Wayne City Council met Tuesday night at the Wayne Fire Hall. Among items of discussion was re-opening city services. Discussion about when and if the pool can open for the season is still ongoing.

Council learns of city's plan to re-open services

Meeting in person for the first time in just over two months, the Wayne City Council passed several resolutions, discussed the vacating of an alley and received an update on opening of city services.

From the Wayne Fire Hall, council members held a public hearing in regard to a re-use plan for city of Wayne Economic Development Revolving Loan Funds.

City Administrator Wes Blecke explained to the council that these funds have been used by the city since Timpte (now Great Dane Trailers) came to town. Due to changes in the federal guidelines, they will not be administered by the city. Instead, the Northeast Nebraska Economic Development District will manage them.

Following the public hearing, the council approved the resolution amending the guidelines for revolving loan funds.

Considerable time was spent on updates in regard to the city's response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

City Administrator Blecke said City Hall is open, as of June 1, and bathrooms at city parks are now open. In addition, city staff is looking at opening public facilities such as the Fire Hall and City Auditorium for rentals.

The Community Activity Center has opened the weight room and other parts of the facility will gradually open after the completion of the floor renovation project.

In a related note, the council discussed possible upgrades that need to be made at the facility, especially the sinks, counter tops and floors. Council members agreed that the sinks and counter tops should be replaced soon, while an expert should be consulted in regard to flooring.

The status of opening the swimming pool involved considerable discussion.

It was noted that several municipal pools in the area have already opened and patrons are getting anxious to know if the pool will be open this season.

City Recreation Director Lowell Heggemyer told the council that work has not yet been completed on caulking the pool to eliminate leaks. After that is done, the pool can be filled with water and heaters checked. He also explained what work is being done at the pool this week.

In addition to getting the pool itself ready, lifeguards need to be trained before the pool can be opened.

Based on current recommendations, the pool can have up to 25 percent of its capacity, which would amount to 75 people, in the pool at one time.

Following discussion and current timetables, it was determined that the earliest the pool could open would be June 27. However that date would be dependent on the fact that no complications occur with the repairs and there being no changes in health directives.

Additional details with regard to pool use will be discussed at the council's next meeting.

Council members approved a resolution regarding the risk exposure to COVID-19 through the use of municipal property for sports and recreation activities.

An agreement has been signed with the baseball and softball association, as well as Northeast Nebraska Crush, to limit the city's liability in regard to exposure to the disease. It will also require participants to sign a waiver before being allowed to participate.

First reading approval was given to an ordinance which would vacate a city-owned alley in Taylor & Wachob's Addition to the city. The request was made by Scot Saul, who plans to build a garage on his property. It was noted that the alley is shared by two property owners and a recommendation was made for the property owners to draw up paperwork for the easements necessary for the transaction to take place.

In other action, the council agreed to a change order for the 2019 Water Transmission Main Project. An increase of $12,398 will add a six inch service line to property owned by Todd Luedeke. Luedeke will reimburse the city for the entire cost of the line, which will eventually bring water to the Tuffrin Blue subdivision.

The Wayne City Council will next meet in regular session on Tuesday, June 16 at 5:30 p.m.

Commissioners plan to re-open courthouse

By Sarah Lentz
editor@wayneherald.com

The Wayne County Commissioners met via Zoom on June 2. Plans were set to re-open the Wayne County courthouse, the courthouse restoration project was discussed and the Board of Equalization also met.

The commissioners voted unanimously to re-open the county courthouse for business as usual on Monday, June 8. The decision came after discussion and after input from county treasurer Tammy Paustian. Paustian's office is a very busy one and she asked the commissioners about social distancing and how to control that. There was some debate about whether it was better to open the day after the commissioners meeting or if it would be better to start fresh next week.

"Sooner or later we have to open the courthouse, the longer we wait the more backlogged it's going to get," Dist. 2 commissioner Dean Burbach said.

Once the courthouse re-opens, the public is asked to maintain social distancing and masks are encouraged but not required.

Also discussed was the potential for the county to participate in the Nebraska COVID-19 Local Government Responses Assistance Program. The program's goal is to help reimburse expenses for local governments. While it can't reimburse lost revenue, it can help offset expenses for things like PPE, sanitation products and similar unexpected expenses related to the COVID-19 pandemic.

From one disaster to another, the commissioners got an update from FEMA about expenses from the March 2019 flooding. Sandra Hansen attended the meeting and told the commissioners that FEMA accepted some of the county's documentation from the flood, but were not necessarily happy with it. She said FEMA would like the county to come up with some sort of policy to continually document and inspect all county roads and keep a record of any and all work done to each mile.

Doug Elting, with Berggren Architects told the commissioners that workers on the courthouse restoration project ran into yet another issue, this time involving the slate tiles on the courthouse's turrets. Elting said about 30 percent of the tiles showed some form of damage on each turret. Some were in need of replacement and repair, but he told the commissioners eventually, they'll want to fix all of the slate. The commissioners agreed for now, to spend roughly $51,932 to fix what needs to be repaired and revisit the issue at a later time. The commissioners also decided to add snow guards to the roof and approved the purchase of a new door opener for $2,844.

The Wayne County Board of Equalization also met and set a tentative date for valuation protest hearings for late July. They also approved a motor vehicle tax exemption for Mosaic and approved listing of real property that was over or under valued on the March 15 assessment roll and approved the county assessor's three year plan.

The next Wayne County Commissioners meeting will be held on Tuesday, June 16 at 9 a.m. in the district courtroom.

Wayne Farmers Market will begin its 2020 season on Wednesday, June 10.

Farmers Market to begin new season

The Wayne Farmers Market will begin the 2020 season on Wednesday, June 10.

