More than 100 cases of COVID in district, first death reported

By Sarah Lentz

editor@wayneherald.com

Northeast Nebraska Public Health Department (NNPHD) reported some big numbers over the holiday weekend, and not in a positive way. The health district's number of confirmed cases of COVID-19 cases surpassed 100 and from May 22 to May 24 cases in Wayne County nearly doubled.

As of Wednesday, May 27, NNPHD is reporting 112 confirmed cases of COVID-19 within the district of Cedar, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne Counties. At the time of print, Cedar County is reporting seven cases; Dixon County, 29 cases; Thurston County, 62 cases and Wayne County, 14. As of May 27, 725 tests have come back negative and 35 tests are still pending.

The district started the holiday weekend on Friday with only 84 cases, but by Sunday, May 24, cases rose to 104. Cases in Wayne County jumped from 8 reported positives on May 22 to 14 confirmed cases by May 24.

On May 21, NNPHD reported that a patient from Thurston County became the first reported coronavirus-related death in the district.

Julie Rother, health director at NNPHD said the jump in cases could be caused by a combination of more testing and members of the public lessening their prevention ac-

"The more testing that becomes available, the more people are going to have the opportunity to see if they truly have the illness, so that's going to be some of it," Rother said. "From the investigations that our team is doing and the information that's shared with me from those investigations, we're really seeing a variety of reasons for the increase in cases." Rother said that the biggest known risk for contracting COVID-19 is living with someone else who has the virus, and the district is seeing household spread.

"We're also seeing some spread due to a decrease in social distancing practices,' Rother said. "That six foot distance is really, really important. The face masks are really, really important."

Rother said there are a few cases of workplace spread, particularly in places where employees don't have the space to practice social distancing, and there are a few cases of community spread, or cases where the source of exposure can't be found.

As things open up more and more around the state and the nation, Rother said it's still important to continue to practice infection control practices, particularly observing the six foot distance rule and when that's not possible, wearing a cloth facemask. The other crucial part to stopping the spread is to monitor one's self for symptoms daily and staying home if symptoms

"We all need to realize that lifting the directed health measures or some people would say re-opening some activities and businesses and events, gives us even more reason to stress the importance of the social distancing and good infection control practices," Rother said.

She stresses that that doesn't mean people can't go out and that they can't visit people or be outdoors, it just means distance needs to be observed when possible. However, Rother said it's still a good idea to stay home when possible and encourages the public to get creative in staying connected and staying safe.

"I think that the really big thing is social distancing. Ask yourself, 'is it really necessary to do something,' and maybe find an alternate way to do it." Rother said. "Just remember (to ask yourself), 'how can I do this and protect others at the same time?'."

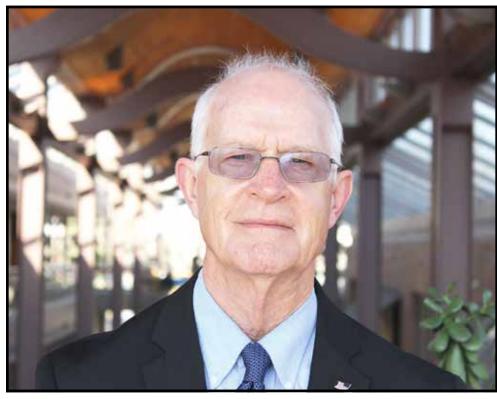

The public can stay up to date with the Coronavirus situation on the CDC website at cdc.gov/. Nebraska DHHS has a COVID-19 call-in line where members of the public can get their questions answered about the virus. The phone line operates from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., seven days per week. To access the line, call (402) 552-6645. Follow NNPHD on Facebook to get the latest local testing numbers and results or visit their website for local updates on nnphd.

Parkinson Voice Project awards 2020 SPEAK OUT! & LOUD Crowd Grant to PMC - Therapy Services

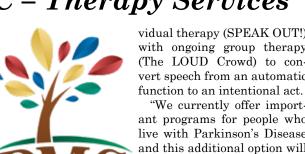

Parkinson Voice Project, a tion, has named Providence Medical Center as a recipient of its 2020 SPEAK OUT! & LOUD Crowd Grant Program.

