Schwarte named Recreation Services Coordinator

By Julia Baxter
For The Wayne Herald

The Wayne Community Activity Center has recently hired Amber Schwarte as the new Recreation Services Coordinator. After serving as an assistant basketball coach both at Wayne State College and St. Mary's University of Minnesota, she's excited to see what the future holds.

"(I've been) trying to figure out what we can do differently to improve things and what they've done really well in the past years to maintain the success that they've had here," Schwarte said. "Just maintaining that and then finding little things to improve on and then going forward to improve the recreation department and Wayne as a whole."

Schwarte graduated from the University of Northern Iowa with a degree in Health Promotion with an emphasis in fitness, and after a few years of coaching, she's ready to get back into her area of study.

"This was exactly what I wanted to do in college, so I saw this opportunity and it was perfect timing for everything I wanted to do," Schwarte.

Schwarte said that her job is to keep everything at the community activity center running as well as possible as far as scheduling and regular equipment updates go.

"Emphasis on youth sports is a big thing for me, just because I grew up in youth sports. I think that a big part of growing up is learning how to go through those trials of learning how to win and lose with respect and then learning how to be a good teammate," Schwarte said.

Watch out for weeds

By Rachel Anderson, Nebraska Statewide Arboretum, plantnebraska.org

Many weeds love bare ground, and new plantings offer this in bounty. Here are some tips to help you prevent undesirable plants from getting a foothold in years one and two.

• Start a routine. The growing season gets busy, and it can be tempting to leave weeds for "next week." However, if "next week" turns into "next month," what began as a modest task can grow into a monstrous one. Keep weeds down to a manageable level by scheduling regular check-ins—then devise a strategy for sticking to them. This might mean setting up phone reminders, or recruiting a reliable partner who will hold you to your word. We advise reserving an hour a week or 2-3 hours every other week in the morning or evening to avoid the heat of the day.

• Is that a weed? Find out for sure. Most folks have trouble telling weeds from other plants when a garden is young. If you see a plant and you're not sure what it is or how to deal with it, take a picture of it with your phone and email that to your local Extension office. You can also try to look it up yourself in a Nebraska or Midwest weed guide. If you're still stumped, wait until the plant is in flower; it will be much easier to identify—and a great time to remove or treat many non-woody weeds is when they are blooming (just be sure to get them before they produce seeds).

• Spend your energy on the worst weeds first. Not all weeds behave aggressively long-term. Some are benign, fizzling out on their own as a landscape matures; others are malignant, eventually overtaking desirable plants. You'll want to pay attention to the latter (this is when knowing your weeds comes in handy) and treat these problem weeds as your highest priority. Rather than starting at one end and weeding everything indiscriminately as you move along, try to assess the entire area, identify the biggest bullies and eradicate these as best you can. This is an effective way to manage a new landscape when time is tight and weeds are plenty. If there are more priority weeds than you have time for, strategize by focusing first on tall weeds, woody weeds and weeds in flower. Then leave the rest for next week.

• Pick the right method for the job. When you identify a weed that needs to be managed, should you pull it, spray it, cut it, mow it, or something else? There are tradeoffs for each technique—do what works for your situation. We recommend consulting a weed guide for tips on how to best deal with specific species. You can also ask Extension or consult Backyard Farmer's website.

Parkinson's Nebraska targets underserved communities

Parkinson's Nebraska welcomed 56 professionals from across Nebraska to the Midwest Delay the Disease training in Grand Island, Neb., on July 18-19. The training provided attendees with the knowledge and tools to design and implement a community-based, Parkinson's-specific exercise class. Because of the Parkinson's Nebraska commitment to making training accessible, all attendees were provided with the cost of registration, lodging, a mileage stipend, and meals throughout the training.

Exercise provides evidence-based benefits for the management of symptoms and can delay the progression of Parkinson's disease. Parkinson's Nebraska has identified a lack of Parkinson's exercise classes in rural communities and is committed to making the benefits of exercise available across the state. As a result of the Delay the Disease training, 21 new Parkinson's exercise classes will begin in Nebraska by Oct. 1. More than 15 of these classes will serve in rural and underserved communities.

John Bertoni, M.D., Ph.D., professor in the University of Nebraska Medical Center Department of Neurological Sciences, and director of the Parkinson's disease program at Nebraska Medicine, UNMC's clinical partners, was the guest speaker at the training. He presented on the role of Exercise in Parkinson's Disease Management and conducted a lively Question and Answer session. On the final day of the training, over 20 people with Parkinson's and their caregivers traveled from Omaha, Lincoln, and Grand Island to participate in the training's Demo Class and enjoyed a lunch with the attendees. The Delay the Disease training provided the opportunity to celebrate and strengthen the Parkinson's community and network with others across the state.