Hours this year will be from 4 to 6 p.m. on Wednesdays and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

Vendors will be located on the west side of the Wayne County Courthouse and will be following all Directed Health Measures (DHM) and Nebraska Department of Agriculture guidelines.

These include:
• Producers and their staff will be allowed to handle products. Customers should shop with their eyes and wait to touch their produce or products until after they have purchased them.
• Shoppers are asked to maintain a healthy physical distance of at least six feet between each other.
• The sampling of products at markets, or selling of drinks (like cider, coffee, etc.) by the cup will not be allowed.

• Stand spaces will have at least 10 feet of distance between the tents, more where possible, to reduce congestion.

Home canned products such as green beans, tomatoes, and fruits; raw milk; meats from non-inspected sources; and soft or cream pies can not be sold.

At this time, those purchasing items at the Farmers Market are asked not to use re-usable bags for purchases.

Permits for vendors interested in selling products at the Farmers' Market can be purchased at the Wayne Area Economic Development Office at 108 West Third Street during regular business hours or by calling (402) 375-2240. The fee is $10 per day or $50 for the entire season.

Brookdale Wayne becomes Kinship Pointe

After a change in facility management, Brookdale Wayne became Kinship Pointe effective June 1.

According to a press release from Kinship Pointe, Foster Senior Living, a Springfield, Mo.-based senior living operator and management company acquired four senior living communities in Nebraska, including Wayne's.

"Foster Senior Living will assume the new management role for senior living communities in Kearney, McCook, Seward, and Wayne Nebraska. Each of the four communities offer the convenience of independent living and assisted living while providing a wide array of services and amenities that encourage their residents to be as independent as desired while offering the care and oversight often needed. They are excited to announce the new community names—Kinship Pointe. You can find more information on their website – KinshipPointe.com," the release said.

Foster Senior Living is a family-owned and operated organization with a hands-on approach with every aspect of their communities. John and Susan Foster's philosophy of a family-centered approach with staff and residents have gained them the reputation that has allowed them to flourish in senior living management for over 50 years.

"It has been our passion, our dedication and our determination to treasure the elders in our lives that has guided us to where we stand today. What started out as a vision, over the years, has turned into much more than we could have ever imagined. While we have developed home-like communities, trained the quality leadership, and proactively nurtured our developed and managed communities, we foster nothing short of premium care. This is what we will provide, our family taking care of your family," Susan said.

Wayne Chicken Show postponed until September

The call has been made and the chickens will be coming home to roost a little later than usual. According to a press release from Wayne Area Economic Development (WAED), the 40th annual Wayne Chicken Show has been rescheduled for Saturday, Sept. 12, due to concerns over COVID-19. After consultation with the Northeast Nebraska Public Health Department (NNPHD), WAED staff determined that the health and safety of visitors, vendors, volunteers, participants and the Wayne community must come first, according to a press release from WAED. Additionally, WAED staff cited current social distancing rules, and how the uncertainty of future restrictions, could limit Chicken Show patrons from fully experiencing and enjoying the event if it was held in July.

Along with the rescheduled date, the 40th annual Wayne Chicken Show will be condensed to a one-day event, which will combine many of the signature Wayne Chicken Show activities into one celebration. Similar to past Chicken Shows, area groups and organizations will have an opportunity to integrate their events or activities into the single-day schedule.

WAED said in their release that the 2020 Wayne Chicken Show marks an important milestone and features the theme "40 Years of 'Egg'-celence."

Even though the festivities are pushed back to September, cement chickens are still available at the WAED office to decorate.

"We are giving people free range with the theme. This year is 40 Years of Egg-celence, so you can do a throwback to a previous year's theme, they can do something that's been popular and pop culture in the last 40 years or they can do a completely different design if they want," Abby Schademann, WAED marketing, events and tourism coordinator said.

The office is asking that those who decorate chickens to be auctioned off still bring them back to the office by the end of June so that the works of art can be sanitized to help prevent the spread of possible COVID-19.

"We are going to let them sit for probably about a week before anybody handles, or touches them," Shademann said.

To pick up a chicken to be auctioned off, artists need to stop by the office, fill out paper work and take their chicken. Shademann said if anyone is interested, time is of the essence.

"We do still have a few available to be picked up. They are going fast though so if you do really want to do one, be sure to contact the office to pick one up," she said.

The Wayne Chicken Show was founded by the Wayne Regional Arts Council and was first held in 1981. The theme of "chickens" was chosen because of the potential for art materials, that most people have knowledge and familiarity with chickens; and that chickens can be considered with humor.

To receive the latest updates, please follow The Wayne Chicken Show on Facebook. For more information, visit chickenshow.com or contact the WAED Office at (402) 375-2240.

Do pneumonia vaccines protect from coronavirus?

Submitted by Kim Bearnes, Extension Educator

Do vaccines that are currently offered to protect against pneumonia provide seniors any protection against the novel coronavirus disease? I have always been bad about getting vaccinated, but this coronavirus pandemic is causing me to change my thinking.

This is a great question. Because the coronavirus (COVID-19) attacks the lungs and respiratory system, many readers have asked whether the pneumonia vaccines, administered to millions of patients each year, might protect an individual if they contract the coronavirus. Unfortunately, the answer is no.

Vaccines for pneumonia, such as pneumococcal vaccine and Haemophilus influenza type B vaccine, do not provide protection against the novel coronavirus.

Because this virus is so new and different, it needs its own vaccine. Researchers are in the process of rapidly developing a vaccine against COVID-19, but it is expected to take at least a year before it is ready.

However, you should know that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends that all seniors get up to date on their vaccinations when the coronavirus pandemic dies down. Here is a summary of these vaccines, when you should get them and how they are covered by Medicare.