Grant recipients include hospitals, university speech therapy clinics, private practices and nonprofit organizations. Each clinic receives free training for their speech-language pathologists and graduate students, as well as speech therapy supplies. Some grant recipients will also receive funding. Providence Medical Center is committed to offering Parkinson Voice Project's effective speech therapy program at the Providence Therapy locations.

"Up to 90 percent of people with Parkinson's are at high risk of losing their ability to speak, and aspiration pneumonia caused by swallowing issues accounts for 70 percent of the mortality rate in this patient population. Awarding these grants substantially increases access to quality speech treatment to those living with Parkinson's," Parkinson Voice Project's Founder and CEO Samantha Elandary said.

This grant program honors Daniel R. Boone, PhD, CCC-SLP, a world-renowned speech-language pathologist and voice expert who recognized in the late 1950s that individuals with Parkinson's could improve their communication if they spoke with "intent." Parkinson Voice Project's highly effective speech therapy program is based on Boone's teachings and combines indi-individuals. The Rock Steady Providence Medical Center Boxing program is a very popular program and being able to expand the scope of our services to those participants is very exciting,' Kayla Korth, PMC's Speech Language Pathologist and grant applicant said.

Parkinson Voice Project is the only 501(c) (3) nonprofit organization in the world solely dedicated to helping individuals with Parkinson's improve their speech and swallowing. The organization runs a speech therapy clinic in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and also hosts the World's Largest Parkinson's Chorus, consisting of nearly 100 individuals with Parkinson's whose voices

Parkinson Voice Project's vision is to replicate its speech therapy program across the globe to help individuals with Parkinson's preserve their speech and swallowing abilities. More than 2800 speech-language pathologists have been trained to date, including clinicians in Australia, Canada, Finland, Israel, Italy, Greece, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, Taiwan, and the United Kingdom. Wayne Public Library unveils virtual summer reading program

Wayne Public Library (WPL) announced they will be providing a virtual summer reading program to the community. The Summer Reading Youth Challenge (June 1-July 4) and Summer Reading Program 2020: Imagine Your Story (July 6-Aug. 8), is themed around fairytales, folklore and adventure. An adult reading challenge is available as well (June 1-Aug. 8). The library's summer activities will consist of reading challenges with grand prizes and lots of fun crafts and programming via online videos provided in partnership with Page Turner Adventures. Programming and reading challenges will be available to adults during this time as well. Virtual participation with Beanstack

The youth Summer Reading Program (SRP) is open to anyone ages zero through 18. SRP encourages community youth to participate in logging reading minutes and challenges. In the reading challenges, youth will be able to earn virtual tickets by completing reading goals. They will be able to use their virtual tickets in a drawing towards eight grand prizes.

This year the library is going digital with the launch of WPL's own Beanstack website, cityofwayne.beanstack.org. This online service will provide participants in SRF (and in any of WPL's other future reading challenges) with the tools to track reading

State patrol delivers LB 154 study to legislature

The Nebraska State Patrol (NSP), working with the Nebraska Commission on Indian Affairs, the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, and Legal Aid of Nebraska, has completed a study commissioned under LB 154 of the Nebraska Legislature. LB 154, passed in 2019, charged NSP with studying the issue of missing Native American women and children in Nebraska.

Through an exhaustive process spanning more than a year, the team analyzed information from multiple missing persons reporting systems and conducted listening sessions in tribal areas to gauge the scope of the issue and develop recommendations to address concerns raised.

"NSP has been able to develop new partnerships through this ef-benefit Nebraska's Native American citizens," said Colonel John Bolduc, Superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol. "The most common points raised during the listening sessions illustrated a need to revitalize connections between tribal residents and law enforcement. That work can have a substantial impact on multiple facets of public safety, including missing persons cases.

During this effort, the team discovered that a disproportionate number of Nebraska's reported missing persons were Black (3.9 times population percentage) and Native American (3.1 times population percentage). The research also revealed that the greatest percentage of Native American missing persons are boys age 17 years or younger, accounting for 73.3 percent of all Native Amerifort that are already working to can missing persons in Nebraska.

