepare foods all year long. Not only can menu items made on the grill taste delicious, but they also may be healthier than foods cooked via other methods. When done correctly, grilling is a versatile way to cook tasty foods relatively quickly.

One of the challenges of cooking over high, open heat is the difficulty in determining just how long to keep foods over the flame. Take them off too soon and they may be undercooked. Wait too long and items may be dry and charred. Use these tips to make grilling easy and safe.

Preheat and prepare the grill

Be sure to preheat the grill to between 400 F and 500 F. Use a nonstick spray on the grates while the grill is heating. This way foods will not stick and create a mess that will ultimately require considerable cleaning.

Buy a meat thermometer

One of the easiest ways to take the guesswork out of grilling is to use a meat thermometer. By knowing internal temperatures in a few seconds, grillmasters can have juicy foods that are cooked to the correct temperature so foodborne illnesses do not become a problem. Cooking by sight is inaccurate, as the outside of the food may look well done even though the inside is still pink. Thermometers allow cooks to avoid cutting open foods to check doneness, spilling out tasty juices in the process. The U.S. epartment of Agriculture advises on minimal internal temperatures for meats and poultry (https://www.fsis.usda.gov/wps/portal/fsis/topics/foodsafety-education/get-answers/food-safety-fact-sheets/ safe-food-handling/safe-minimum-internal-temperaturechart/ct_index). Keep in mind that food continues to cook when it is taken off the grill. Therefore, removing a few minutes before it has reached a certain temperature is ideal.

Leave an empty spot

Have an unheated area of the grill or one that is set to a low temperature so there is somewhere to move food if a flare-up occurs or if something is cooking too fast. This is also a good spot to finish foods that may need a little more time over indirect heat - such as burgers that require melted cheese.

Use sauce at the end

Dixon Elevator

Kardell's Auto

North Side Grain

Avoid charring foods by using sugary sauces toward the end of cooking. Otherwise, the sauce can burn quickly and contribute to potentially carcinogenic char.

Grilling can be made easier with a few tricks of the trade. The results will be delicious, healthy and safe to enjoy.

Mashed potatoes, hash browns, Thanksgiving Dinner, Christmas Dinner – could do it all.

In fact, one year at Christmas, the Darling Wife wanted to bake a frozen cherry pie for Christmas dinner.

She forgot to put holes in the top of the pie and it blew a cherry out of the top of the pie. The cherry hit on the electric element of the oven and I had no oven to prepare Christmas dinner for 27

We're all going to miss Frank LaMere

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

You probably didn't know Frank Lanebago Tribe of Northeast Nebraska. He died recently of cancer.

You may have seen his picture in the newspaper or on TV. Maybe you heard his name on the radio or in casual conversation. Even if you didn't, trust me, he's the kind of guy we're all going to LaMere has been around a long time. He's been a vocal opponent of: Keystone XL Pipeline; beer sales at Whiteclay; the in-custody death of a Native American man in Omaha. He's been an advocate for: reform of the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs; federal loans for the Santee and Winnebago Tribes to buy back reservation land; keeping Native American children with their families and out of the foster care system.

He's long been a Democrat, reelected last year as the first associate chair of the Nebraska Democratic Party. He served seven consecutive times as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention from 1988 to 2012

"Dr. Frank LaMere would often tell me, We do our best for the most people and would immediately follow up with ideas for actions in the streets and in the halls of government," said Nebraska Democratic Party Chair Jane Kleeb. She called him the heart of the party and many grassroots fights across the country.

I like to think it was behind the If you haven't purchased any hal- headlines where Frank LaMere really shined. Former Nebraska Governor and U.S. Senator Ben Nelson told the Omaha World-Herald that LaMere was a "tireless" worker who was able to make a difference, not only for his fellow Native Americans but people from all walks of life. LaMere used friendship to build a following and find com-

But the relationship between the two was even deeper and more personal. LaMere had four children, including daughter Lexie Wakan, who died in 2014. Nelson said LaMere counseled Nelson when he lost his own daughter. "He was an exceptional person," Nelson said. That was Frank LaMere. Not your typical headline-seeking activist. He was a civil rights leader who worked to "give a voice to the voiceless," said John Maisch, who created the documentary "Sober Indian Dangerous Indian" featuring LaMere. "His work to elevate the discussion on issues such as Whiteclay, Native child welfare and the environment will carry on through all of us," Maisch told the Omaha newspaper.

pened in 2017, LaMere said "it will take 29-year-old died of "sudden death asa generation for us to truly understand the deep wounds that we have inflicted upon the Lakota people at Whiteclay. It will take a lifetime to heal them.'