The immense impact this training has made on the Nebraska community is made possible through a partnership with the Parkinson's Foundation. The foundation awarded Parkinson's Nebraska a community grant to help support training costs. Because of the grant, Parkinson's Nebraska was able to provide the training to more professionals and further increase the number of exercise classes throughout Nebraska. The full list of training attendees and locations that will provide Delay the Disease services can be found here.

About Parkinson's Nebraska
Parkinson's Nebraska is on a mission to be the primary source for Parkinson's disease education, support, and services in Nebraska. Through awareness and collaboration, we can provide the right information and resources Nebraskans need on their journey with Parkinson's disease. Together, the journey of Parkinson's is A Journey Shared.

Wayne police investigated an accident Saturday on the south side of the Lil' Duffer when a 1964 Volkswagen driven by Terry M. Meyer collided with a 1966 Mercury driven by Samuel Noyes. Meyer was backing from a parking stall when the accident occurred, according to the police report. Damage to the Noyes vehicle was estimated to be $40.55.

Officers were called Saturday to remove a dead skunk from the street in front of Andy's Pizza in downtown Wayne. Police theorized the dead skunk was thrown onto the street by a prankster.

A complaint was received by the police department Monday that a large dog from the 1000 block on Pearl had broken some dishes on a family picnic table in the 1000 block on Lincoln. Police advised the owner to make restitution and keep the dog at home.

Wayne alum studies across the pond

Will Anderson of Concord, and a 2017 Wayne High graduate, is among 56 University of Nebraska-Lincoln students participating in the Nebraska at Oxford program July 21-Aug. 17 in Oxford, England.

Anderson, son of Steve and Peg Anderson, is a junior agribusiness major.

Sponsored by the College of Business, the global immersion program is a 31-year collaboration between Nebraska and the University of Oxford's Jesus College.

"The Nebraska at Oxford program is the premier study abroad program offered at the university because of our relationship with the faculty and staff at Oxford," said Kathy Farrell, dean of the College of Business. "Our students gain a competitive edge in the job market by having the opportunity to study at this prestigious university. We also know from the program's alumni that it provides an experience they will never forget."

The program is open to all undergraduate students with a minimum 2.5 GPA. Business students take two lecture-tutorial courses on British political and international economic policy for six hours of academic credit at Nebraska. Non-business students can enroll in a course on the literature of William Shakespeare. Lecturers for the courses are world-renowned faculty from the University of Oxford.

Students also immerse themselves in English culture, visiting historical sites such as Stratford-upon-Avon, the birthplace of Shakespeare; having high tea at the Old Parsonage Hotel; and partaking in the horse races at Sandown Park Racecourse.

Wakefield Post 81 Seniors play well, finish 1-2 at state

GERING — The Wakefield Post 81 Seniors baseball team went down swinging Monday night, as an effort to come back from a seven-run deficit fell short in an 8-5 loss to Bennington at the American Legion Class B State Tournament.

The Post 81 Seniors had to wait until Sunday morning for their first-round matchup, as rain stopped play midway through the four-game slate on Saturday.

It was worth the wait for the Wakefield squad, as they came away with a 6-4 win over the host Gering squad to advance in the eight-team, double-elimination tournament.

Gering got on the board first with a pair of runs in the opening frame, but Wakefield answered with single runs in the second and third inning to tie the game. Hagan Miller came home on a groundout by Josh Lutt in the second, and Blake Brown singled and scored on a Julio Sanchez double to right center in the third to tie it at 2-2.

Wakefield took the lead for good in the fifth when Esgar Godinez singled and came home on a groundout by Brown, then added two more in the sixth on an RBI groundout by Lutt and an RBI single by Parker Lehmkuhl, scoring Trevor DeBoer and Miller, respectively.

Wakefield closed out the win with another run in the seventh as Godinez doubled and came home on a sacrifice bunt by Sanchez. Gering scored two in the bottom of the seventh, but it wasn't enough.

DeBoer picked up the win on the mound to help Wakefield advance in the winner's bracket. Godinez and DeBoer each had two hits to lead the offensive effort.

Later Sunday evening, the Post 81 Juniors fell into the losers' bracket as Springfield pulled away late for a 10-2 win in six innings.

Wakefield scored both of their runs in the opening frame. Back-to-back one-out walks by Brown and Sanchez led to both scoring. Brown came home on a catcher's interference, while Sanchez scored on an RBI single to left by Nolan Belt.

