Sewer line location, golf carts on council agenda

By Clara Osten
clara@wayneherald.com

Remedying a situation with a sewer line in the city, and the legality of driving golf carts on city streets, were among the topics debated during Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Options for dealing with a sewer line connecting three houses along Seventh Street near Sherman Street to the city's sewer system were discussed.

The issue came before the city due to the fact that the sewer line runs under the garage of one of the houses and is currently backing up into the basement of that house.

It is unclear how or when the line was installed, but it is estimated that possibly sometime in the 1950s an easement was granted for the line.

Council members listened to information on possible options to remedy the situation, including installing a line along Seventh Street, south of the properties involved.

Council member Jennifer Sievers said "we need to find a solution and make it right."

A resolution allowing JEO Consulting to do work on the Seventh Street Sewer Extension Project was approved. The cost for this work is not to exceed $6,000 and council members will decide what the next step in the process will be after JEO submits their findings.

First reading approval on Ordinance 2019-9 was given at the meeting.

The ordinance deals with golf carts on city streets, the area in which they may be driven and age limits for drivers.

Ted Hollandsworth was recently hired for the street maintenance department.

City Attorney Amy Miller explained the ordinance language she had put together and told the council two things - "right now, golf carts are not legal on city streets at all and, a city ordinance can not be less strict than the state statutes."

Tuesday's meeting began with the introduction of two new city employees.

Derek Weiler, a graduate of Northeast Community College, has been hired as a Lineman I for the city and Ted Hollandsworth is a new member of the Street Maintenance department. He and his family live in Laurel.

Following considerable discussion, a request to waive the requirements for a sidewalk at 929 Circle Drive was not approved due to a lack of a motion.

Discussion included the fact that other properties in the area do not have a sidewalk, the fact that city code requires new buildings in the city are required to have sidewalks and the property owner was aware of this requirement when the building permit was issued.

Council members gave first reading approval to Ordinance 2019-10 which will amend the city code to give the mayor the authority to allow fireworks to be discharged on July 5 in case of inclement weather on July 4.

In other action, council members approved a request from Wayne State College to have a fireworks display following the Family Day Football Game on Saturday, Sept. 14. This request was granted on the condition that the city's current burn ban has been lifted. Wayne State College officials will coordinate with the Wayne Fire Chief to determine whether or not the conditions are favorable for the display. It could be re-scheduled to Sept. 28.

Jan Merrill with the Northeast Nebraska Economic Development District spoke to the city on an application for Community Development Block Grant funds for a Public Works project.

The grant request is for $435,000 for infrastructure work to be done on Pine Heights between 9th and 10th Street, on Lilac Lane and on 10th Street. The city would be responsible for a 25 percent match.

It is unclear when the work would be done as it could be delayed into 2021.

Following an executive session, the council approved Resolution 2019-45, approving a joint defense and common interest agreement between Northeast Nebraska Public Power District, the city of Wayne, the city of Wakefield, Toth & Associates Inc. and Holland Knight LLP.

Council members also continued their budget work session in preparation for the 2019-2020 fiscal year budget, which begins Oct. 1.

The Wayne City Council will next meet in regular session on Tuesday, Aug. 20 at 5:30 p.m. in council chambers.

Tax requests made at county commissioners meeting

By Sarah Lentz
editor@wayneherald.com

August is not only back to school time, but for the Wayne County Commissioners, it's also budget season. Seven tax requests were approved during Tuesday's meeting and updates were given on county roads and the Courthouse Renovation Project.

Wayne County Ag Society was first up to discuss their tax dollar request. This year, Rod Gilliland and Kevin Davis, members of the Wayne County Ag society, the group that organizes and runs the Wayne County Fair, asked the commissioners for an allocation of $400,000. That would be a $299,960.99 increase from last year's allocation. The Ag Society wants to use that increase in funds to help them build a new building where the current 4-H building stands on the fairgrounds. Their proposed building would have space for 4-H activities and exhibitions and be a new office for Wayne County Extension educator Amy Topp. The society would like to see the building go up before the fair's 100th year, three years from now.

Zach Jorgensen, of Wayne, is releasing his first children's book next week.

Jorgensen becomes an author

Zach Jorgensen, of Wayne can now add author to a list of accomplishments that includes recent college graduate, motivational speaker and vlogger. On Monday, Aug. 12 Jorgensen will be releasing his children's book, "Wheelchairs Aren't Scary."

Jorgensen, who is diagnosed with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy, knows all about reactions when people, particularly small children, spot his chair.

"When I'm out in public, I've noticed that kids are staring at my wheelchair and they kind of try to hide from it," Jorgensen said. "I've also had experience with little cousins of mine. They were always scared to come around me."

Wanting to show the world that wheelchairs are normal and nothing to be afraid of,

Jorgensen put his skills to work.

"I graduated college (from the University of Nebraska-Omaha) with a graphic design degree, and I just wanted to get the word out there that wheelchairs aren't scary, so I used my graphic design skills to write and illustrate a children's book.

According to a press release, the target audience for this book is children between the ages of three and eight. Jorgensen said the book teaches children that there's nothing terrifying about wheelchairs and gives them an outlet for questions they may have.

"Wheelchairs Aren't Scary" can be purchased on Amazon or at Jorgensen's website, zjmotivation.com. Jorgensen also encourages those interested to follow Jorgy on social media and Youtube, where he has a vlog.

75 years later

On Aug. 5, 1944, two B-17 bombers out of Sioux City, Iowa crashed over Laurel during a training exercise. On Aug. 4, 2019 an open house commemorating the anniversary of the crash was held. Only one of the 18 airmen survived, and the survivor's son, Keith Honke, spoke during the open house.

Looking Ahead in Wayne

By Wes Blecke,
City Administrator

City Council meetings

Regular Wayne City Council meetings are at 5:30 p.m. on the first and third Tuesdays of each month in City Hall at Third and Pearl Streets. Bring the family; we'd love to entertain you for an evening.

Annual population increase

Wayne's annual vehicular and pedestrian traffic will see a huge increase in the next couple of weeks with P-12 school starting as well as Wayne State College. Please drive accordingly and help keep the streets and sidewalks safe. Give each intersection another look as you pass through.

Budget Workshop

The Mayor and City Council held its annual budget work sessions on July 30 and Aug. 6 in the Council Chambers.

The highlights of the proposed budget has the general tax levy set at the same level as last year with an anticipated nominal growth in real property valuation (the County does not verify tax valuation for 2018 until Aug. 20 so taxing entities have to estimate this number until that time). Much discussion was held on the future of the City Hall building (new structure vs renovation of existing), park improvements (from playground equipment to new lights at Hank), and electrical upgrades (underground lines and other reliability safeguards). The budget documents will be discussed at a public hearing in September, and once passed, will be available on the City's website.

Fireworks amendment

A revised fireworks ordinance has passed the first reading of the City Council. The only change to the existing policy is to allow the Mayor to extend the discharge of fireworks should weather prohibit them from being discharged on July 4th. If there are other changes that the public would like to see with the current rules, please let Council or City staff know so we can bring those suggestions forth.

Mosquito bites can make you sick

It takes just one bite.

Mosquito borne illnesses such as the West Nile Virus can cause a range of illness from mild to severe, including death. In 2019, human infections of West Nile Virus in Nebraska are present with one death reported so far this year. In 2018, 11 deaths from West Nile Virus occurred in Nebraska and 109 people were hospitalized.

Zika Virus, another mosquito borne illness, is known to cause severe birth defects and a range of other disabilities and illnesses. Although Zika is not a local threat in northeast Nebraska, cases of Zika are reported in the United States. Pregnant women should not travel to areas with Zika and both men and women who are trying to become pregnant should take proper precautions when considering travel to areas with Zika.

To find out more visit cdc.gov/zika/pregnancy.

To prevent mosquito bites and the diseases they carry, wear long sleeve shirts and pants, use an

EPA approved insect repellent and remove standing water or use larvicide where mosquitoes breed. Larvicide is available at local farm supply stores or building supply companies.

Northeast Nebraska Public Health Department (NNPHD) is available to help the public stay protected from diseases carried by mosquitoes. NNPHD is offering free insect repellent DEET wipes to residents of the health district which serves Cedar, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne Counties. Supplies are limited.

To obtain the repellent wipes, visit the NNPHD office at 215 N. Pearl Street in Wayne.

For more information call 402-375-2200 or visit cdc.gov/westnile, cdc.gov/zika or epa.gov/mosquito-control.

End of an era

The band stand in the southeast corner of Bressler Park is being removed this week. City officials estimate the structure was built sometime in the 1920s and have been impressed with the quality of its construction. A new facility will replace the 100 year old 'stage' which has seen thousands of individuals cross it and hundreds of events held on it. These include musical events, theatre productions and events associated with the Wayne Chicken Show.