WHO'S THAT, DAD..?

Millions of cans of beer and malt liquor were sold each year in the tiny, unincorporated village in northwest Nebraska, home to about eight permanent residents. Much of that beer ended up on the nearby South Dakota Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, where alcohol is banned. In April 2017 the Nebraska Liquor Control Commission denied renewal of the four beer stores'

Most recently, LaMere voiced concerns about the interaction between Omaha police officers and a mentally ill Native American man from Oklahoma in June 2017. After one Omaha police officer was found not guilty of assault by a jury and the Douglas County Attorney's Office dropped charges against another, La-Mere called on the U.S. Justice Department to investigate BearHeels' death.

"If there was injustice anywhere in Indian Country, Frank LaMere likely had a voice in demanding better treatment and justice," said Winnebago Tribe chairman Frank White in a statement. "The Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska as well as Indian Country in general has lost one of their staunchest advocates with his passing."

In fact, Jake played with a hunk Legislative Update

With my confidence shaken, this past weekend I decided to smoke Town halls offer plenty of information

My office has officially completed our town halls for the summer.

I would like to take a moment to thank everyone who came and who added to the conversation. My office is now busy working on following up with all of you who requested further assistance. It was such a privilege to be able to connect with so many of you from my

The topics that we discussed during the town halls varied depending on the main interests expressed by those in attendance. We discussed the budget, property taxes, education, business incentives, rural workforce development, both of my committees (Natural Resources and Transportation and Telecommunications), all of my legislation, and my interim study.

We also provided information on flood rebuilding/assistance, redistricting, wind farms, and sports gaming.

Each town hall was very productive and really helped me see what the most pressing needs are for you, my constituents. If you were unable to make it to the town halls, but have opinions or questions that you want heard or answered, then please reach out to me. I would love to hear from you.

In addition to finishing up the town halls this week, my calendar also had one other great event in the District on

On Tuesday, June 18th, I was able to attend the "Wayne Right to Life" event in Wayne, NE. The event allowed me the opportunity to further dive into the information that surrounds my priority bill, LB 209, the informed consent bill. It was a great opportunity to answer questions and hear more opinions on my bill after it was signed into law by the Governor on June 4th.

In July, we will have another great program take place in Nebraska.

The Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute (NAYI) will begin on July 8th and wrap up on July 12th. NAYI will be held in Lincoln at the University of Nebraska's East Campus. Each year more than 200 high school juniors and seniors, sharing an interest in agriculture, gather together to develop leadership skills, explore career opportunities, and learn more about Nebraska's number one industry. NAYI is the longest running program of its kind in the

During the five-day program, delegates participate in agriculture policy and group discussions, farm management activities, and a variety of networking opportunities with peers and industry leaders. It gives the students an opportunity to learn about various career options since a quarter of the jobs in Nebraska are related to agricultural.

Legislative Update By Joni Albrecht State Senator, District 17

Since NAYI started in Nebraska it has been able to impact the lives of 6,400 students from across the state. Delegates apply for and are selected to attend NAYI free of charge due to the numerous donations from agricultural businesses, commodity groups, and industry organizations.

I would like to congratulate the students from District 17 that will be participating in NAYI this year. Congratulations to Allison Claussen of Wayne, Hana Nelson of Wayne, Josie Thompson of Wayne, Taylor Daum of Emerson, Tyler Gilliland of Wayne and, Kylie Kempf of Carroll.

NAYI is organized by the Nebraska Agricultural Youth Council. For more information on NAYI, visit the website at: nda.nebraska.gov/nayi.

I also want to make sure that all of you, my constituents, and the rest of Nebraska know about the Report of Destroyed Real Property Form (Form 425) that will be due on or before July 15th. The Department of Revenue, Property Assessment Division, has a new form that has been created, pursuant to 2019 Neb. Law LB 512.