Wakefield left runners in scoring position in the third, fifth and sixth innings, and Springfield took advantage after putting up four runs in the first inning, adding two more in the fifth and closing the game on the eight-run rule with four in the sixth.

In Monday's elimination game against Bennington, Wakefield fell behind early as Bennington put up four runs in the first inning.

Wakefield got a run in the second when Miller hit a leadoff double and scored on a single by Lutt.

Bennington got a run in the third and three more in the sixth to take control of the game. Wakefield's three-run rally in the seventh came up short, ending their season at 22-10.

Lutt had three hits in a losing effort for the Post 81 seniors. Belt scored a run and drove in a run, while Lutt, Miller, Lehmkuhl, Belt and Couy Johnson scored runs. Noah Lamprecht took the loss on the mound.

Other attractions at the Wayne County Fair included chainsaw artists and metal artists. In the beer garden there was entertainment from live bands and a Cornhole tournament. As always, the carnival rides on the midway were popular with the Fair's younger visitors, while older visitors more enjoyed things like Knights of Columbus Bingo, the antique tractor exhibition and parade and Pitch tournament.

NSP Carrier Enforcement reminders on DOT number updates

The Nebraska State Patrol Carrier Enforcement Division is reminding trucking companies and other motor carriers that it is free and simple to update MCS 150 DOT information through the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration.

to update DOT information so we want to clear up any misconceptions or confusion about this free and easy process," said Captain Gerry Krolikowski, Commander of NSP Carrier Enforcement.

Carriers are required to update their company's information every two years. The process is free and only takes a short time to complete, using the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration website.

Companies can update this information by going to fmcsa.dot.gov. Hover over "Registration" and select "Update Your Registration" to begin, then follow the steps to update your MCS 150 form. Users that do not have a portal account can create one before updating the information.

Here's how to determine if it's time to file an update: The last two digits on your DOT number indicate the year and month to file an update.

If the second-to-last digit is even, you are required to file an update in even-numbered years. If the second-to-last digit is odd, you are required to file an update in odd-numbered years.

The last digit corresponds to the month that the update is required. For instance: 1 means January, 2 means February, continuing through 0, which means October.

Anyone with questions or concerns can reach out to the Nebraska State Patrol Carrier Enforcement Division at (402) 417-0105.

Ricketts names July 27 Korean War Veterans Armistice Day

Governor Pete Ricketts and Nebraska Department of Veterans' Affairs (NDVA) Director John Hilgert welcomed veterans to the State Capitol for a proclamation signing ceremony. During the event, the Governor declared July 27 as "Korean War Veterans Armistice Day" in Nebraska.

"The State of Nebraska places a high value on recognizing and caring for our veterans," said Governor Ricketts. "We're committed to giving them honor and making government work for them. While the Korean War is often referred to as 'the Forgotten War,' today's ceremony demonstrates that Nebraskans remember and appreciate the sacrifices of our Korean War veterans."

July 27 is National Korean War Veterans Armistice Day in America, which marks the signing of the Korean Armistice Agreement. The national day of recognition was created in 1998 on the 45th anniversary of the signing of the armistice. "Today's ceremony was about remembering those who served in the Korean War, honoring the 59 Nebraskans who remain unaccounted for, and recognizing the Korean War veterans who are still with us today," said NDVA Director John Hilgert. "Their bravery and sacrifices are not forgotten, and will not be forgotten."

Be on the lookout for mold damage in homes

Recent heavy rains and flooding across most of the state left many Nebraskans with water-damaged homes and basements.

Now it is important to be on the lookout for mold growth. Mold spores are everywhere, but what determines where they actually settle and start growing is the presence of moisture and organic food sources, such as wood and paper. The recent storms damaged many homes, which now may have ideal conditions for mold growth.

Porous materials, such as carpets and pads, insulation, ceiling tile and wall board that are not quickly dried within 24 to 48 hours may need to be tossed.

Wet wall, ceiling and floor cavities should be opened up to dry completely. Concrete also needs to be dried. We recommend first removing as much moisture as possible. Wet floors need to be wet vacuumed and dried out as soon as possible or hire a professional for extensive water entry.

Air conditioning and dehumidification can help dry the surfaces and materials. Additional air circulation also helps.

It may take weeks before some materials are dried out and can be replaced. Covering up damp structures and cavities too soon can lead to mold growth. Moisture meters, which are available through some plumbing, heating and cooling businesses, can help determine the moisture content of wood and other materials.