A tenant at an apartment building at 305 West Fourth Street came home from work at approximately 2:50 a.m. on Aug. 7 to find a fire on the upper level of the building. Damage was sustained to two apartments and the deck area on the outside of building. Wayne Fire Chief Phil Monahan estimates $5,000 to $8,000 damage to the structure. The tenant was displaced and is staying with relatives. The fire was caused by careless disposal of a cigarette. A total of 25 firefighters responded to the fire and remained on scene for approximately two hours. Chief Monahan noted that due to dry conditions in the Wayne area, a burn ban is now in effect until further notice.

Date set for 15th annual Kevin J. Murray Memorial Fishing Tournament

Saturday, Aug. 24 has been set as the date of the 15th annual Kevin J. Murray Memorial Fishing Tournament, held at Lewis and Clark State Recreation Area.

Kevin J. Murray, formerly of Wayne, accidentally drowned while fishing in 2004. The next year, his wife Sherry, who was Kevin's high school sweetheart at Wayne Senior High, and their daughters organized the first annual two-person team walleye fishing tournament in his memory.

Fifteen years later, the Murray's and friends are preparing for another year.

"We usually get 30 to 40 teams and we're on par for that this year," Sherry said.

Participation in the tournament is simple. Teams can go to kevinjmuraymemorial.com and find a registration form. Cost of participation is $120.

"With that, they get a shirt, they get a free buffet meal at CJ's at the Lake (in Crofton) where we have our banquet later that day," Sherry said.

Department of Transportation opens Highway 116 south of Dixon

The Nebraska Department of Transportation (NDOT) announced that as of Aug. 6, Nebraska 116, south of Dixon has reopened three days ahead of schedule.

The roadway was damaged during the March 2019 flooding, including significant damage to the bridge structure.

The NDOT partnered with consultant, EConstruct, USA, LLC, of Omaha, Nebraska, bridge designer, and contractor, Herbst Construction, Inc., of Lamars, Iowa, who received the $334,325 emergency contract to repair the existing bridge. The bridge will be replaced with a permanent structure in an upcoming project. Check-ins will begin at 6 a.m. and boats will launch at 7. Prizes will be awarded to the largest walleyes caught as well as the largest non-walleye catch. First place walleye catch will be awarded $500; second place, $250 and third place $150. The largest walleye caught will earn the fisher $100 and a $100 prize will be awarded to the largest non-walleye.

This year, the tournament is even an official tournament for the Nebraska Walleye Association.

Sherry stresses that participants don't need to be expert fishermen and women.

"It doesn't have to be the fishermen that goes out there and fishes every weekend," Sherry said. "It can be 'one and done' guy (or gal). Nobody can partake."

After the fishing ends and the weigh-in is over, the banquet begins at 5:30 p.m. This year there is over $1,000 in raffle prizes, as well as a gun raffle and silent auction items. The banquet is open even to those who didn't fish in the tournament.

It is quite impressive for our team to put together the design, let the repairs to contract and have the bridge open three days ahead of schedule. It is a testament to the teamwork and problem solving of the NDOT, consultant and the contractor," said NDOT District 3 Engineer Kevin Domogalla.

The NDOT thanks all involved for their partnership, effort, and dedication on completing repairs in an expedited time period.

To view updates on progress of repairs to State highways and bridges visit: dot.nebraska.gov/news-media/nebraska-flood-2019/.

"I invite people from the community that aren't participating, maybe in the fishing tournament, to come up to our way and then stay for our banquet and partake in the ticket sales and try to win some prizes," Sherry said.

Money from the Kevin J. Murray Memorial Fishing Tournament goes to the Wayne School Foundation. Over the last 14 years, the tournament has raised $126,000 for the school system. Every year, scholarships are funded by money from the tournament. Money from the Kevin J. Murray Memorial Fishing Tournament has also helped fund weight room improvements and the purchase of play ground equipment among other projects.

"The Wayne community obviously has a soft place in my heart," Sherry said. "It's where I, grew up, where my husband grew up, where we both went to high school and just seemed like a logical place. I enjoy giving back."

Raffle tickets can be purchased by anyone, and winners don't need to be present to win. In Wayne, contact Dennis Murray or Mike Vovos for tickets.

Hemp forum in Pilger seeks to help farmer explore new crop opportunities

By Kadra Sommersted-Simmons For The Wayne Herald

What many Nebraskans know as ditch weed could be a game changer for agriculture and farming in Nebraska. This year, the legislature passed LB 657, and The Nebraska

Hemp Farming act was signed into law. Though Nebraska has a history of industrial hemp production, most farmers aren't familiar with the process. Hemp farming will be the topic of a forum in Pilger from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Friday, August 16. Those attending will hear the first-hand experiences of growing hemp from farmers that have been doing it for a while, learning the process they went through. There will also be local dealers and processors of hemp products to explain that aspect of the business. Last but not least, there will be professors and doctors to assist with presenting a thorough understanding of the ins and outs of farming hemp plants.

"It's been over 80 years since farmers have been growing hemp agronomically in Nebraska," Colin Fury, forum representative, said.

"While many other states and other countries, like Canada, farmers have been in this market place."

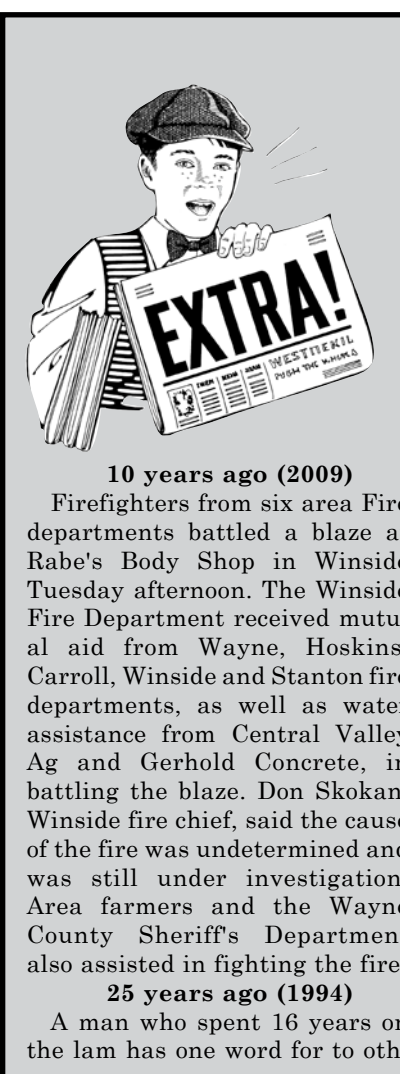

The forum will also clear up misconceptions surrounding hemp and its by-products.

"Now that President Trump has legalized hemp farming and removed hemp as a controlled substance we are seeking to go around and try to give farmers a knowledge of hemp," Fury said. "If they choose to diversify their agricultural operations hemp is another tool they can ers who might be fleeing the law: Surrender.

"It will only cost them until they right it, set themselves straight," said Richard Lunderman on Saturday, one day after turning himself in to Cedar County Sheriff Elliot Arens after a run that took him through California, Arizona and Colorado.

Running from the law, lying to employers, marrying and having a son under an alias, drinking too much to relieve the tension, it all built up, Lunderman said from jail in the northeast Nebraska town.

Lunderman was convicted of burglary but escaped from the county jail in 1978 before serving his sentence of two to five years in prison, Arens said.

Arens said the odds of Lunderman being arrested without turning himself in were slim. The warrant issued for his arrest expired years ago and the sheriff's office didn't have records of Lunderman ever having been there. Authorities had to check court records to verify Lunderman's story, Arens said.

Allen's Babe Ruth team gained revenge for a 1-0 defeat suffered two weeks ago in regular season play by knocking off Hubbard, 10-0, in the finals of the Northeast Nebraska League Tournament at Allen Saturday.

The victory earned the first place trophy for the Allen squad, which had knocked off Martinsburg, 3-2, in an earlier round. Hubbard defeated Newcastle, 7-2, in the semifinals.

Jackson's Pee Wees took the tourney trophy by knocking off Martinsburg, 5-4, in the first game Saturday. Martinsburg advanced to the finals with a 5-1 victory over Allen, Jackson with a 13-2 victory over Hubbard.

Allen's Cary Troth gave up only three hits, walked two and struck out seven as he hurled his way to the victory Saturday. Troth has allowed only 23 runs - 12 of them earned - in 11 games this year.

H.H. Hahn, who has been academic dean of Wayne State Teachers college since the state bought the institution in 1910, this fall becomes dean emeritus and retires from active duty.

Dean Hahn helped organize the institution as a state school. He was academic dean of the school, head of the education department and superintendent of the training school. Four years ago he relinquished his duties in the training school and continued in the other two capacities. During the 15 months when the air corps unit was in Wayne, Dean Hahn served as coordinator between the army and the school. He appreciated doing this as a service to the war effort.

Dean Hahn's new status as dean emeritus becomes effective the first of September. His outstanding service to education is part of the school's valuable tradition.