Looking Ahead in Wayne

By Wes Blecke, City Administrator

City Council meetings
Regular Wayne City Council meetings are at 5:30 p.m. on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

They typically are held in City Hall at Third and Pearl Streets, but with the recent COVID-19 issue, meetings are being held at the Fire Hall with the public able to participate via Zoom. We always have room in our Zoom meetings for more people to engage with their local government.

Phase II Trail Update - "The Underpass"

The Phase II Trail project is well under way with trails being installed along Grainland Road and a segment completed starting at the Community Activity Center and moving to Ashley Park. The CAC to Park segment was paved first to accommodate work being done on Highway 35/Seventh Street where the underpass will go.

Since the sidewalk along the south side of the highway by the CAC will be blocked to the public, this CAC-Park segment will be the alternative route to get from the east to the west and vice-versa on foot or on a bike. The short segment of highway being widened in this area is to keep 2-way traffic moving throughout the construction phase. Work will start in the next week on the underpass, so please reduce your speed going through this area and be aware of construction workers in the area.

City Update on COVID-19 issues
The Mayor and Council again discussed a variety of city services impacted by the current pandemic at its last meeting.

City Hall was reopened on June 1 with a six foot distancing rule. It was noted that City buildings for rent with the exception of the CAC would start reopening to the public. The library is taking direction from the Nebraska Library Association as to how and when they will start to reopen. The Senior Center will likely be the last City building to open.

There was again extended discussion on the status of opening the swimming pool. Council and staff discussed some of the possible logistics with opening the pool. There is still some caulking needing to be finished as well as some work on the water heaters. While no date is set in stone, we did discuss about the soonest we could open would be June 27. The City will get more information out as soon as a decision has been made.

Next Council meeting; retreat scheduled for June 30

The Council will next meet on Tuesday, June 16 in regular session at the Fire Hall. As with the last meeting, only the Mayor, the Council members, limited staff, and the media will be allowed to meet in person. The rest of City staff and the general public will have access to the meeting via Zoom. Also, in June, the Council will hold a mini retreat on Tuesday, June 30 at the Wayne Fire Hall. At this point we still plan to have Council present with the public able to participate via Zoom.

This will be the only Mass offered on Sunday. Social distancing regulations apply and those attending are encouraged to wear masks.

Pet registration

WAYNE — Due to current events and limited public access to City Hall during the past months, the city of Wayne has suspended annual pet registration renewals usually required in the month of May.

All pet registrations will now be due during the month of July 2020 and will be considered delinquent on or after Aug. 1, 2020. This should allow additional time for pet owners to obtain updated rabies vaccinations (if needed this year) which are required to license a pet.

Boredom leads to plan to visit Nebraska towns

By Clara Osten
clara@wayneherald.com

After a short period of playing video games and doing nothing, UNO sophomores Austin Schneider and Seth Varner decided to do something different with their time after being quarantined and away from school and their friends this spring. The two Wahoo natives have set out on a mission to visit every one of Nebraska's 531 incorporated towns and villages. As of this past weekend, the pair have made 209 stops and are approximately 40 percent of the way to their goal. A number of those towns were in the Wayne area, including Wayne, Concord, Dixon, Carroll, and, the smallest town they have visited to date - Sholes.

"When I was about 10 years old, my dad and I did this, only on a smaller scale. I have pictures from the places we visited and Austin and I decided we could do the same thing with every town in Nebraska," Seth said.

The pair started their tour of Nebraska on April 22 and generally Seth picks an area in a radius of Wahoo for that day's travels.

"When we get to western Nebraska, we will not be able to come home each night and there will be a lot more driving between towns," Austin said.

They said that in addition to visiting each of the Nebraska towns, they have learned of the history of each town and of Nebraska.

Often the pair take friends with them on their trips. One constant on each day's journey is an Energizer bunny. Pictures are taken at each location to document their travels.

In light of the COVID-19 pandemic, precautions are taken during the trips. These include wearing masks when around other people, taking along a half gallon of hand sanitizer and for the most part, avoiding going into buildings.

"We take pictures out of the car window and go through the drive-thru to get food," Seth said. "The only times we need to get out of the car is to get food and to go to the bathroom."

They said that several times during their travels communities have treated them to free food, which is greatly appreciated by the two college students.

The two said they generally travel on Wednesdays and on weekends.

"We haven't had any problems yet, and as of right now, we are going strong," Austin said.

The goal is to have visited each of the Nebraska towns by the end of summer and before returning to school this fall.

Keep up with the duo's travels via their Facebook page, Visit531Nebraska.

Pat Gross formally stepped down from State Nebraska Bank & Trust's board last month as Director Emeritus, officially ending 56 years with the bank. He started in 1964, retired as a Senior Vice President and Loan Officer in 2004, and served on the board of directors for nearly 20 years. During his time with SNB, he also served as Compliance Officer and Head of Human Resources.

Gross has been engaged throughout the Wayne community, previously serving as Secretary of the Providence Hospital Foundation, Treasurer of the Wayne Association of Congregations and Ministers, Chairman of the Northeast Nebraska Community Action Partnership, Treasurer of the Wayne Library Foundation, and Co-Chair of the Wayne Housing Authority Board. Gross graduated from Wayne State College and served four years in the United States Marine Corps. He and his wife have five children and five grandchildren. In his spare time, Gross enjoys visiting with the sick and elderly, participating in various church activities, following athletic events, reading, and watching old movies.

To celebrate his many years of service and contributions to the bank and the community, State Nebraska Bank & Trust is planting a tree at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Gross's name.

James Simpson

American Legion Eagle-Scout-of-the-Year. At the national level, James placed as one of three runner-ups and earned a $2,500 scholarship.

James is the son of Jeffrey and Colleen Simpson.