Among all racial demographics, 59.6 precent of Nebraska missing persons are boys age 17 years or younger. NSP also found that many law enforcement agencies throughout Nebraska do not currently have a policy for reporting missing persons to centralized databases. Among the recommendations detailed in the report, NSP will work with the Nebraska Crime Commission to develop a Standard Operating Procedure for handling missing persons cases to be provided to other law enforcement agencies throughout

Throughout the research and requests for information at listening sessions, the team did not learn of any unreported Native American missing persons cases in Nebraska. The full report can be found at statepatrol.nebraska. gov/sites/default/files/lb154_report_-_5.22.20_final.pdf

Commenting on hair cuts and birthday cards

I'm writing this as NCN replays some of their popular groups from 'Quarantine Tonight"; we've had Leo Lonnie's orchestra and now are being treated to Lynn Dvorak, solo.

But I'm thinking about hair cuts! The Big Farmer and I each had one right before the restrictions took effect, so we thought we'd be fine. NOT! I can go five weeks, but not eight! I finally got there last Wednesday, what a relief. However, we have not heard from Bob Taylor, who, at 89, is almost as old as Mike and has been so handy in his little shop at the VA across the street.

Mike is fortunate in that he inherited his mother's curls and as his hair grows, it just lays nicely on his head. Mine is coarse and stubborn, and prefers standing straight up. Plus, it was getting so I could not stand it on my face!

The Farmer's Wife By: Pat Meierhenry

I had an email from friends in Co-

for cuts when salons were closed, and now have appointments next week. Friends in Wisconsin bought a clipper and have been working on each other. That would not work

The other thing we have taken for granted all these years is birthday cards! My generation still sends cards, and we like to go and look for the right one for each person, usually reading a few before picking one. Well, that does not work now. I have not perused a card rack for two months.

Just in the knick of time, I received some in the mail from a from. But I did use the cards.

I received one from the friend let everyone know.

zad today; they were actually due in Wisconsin that is simply a gorgeous print of columbine by a local photographer; she has some of her work on hand. The one that took the cake, though, was from a friend in Grand Island; it is obviously meant for a little girl and the message said she didn't have any other cards in the house, and her kids would not allow her to leave! She asked me not to laugh, so of course, I laughed! We are all in the same boat.

I took advantage of a special offer from the Centering Corporation that offered 25 cards that said "Thinking of You." Trouble is, inside, they say, "on this special day." Well, yes, they will be fine for birthgroup who works with Braille, a days and even anniversaries, but I worthy cause, I'm sure, but I can't just wanted to send some that said contribute to each charity I hear I was thinking of them! Let's talk about cake!

As the excitement around our merger with Farmers and Ranchers Cooperative, beginning June 1, 2020, grows, I have had the opportunity to learn more about their program and the most prominent topic of discussion, cake. While cattle nutrition needs are similar, the geography differences across our CVA territory gives us the ability to fit any cattle operation needs. Ranchers supplement with cake through the winter months as a protein source. Before selecting a protein supplement of cake, the hay or forage quality is the first factor to consider. Commonly, ranchers will graze native grasses and also provide grass hay closer to calving. This type of feed program typically falls short on protein. By collecting a sample of your feedstuff and sending it off for analysis, we will obtain accurate data to develop a feed plan. Hay is mainly used as an energy source. However, hay, such as a mid to high-quality alfalfa, will have some protein to provide in the diet as well. Cakes can consist of protein sources such as DDGS, sunflower meal, or cottonseed meal. Wheat middlings provide the extra benefit of fiber. Cake consistency is very important as cake needs to be hard enough to stick together and not crumble yet soft enough for cattle to consume. At our Ainsworth mill, we make custom formulations with various vitamins, minerals, medicated feed additives, or ionophores.