James Simpson competes in National Shooting event

James Simpson of Wayne competed in the 29th annual American Legion National Junior Shooting Sports Precision and Sporter Air Rifle competition at the Olympic training center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The competitors shot multiple matches from July 24 - 27. The Nebraska American Legion sponsors this shooting match, a national oratorical match and Boys and Girls State for High School Juniors. Simpson was sponsored by the Winside Sons of the American Legion.

The American Legion sponsors a National postal match to select the competitors for this match where both teams and individuals can compete.

A complete set of shooting targets, which includes 20 shots in the prone position, 20 shots in the standing position and 20 shots in the kneeling position are scanned and sent to the American Legion for Stage 1 of the competition.

The Wayne County Sharp Shooters 4-H Club fielded a team of four competitors which included Emily Eilers, Brayden Lurz, Sam Perry and Simpson.

Simpson was notified individually about two months later that he was a candidate for Stage 2 of the postal match because of his 557 score. This stage requires that an active American Legion representative and the competitor's coach are present for the second shoot. These targets were certified by the American Legion Representative Bud Neel of Winside and Darin Greunke, the coach of Wayne County Sharp Shooters and were sent to be scored. Simpson shot a 546 for the second tier shooting event.

This National postal match had 1,300 competitors who competed either in the Precision or Sporter Category. Simpson was notified that he ranked 12th in the Sporter Division in the nation for this shoot.

The competition was extremely tight as Greunke said that the 12th - 15th positions in Sporter had the same score which were broken only by the number of center shots.

"One point lower and I would not have made the cut to compete," Simpson said.

Simpson was notified on April 26 that he had made the third tier of the match.

"I was given only a short window to decide if I would accept the invitation to shoot at the match, otherwise they would go down the list to the next competitor," Simpson said. "I then had about three months to prepare for this National Match."

The American Legion provided mileage or airline tickets, hotel room and a meal per diem for the coach and shooter to the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center. Because Nebraska is so close to Colorado, Simpson's parents drove him to the Olympic Center on July 22.

Simpson noted that the American Legion provides for a large part of the costs of the competition, which significantly reduces the costs to the competitors

"This is probably one of the finest shoots in the country," Simpson said.

The competitors were required to arrive on July 23 or be disqualified from the event. The competition began in earnest on July 24 with a rules meeting for the shooters and coaches. They covered the rules and what activities the shooters and coaches were required to participate in outside of the shooting competition. A check-in process involved a number of items, including verifying that the trigger pull was at least 1.5 pounds, the gun sling width did not exceed 1.25 inches, etc. were checked.

The competitors then received their shooting positions and practiced for the competition. After the practice, a banquet and program were provided to the competitors and coaches by Post 209 of Colorado Springs. This included a short program about the 100th anniversary of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary.

The competitors' day began early on July 25 with them traveling to the Olympic Training Center by 7:30 a.m. for the first match of this multi-day event. The first shot of Relay One was sent down range at 9 a.m. and lasted until 10:30 a.m. The competitors were given a break for lunch and then the second relay began promptly at 1 p.m. The competition was half finished at the end of the day. The next day saw a repeat of this format for the next two relays.

Simpson said that this match is different than most, as a shooter competes in two complete matches each day for two days.

At the end of the fourth relay, the top eight competitors in both the Precision and Sporter events were told to case their guns as they were returning on July 27 for the final round of the match.

The final consisted of a 10-shot match where the competitors were directed by the chief range officer to load their guns and then to fire. Each competitor had 50 seconds to fire that pellet for a score. During this time, spectators were encouraged to cheer, groan, clap and encourage their favorite shooter.

Simpson said that this can be very distracting for the shooter and it takes the match up a notch. Simpson finished second in the 10 shot final for the day and seventh overall for the National Sporter Event.

The American Legion then hosted a final awards banquet on the evening of July 27 to conclude the week-long event.

Simpson is the son of Jeff and Colleen Simpson of Wayne, and is a member of the Wayne County Sharpshooters Program.

"I would like to thank Coach Darin Greunke, Mr. Bud Neel, and the Winside Sons of the American Legion for their support in this competition," Simpson said.

have in their tool box."

Fury said farmers can get multiple seasons a year for profitable hemp production, and the whole plant is able to be sold. Each part of a hemp plant can be used - seeds and flowers can be harvested, but the stalks can also be cut down to get fibers which can be used for materials and rope.

"The core of the stalk which is called the hurd or shiv," Fury said.

"That can be used to make paper, to make imitation wood products and can also make biodegradable plastics."

Tickets and lunches are free, applying online will guarantee and make the check process easier.

Commissioners

"If we don't get the ball rolling on this, we'll never have it ready in three years," Davis said.

Davis and Gilliland said that the Wayne County Ag Society is also looking to fundraise to help pay for the update.

"I like the design. I don't like the number," District 1 commissioner Terry Sievers said of the estimated cost of the project.

The commissioners decided to further discuss the request before making any decision and requested the Ag Society provide more information about their yearly expenditures. At the time of print, nothing has been decided.

The Wayne County Library Association, Hoskins Fire District 3 and Wakefield Fire District 9 all requested the same amount they requested in 2018. The Carroll Fire Department District 1 requested $9,646.14 less than last year's $78,700.14 allocation. The Wayne Fire District 2 requested $85,000, increasing their request by $2,779.84 from 2018.

Winside Fire District 4 requested $49,148, an increase of $1,188 from last year. All requests were approved except for the Wayne County Ag Society's.

Jake Geisert and Doug Elting from Berggren Architects, the firm working on the Courthouse Renovation Project came before the commissioners to inform them that the architecture firm and the Nebraska State Historical Society had come to a compromise regarding the proposed copper-clad orioles. Previously the historical society ruled that if copper were used on the orioles, the project would lose its tax credit availability because the original courthouse didn't have copper cladding. Berggren successfully argued that copper cladding would preserve the integrity of the orioles for a longer period of time.

The commissioners approved extending the County's cash-in-lieu option for medical insurance. Employees who opt to purchase their own insurance will receive $375 per month.

Mark Casey, highway superintendent, requested the commissioners sign a Fracture Critical Bridge Inspection Agreement with the Nebraska Department of Roads, and the commissioners approved. The agreement states that this will be the last year the State provides the county bridge inspector and pays the lion's share of the cost. He also told the commissioners he is working with Plum Creek Wind on haul routes for the new turbine project and is waiting for NextEra to fix several driveway site issues before the Sholes Wind Project is released from liability on county roads.

The commissioners also approved a CDARS Network deposit, requested by County treasurer, Tammy Paustian. The network allows larger deposits security from multiple banks instead of one when a deposit is over the FDIC limit. Nic Kennitz updated the commissioners about the several training opportunities coming up for emergency management.

The next Wayne County Commissioners meeting will be at 9 a.m. in the Wayne County courtroom on Tuesday, Aug. 20.

Hoelsing, Jones, Fleecs named NSCRO All-Americans

Wayne State College Women's Rugby standouts Brook Hoelsing, Kennedy Jones and Anna Fleecs were recently named to the National Small College Rugby Organization's (NSCRO) 2018-2019 Women's All-American list.

The selection committee worked with coaches around the country to identify the twenty-five exceptional women who make up this annual NSCRO Women's All-Americans list. This year's list is comprised of three freshmen, six sophomores, eight juniors, seven seniors, and one graduate student.

Hoelsing has had a banner year within NSCRO. She captained both the 7s and 15s All-Stars teams in 2019.

Jones played on the 15s All-Star team alongside Hoelsing. After successfully bring the 10th national championship title back to Wayne America, Jones was named the 7s National Championship MVP.

Fleecs, like Hoelsing and Jones, is no slouch on the pitch, also being selected for the 15s All-Stars side.

Champions Tour winner joins Wayne Country Club

By Kevin Peterson
Of The Wayne Herald

Most avid golfers recognize the popular names on the PGA Tour and even many on the Champions Tour which is the Senior version of the PGA. Once a professional golfer turns 50 years of age they become eligible to try the Champions Tour which many have done. Members at our own Wayne Country Club welcomed one of these players into membership this year as R.W. Eaks moved with his wife (the former Cathy Meyer) to a farm residence near Wayne.

Cathy is the daughter of former Wayne resident Mel Meyer. R.W., as he is known on the tour and around here, is a native of Colorado Springs, Colo. but the world of golf was not his first interest growing up.

"Basketball was my sport," Eaks said. "I played on a very successful high school team in Colorado Springs and my senior year we won the state championship."

R.W. jokingly referred to his high school playing days as the "black hole" because once he had the basketball it was going up. Eaks actually became a high school All-American on the hardwood and nearly landed in Boulder to play for the Buffaloes but a last minute change of heart by recruiters at CU forced him to look a different direction and he landed in Greeley at the University of Northern Colorado.