Simpson is a senior at Breeze Hill Academy – Home School and a member of Troop 174 where he achieved his Eagle Scout in September of 2017. He is a member of the Wayne County Sharpshooters 4-H Club, and he placed seventh overall at the American Legion Junior Shooting Sports competition in the Sporter category.

Simpson is also a member of the Winside Sons of the American Legion.

Simpson has been in the Scouting program since first grade and has held many Scouting positions. Currently he is serving as an Assistant Scout Master for Troop 174.

Simpson will attend Hillsdale College in the fall, and he plans to study American History and Government with the hopes of becoming a constitutional lawyer.

"I would like to thank American Legion Post 252 in Winside, Nebraska for their support in this process. I would also like to thank the City of Wayne and the Wayne City Council for their support with my Eagle Scout project," Simpson said.

Since its inception in 1919, the American Legion has been a key advocate for veterans' benefits, patriotic American values, instilling values in young people through numerous programs, and a strong nation defense with focus on quality-of-life issues for those serving in today's armed forces.

Medic shares thoughts on deployment through pandemic

By Clara Osten
 clara@wayneherald.com

Megan McGahan has been an aerospace medic with the Nebraska Air National Guard for seven years. She has deployed two other times before, but "I never would have guessed that I would be activated to serve the state of Nebraska to combat an unseen enemy."

McGahan, a 2013 graduate of Piux X High School in Lincoln, earned an undergraduate degree from Wayne State College in 2018.

She is currently a graduate assistant at WSC, working toward a master's degree in school counseling. Her plans are to graduate from WSC in 2021.

Toward the end of March, McGahan was told by military leadership that she was on standby for a COVID-19 related mission, meaning that she would likely be activated to help soon, but when and where exactly were still very much unknown.

"At the time, I will admit, I was terrified and stressed. How was I going to finish out my semester of graduate school? How was I going to do any wedding planning?" she said. She is planning to be married June 27 in Wayne.

Crises never happen at an opportune time, but to McGahan, this seemed like the worst possible timing. After getting "a good crying session in," she decided it was time to get to work. She scrambled to complete the remaining 11 credits worth of coursework she had at Wayne State College. Her plan was to focus on school and then tackle how to handle her upcoming June wedding.

"(I) knocked out assignment by assignment and then before I knew it, only final projects were left."

She kept chugging along with the mindset that she could be activated the very next day.

"On April 4, I realized I had only one project left. I was incredibly tempted to reward myself with a relaxing Sunday, but I kept at it. Thank goodness I did, because on April 6, around 10 a.m., I received the call that I had to report to base in Lincoln within two hours."

"TWO HOURS. Oh boy, the drive to Lincoln (from Wayne) itself takes that long. I had to contact leadership that I would need just a little bit more time to throw my stuff in a bag and get on the road. After running around like a chicken with its head cut off, I did just that. I arrived to the location with fellow activated Nebraska Air Force and Army Guardsmen," McGahan said.

Looking back, she said it is hard to believe that half these people were strangers. They have now been together almost 24/7 for close to two months.

When the soldiers arrived at the location, they were briefed on what their mission was going to look like, where they were going, and when.

"There was still one question that loomed over all of us. How long will we be doing this?" McGahan said.

Members of the group assumed at the time that they would be deployed around two weeks.

The team McGahan was with was deemed Team 2 - The Strike Team. It was comprised of 12 Air Force medical personnel and 12 soldiers with various job backgrounds, such as logistics, transportation and decontamination. McGahan is a trained medic and was able to perform the actual swabbing of those being tested.

The first day of the operation took place in the parking lot of Fonner Park in Grand Island. The group set up tents and equipment while discussing the exact flow of it all and the roles everyone would play.

"We started slow that day but we quickly got into a groove. As days turned into weeks, we began to realize that this mission was going to last longer than we expected. Although this uncertainty remained, morale remained high. The team I am a part of works like a well-oiled machine and we are always struck by the generosity of Nebraskans. Everywhere we have gone, we are thanked," she said.

The team have tested Nebraskans in Grand Island, Lexington, Aurora, Cozad, Gibbon, Norfolk, West Point, Ord, Dakota City, and Hastings. They have tested first responders, nursing home residents and workers, and the general public.

"The most humbling and difficult follow up missions we have had included the nursing home residents. A lot of the residents had dementia, so it was tough to explain to them what we were doing and why. My heart goes out to them. We have a lot of pride in our state and it is an honor to help out our fellow Nebraskans. This is what I signed up to do — serve," McGahan said.

She said that not only was she thankful for the opportunity to serve, but she was also grateful that she was not quarantined at home.

"I knew I would be going stir crazy if that was the case and as an extrovert, I was happy to be getting patient interaction everyday," she said.

However, toward the end of April, the thought of what the health regulations for June would be like began weighing on her. She began to lose sleep worrying about what to do about the wedding.

"I talked to my fiance and together we made a difficult decision. We would still be getting married on June 27, with only immediate family in attendance, and next year we will be having the whole wedding/reception celebration that we originally wanted. It felt like a weight lifted off my shoulders to finally have a plan. Our wedding will not be what I had always envisioned, but it will still be perfect. I still get to marry the man of my dreams, twice! God has a plan for us," McGahan said.

She said that as her mission comes to an end, she cannot help but look back on the experiences she has had and feel extremely humbled.