It's better to be cautious now and take extra prevention steps than to deal with a mold problem later on.

Molds long have been recognized as allergens. Mold allergens can cause symptoms including respiratory congestion, eye irritation, headaches and fatigue in those sensitive to mold. Some molds can even trigger asthma attacks.

If you see a mold problem, find the source of the moisture, make the needed changes to reduce or control the moisture source, and safely get rid of the mold. Any mold should be treated with respect and cleanup handled very carefully, whatever the type is.

Professionals can be hired to clean up mold and are recommended if there are large amounts – more than a 10-foot square area – and if someone in the household is sensitive to mold.

The decision to clean up mold or to hire it done is up to the individual. Anyone who attempts to clean up mold by him or herself should obtain complete detailed information before tackling the cleanup.

For more information about cleaning up molds consult a local UNL Extension office. More detailed resources are available from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency by calling (800) 490-9189 or searching its publication catalog.

Those cleaning up mold should protect themselves by wearing goggles without vent holes, gloves, clothing that covers the entire body and at a minimum, an N-95 HEPA filter to filter out particles. Such filter masks are available at many hardware and home supply stores and lumberyards.

Molds can give off toxins and special filters are needed for toxins.

We recommend physically removing as much mold as possible. Wet floors need to be wet vacuumed, dried out and vacuumed again. Use a quality vacuum with a HEPA filter, empty the contents outside and clean the vacuum cleaner when done.

Contaminated porous materials are not easily cleaned and should be removed and disposed. Disinfecting contaminated materials may kill mold on the surface, but some of it may survive and start to grow again – especially if conditions are right for growth. Keep humidity levels between 35 to 50 percent.

To prevent spreading mold spores, contain the mold infested area with plastic sheeting from floor to ceiling. Spreading mold spores throughout the house can be reduced by carefully encapsulating moldy materials being removed. Items should be carefully wrapped in large plastic bags or tarps and sealed with duct tape.

This will protect people from mold and be sure the mold is not spread through the house during the removal process.

Mold on surfaces, such as wall-board, that will be cut or pulled away can be held more stable by applying sheets of contact adhesive paper to avoid spreading the spores. Larger plastic sheets can also be taped to surfaces, such as wall-board, before it is removed. Mold contaminated materials should be removed through the nearest window or door to avoid spreading the spores.

Hard or non-porous surfaces can be cleaned with a solution of household detergent and water, then rinsed with plain water and dried.

A disinfectant may not be needed if the wet areas are from clean water. However, if people chose to use a disinfectant such as chlorine bleach, they should follow the label directions. Wear protective gloves and goggles and ventilate the area.

In addition, allow the disinfectant to contact the area for about five to 15 minutes. Don't follow with a water rinse as this may reduce the disinfectant's effectiveness. Running a dehumidifier and/or air conditioner can help reduce moisture problems.

We all need 'Living Water'

It has been hot, really hot, recently in our area. On days when the temperature and humidity are high, nothing quenches your thirst like a cold drink of water. We often take for granted the ease of going to the tap and drawing a glass of water.

Many places around the world running water isn't available in homes and people must rely on rivers, streams, lakes or wells. People are fortunate if they have a well close by to take care of their water needs.

One of the most familiar Bible stories took place on a hot day at a well when a thirsty Jesus sat down to rest. The Gospel of John tells the story of Jesus and his disciples traveling through Samaria when Jesus sat down and rested by a well as the disciples went for food.

Wells were central to life in ancient communities, women would commonly come in the morning and evening for water, and to share news of the day. Sometimes business was transacted at wells, a marriage might even be arranged at a well.

It was mid day when Jesus asked a Samaritan woman who had come to the well to get him a drink of water. As a result of his request, they engaged in conversation. In their extended conversation, Jesus and the woman talk about her life, faith, worship. Jesus offers her "living water." For a time, the two seem to talk past each other, she thinks he's talking about physical water, rather than eternal life. When the woman refers to the coming Messiah and Jesus says, "I am He," she recognized he's offering something she'd never experienced; something as refreshing as a cold glass of water on a hot summer day.

Jesus knew that to help people he first had to acknowledge their value. People needed to know then and now, that he sees beyond labels and circumstances to our humanity. In reaching out to the Samaritan woman Jesus broke three Jewish customs; first he spoke to her in spite of the fact she was a woman. Second, she was a Samaritan, an ethnic group the Jews despised and finally Jesus asking her to get him a drink of water. Using her cup or jar would have made him ceremonially unclean.