The 28% protein cake has proven to be a cube of choice by ranchers this past year. With 28% protein and 8% fat, this cube is designed for feeding cattle on forage-based diets. This is an easy way to supplement fat and protein to a herd. The palatable 7/8 cube is fed at 1-2 lbs per head per day for the best results. Medicated feed additives are available. The majority of the cake comes in a 7/8 size cube; however, we also offer a 5/8 cube for weaned calves. Feeding rates will fluctuate with product but average in that 2-3lbs per head per day. Besides custom cubes, we also offer pellets and minerals. Stay tuned for our bookings later this summer to get your herd prepared for winter!

Nebraska invasive weed update - musk thistle

By Gary Stone Extension Educator

Early Detection and Rapid Response (EDRR) is a concept to identify potentially invasive species prior to or just as the establishment of the invasive is taking place. An Integrated Pest Management plan (IPM) can be developed to manage, contain and eradicate the invasive species before it can spread further. This will avoid costly, long-term control efforts.

Musk Thistle

Musk thistle is also known as nodding thistle and nodding plumeless thistle. Its scientific name is Carduus nutans L. of the family Asteraceae (Sunflower family).

Description

Originating in Eurasia, musk thistle was introduced into the United States as an ornamental plant in the mid 1800s.

Musk thistle is a non-native biennial forb but can behave occasionally as an annual. It reproduces/spreads from seed. Musk thistle is a prolific seed producer. Each thistle plant can produce 10,000 up to 120,000 seeds. Germination of seed and emergence of seedlings can occur anytime and are correlated with light and moisture. Optimum germination will take place in moist soil with 59° to 68°F soil temperature in the light and 68° to 86°F in the dark. Approximately one third of the seeds produced are viable. Viability of the seed varies. Water, wind, livestock, wildlife, vehicles and humans disperse seed.

Musk thistle forms a rosette the first year and then bolts the second year to produce flowering stalks and has a taproot. Plants are usually two to six feet tall or taller. Flowering and seed production can start 45 to 55 days after bolting. Leaves are generally dark green with a light colored mid-rib and deeply segmented. Flowers have sharp spiny bracts under them and the shoots beneath the flowers do not have leaves. Musk thistle produces many seed heads. The terminal or tallest shoots flower first and the lateral shoots later. Musk thistle can have different stages of floral development and senescence.

Habitat

Musk thistle is found in any type of habitat but normally establishes quickly in disturbed areas dominated by annual plants such as cheatgrass. It can also be found in over-grazed sites, roadsides, and riparian areas. Musk thistle is found across most of North America. It can invade healthy, undisturbed sites as well, out-competing desirable forbs and grasses in pastures and rangeland and reducing biodiversity. Musk thistle is not palatable to livestock.

Management Musk thistle is a designated noxious weed under the Nebraska Department of Agriculture's Noxious Weed Program. Prevention is the best and cheapest management option. Having well-established perennial grasses and forbs on a maintained pasture or rangeland with proper grazing and rotational grazing techniques can go a long way to prevent its establishment. Scouting, monitoring and proper identification are key factors for management. Infestations of this weed can occur very rapidly. Management of seed production is the key to keep this plant from spreading. Several different management options will need to be utilized to manage this weed. There are three insects that are considered biological control methods at this time. These are the musk thistle head weevil (Rhinocyllus conicus), musk thistle rosette weevil (Trichosirocalus horridus) and the musk thistle tortoise beetle (Cassida rubiginosa). There is also one pathogen, a rust fungus (Puccinia carduorum).

The larvae of the head weevil feed on the seed in the flower head and interfere with seed production and viability. The head weevil can attack other thistles, including native species. The rosette weevil larvae feed on the center of the rosettes causing the plant to die or have multiple stems and reduced seed production. The adults and larvae of the tortoise beetle feed on the leaves and skeletonize the plant. The rust fungus infects the musk thistle leaves which turn yellow and die. These biological control measures will not completely manage / control the musk thistle, but are a vital IMP tool and help suppress growth.