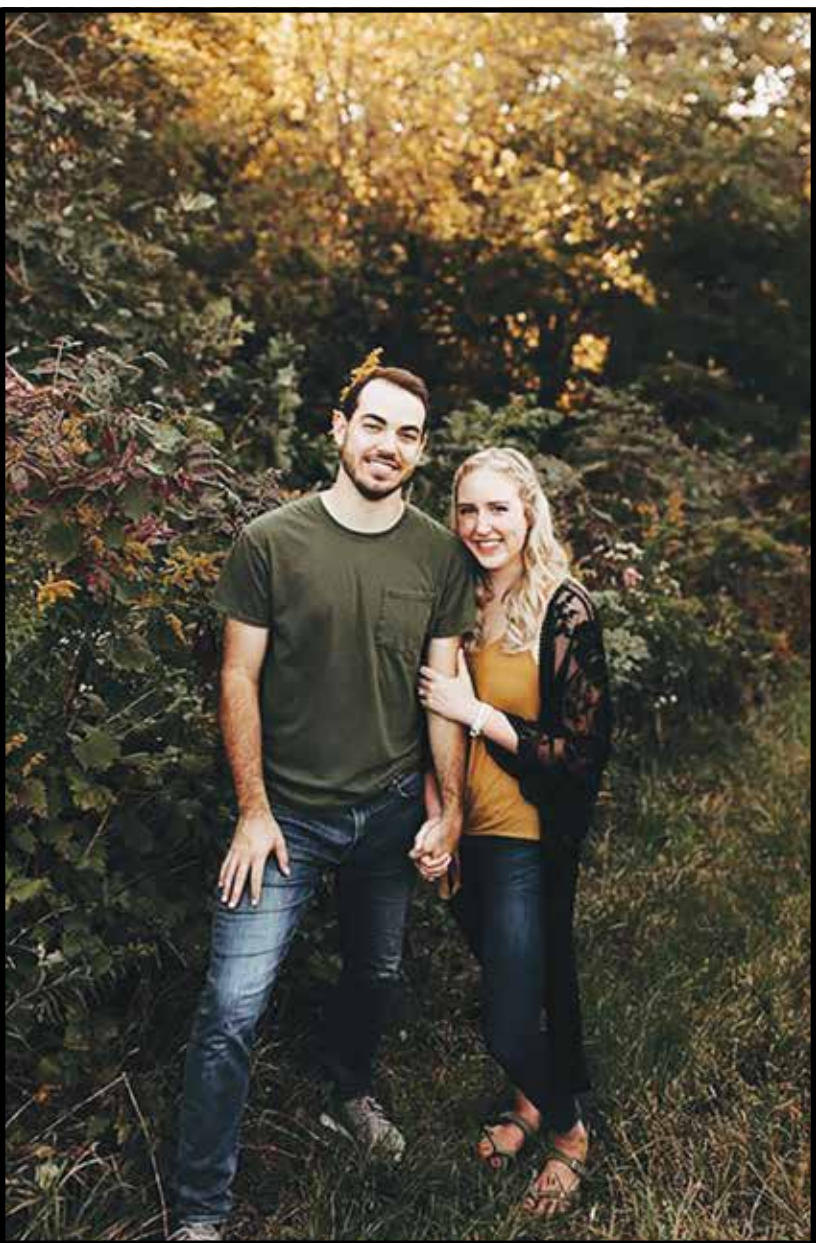

"I could not have done this mission without support from my fiance and parents. My mom has been a huge help with contacting all the wedding vendors we had and rescheduling them for next year. I cannot thank my support system enough," she said.

"I am thankful for the professors at the college who worked with me this semester to accommodate my deployment. Wayne State College's values aligned nicely with the Air Force's core value of 'Excellence in all you do,'" she said.

McGahan was recently informed that she will be able to have the month of June off from active service and will again be activated in July for additional testing duties.

"Although this spring semester did not go as planned, I am grateful it did not. I have learned so much, gained new friendships with coworkers, visited parts of Nebraska I'd never seen before, and most importantly, made a difference."

McGahan and her fiance Evan Rose will be tying the knot on June 27 with immediate family present.

Fourteen thoughts on building a great culture Caption This!

This spring has been an interesting one for all of us to say the least. We have dealt with a lot in the last few years, tornadoes, flooding, and now this health pandemic. We are all looking to build a strong base back in our community, keeping our businesses solid, work with new rules and regulations, and staying strong.

I found this information and thought it would be a good reminder as we head back into our workplaces, work within our organizations and clubs, and try to "restart" in this new normal. We have the opportunity to reform, rebuild, and revitalize our workplace and our personal organizations, even in our families as we move forward with new determination to get our lives and businesses back on line. I hope you stay well, and stay connected.

This information comes from a new book, "The Garden."

1. Great leaders build and drive great cultures. They know it's their number one priority. They can't delegate it. They must lead and be engaged in the process.

2. Culture is the reason why great organizations have sustained success. Culture drives expectations and beliefs. Expectations and beliefs drive behavior. Behavior drives habits. Habits create the future.

3. Culture beats strategy. Strategy is important but it is your culture that will determine whether your strategy is successful.

4. If you focus on the fruit of the tree (outcomes and numbers) and ignore the root (culture) your tree will die. But if you focus on and nourish the root you always have a great supply of fruit.

5. When building a team and organization you must shape your culture before it shapes you. A culture is forming whether you like it or not. The key is to identify what you want your culture and organization to stand for. Once you know the values and principles that you stand for, every decision is easy to make; including the people you recruit and hire.

6. A culture of greatness doesn't happen by accident. It happens when a leader expects greatness and each person in the organization builds it, lives it, values it, reinforces it and fights for it.

7. Culture is dynamic, not stat-

Stanton County

Kim Bearnes
Extension Educator

UNL Extension

ic. Everyone in your organization creates your culture by what they think, say and do each day. Culture is lead from the top down but it comes to life from the bottom up.

8. Your culture is not just your tradition. It is the people in your building who carry it on. —Brad Stevens, Head Coach, Boston Celtics

9. When leading a new team or organization, it will take longer to build a new culture if you allow negative people from the previous culture to contaminate the process.

10. When you build a strong, positive culture, most of the energy vampires will leave by themselves because they don't fit in. But you may also have to let a few energy vampires off the bus.