Jesus noticed people not just to prove a point or stand against the cultural establishment, but because he genuinely cared. Jesus saw more than others did. In the Samaritan woman he saw the mistakes she'd made, the hurts she'd born, her deepest spiritual needs; the need for acceptance, forgiveness, love and community. Jesus offered the woman acceptance for who she was, he didn't require her to change before he would look at her; instead, his attention drew her toward wholeness. Jesus looked at her, knew her and loved her. Jesus' acknowledgement of her personhood invited the woman into a level of dignity she'd been denied by society.

The woman left the well without any water or her water jar; she also left behind shame, anger, and fear. She was so transformed by her encounter with Christ that she ran back to town no longer avoiding the other women or townspeople, to tell everyone, "Come see a man who knew all about the things I did, who knows me inside and out. Do you think this could be the Messiah?"

We all need the "living water" Christ offers, we all need to meet the one who knows everything we have ever done, who loves and forgives us, offers each of us a new beginning. The story of the woman at the well challenges us to leave behind, shame, anger, fear and receive the good news that Jesus sees, knows, and loves each of us without reservation.

Knowing and feeling Christ's love and acceptance should empower us to follow Christ's practice of reaching beyond social boundaries, acknowledging our common humanity and sharing our own encounters with the one who offers living water to all.

The Prairie Doc

At home with dementia

In the U.S., there are almost five million people with mild to moderate dementia, and studies show that about 70 percent are at home, either alone or with a caregiver, often a spouse. If people with mild to moderate dementia can stay home safely, this would save Medicare and Medicaid a great deal of taxpayer money. More importantly, this would provide those people affected with dementia their preferred environment. Indeed, it is important to allow all people the chance to stay at home whenever possible.

The Prairie Doc
By Dr. Rick Holm, MD

A 2013 Johns Hopkins report studied more than 250 people with dementia living at home and found that 99 percent of the demented and 97 percent of their caregivers had at least one unmet need. The foremost unmet need was defined by safety issues such as poor lighting in walkways which increased the risk of falling. Other needs that were not being met in this study included not performing regular exercise, poor follow-up with health care providers, not having prepared legal and estate planning and not receiving help with medications and some activities of daily living. Researchers found that those with lower income, with depression and with borderline rather than severe dysfunction had significantly more unmet needs.

When there were at-home caregivers for these folks with early dementia, the caregivers were often not aware of these deficiencies. In addition, the needs of the caregivers were often ignored or unrecognized. Remarkably, at-home caregiver stress and depression were some of the strongest predictors for an earlier move of the person with dementia to the nursing home.

Methods to enhance a person's chance of staying at home are not difficult. Preparation for legal issues and estate planning should be done early and BEFORE the loss of memory. Other methods include providing raised toilet seats, grab bars in the bath and bedroom, properly tacked down carpets, good nighttime lighting in walkways and proper day and nighttime footwear. Researchers also advise providing enhanced support for caregivers with education about community support available such as social services, occupational therapy and caregiver support groups. In addition, screening and treatment of any caregivers' depression, should be provided. This would go a long way in helping people stay at home as they age.

Bottom line: Most of us, and our families, are not prepared for the possibility of dementia as we age. If we prepare, we greatly improve our chances for staying at home.

NEST 529 announces 2019 Back-to-School Photo Drawing

Nebraska State Treasurer John Murante and First National Bank of Omaha today announced the start of the NEST 529 Back-to-School Photo Drawing. The second annual drawing is one of the many scholarships offered by NEST 529, which awarded $120,000 in scholarship account bonuses and contributions in 2018 alone.

To enter the Back-to-School Photo Drawing, families nationwide are invited to submit back-to-school photos of children 8 years old or younger now through September 30, 2019. At the close of the drawing, 10 randomly selected winners will each receive a $2,000 contribution to a NEST 529 College Savings Plan account. Entries will be accepted by mail and online at NEST529.com/backtoschool.

"As children embark upon a new school year, we encourage families to once again celebrate this important milestone by entering into the second annual Back-to-School Photo Drawing," said Nebraska State Treasurer John Murante. "We are all lifelong learners, and understanding the ins and outs of saving is a lesson that will prove useful both in and out of the classroom. Good luck to all entrants, and we hope you have a wonderful school year."

"The Back-to-School Photo Drawing is an excellent way for families to start thinking about the future, while also cherishing the present. We look forward to celebrating back-to-school season and the many reasons it gives us to smile," said Deborah Goodkin, Managing Director, Savings Plans, First National Bank of Omaha. "At NEST 529, we take great joy in being a part of the excitement that accompanies back-to-school season. Time flies as soon as the first bell of the school year rings, and before you know it, a child is considering higher education."