Mowing can be done when the terminal heads are in the late flowering stage, but there could be some regrowth and mowing will have to be repeated. Cutting the root below the ground level will be effective. There are numerous chemical treatment options available to manage Musk thistle. Products containing aminopyralid, clopyralid, chlorsulfuron, dicamba, metsulfuron, picloram (Restricted Use), triclopyr, glyphosate (non-selective) and 2,4-D have been shown to work. Spring or fall applications, especially in the rosette stage, prior to bolting are best. Fall treatments are better after a light freeze and are preferred because they will have less effect on the biological control insects. Tank mixes of several of these compounds may provide better control. The addition of a non-ionic surfactant to the herbicide mix will aid in control. Re-treatment may be necessary until the seed in the soil is exhausted. Be sure to select a product labeled for the site. Read, understand and follow all label instructions when using any pesticide.

Nebraska Extension Publications has a number of publications on thistle management and other invasive species. These publications and much more are found at extensionpubs.unl. edu/ by searching "thistle" or "invasive".

USDA to provide $1 billion in loan guarantees for rural businesses, ag producers

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue has announced that the Department is making available up to $1 billion in loan guarantees to help rural businesses meet their working capital needs during the coronavirus pandemic.

Additionally, agricultural producers who are not eligible for USDA Farm Service Agency loans may receive funding under USDA Business & Industry (B&I) CARES Act Program provisions included in the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act.

"Under the leadership of President Trump, USDA is committed to being a strong partner to rural businesses and agricultural producers and being a strong supporter of all aspects of the rural economy," Secretary Perdue said. "Ensuring more rural agricultural producers are able to gain access to much-needed capital in these unprecedented times is a cornerstone of that commitment."

In addition to expanding eligibility to certain agricultural producers, the changes Secretary Perdue announced allow USDA to:

- Provide 90 percent guarantees on B&I CARES Act Program loans;
- Set the application and guarantee fee at two percent of the loan;
- · Accept appraisals completed within two years of the loan application date;
- · Not require discounting of collateral for working capital loans, and • Extend the maximum term for working capital loans to 10 years.

B&I CARES Act Program loans must be used as working capital to prevent, prepare for or respond to the effects of the coronavirus pandemic. The loans may be used only to support rural businesses, including agricultural producers, that were in operation on Feb. 15, 2020.

USDA intends to consider applications in the order they are received. However, the Department may assign priority points to projects if the demand for funds exceeds availability.

USDA announced the expanded B&I CARES Act Program authorities in a notice published in the May 21 Federal Register. Program funding expires Sept. 30, 2021.

AFAN announces cold storage grant opportunity for food pantries, requests donations

Agriculture in Nebraska (AFAN) today announced a grant program to assist food pantries in purchasing refrigerator and freezer units to store perishable food. AFAN is partnering with the Nebraska Department of Agriculture (NDA) and Nebraska's various commodity groups on this project.

"Milk is the number one requested item at food pantries," stated Kris Bousquet, Manager Farmer Relations Nebraska, Midwest Dairy. "One of the challenges food pantries have is the lack of funds to purchase refrigerators or freezers. This grant program addresses that need and allows food pantries to safely store milk, dairy products director of AFAN. "The Nebraska and meat that their clients want

"We found many food pantries throughout Nebraska have the desire to distribute milk and dairy products, chilled or frozen meats and fresh produce. AFAN and its AFAN. members are fulfilling this desire through proper storage and handling of these products," said Steve Wellman, Director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture. "By providing funding for refrigerators and freezers we can help food pantries with equipment that will benefit their clients for years to come." AFAN will be administering the pantries and receiving donations from private entities for this project. Food pantries can receive up to $4,000 for refrigerators, freezers and associated expenses through

The demand for these units has already exceeded the funding that has been committed to this project and AFAN is seeking monetary donations to be able to assist more food pantries in obtaining equipment to ensure safe food products for everyone who needs it. Lifestyle

Contributing in a changing world Caption This!

By Dr. Dawn Lindsley Nebraska Extension 4-H Youth Development

Margaret Mead once said, "Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world. Indeed, it is the only thing that ever has.'