11. Creating a culture where people are afraid to fail leads to failure. Allowing people to fail and learn from failure ultimately leads to success.

12. Change is a part of every culture and organization. Embracing change and innovating will ensure that your organization thrives.

13. Progress is important but when innovating and driving change make sure you honor your tradition, purpose and culture. This generates power from your past to create your future.

14. Culture is like a tree. It takes years to cultivate and grow and yet it can be chopped down in a minute. Protect your culture.

There's no law against doing good

By Clint Decker
Hope for Today

In January this year the world watched as China became the epicenter for Covid-19. It began spreading country to country eventually reaching the United States impacting tens of thousands of lives. In an effort to love our neighbor and help fellow citizens fight against this unseen disease, we prayed and followed Presidential guidelines along with various Governor, County and Mayoral orders. As time has passed God has heard our prayers and a difference has been made with the stabilizing of the virus and in some areas a decreasing affect.

At the same time, as these orders have gone from days, to weeks, to months, to unknown periods it has created growing unrest. Consequently, many officials across America have responded to the improved Covid-19 numbers along with the voices of people and began opening back up. Even so, restrictions remain which are still causing

Former Wayne pastor announces retirement

The Rev. Kim A. Stover and All Saints Lutheran Church in Lilburn, Ga. have announced the retirement of Pastor Stover effective June 1. Pastor Stover served Our Savior Lutheran Church in Wayne from 2006 to 2010. He also served on several committees of the Nebraska Synod, was trained in Stephen Ministries and Stewardship Programs. Pastor Stover is a graduate of Ravenna High School in Ravenna, Neb. and Concordia University, Seward. He and Susan Warrick of Ravenna, were married, May 27, 1972, and following college graduations, moved to Stamford, Conn. where Kim served as Director of Christian Development for St. Paul Lutheran Church (LC-MS). Prior to being ordained as a minister, Kim taught first grade, remedial reading and math. The family moved to Kearney Stover sold farm shop supplies and then photocopiers in central Nebraska. For nine years, he was employed by Ross Laboratories, a subsidiary of Abbott Labs, Chicago. In 1990, the Stovers and their three children, Jeremy, Joshua, and Andrea, moved to Columbus, Ohio, where Kim entered Trinity Lutheran Seminary to train for ministry in the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. His Ministry in Context training was that of serving as Chaplain at Orient Correctional Facility, Columbus. His Clinical Pastoral Education was at Children's Hospital, Pediatric Care Unity, Columbus. His Internship year was hardship in various forms. How shall we live in the midst of this? Does God have anything to say?

The New Testament was written to followers of Christ under attack because their beliefs and practices which violated different Jewish, Roman or local laws.

Yet, in the face of this, Peter, a leader in the early church, wrote to his fellow believers, "Be subject for the Lord's sake to every human institution, whether it be to the emperor as supreme, or to governors as sent by him . . . For this is the will of God" (1 Peter 2:13-15). Peter went on to say, "But if when you do good and suffer for it you endure, this is a gracious thing in the sight of God" (vs. 20).

Peter is saying that followers of Christ are to be model citizens and comply with varying government laws, ordinances, orders and so forth. He also speaks of fellow believers and encourages continuous efforts at doing good to others, which is in accordance with the Great Commandment. He recognizes that sometimes the two conflict, where doing good for God and others may violate government laws.

What is "doing good"? It can be preaching the gospel to others like I do. It can also be providing needed goods or services to others. And perhaps this can be done within the framework of Covid-19 restrictions, but perhaps you are in a situation where it cannot be done, and doing so would mean violating local orders.

What does Peter tell us to do? In either case, he tells us to do good. 1) Do good by faith, while fully entrusting the outcome to the Lord (God. 2) Let no sin of anger, bitterness, threatening, evil speaking or deceit be found on your lips. 3) Be willing to fully accept any and all consequences that may come your way. In these ways, we will follow Jesus' example as He suffered unjustly on His way to the cross.

The situation with Covid-19 is different depending on where you live. You need to consider your customers or people you minister to, your employees or volunteers, the order from officials and the facts as best you can determine about the virus in your location. Then after all that you have a decision to make.

Be prayerful. Walk wisely. Study the Scriptures for yourself. Remember, in the eyes of God there is no law against love and no law against doing good.

A prayer for you - "Lord God, I pray for churches, small businesses and non-profits as they grapple with how to proceed in this new reality. Give them wisdom and discernment in making decisions for the future or their organization. Let them not be governed by fear of consequences, but by doing good for those whom they serve. In Jesus' name. Amen."

Through it all, we need to have hope

I'll be honest. I'm having trouble coming up with the right words this week. It seems like every day something new fills my newsfeed with tragedy, pain, hurting people, and struggles.

In the last week alone, I visited with pastors across the Midwest trying to figure out how to lead effectively and make wise decisions that balance a concern for people's health, and a desire to worship together in person again, knowing that whatever they do there will be people angry.

I chatted with a friend who is hurting, angry and afraid because of the continued racial injustice he not only sees, but experiences in his everyday life as an African American.

I saw the post of a dear friend who vulnerably shared stories of her African American daughter who still in this day gets called the "N" word and wondering why she has to experience these kind of things in this day and age.

I chatted with another friend who is a police officer who honorably does his job every day, and who fears for his life because of the uniform that he wears, and is hurting that the job he loves and the oath he took to protect and serve would be marred by some who perpetrate racism and prejudices that he and his fellow officers oppose and fight against.

My newsfeed on the same day showed a friend who is losing their business because of COVID shut down, and another friend who lost her dad who died from COVID.

Then there is the friend who has a young four-year old son battling cancer with treatments, and ports, and visits to the hospital.