More details about the Back-to-School Photo Drawing are available at NEST529.com/scholarships.

Spencer Dam failure to be investigated

The Association of State Dam Safety Officials (ASDSO), a national non-profit organization focused on the safety of dams, will be conducting an independent investigation to identify the likely causes that contributed to the breach of Spencer Dam in North Central Nebraska on March 14, 2019. This investigation is being conducted on request from the Nebraska Department of Natural Resources, the regulating authority over Spencer Dam.

The independent investigation will compile information and lessons to be learned from the event with the goal of advancing the dam safety engineering profession. Spencer Dam experienced a breach after a storm brought heavy rain to frozen ground in Nebraska, creating additional snowmelt and thawing of large sections of ice in and around the Niobrara River. There was extensive flood damage in the area including downstream of the dam and one person was swept away by the flood and is presumed deceased. The dam, originally constructed in 1927 as a hydroelectric plant, is owned by the Nebraska Public Power District.

The team compiled by ASDSO has decades of dam safety engineering experience with specific

LENRD Board discusses groundwater management strategies

Groundwater quality and quantity are top priorities of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD). The LENRD board and staff meet each month to develop and implement management plans for the future of our natural resources.

At their July meeting, the board adopted the proposed changes to the LENRD's Groundwater Management Area Rules and Regulations, and those changes will become effective on Saturday, Aug. 24.

LENRD Assistant Manager Brian Bruckner said, "The changes will further outline the rules and regulations by adding some definitions for terms that relate to current groundwater management strategies to complement the recent adoption of the Lower Platte River Basin Plan and the LENRD's Integrated Management Plan."

A complete summary of the proposed changes is available at the LENRD office in Norfolk and on the district's website.

The board also approved a Streambank Stabilization Project Policy. Area flooding has caused several streambanks to erode in places where they haven't in the past. Due to the extensive river system across the district, the board made the decision to focus resources on public infrastructure. The policy states that the district will need to partner with one or more public entities on streambank stabilization projects in the future.

The LENRD Board is also waiting to hear if funding has been secured through a grant with the Federal Emergency Management Agency for flood protection for the city of Battle Creek.

Health alert in effect for Willow Creek Lake, Harlan County Reservoir

A health alert is in effect for Willow Creek Lake in Pierce County and the southeast beach at Harlan County Reservoir in Harlan County.

The health alert was put in place after high levels of blue-green algae were detected at the lakes during testing by the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality.

It is recommended that visitors to Willow Creek Lake and Harlan County Reservoir avoid full body contact activities such as swimming, wading, skiing and jet skiing. Non-contact activities such as boating, fishing and camping are not affected by the alert.

Updated lake algae and bacteria levels are posted each week at deq.ne.gov.

New Farmers.gov feature helps producers find farm loans that fit their operation

A new online tool can help farmers and ranchers find information on U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) farm loans that may best fit their operations. USDA has launched the new Farm Loan Discovery Tool as the newest feature on farmers.gov, the Department's self-service website for farmers.

"Access to credit is critical in the agriculture industry, especially for new farmers," said Bill Northey, Under Secretary for Farm Production and Conservation. "This new interactive tool can help farmers find information on USDA farm loans within minutes. We are working to improve our customer service, and part of our solution is through improving how farmers can work with us online."

USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) offers a variety of loan options to help farmers finance their operations. From buying land to financing the purchase of equipment, FSA loans can help. Compared to this time last year, FSA has seen an 18 percent increase in the amount it has obligated for direct farm ownership loans, and through the 2018 Farm Bill, has increased the limits for several loan products.

USDA conducted field research in eight states, gathering input from farmers and FSA farm loan staff to better understand their needs and challenges.

"We received suggestions from both farmers and our staff on how to improve the farm loan process, and we wanted to harness this opportunity to be more efficient and effective," Northey said. "This feature is one step in our efforts."

How the Tool Works

Farmers who are looking for financing options to operate a farm or buy land can answer a few simple questions about what they are looking to fund and how much money they need to borrow. After submitting their answers, farmers will be provided information on farm loans that best fit their specific needs. The loan application and additional resources also will be provided.

Farmers can download application quick guides that outline what to expect from preparing an application to receiving a loan decision. There are four guides that cover loans to individuals, entities, and youth, as well as information on

Remembering Joan, cleaning files

I'm sure you noticed that the author of many columns and giver of many speeches has gone to be with her husband, Kip. I was proud to call Joan Burney a friend.