We are all a part of something larger than ourselves. We live in a global society that is interconnected, and in times of uncertainty, we can feel it everywhere. Life is challenging right now and although it may be hard to focus on others' needs, doing so can strengthen our own well-being as well as connect with others and the world around

When faced with adversity and unexpected challenges, we, as adults, can help prepare young people to become caring, connected, and contributing citizens. Adults can teach youth their role and ways they can contribute to the greater good. It is important for adults to establish expectations of how youth can make valuable contributions. When establishing expectations include youth. Simply, youth need ownership in the process. Individuals are more likely to support what they help to create. Giving youth autonomy allows them freedom to do things their own way and teaches valuable life skills along the way.

Youth may wonder, "But how can I to give back when I can't really go anywhere or do anything right now?" As adults, we can help them change their perspective. If plan "A" doesn't work, there are still 25 other letters in the alphabet. Right now, youth and adults may not be able to contribute to others, their communities, and the greater world as we did in the past, but that gives us an opportunity to be creative and think outside the box when serving

As caring adults, we can continue to cultivate positive qualities such as empathy, compassion, and generosity in young people. Remind youth that contribution is not defined by size or greatness. Remember, big changes start with small actions. Here are a few ideas you along with a young person can do to make a positive contribution in your community, country, and world:

 Encourage youth to call or write someone and share appreciation for what they are doing. Jump on a video call with a friend or family member to cheer them up. Write notes of appreciation on the sidewalk. Post positive quotes or videos on social · Help youth brainstorm potential ways to speak up and take action. Support them in utilizing their networks and connecting with others to start a campaign to bring awareness to an issue or raise funds to support a cause. · Think of new ways youth can volunteer. Use supplies accessible at home to make something to help those in need; then take it to a drop off location or send it through the mail. Build or grow something to give away to an individual or group of people. Help someone by doing a task they may be unable to do them-

According to the Greater Good Science Center at UC Berkeley, helping others has shown to have a variety of benefits. Those who volunteer their time and talents often discover they get more out of the experience than the people they are serving. Being kind and helpful can make youth feel happier, enhance their relationships with others, and gives them a sense of purpose and satisfaction. It can help relieve stress, help them relax, build confidence, and promote constructive behaviors in teens. By positively impacting the people around them, we can help youth build a better society for our communities and our

The Prairie Doc Finding a new balance We Specialize in Preventative Dentistry

Life is about balance. We balance our time, our budgets, our work, and our family. If you concentrate too much in one area, you will soon be wanting in another. Additionally, our bodies are constantly working to keep our blood pressure, blood

COVID-19 disrupted our balance, both in our lives and for some, in our bodies. It overwhelmed some communities with too many people who became sick. Other communities banded together (or rather, apart) to slow the virus and protect the most vulnerable.

Thankfully, many areas have been successful at slowing the spread and flattening the curve, avoiding the tidal wave of sick people filling the hospitals. However, this came with a great cost to the balance in our economy, our social interactions, and our normal way of life. It revealed and magnified numerous problems. It exposed disparities in healthcare, and it provoked supply chain issues, food chain issues, unemployment, poverty, and misinformation.

People have many needs in addition to safety. People often need work not only for money for food and shelter, but also for fulfillment and purpose. People often need other people because we are inherently social creatures that thrive from being there for others, providing words of encouragement, or a caring shoulder to lean on, or an embrace.

Living with COVID-19 around us require a new balance that may change over time. While it would be wonderful, reducing cases to zero is probably not realistic for a while. Meanwhile, our communities need economic activity and we need social interactions. Thus, some people are venturing out more and businesses are reopening. Some places are doing this more cautiously than others. We need to get creative and adjust our expectations of normal for a while. Our elders and those with high risk conditions may not be safe or feel safe, so we should do what we can to help them. Washing hands, wearing masks and being mindful of the distance between us are not perfect but are still the best forms of protection for now.

holds. Perhaps reopening the economy will increase our cases of Covid-19, and perhaps not. Perhaps the virus will dissipate over the summer months. If it re-emerges in the fall, will we be ready? Will we plan and use this time to prepare? Will we again work together to protect our fellow man? Let's use this time wisely and find our new balance.