Then I see posts on Facebook and Twitter that are so hateful and mean that they defy logic, especially when they are from those who claim to follow Jesus.

To be honest, I'm at a loss for words. My heart has often fallen upon the frequent words in the Psalms, "How long, O Lord...how long?"

And yet, I have hope. Hope from my friend who chooses not to respond in anger to the racism he experiences, but responds with educating people, and with choosing to show grace, and to turn to Jesus in his fear.

Hope from a mother who trusts in God to heal and who loves her family the way Jesus loves her.

Hope from my friend who even in the midst of fear and ridicule by many, chooses to go out every day to serve and protect people like you and me, and he does it because he believes that's what God has called him to do.

Hope, that springs from the hopeful words of a mother who is leaning into Jesus to heal her son from cancer and gives God the glory for his continued health as the cancer is treated.

Hope from the business owner who lost everything except their faith that God has a plan even in this.

Hope from the friend who mourns the loss of a father but rejoices in the reunion he is having with Jesus his Savior.

Hope that so many during these times are choosing to listen, choosing to encourage, choosing to love.

Hope, that my Savior Jesus is not long in his appearing, but that He is simply patient, not wanting anyone to perish, but all to come to repentance.

Hope that there will be a day when Jesus returns and sets everything right again.

Hope in the day when there will be no more death, no more sin, no more hate, no more cancer, no more fear, and no more tears.

Hope. It's the only word I have for you and me this week. Praise God that hope is the word we need.

Hebrews 10:23 "Let us hold unwaveringly to the hope we profess, for He who promised is faithful."

The Prairie Doc

The secrets of circulation

The medical history books reveal secrets of circulation and blood pressure that rival the best novels of intrigue. Years ago, before people had figured out how blood circulates, second century Greek scientist Galen, had the idea that blood moved from the right side of the heart to the left through unseen pores. That idea was not questioned for more than 1,000 years until a series of people in the mid-1500s finally broke with the old idea.

After great debate among leading thinkers of the time, English scientist and physician, William Harvey, and several anatomists and scientists finally convinced local medical leaders, and later those of the world, that blood pulses through the body on a great circular journey. It was fear of change that made this discovery so difficult.

Harvey, and other scientists,

The Prairie Doc
By Dr. Rick Holm, MD

proved that venous blood is almost "sucked in" as it returns from the outer reaches of the body through gradually larger veins and eventually flows into the right ventricle of the heart. From the right ventricle (right lower part of the heart), blood is pumped into the lungs where hemoglobin gathers oxygen and releases carbon. From the lungs, oxygen rich blood flows to the left atrium (left upper part of the heart), to the left ventricle and is pumped out into arteries to feed almost all the cells of the body with oxygen.

From each tiny cell the blood picks up carbon waste, and the blood is drawn back to the right heart and lungs once again.

Continuous circulation happens because the heart pump squeezes and relaxes, repeating the process some 80 times a minute from birth to death.

In my mind, the marvelous truth about the circle of blood flow is pure evidence of the beauty of both evolution and intelligent design. Circulation, like the rhythm of life, is a regular and recurring pulsing; a succession of surges over time like the flow of seawater and fish meeting the shore on an estuarial tide, the birth of lambs and calves, bursting forth on an early springtime prairie pasture or even the seventy to ninety-year life-cycle of humans, moving with joy, sorrow and grace from birth to natural death.

This essay, written by the late Richard P. Holm, MD, is an excerpt from his book "Life's Final Season, A Guide for Aging and Dying with Grace" available on Amazon. Dr. Holm was founder of The Prairie Doc and his legacy lives on through his Prairie Doc organization. For free and easy access to the entire Prairie Doc library, visit prairiedoc.org and follow Prairie Doc on Facebook, featuring On Call with the Prairie Doc a medical Q&A show streaming on Facebook most Thursdays at 7 p.m. Central.

LENRD board supports funding to restore, establish tree windbreaks

At their May board meeting, the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) Board of Directors signed a letter of support to apply for grant funding to restore and establish tree windbreaks across the district.

The Nebraska Forest Service is applying for the Regional Conservation Partnership Program (RCPP) grant with the USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service and has requested the LENRD's support. If this RCPP proposal is selected for funding, the LENRD would provide $300,000 through the Nebraska Forest Restoration Partnership over the next five years as a match for the grant. This match would be a reduction in the current tree cost-share budget. In return, additional funds and technical assistance would be made available to the LENRD.

"This grant would allow further opportunities to expand our current programs and develop more windbreaks across northeast Nebraska. I'm excited for the opportunity to work with area landowners to accomplish this," LENRD Natural Resources Technician Todd Stewart said.

In other action, the board approved a contract with HDR to create a Board of Consultants to perform a peer review of the Willow Creek Dam Underseepage Study. Through this process, experts in the field will review the study to determine which action to take to further secure the dam, located southwest of Pierce. The two options proposed include a relief well system or a seepage berm as potential mitigation measures for the elevated piezometric pressures on the dam.

The board also voted to sign a contract with the Nebraska Department of Natural Resources to reimburse 50 percent of the LENRD's costs paid to HDR for the review.

The board is also looking to gather more information and potential ways to reduce the toxic algae and improve water quality in the lake at the Willow Creek State Recreation Area. The board voted to sign a contract with FYRA Engineering to study the internal phosphorus loading within the Willow Creek reservoir.

"This is a multi-phase approach to determine what could potentially be done to combat the issue," LENRD General Manager Mike Souse, said.

The board voted 9-5 to begin with the first step in the process which involves the collection and analysis of core soil samples.

The board also approved an interlocal agreement for up to $1.7 million with the City of West Point for their levee project. The agreement was set to expire in June and needed to be updated. Work on the project will begin in 2021. This project will protect the City of West Point from flood waters and bring the levee into compliance with Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) standards.