"I played for UNC all through college and then I missed most of my senior year due to a knee injury," Eaks said. "That was tough on me since that was basically what I did all through high school. I did play golf my junior and senior year of high school and really enjoyed it. I started working at a golf course when I was a freshman in high school. No one in my family played but I learned to play while working there."

Eaks said his goal through college was to get his degree in Physical education and then teach and coach. "I knew right away that I didn't want to be a teacher," he said. "As soon as I got out of college I moved to Phoenix because I had a buddy out there and he was in the golfing mix. I worked at Papago golf course and at the time the PGA season wasn't as long as it is now, so many of the pros would spend the winters in Phoenix and played at Papago so I got to see all the big names which really lit a fire under me to get going and get my tour card."

R.W. continued to work at the golf course while Cathy worked for a CPA in Phoenix. He actually turned pro in 1976 at the age of 24. He still worked at Papago through 1978 and the thought was to qualify for as many tour events as he could.

"At that time my Class A license allowed me to have a chance to qualify on Monday's for a chance to play that week's PGA event," Eaks said. "There was two ways you could play a tour event and that was by winning the section championship or vying for a spot in an 18-hole qualifier. Sometimes you could have as many as 150 guys trying to earn anywhere from one to 10 open spots for that week's event. It was very tough. If you couldn't shoot a 64 or a 65 you most likely weren't going to qualify."

R.W. worked in the pro shop at Papago and he said the day would start at 4:30 a.m. and by 5 a.m. the day's tee times were sold out. He ended up going to tour school in 1979 and worked hard to get a chance to get his tour card.

"I made the tour once during the next 10-year period," R.W. said. "If you didn't finish I believe in the top 100 at that time on the money list for the year, you had your card, you lost your card and had to go back to Q-School."

He played in a half-dozen PGA events including the Phoenix Open a couple times.

He mostly played on the Nationwide Tour and on June, 3 1990, he tasted his first victory at the Ben Hogan Quicksilver Open with a two shot win over Golf Channel analyst Brandel Chamblee. Eaks followed that win another victory in March of 1991 at the Nike Louisiana Open, also by two strokes over runner-up Karl Kimball. Eaks finished 15 under par over the four-round event. Eaks' final win on the Nationwide Tour came in September of 1997 where his 16-under par was two shots better than Chris DiMarco at the Nike San Jose Open. Prior to competing on the Nationwide Tour Eaks did have success in a few other professional events including the 1990 Arizona Open and then notching back-to-back wins at the Taco Bell Newport Classic in 1995 and 1996.

R.W. would play on the Nationwide Tour from 1990-1997 and then again from 1999-2001. His PGA Tour stay lasted a single year from 1998-1999. During that season he played in 50 events and his best finish was a tie for 7th place at the United Airlines Hawaiian Open in 1998. The Colorado native however, was far from completing his professional career as he became eligible to play on the Champions Tour in 2002, where he is still a member today.

"I won four times on the Champions tour including twice in 2007 and another two times in 2008," he said.

His first win on the highly watched tour came in July of 2007 with a three shot win over Bruce Vaughan at the Dicks Sporting Goods Open, finishing at 17-under par. Just two months later he won by two strokes over Jay Haas and Rod Spittle at the Greater Hickory Classic at Rock Barn in North Carolina, again finishing at 17-under par.

July and September turned out to be his favorite months on tour as the very next year he won the 3M Championship with an astounding 23-under par and a six shot separation from runners-up Gary Hallberg and Bernhard Langer. His final Champions Tour win came in September of 2008 with a 16-under par and four shot win over Tom Kite and Tom Jenkins at the Greater Hickory Classic at Rock Barn in what was back-to-back wins at that event. Eaks also tied for first three other times on the tour but lost in sudden death playoffs.

"I really liked the course at Rock Barn," he said. "Before I went back-to-back in 2007-08 I tied for first in 2006 and lost to Andy Bean on the first playoff hole," Eaks said.

R.W. also tied for top honors at the 2007 Regions Charity Classic and lost on the third playoff hole to Brad Bryant. 2007 was his finest year on the Champions Tour with Eaks notching 11 top 10 finishes with three wins and four runners-up. He also was part of the largest PGA Tour-sanctioned tournament playoff as he tied for top honors with six others at the Boeing Classic in Seattle along with Denis Watson, Craig Stadler, Dana Quigley, Naomichi Ozaki, Gil Morgan and David Eger. Four of the seven contenders bowed out after the first playoff hole which left Eaks, Watson and Stadler heading to the second playoff hole. The tournament ended on that hole with an eagle by Denis Watson.

Eaks finished the 2007 season sixth on the money list in the Champions Tour and earned the Comeback Player of the Year award. Because of his success on the Champions Tour Eaks has a lifetime card for the tour.

"I will never give up my professional status," Eaks said. "With my card I am a lifetime member of all the TPC courses."

For now Eaks says he is impressed with the Wayne golf course and the people he has met while playing here.

"I have called my friends in Arizona and told them to come out and spend a week and they will not want to go back," he said. "It's great here."

The former Ping player turned to Taylor Made about six years ago. Known for his impressive distance while on tour the Champions winner said he still misses some of the older equipment.

"I think in my case, I could control the ball more with some of the older equipment," Eaks added. "The game has changed in many ways because of equipment and it seems like there is something new on the market every year."

Despite being on tour for many years R.W. says he is not a big travel fan.

"I would play the event and immediately get on the plane to come back home to Arizona," he said. "I really liked being around family."

One thing he recalls is his drive to play at the highest level he could on the golf course.

"Sometimes it doesn't pay to listen to the experts," he chuckled. "I took a golf lesson in 1979 and the instructor told me I should quit and get a job."

R.W. is a converted Cornhusker football fan.

"I met Scott Frost several months ago in Norfolk," Eaks said. "I was so impressed with his demeanor and his attention to detail and what he demands from his players. I am a big fan."

R.W. and Cathy have two grown children who still reside in the Scottsdale, Ariz. area including daughter Dawn and son Jeremy.

Thanks!
 Our sincere thanks to all of our family and friends for the prayers, cards, memorials, flowers and food. A heartfelt thank you to Dr. Recob and the Laurel Family Medicine staff, the Wayne Providence Medical Center staff and the Hospice team. Our Dad and we appreciated everything you did for him. Thank you to Pastor Isaac Chua of the Laurel United Methodist Church for officiating a beautiful memorial service. Thank you also to the Laurel United Methodist Women for our luncheon. A special thank you to Bob Dickey and the Laurel VFW Post 4504 for the military honors at the cemetery. Our final thank you to Jim, Paul and Steve Wintz for their services.

With love and God's blessings,

On behalf of Wayne County Farm Bureau, thank you to everyone who purchased tickets at the Wayne County Fair to support "Beef in Schools." We look forward to providing locally sourced beef for the Wayne Community Schools to use in their lunch program.

Thank you to all who sent us anniversary cards for our 50th. It was so good to hear from each of you and remember our time in Wayne. Will & Sue Davis

Thank you to the Wayne County Agricultural Society for naming me Fair Person of the Year. It was "totally not necessary" and a complete surprise to me. (I like to be in the know at the fair - ha!) I continue to have the opportunity to work with wonderful youth and families, club leaders, volunteers, co-workers, community members, educators, county officials, and businesses, along with the Agricultural Society. I am grateful that in the spring of 1995, I was able to become a staff member of Nebraska Extension. I am honored to be named the recipient of this award and truly do appreciate the caring individuals associated with Nebraska Extension and the 4-H and Youth Development Program in Wayne County and across Nebraska. Amy Topp

The family of Inez Baker would like to thank friends and family for all of the support and expressions of sympathy shown since Inez's passing. Special thanks to the staff of Wakefield Care Center for all of your care and to Scott Hasemann.

Thank you for all the beautiful cards, messages and warm wishes for our 50th wedding anniversary. We cherish each and every one of you who have touched our lives in some way or another the past 50 years. The best part of your life is when your family becomes your friends, and your friends become your family.
 God Bless.

Food additives explained

When you think of a rainbow of colors, do you think about the variety of fruits and vegetables you are encouraged to eat daily? Or instead, do you consider a handful of colorful M&Ms, or the nine synthetic dyes (Blue 1, Blue 2, Citrus Red 2, Green 3, Orange B, Red 3, Red 40, Yellow 5, and Yellow 6) that can be used in food products?

Color additives are just one category of food additives, and each category has a role in our food supply. For hundreds of years, food additives have been used to preserve foods.

Prior to refrigeration, salt was used to preserve meats; vinegar and sugar were used to preserve fruits. Salt, vinegar and sugar seem harmless, but they are just a few, along with color additives, among the list of over 3,000 ingredients maintained by the FDA in its food additive database.

Food additives are substances added to a food to preserve it, give it flavor, or improve its taste and/or appearance. Manufacturers use additives in foods to retain nutritional value, maintain freshness and safety, and increase affordability and convenience. Basically, without food additives, our food supply would be limited and costly.