Jesus will not leave us orphans

Last fall as we made a trip south we stopped in Concordia, Kan. at the National Orphan Train Com-

The museum exists to tell the story of Orphan Trains. From 1854 to 1929, the trains transported orphaned and homeless children from crowded Eastern cities of the United States to foster homes located largely in rural areas of the Midwest including Concordia. During their time of operation, they relocated about 200,000 orphaned, abandoned, abused, or homeless children. The museum did a good job of explaining the difficulties of life as an orphan in that era of American history. To be orphaned meant to be without a protector, an advocate or a provider. It meant to be all alone in the world. That can be a very frightening prospect.

In the midst of the pandemic maybe we have experienced a few of the same emotions. We have concerns about our health, the economy, and the well-being of our families. With social distancing and disruptions to the normal patterns of life, we can feel very much alone. This has led to the popularity of the slogan "In this together." It is to be a re-ing through similar upheavals. But time to bring a word of comfort and thankfully we have something more encouragement to his disciples. "I to hold on to than a catch phrase.

I was reminded of that when I leave you as orphans" (Jn. 14:18). The promise came as Jesus told his them? What would they do? Where Spirit would dwell with and in the disciples (Jn 14:17).

It is the Spirit that gives us the gift of faith and strengthens that faith through Word and Sacrament. The Spirit is at work to bring to our recollection what Jesus said and did. The same Spirit assures us that Jesus is still at work for us. Thanks be to God we are not helpless orphans. When we feel alone and vulnerable, it is a time for us to listen to our blessed Savior. While it is some consolation to know we are "in this together," it is an even greater consolation to know we are "in this with Jesus."

Whenever we feel like overwhelmed by our present circumstances, that is a good time to pick up the Word of God. The Bible reminds us that we are not orphans. We have a loving heavenly Father who is watching over us and who is ready to listen to us whenever we call out to him in prayer. May he be your comfort and consolation today and each dav.

How to Read the Water Quality Data Table:
The EPA and State Drinking Water Program establish the safe drinking water regulations that limit the amount of contaminants allowed in drinking water. The table shows the concentrations of detected substances in comparison to the regulatory limits. Substances not detected are not included in the table. The state requires monitoring of certain contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants do not change frequently Therefore, some of this data may be older than one year.

MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level) – The highest level of a conta minant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCI Gs as feasible using the best available treatment technology MCLG (Maximum Contaminant Level Goal) – The level contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety. AL (Action Level) - The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded triggers treatment or other requirements which a water pCi/L (Picocuries per liter) - Radioactivity concentration unit.

1 billion gallons of water. ug/L (micrograms per liter) - Equivalent to ppb.

RAA (Running Annual Average) – An ongoing annual average calculation of data from the most recent four quarters.

LRAA (Locational Running Annual Average) – An ongoing annual average calculation of data from the most recent four quarters at each sampling location. 90^{th} Percentile – Represents the highest value found out of 90% of the samples taken in a representative group. Туре Compliance Period Category

The City Of Wayne has taken the following actions to return to compliance with the Nebraska Safe Drinking Water Act:

During the 2019 calendar year, we had the below noted violation(s) of drinking water regulations

To correct the selenium issue the City of Wayne placed well 70-1 into emergency status and took it out of service. To correct the coliform issue the City of Wayne added chlorine to disinfect our distribution system.

0.689 - 2.7 ppb

Additional Required Health Effects Language

Selenium is an essential nutrient. However, some people who drink water containing selenium in excess of the MCL over many years could experience hair or fingernail losses, Coliforms are bacteria that are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other potentially harmful bacteria may be present. Coliforms were found in more samples than allowed and this was a warning of potential problems.

There are no additional required health effects violation notices

During the past year three Level 2 assessments were required to be completed for our water system. three Level 2 assessments were completed. In addition, we were required to take four corrective actions and we completed four of these actions pathway exists through which contamination may enter the drinking water distribution system. We found coliforms indicating the need to look for potential problems in water treatment or distribution. When this occurs, we are required to conduct assessment(s) to identify problems and to correct any problems that were found during these assessments.

Coliforms are bacteria that are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other, potentially harmful, waterborne pathogens may be present or that a potential