I thought her speeches, which were really just talks, were some of the funniest I've ever heard. She could make being married to a cattle feeder who liked to go to the sale barn sound like the funniest thing she had ever done!

I've often used the analogy I heard her give more than once: when a husband and wife are arguing, the wife pulls out a card file of everything that has ever been done by the husband that did not meet her approval. I can sometimes literally see my card file!

And lately, I've been literally cleaning files! Long overdue files.

By: Pat Meierhenry

And finding some treasures I had been afraid were lost forever. Like, Papa, I Want to go to School.

This little masterpiece was written by Mike's aunt Ella, who lived to be 90 and was one of God's special creatures. It seems that her father, Mike's grandfather, was 17 when he came to America in the 1880s and was generally considered to have been good school teacher material, but because of circumstances, like needing to make a living, became a farmer in the Republican Valley.

The thirst for knowledge was carried over to the eleven children. She has a story for herself and each of her siblings, demonstrating the ends some of them had to go to to get an education. The older girls were "loaned" to neighboring families to walk their children to school, so the hired girl went to the same school.

Ella herself was 17 when she got to go to high school. Brother Fred picked corn by hand to earn money to attend the Curtis School of Agriculture, Ben rode a bicycle sixty miles to attend Hastings College many years after high school, boarding with a local family during the week.

Ella attended Kearney State when her sons left for college, and Anna went to Peru State after all six children had degrees! Three of those were doctors. As you can imagine, it's an inspiring book and it's time for our grandchildren to read it. I wonder what other gems I'm going to come up with in time. I'll keep you posted.

Potato leafhoppers in alfalfa discussed

We're starting to get some reports of potato leafhopper activity and plant injury in alfalfa this season.

Potato leafhoppers do not overwinter here, but they are alfalfa pests almost every growing season. Storms along the Gulf of Mexico blow adult potato leafhoppers north and drop them into fields every spring. Heat or drought stress can make alfalfa more susceptible to injury. Plants are more likely to experience injury after the first cutting.

Potato leafhoppers are small, wedge-shaped, pale green insects about 1/8 to 3/16 inch long. Females begin to deposit two to three eggs per day in alfalfa stems as soon as they land. Immature leafhoppers emerge in 7-10 days and turn into adults in about two weeks. Therefore, a large population could develop three weeks after they first arrive in a field. The extended egg-laying period can result in at least two overlapping generations every year.

Potato leafhopper nymph and adults have piercing-sucking mouthparts, kind of like a small hypodermic needle. They do not chew on and leave holes in the leaf tissue, but cause physical injury when they stick this stylet into the alfalfa leaf to feed, sucking out moisture and nutrients. As they do this, they also inject saliva that injures the leaf.

John Wilson
Extension Educator

Initially, alfalfa leaf tips will turn yellow in a V-shaped pattern, which is commonly referred to as hopperburn. Heavily infested plants will be stunted, and new stands and regrowth after cutting can be particularly affected. In some cases large leafhopper populations can significantly reduce tonnage of the current cutting, as well as later cuttings.

Potato leafhoppers do not typically build up to damaging levels during before the first cutting is taken. Fields should be monitored weekly after the first cutting through the end of the season. A sweep net is the most effective way to sample for potato leafhoppers because adults and nymphs are small and are very active and easily disturbed, making it difficult to find them as you walk in a field.

Fields should be sampled during calm conditions and when the plants are dry. Sweep vigorously through foliage, using a 180-degree motion for one sweep. For each field, stop at four to five locations and take 25 sweeps per location. Count the number of nymphs and adults at each location and estimate the number of potato leafhoppers per sweep for each field. Typically, nymphs will be near the sweep net ring and adults will be at the tip of the net.

Charts are available that recommend when a treatment should be made, factoring in the cost of a treatment, stage of growth of the alfalfa plant, and the value of the alfalfa hay. You can find these charts in a CropWatch article at <https://go.unl.edu/potatoleafhoppers>.

Using a sweep net will allow you to fine tune your treatment decisions. However, many alfalfa producers will simply watch for signs of injury and take an early cutting or treat when yellowing and stunting are noticed. If your alfalfa already is yellow and stunted, do not spray. Instead, first mow your alfalfa to remove affected plant tissue and to stimulate new growth. Unmown plants might not grow much more all year, lowering yield and potentially leading to stand loss over winter. Protecting alfalfa from potato leafhopper usually involves a three-pronged approach:

1. The use of glandular-haired alfalfa varieties can significantly reduce yield losses. More than 70% of alfalfa varieties are now resistant to potato leafhopper. Adults are repelled by plant hairs, and nymphs get caught in the sticky hairs and starve. Newly planted resistant fields may not show resistance immediately, but should develop sticky hairs after becoming established. Glandular-haired alfalfa is not the same as non-yellowing varieties. These tolerant plants only hide leafhopper feeding and do not prevent yield loss.