Additives such as fiber, vitamins and minerals can improve the nutrient density of a product and help protect against certain health problems. Breakfast cereal is a good example of a product that has been "enriched" (nutrients lost during processing are added back to the product) or "fortified" (nutrients have been added that did not originally exist in the product).

Preservatives, another category of food additives, protect food by slowing down the damage caused by bacteria, fungi, mold, yeast, and air. Vitamin E, butylated hydroxyanisole (BHA), and butylated hydroxytoluene (BHT) are examples of preservatives used in baked goods because these additives hinder the rancidity of fats and oils.

Some food additives such as sorbitan monostearate may sound more harmful than others because the name is difficult to pronounce or the function is unknown, yet sorbitan monostearate and egg yolks both serve as emulsifiers in products to keep oil and water from separating. Although the FDA strictly monitors and regulates all food additives for safety based on the intended usage level in a product, consuming several different products with similar additives could increase risks for some chronic diseases.

For example, salt (sodium) and sugar (sucrose) are very common household names, but too much sodium increases the risk for hypertension and too much sugar increases the risk for obesity and dental caries. Hypertension and obesity both increase the risk for heart disease. Baking soda (sodium bicarbonate), monosodium glutamate (MSG), sodium benzoate, sodium carbonate, and sodium erythorbate are all sodium-based ingredients, yet they are found in different products and serve different roles. Likewise, corn syrup, high fructose corn syrup, brown sugar, maple syrup, molasses, and evaporated cane juice are all sugar ingredients that appear in different products and contribute the majority of the added sugar consumed in the American diet.

Individuals who have food allergies or sensitivities should read food labels carefully and avoid or limit those products of concern.

What's happening with my adult kids?

By Clint Decker
Hope for Today

"Pastor Miller, thanks for coming over on short notice. My wife and I appreciate it. We are at a loss and don't know what to do with our son, Tom. We just can't handle it anymore. He's an adult and has been out on his own for a while. For years we've dealt with his unpredictable behavior and have tried everything. He wasn't raised this way. Pastor, what else can we do? Where did we go wrong?"

Maybe you are a parent with teenagers or adult children that are living destructive lives. Can you identify with this dad and mom?

Long ago there was a great King who had a wayward adult son who brought waves of grief to his heart. The life of King David's son, Absalom, was filled with selfishness, arrogance and cruelty. The story that symbolizes his lawless life is when, in a patient, premeditated and vengeful fashion, he murdered his brother. In cold blood he took his life, then turned and fled his father's Kingdom. The tragic event was the beginning of David's downhill relationship with Absalom. Things never improved, but eventually ended with even more tragedy when Absalom was murdered in cold blood as well. In response to learning of his wayward son's early and needless death, David grieved as any parent can understand, crying out, "O my son Absalom, O Absalom, my son, my son!" (2 Samuel 19:4)

David was considered "a man after God's own heart" yet, had a son who lived a lawless life. If it can happen to him, it can happen to any parent. Let me share six prayers you can consider praying over your difficult relationship with your adult son or daughter.

1) Pray and ask God to show you any parts of your life that may have influenced your child's behavior toward the harmful choices they are making. No doubt, at some point, David realized that his adulterous affair with Bathsheba was a negative influence on Absalom's life.

2) Pray and ask God for forgiveness for the things you may have allowed in your life that was harmful to your child. Then by faith, release any feelings of guilt to Him and receive His joy and peace.

3) Pray and ask God to help you accept that no matter what happened in the past, between you and your child, they are ultimately an adult and are solely responsible before God for their behavior.

4) Pray and ask God to help you release your child into His hands, stepping away from constantly rescuing him or her and trying to make up for the failures in the past.

5) Pray and ask God to help you forgive your child for the pain he or she has caused, and to show sincere love and undeserved kindness, just as God has shown you.

6) Pray and ask God to transform your life that you might be the parent or grandparent that you never were in your earlier years. Ask God to restore what was lost and change your family tree.

There is hope for any family in crisis and it begins with Jesus. The greatest enemy of the family is sin. Jesus suffered, died and rose again to defeat sin. When you turn to Christ, His Spirit will come to dwell within you and give you the power, day by day, to live victoriously and overcome hell's vicious onslaughts against your family.

Victory for your wayward son or daughter begins with Christ in you, then Christ in them. Jesus is greater than drugs, alcohol, mental illness, criminal behavior or any other form of recklessness.

May the words spoken to a dad and his family centuries ago, by the Lord Jesus Himself, be spoken to you in the days ahead, "Today salvation has come to this house" (Luke 19:9).

A prayer for you - "Lord God, I pray for peace in homes where children have headed down a path of destruction. Give hope to parents who feel at a loss and do not know where to go and what to do. Show yourself as a rock of refuge and a shelter in a time of trouble. In Jesus' name. Amen."

We are offered chance for new beginnings

Do you ever find yourself saying: "If I could only start all over again?"

I think it is common to desire a new beginning. We long to begin again and not repeat the mistakes of yesterday. Often we would like to be able to start over and be free from some event from our past that haunts us. We yearn that some harsh word might have remained unspoken, some accident avoided.

The opportunity for a fresh start is one of the nice things about the beginning of a new school year. Students come to class on their first day with a clean record. There are no failed tests. Incomplete homework assignments are not hanging over the student any longer. Each new school year is filled with possibilities and promise.

But it is often not that simple. Frequently the world around us will not let us forget. When I was a child there was the threat of misdeeds appearing on "your permanent record." I don't know if the school had such a thing, but the world keeps records. Accusers with their pointing fingers line up to scold, deleted photos somehow resurface or old social media posts are resurrected.

Even when the world forgets, sometimes we are the ones who have trouble forgetting. Perhaps our consciences readily remind us of our failures. Rather than grasping hold of a new beginning we can continue to wallow in the past.

But there is someone who gives us the opportunity to begin again. While the world may not let us have chance to do it all over again, the good news is that in God we can get a new start. Each new day of grace brings with it the promise, "I will forgive their wickedness and will remember their sins no more" (Jer. 31:34). As our sins are covered over by the blood of Jesus Christ, God says "Forget the former things; do not dwell on the past. See, I am doing a new thing! Now it springs up; do you not perceive it? I am making a way in the desert and streams in the wasteland." (Isaiah 43:18-19).

Each day we are given a new opportunity to declare, "This is the day that the Lord has made; Let us rejoice and be glad in it" (Ps. 118:24). God offers us a new start in Christ Jesus. With that new start he gives us a new opportunity to serve God and our fellow man.

As He gives us a new beginning through repentance and forgiveness, He empowers us to begin again. God's forgiveness lays the foundation for each new day. We cannot erase the mistakes of our past but with God's forgiveness we can move forward. We can learn from our mistakes so that we do not repeat them. As recipients of God's forgiveness, we can share that gift with others. We can offer to other people God's forgiveness and our own.

May God help you to make the most of the new beginning each day provides and may He bless all teachers and students in the new year of learning about to begin.

ALLEN CENTER COMMUNITY NEWS ALLEN COMMUNITY CENTER, INC. NEWSLETTER August, 2019

Director - Melissa Bock
I would like to begin by thanking everyone for being a part of our Allen Community Center. Without all of your support and participation in our monthly activities we would not have met our fundraising goal for the 2019 fiscal year and we would not have received the incentive money from the state of Nebraska. I applaud each and every one of you!

Friday, Aug. 2 we will be hosting our monthly health clinic beginning at 8:30 a.m. Please come out and take advantage of this free service. Aug. 2 will also be the last day Holly Sachau will be helping us with our health clinics. I would like to thank Holly for her time and support to our Center and the community.

This year the Allen Consolidated Schools will begin classes on Wednesday, Aug. 14. This is just a friendly reminder to watch out for our kiddos as they are out walking to and from school. Starting in September we will have Mrs. Bock and her kindergarten class visiting us once a month, as well as Jacob Kneiff will be returning during lunch one day (I believe) to help out. Looking forward to seeing all these young faces!

I wanted to share with all of you, during a phone visit with the Northeast Nebraska Area Agency on Aging in July they gave us a huge pat on the back for where our Center is today from where it was a short couple of years ago. As you all know our Center is partially funded by the Agency. Without them and all of your support we would not be open today.

I would like to invite everyone to give their suggestions for meals, activities, and newsletter information and materials. I will begin working this month on our menus for October - December. If there is something you would like me to try making please let me know. Also, we are looking for ideas on some talks we can have as well as some activities. Talks can be anywhere from eating a healthy diet for diabetics to writing a living will. Activities can be playing cards or doing a group craft. Please contact myself or one of the board members with your suggestions.

We would like to thank the following people for their generous donations and volunteering time here at the Center during the month of June: Nancy Kelly, Stacy Combs, Holly Sachau RN, Second Hand Treasures, Quilt Club, Allen Book Club, American Legion & Ladies Auxiliary, Wakefield Health Care Clinic, Brookdale Senior Living, Board Members and Spouses, Forrest Smith, Harlan Woodward. We would also like to thank Euni's and Countryside Gas & Groceries for supplies.

Steubenville 2019

Approximately 80 youth from Wayne, Wakefield, Emerson, Carroll, Newcastle, Ponca, Waterbury, Jackson, and Dakota City attended the annual Steubenville Conference in Springfield, Mo. This year's theme was "Belong - See what love the Father has bestowed on us, that we may be called children of God." In addition to the youth attending, a number of sponsors too part in the "weekend of Fun, Faith, and Fellowship." Steubenville is a high-energy youth conference where thousands of teens are invited to encounter Jesus Christ through dynamic speakers, engaging music, the Sacraments, small group discussions, and fellowship with other teens. Prior to the trip, students conducted a number of fundraisers throughout the year to help finance the trip, including the sale of burritos, a garage sale and individual donations.

Summer visits focus on educational experiences

Agriculture education involves three major parts - class/lab, FFA, and Supervised Agricultural Experience (SAE).
 SAEs are typically a student's job or a project in which they learn skills to help them in their future careers. Sometimes they are service projects or research experiments as well.
 Students keep a record of hours and finances within their SAEs. A student's investment of time benefits them, the community, and the ag industry. Major benefits include learning new skills, career exploration, developing future customers or employees, and filling a need.
 This summer, Toni Rasmussen (Ag teacher/FFA Advisor), has been visiting with students about their SAEs. In these SAE visits, the students discuss class, SAE, and FFA and their goals within each of those.

 "SAE visits are one of my favorite tasks because it's valuable time for the students to talk, express their interests, and to ask questions," Rasmussen said.
 SAEs vary greatly and range from working on the farm, life-guarding, raising livestock, making jams & jellies, gardening, community service projects, mowing, construction, agriscience research, and various other jobs and projects that students have.
 During the visits, post-graduation plans, scholarships, and career interests are discussed as well.

Entertaining guests is tiring

I'm tired tonight, but it's kind of a good fatigue, if there is such a thing. We are definitely losing our Bed and Breakfast touch, I know that! If I had to go to work tomorrow, after hosting for four days, I don't think I could do it.

We get an email newsletter from a couple who live in St. Petersburg, while he is teaching in a Seminary outside the city limits. Their pictures and descriptions of life in Russia have been so interesting. They are also trying to learn the language, and it's a tough one!

They have been in the States on "home service" and will be heading back a week from today. On impulse, I invited them to stay with us while in this part of Nebraska. That basement bed and bath are usually available; plus, the big room has a couch and a table and chairs in it. They took me up on the offer and arrived on Tuesday afternoon.

They had been in North Platte and their host there took them to see the Bailey Yard and talked about the canteen during World War II. Since they were now in Russia, I told them about the Germans from Russia who immigrated to Lincoln.

On Wednesday, they were guests at a church in Omaha, and were treated to Valentino's for lunch there. After learning they had never heard of runzas, I determined that had to be our evening meal. Of course they liked them; who doesn't?

On Thursday, he was the speaker at our a.m. Bible class; his presentation held our interest completely! He has a good sense of humor and that made it all the more entertaining. That afternoon, they were guests of a Concordia professor and wife in Seward.

Since Friday was kind of a "free" day for them, they took advantage of American hair cutters and checked out the Germans from Russia museum on D Street here. That night, I was determined that they could not leave without a Nebraska steak, and took care of that. Good old Angus sirloin!!

Originally from Wisconsin, they have a little difficulty understanding that there is only ONE football team to root for, and that we are already counting the days! When we first spoke of running a B and B, cousin Paul said he could not sleep with strangers in his house; we responded that by the time they go to bed, they are no longer strangers!

This was certainly true of these folks. I'm hoping they make their way back here some day! I learned so much about the country and the people and the culture. (If you have a computer, put Putin on the Ritz in your search engine. Another grin.)

Pleasure Ponies (eighth place).

Claire Lutter, daughter of Jim and Beth Lutter of Carroll was named Reserve Champion in Elementary Western Horsemanship and earned purple ribbons in Elementary Western Pleasure (6th place) and Ranch Riding. She received blue ribbons in Western Pleasure Ponies, Junior Barrels, and Junior Reining.

Lanee Rethwisch, daughter of Jesse and Angie Rethwisch of Wayne earned Champion honors in Elementary Showmanship and received purple ribbons in Elementary Western Horsemanship (sixth place) and Elementary Western Pleasure (ninth place).

Reese Rethwisch, daughter of Jesse and Angie Rethwisch of Wayne was named Reserve Champion in Elementary Western Pleasure and earned purple ribbons in 6 to 10 Year Old Mares (third place), Elementary Showmanship (fourth place), Junior Hunter Under Saddle (fifth place), and Elementary Western Horsemanship (ninth place).

Amanda Sellin, daughter of Todd and Rhonda Sellin of Norfolk earned purple ribbons in Senior Showmanship and Advanced Western Horsemanship, red ribbons in Senior Barrels, Ranch Riding, Trail Horse, and a white ribbon in Senior Poles.

Addyson Sherbeck, daughter of Andrew and Brooke Sherbeck of Norfolk earned purple ribbons in 2 Year Old Snaffle Bit Western Pleasure (fifth place), Junior Showmanship (sixth place), Junior Western Pleasure (finalist), and Ranch Riding. She received blue ribbons in Junior Western Horsemanship and Junior Barrels, and a white ribbon in Trail Horse.

Youth Learn Crop Scouting Skills

On July 23 the sixth annual Crop Scouting Competition for Nebraska youth was held in which seven teams from across Nebraska competing.

The competition was held at the Eastern Nebraska Research and Extension Center near Mead. Teams of students (those completing 5-12 grade) participated by completing a written knowledge test and seven crop scouting exercises in field plots.

Wayne FFA members Justus Greves, Noah Lutt, Tyler Reinhardt, Elle Barnes and Alyssa Carlson took part in the event.

The purpose of the competition was to provide students an opportunity to learn crop scouting and principles of integrated pest management (IPM) for corn and soybeans in Nebraska, to obtain knowledge and skills that will be helpful in future careers and to demonstrate newer crop scouting technologies.

Teams were expected to know the basics of scouting corn and soybean fields. This included crop staging; looking for patterns of crop injury; disease, insect and weed seedling identification; etc.

More information about the crop scouting competition are available online at cropwatch.unl.edu/youth. Click on the link that says, "Crop Scouting Competition".

This program was sponsored by DuPont Pioneer, the Nebraska Independent Crop Consultant Association and Farm Credit Services of America in collaboration with Nebraska Extension.

Anyone interested in sponsoring the 2020 program is asked to contact brandy.vandewalle@unl.edu.

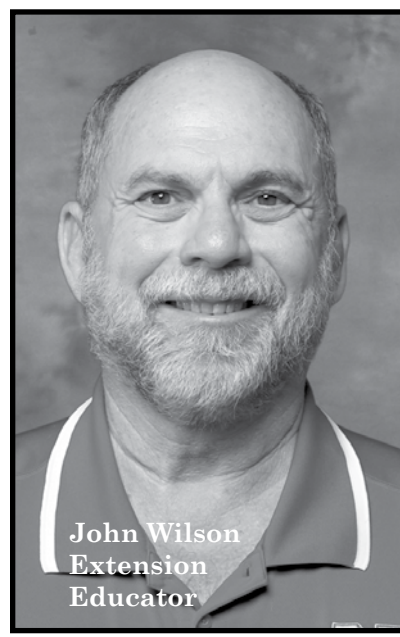

Soybean Management Field Days upcoming

It's a little ways off, but I wanted to make sure soybean growers got the dates for the 2019 Soybean Management Field Day on their calendar. Soybean Management Field Days help growers stay competitive in the global marketplace and increase profits while meeting the world's growing food and energy needs right here in Nebraska.

These programs will be held at four locations across the state the week of August 13 to 16 and offer producers research-based information to improve their soybean profitability. The field days are sponsored by the Nebraska Soybean Checkoff in partnership with Nebraska Extension and are funded through soybean checkoff dollars.

The goal of these field days is to help soybean growers maximize their productivity and profitability through informed decisions and efficient use of resources. Meeting the world's growing food and energy needs starts right here in Nebraska - at the 2019 Soybean Management Field Days. The program provides an opportunity to learn about research-based information. Producers will see their checkoff dollars at work as they learn about leading technology and ideas.

The closest program for most of our listeners will be on Wednesday, August 14, at the Tim and Angie Labenz farm just south of Pilger. To get to the field day, go 2 miles south of Pilger on Hwy 15, 1 mile west on 837th Avenue, and then 1/4 mile north on 573rd Road. The field day is on the east side of the road. Or just follow the signs when you get close and look for some big tents out in the middle of a field.