2. Once damage and stunting is noted in a field, it is best to take a cutting, even if it is earlier than you normally would. This can disrupt potato leafhopper populations as they develop in alfalfa. Delaying harvest will allow nymphs enough time to become adults and start reproducing. Timely cutting will destroy or starve young nymphs before regrowth occurs and force adults to move to nearby crops, but they often move back into a field as it regrows. It is important to start scouting 7-10 days after each cutting to monitor for possible reinfestations.

3. Insecticide applications can protect alfalfa yield from potato leafhoppers and are economically justified with regular scouting and the use of economic thresholds. The fluctuating values of hay and control costs are important considerations for making a treatment decision. There are several products registered for potato leafhopper control in alfalfa. Follow label directions and pay attention to pre-harvest interval guidelines.

For more information on controlling potato leafhoppers in your alfalfa fields, contact your local Nebraska Extension office.

microloans. The guides include general eligibility requirements and a list of required forms and documentation for each type of loan. These guides can help farmers prepare before their first USDA service center visit with a loan officer.

Farmers can access the Farm Loan Discovery Tool by visiting farmers.gov/fund and clicking the "Start" button. Follow the prompts and answer five simple questions to receive loan information that is applicable to your agricultural operation. The tool is built to run on any modern browser like Chrome, Edge, Firefox, or the Safari browser, and is fully functional on mobile devices. It does not work in Internet Explorer.

About Farmers.gov

In 2018, USDA unveiled farmers.gov, a dynamic, mobile-friendly public website combined with an authenticated portal where farmers will be able to apply for programs, process transactions, and manage accounts.

The Farm Loan Discovery Tool

is one of many resources on farmers.gov to help connect farmers to information that can help their operations. Earlier this year, USDA launched the My Financial Information feature, which enables farmers to view their loan information, history, payments, and alerts by logging into the website.

USDA is building farmers.gov for farmers, by farmers. In addition to the interactive farm loan features, the site also offers a Disaster Assistance Discovery Tool. Farmers can visit farmers.gov/recover/disaster-assistance-tool#step-1 to find disaster assistance programs that can help their operation recover from natural disasters.

With feedback from customers and field employees who serve those customers, farmers.gov delivers farmer-focused features through an agile, iterative process to deliver the greatest immediate value to America's agricultural producers - helping farmers and ranchers do right, and feed everyone.

Pasture Quality for Cowherd

With all the rain this spring and summer, many of our pastures sat for extended periods of time, reducing the quality. Most summers, we look forward to moisture and don't consider it as a hindrance. However, this year's floods not only affected grazing pastures but the opportunity to put up high-quality hay as well. During a trip out west last week, I talked to many ranchers who are hoping to get out to the hay fields that aren't underwater. But being this late in the season, the grass is more mature and in return, may have reduced energy and protein. Therefore, I would like to discuss a few options on how to keep your cow herd in condition and tips to prepare for winter as we deal with low-quality forages.

Allowing a CVA feed team member to send off a hay sample will provide us with the information we need to ensure cattle requirements are being met in the pasture. It also gives us the information we need to use at the bunk in a ration. An easy option for lower quality forages would be an Accuration Hi Fat tub from Purina. These 200lb tubs are weather resistant protein tubs that contain vitamins, minerals, and a higher level of fat designed to provide extra energy to balance nutrient deficiencies in forages. These tubs are meant to be fed free choice and consumption is 1-3 lbs per head per day depending on forage quality. It's essential when using these tubs that adequate forage is provided at all times.

When working with bunk rations, consider adding distillers grains if your forages test low in quality. Distillers grains provide extra protein, energy, and fat to help supplement cow herds. I recommend working with a nutritionist to determine the amount of distillers that need to be added to a diet due to possible adverse effects of too high of a level being fed.

After reading about the research from Elanco, another option that I would recommend is the use of ionophores in our cow herds. Rumensin for cows, when fed as a daily supplement, reduces the amount of hay required by 7-10 percent. However, do use caution when feeding Rumensin to cattle if you have horses with them. Rumensin is toxic to horses, and just a small amount can be fatal. If bunk feeding is not an option, besides supplementing with tubs, cover crops can be a great option, as well as grazing stalks this fall. For more information, contact your local CVA feed sales specialist, or visit our website at www.cvacoop.com/feed.