John Wilson
Extension Educator

If that day doesn't work for you, the other Soybean Management Field Days will be held on:

- Tuesday, Aug. 13, near Sargouth, and
- Thursday, Aug. 15, near Plymouth, and
- Friday, Aug. 16 near Waverly.

The program begins at each location with registration at 9 a.m. and wraps up by 2:30 p.m. For more information or maps to the Field Day sites, go to the CropWatch website at cropwatch.unl.edu.

At each site, participants will see replicated research, demonstration plots, enjoy a complimentary lunch, and have time to get answers to their questions. Producers can get ideas and insight about the challenges they face in producing a quality crop at a profitable price in today's global economy.

This year, the specific topics that will be covered at each site include:

- Making Sense of Production Costs and Policy Changes;
- Insects, Cover Crops, and Hail: Making Good Management Decisions;
- Soybean Weed Control and Cover Crops - What's working and what isn't. Rethinking your Weed Management Program,
- Cover Crops and Soil Microbial Communities - Possible Effects of Soybean Nutrition and Nutrient Recycling, and finally
- Soybean Production and Cover Crops - Seed, Planting, and Irrigation Management Decisions with Cover Crops

Crops, plant disease, and insect specialists will be available to address your questions. You can bring samples in for a free identification. Certified crop advisors can also get 4 CEUs by attending the program.

Again, for more information about the field days and maps to the site, go to the CropWatch website at cropwatch.unl.edu or contact your local Nebraska Extension office.

Fake credit cards, IDs found in traffic stop

Troopers with the Nebraska State Patrol (NSP) arrested a California man following the discovery of multiple controlled substances and fraudulent credit cards and identification cards during a traffic stop in Stanton County.

At approximately 11:15 a.m., Sunday, a trooper observed a Nissan Rogue speeding on Highway 15 near Pilger in Stanton County. During the traffic stop, the trooper detected the odor of marijuana coming from inside the vehicle.

A search of the vehicle resulted in the discovery of methamphetamine, marijuana, unknown pills, drug paraphernalia, approximately 40 fraudulent credit cards and identification cards, and forgery equipment.

The passenger, Steve Munoz, 27, of Altadena, Calif., was arrested for identity theft, possession of forged documents, possession of controlled substances, possession of marijuana - less than one ounce, possession of drug paraphernalia, unlawful manufacture of a financial transaction device, possession of a financial transaction forgery device, criminal possession of a financial transaction device, and criminal impersonation. Munoz was lodged in Madison County Jail.

The driver was not involved in the fraudulent activity. He was cited for speeding and released.

Protect your yield all the way to harvest

We know it has been a wet year which often leads to disease issues in both corn and soybeans. We also know that Thistle Caterpillars have been an issue across much of our area. All these issues lead to active airports and lots of planes in the sky.

When we think of the need for corn or soybean fungicides, we really have four questions to ask ourselves:

- 1) What is the level of disease pressure we see out there?
- 2) What is the disease tolerance or response to fungicide score for our hybrid/variety?
- 3) What is the weather forecast going forward?
- 4) Can we expect plant health/yield benefits beyond disease control to justify application?

We need to consider all these factors. We normally start with monitoring disease pressure. To do this well, someone needs to do a good job scouting our fields. That is not an easy task with 100+ degree heat indexes, pollen shed, and soybeans reaching canopy. Someone still needs to do the grunt work to scout and correctly identify diseases. Make sure you know what to look for and remember many diseases start in the bottom of the canopy, but some others start at the top. You need to look at both. Get a good guide to identifying diseases if you don't have one.

Keep in mind that not all crop diseases can or should be treated economically. A good example in Nebraska is Bacterial Leaf Streak. It can be easy to confuse Bacterial Leaf Streak with Grey Leaf Spot. One is caused by a fungus (GLS) while the other (Bacterial Leaf Streak) is caused by bacteria. Fungal diseases can be controlled by fungicides. Bacterial diseases cannot. Don't spend fungicide dollars combating a disease that the fungicide will not impact. You may still get plant health benefit from a fungicide, but it will not control bacterial diseases such as Bacterial Leaf Streak or Goss's Wilt.

If you have questions, contact you CVA Field Sales Agronomist. They can help you with disease diagnosis, understanding the disease tolerance of the variety or hybrids in your fields, and the proper fungicide recommendation if treatment is warranted.

We have several weeks to go before this crop is ready to harvest. Make sure you can take advantage of the good corn prices this year by maximizing your yield while spending input dollars intelligently. To learn more, visit cvacoop.com.

Dressed to impress

By MIKE RENNING

mikesportshome@yahoo.com
I've been married to the wonderful woman I live with for long enough to realize when to fight a battle and when to keep my mouth shut.

The Darling Wife and I have a couple of weddings this fall, our youngest son, Mason is marrying a wonderful gal from Elkhorn, Nebraska whom I will call Stephanie, because that is her name.

She is a great gal and I informed her parents a few months back if things ever went south in the relationship, the Darling Wife and I were keeping Stephanie - Mason would be on his own.

Thankfully, that isn't going to happen, because I'm actually pretty fond of Mason as well - I think we'll keep them both.

The next wedding, in November, is our Darling Daughter, Mikenzie - the one with the two Grandkids, Lily and Sophia.

She met up with a guy from Wakefield, who is a Blessing. Literally and figuratively.

His last name is Blessing, as in Zach, and he is a Blessing.

The Darling Wife couldn't be happier regarding either wedding, but the Darling Wife always uses a wedding to upgrade my wardrobe.

Anyone who knows me, knows my usual summer attire is a cutoff, sleeveless t-shirt, shorts and tennis shoes.

She always seems to return home from shopping when a wedding is approaching, with shorts with pleats in the front, shoes that don't tie and these little socks which don't even get up to my ankles.

The shirts she brings usually require a shirt under a shirt to give me a "layered" look and usually in some color other than gray or black or red.

I have cut the sleeves off many a Cub shirt and many a Husker shirt to give me the required summer comfort.

Now, the shoes.

Good heavens, I don't like to wear shoes that feel like they are going to come off my feet with every step.

And I certainly don't want to wear shoes which feel as if they have no soles or souls, so to speak.

Give me a good pair of Sketchers, Adidas or Nike, with shoestrings you must tie and not left open for the shoes to slip off.

Doesn't it bother you when someone walks along shuffling his or her feet?

Now, once in a while a blind squirrel finds a nut - or in my terms, I kind of realize what the Darling Wife is up to/planning.

Every time she would come back from shopping for "me", I would spend a lot of time hauling in a laotr of packages which didn't include the tieless shoes nor the pleated shorts.

And certainly more packages that included a couple of shirts to "layer" or cut off the sleeves.

Again, knowing my own limitations and being fully aware of what was happening, I dutifully kept my mouth shut.

I kept hauling in one box of shoes, one sack of shorts and various bags of dresses, accessories and more shoes.

The Darling Wife would always close the bedroom door, get on the phone with someone, and they would discuss something I wasn't privy to nor interested in the discussion.

There have been times I have worn, "fake" shoes as far as what I am.

I have a couple of pairs of cowboy boots I put on every time I go to a branding or get on a horse.

But, it takes a real cowboy about 30 seconds to realize how I am an Urban Cowboy at best and a "fake" cowboy at worst.

I love getting on a horse and I love branding, but I'm not very adept at either.

Most real cowboys admire my "want to" but still enjoy the entertainment of my antics completely - in fact, I think that is why I keep getting invited back to a cattle moving or branding.

The bottom line is, I always get one "outfit" of shoes I'll wear once, shorts I will wear once and shirts I'll never be allowed to remove the sleeves.

On the other hand, the Darling Wife will have a closet-full of dresses, skirts, and other female attire to last until I'm in a box.

She may actually wear one of her "finds" when they put me in the box.

And I do have what I am going to wear picked out.

Sleeveless t-shirt, tennis shoes and regular shorts - I don't care what time of year it is - I shouldn't be cold anyway, considering where I'm probably headed!

Now, that was funny.

County fair time: Connect and celebrate community

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

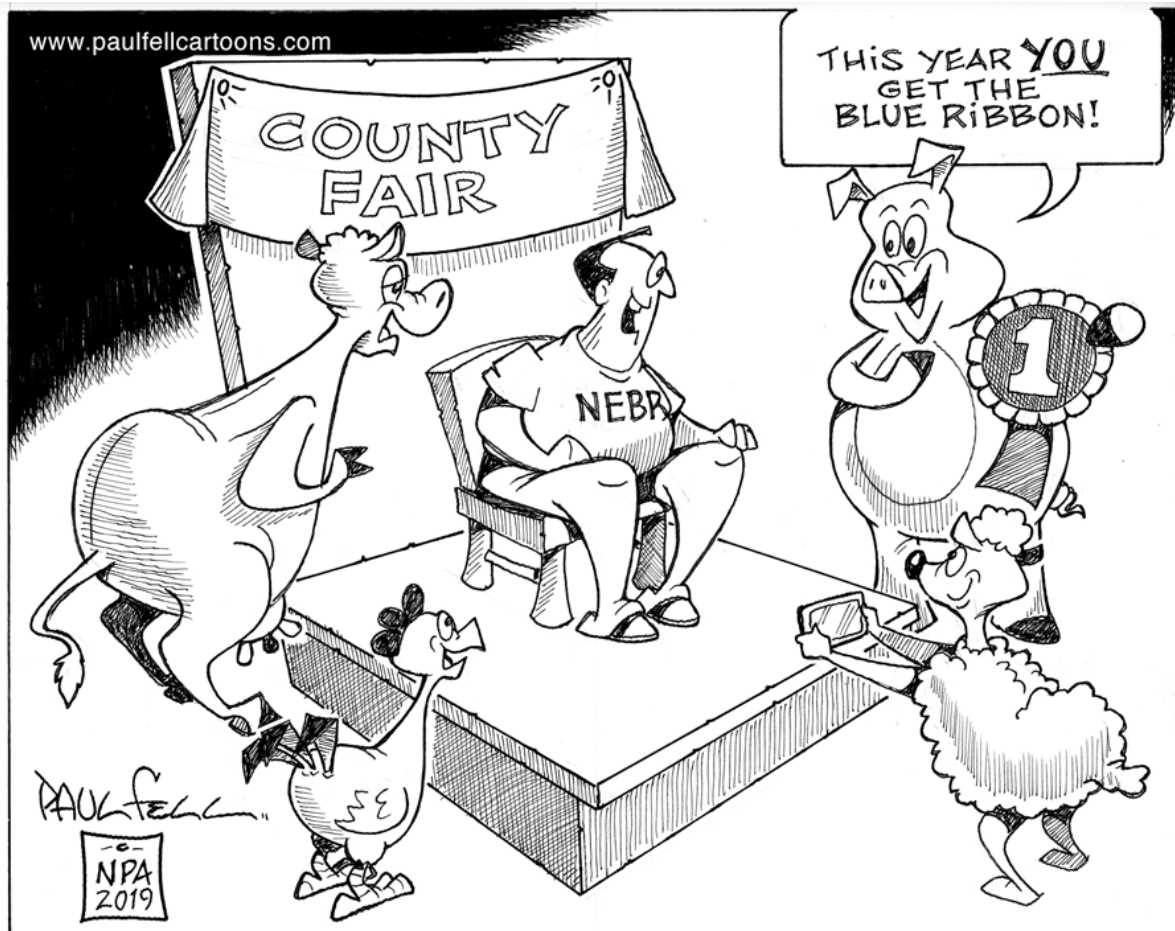

Statewide flooding March 17 and localized flooding in South Central Nebraska July 9 have: wreaked havoc on the economy; cost some farmers and small business owners their livelihood; dealt a heavy blow to the hospitality industry in Kearney; and had a massive - still being calculated - impact on the agricultural community.

Who knew that the Nebraska Strong attitude would be called on twice in one year, with a cautionary note that we still have five months of weather left? All this comes right before fair season kicks into high gear, culminating in the Nebraska State Fair in Grand Island August 23 to September 2.

In a recent weekly column, Governor Pete Ricketts points out that "Fairs are wonderful gathering points where communities come together in celebration of the many things that make our state great. They also offer an abundance of enjoyable, family-friendly entertainment options. From live music to livestock, and parades to pie baking, fairs have something fun for everyone.

"County fairs are also good venues to showcase Nebraska agriculture, the heart and soul of our economy. Nebraska's farm families work incredibly hard to cultivate the crops and raise the livestock that enrich our state. Fairs display the fruits of their labor and help familiarize the rest of the state with the valuable contribution they make to Nebraska," Ricketts wrote.

Let me add that this year's fairs could be a rallying point on the road to recovery. Communities can celebrate survival while recognizing the usual agriculture achievements of 4-H and FFA members showing all manner of livestock and others showing pickles and candy and cakes and pies and produce.

Let's hope that each fair venue somehow provides recognition of the losses as well as the opportunities. A donation bucket for financial assistance and a plan to distribute it would be a good start. Town Hall meetings, group-counseling sessions as it were, would be another great way to discuss obstacles and explore solutions. Just letting people relax and blow off steam would be a big help.

The Governor wrote about the State Fair Raising Nebraska exhibit that invites fair-goers to take an in-depth look at Nebraska agriculture. "Visitors can hop inside the cab of a combine to go for a simulated drive. Kids can get their hands dirty while exploring the various soil types that sustain and nourish Nebraska-grown crops. They can also see how satellite technology and fiber optic sprinkler heads are making center pivots smarter, more effective machines. One station within the Raising Nebraska exhibit explains why some eggs are white while others are brown. Another traces how milk gets from a cow's udder to a carton on the shelf of a grocery store," he wrote.

I'd like to see that education expanded to include discussions on climate change and weather in general. We've been inundated with not only water and ice and rain and snow, but with new terminology such as the now infamous "Bomb Cyclone."

What a great name for a carnival ride, or a dairy treat or some other concession - think super nachos, snow cones, funnel cakes. The Bomb Cyclone. Or perhaps the "Perfect Storm". There's one that begs sideshow hustle huckstering to the highest degree.

Bottom line: let's celebrate community; encourage one another; and learn something together from this difficult year. I'll see you at the funnel cake stand.

Legislative Update

Fair fun around District 17

I had a great time visiting with folks and enjoying the energetic atmosphere at the Dakota-Thurston County Fair this past weekend. From the Butterfly Encounter to the free rodeo and Equine Parade, from sack races, cake eating and Nail driving contests to the Battle of the Bands, the fair offered a whole lot of something for everybody. For me, it was a packed weekend, as I ran between two fairs, with grandkids participating in the Dakota-Thurston County and the Dodge County Fairs. There's no substitute for the looks of excitement on the kids' faces as they show their projects and receive those coveted ribbons.

I was impressed by the hard work and amazing talent on display throughout the entries. As always, I enjoyed attending and appreciate that the communities go all out to provide a fun, welcoming atmosphere and a quality line-up of entry categories and activities. Most of all, I appreciate the community commitment to provide an opportunity for neighbors to connect over good food and great fun. I'm already looking forward to next year!

In other news, the Tax Rate Review Committee had its required meeting this month to determine whether the sales and income tax rates in Nebraska should be changed. The Legislative Fiscal Office presented a report to the committee. No action was taken.

To summarize the report, General Fund receipts for Fiscal Year (FY) 2018-19 were $131.4 million above the April forecast. By law, the additional revenues will be transferred to the State's "Rainy Day Fund" (Cash Reserves). The adjusted revenue receipts for FY 2018-19 rose 8.7 percent, compared to the forecasted 5.7 percent increase. However, the actual increase from the prior year is 7.2 percent (rather than 8.7 percent). The difference is due to adjustments such as a shift of income tax revenue from FY 2019 to 2020 due to delayed filings related to flooding. How the FY 2018-19 revenue performance will affect the forecasts for the next two fiscal years (FY2019-20 and FY2020-21) will be addressed at the October meeting of the Nebraska Economic Forecast Advisory Board (NEFAB). I'll keep you posted.

Finally, I've been waiting for word from Nebraska Department of Transportation (NDOT) about the Hwy. 94 Bridge in Pender that was damaged by the spring flooding. Although damaged and impassable bridges are an inconvenience for everybody and we wish things moved more quickly, we also recognize the widespread damage to infrastructure throughout the state. We finally received a status and funding update from NDOT that I'd like to share with you:

Hwy 94 East of Pender Project Status: The contractor, Valley Corp, has notice to proceed and will begin the

Legislative Update
By Joni Albrecht
State Senator, District 17

process of excavation following utility location. Tribal monitoring has not impacted the schedule of the project as of Aug. 2.

NDOT does have a six percent TERO tax agreement with the Omaha Tribe and is currently negotiating a Tribal Monitoring Agreement for the Hwy 94 bridge and river bank repairs as the Omaha tribe has requested tribal monitoring on the project.

The project is a result of the March flooding which means it is covered by a Governor's Emergency Declaration, as well as a Federal Major Disaster Declaration. The severity of the event allows the NDOT to expedite the procurement and construction process to restore essential traffic. This means that the typical construction process, to include the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) process, is adjusted to allow mobility to be reestablished as quickly as possible.

For repair work on the estimated $156M in damages to the federal-aid eligible transportation system, initial financial responsibility falls upon the NDOT with the Federal Highway Administration reimbursing NDOT after the repairs are complete. Reimbursement rates are dependent on if work is temporary (100 percent federal) or permanent (80 percent federal and 20 percent state). For roads off the federal-aid system the financial responsibility falls to the local entity and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Visit NDOT's flood recovery website for updated information: dot.nebraska.gov/news-media/nebraska-flood-2019/