In other business, the board voted to apply for a technical assistance grant through the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD). The LENRD would provide $15,580 for one year to support hiring a full-time employee stationed in the Pierce NRCS office. This individual would be working on nutrient management plans and irrigation water management in Pierce County.

The next LENRD board meeting will be Thursday, June 25 at 7:30 p.m. Watch for further updates and stay connected with the LENRD by subscribing to their monthly emails at leन्द्र.org.

The importance of controlling flies on pastured cattle

By Dave Boxler,
Nebraska Extension Educator

As cattle producers plan for the grazing season, a very important consideration should be what type of flies will impact their pastured cattle, and what method of fly control will work best for their management system.

As livestock producers prepare for another grazing season, thoughts are often directed towards grass conditions, animal conditioning, and fence repair. An additional very important consideration should include what type of flies will impact their pastured cattle, and what method of fly control will work best for their management system. Livestock fly control should be viewed as having a positive economic impact on livestock operations. In Nebraska and elsewhere, there are three fly species that economically impact pastured cattle; horn fly, face fly and stable fly.

Horn Fly

The horn fly is a small blood feeding fly found on the shoulders, back and belly region of cattle. They take some 24 to 38 blood meals per day. Females deposit eggs in fresh cow manure where the complete life cycle, egg to adult, can be completed in 10 to 20 days during warm conditions. In Nebraska, there are multiple generations during the fly season which can lead to extremely high fly numbers in late August and early September.

The horn fly is considered one of the most important blood feeding pests of pastured cattle in the United States. The annual economic losses caused by this fly has been estimated at $1 billion in the U.S. When horn fly numbers are high, cattle experience annoyance and blood loss. The effect may be decreased milk production, reduced weight gains, changes in grazing patterns and bunching of animals. Research studies have demonstrated calf weaning weights are negatively impacted from 4 to 15 percent, and stocker cattle and replacement heifers experience up to 18 percent impact in weight gains. In addition, horn flies can spread summer mastitis.

The economic injury level (EIL) for horn flies is 200 flies per animal. This level of infestation is often reached in late May or early June in Nebraska. Monitoring horn fly numbers on cattle is important in making appropriate management decisions. Cattle should be monitored weekly for horn flies throughout the fly season. These observations are best taken between the hours of 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. when flies are generally located on the shoulders, topline and sides of animals. Observations made later in the day are less accurate because horn flies will generally move to the belly area where it is cooler, making it more difficult to accurately assess population numbers.

Control

Insecticide control methods available to manage horn flies on cattle are many; backrubbers (oilers), dust bags, insecticide ear tags, pour-ons, oral larvicides (IGR's), low pressure sprayers, mist blower sprayers and the Vet-Gun™. Backrubbers (oilers) and dust bags can be an effective way to reduce horn fly numbers if cattle are forced to use them; if used in a free-choice arrangement expect between 35 – 50 percent less control. Insecticide ear tags are a convenient method of horn fly control if applied at the correct time frame.

In Nebraska, ear tags should be applied during the last week of May or the first week in June to achieve maximum control through the fly season. Ear tags applied too early may decline in efficacy while fly numbers are still high and result in economic loss. In addition, adult animals should receive two tags. Just tagging the calf and not the mother cow will not provide the desired level of horn fly control. Animal sprays, mist blower applications, and pour-on products will provide 7-21 days of control and will need to be re-applied through-out the fly season.

Oral larvicides (IGR's) prevent fly larvae in manure pats from developing into adults. An important factor when using an oral larvicide is ensuring steady consumption. An additional complicating issue when using an oral larvicide is horn fly migration from neighboring untreated herds which can mask the effectiveness of an oral larvicide (IGR). The Vet Gun™ applies an individual capsule of insecticide to an animal using a device similar to a paint ball gun and can provide horn fly control between 21 and 35 days.

Face Fly

The face fly is a robust fly that externally resembles the house fly. It is a nonbiting fly that feeds on animal secretions, nectar, and dung liquids. Adult female face flies usually cluster around the animals' eyes, mouth, and muzzle causing significant irritation. They also congregate around wounds caused by mechanical damage or other injury to feed on blood and other fluids. Since face flies are on the animals for only short time periods, they are difficult to control. Most of the time they are found in shaded areas resting on plants, fence posts and other objects.

In addition to being annoying to cattle, face flies mechanically vector Moraxella bovis, the principal causal agent of bovine pinkeye or infectious bovine keratoconjunctivitis. Pinkeye is a highly contagious inflammation of the cornea and conjunctiva of eyes. If coupled with the infectious rhinotracheitis (IBR) virus, M. bovis can cause a much more severe inflammatory condition. Reducing face fly numbers is a key to reducing pinkeye problems. Fly control methods should target the region of the face with daily exposures of the control product. Both cows and calves must be treated if control is to be realized. Commercial and autogenous pinkeye vaccines are available. Please check with your veterinarian about the use of these products in your area.

Control

The best method of reducing face fly numbers is using a treatment where animals come in contact with an insecticide on a daily basis such as a dust bag, oiler, spray or an insecticide impregnated ear tag. Ear tags should be applied at the label recommended rate. Both cows and calves must be treated if control is to be achieved.

Stable Fly

Stable flies are a significant pest of cattle on pastures in the Midwest. Stable flies are blood feeding flies, mainly feeding on the legs of cattle. To avoid being bitten, animals stomp their feet and switch their tails. Other avoidance behaviors include standing in water, lying with legs tucked underneath, and bunching at the corners of pastures.

The stable fly is about the size of a house fly but is dark gray and has dark irregular spots on its abdomen. The proboscis (mouthpart) protrudes bayonet-like in front of the head. Stable flies develop in spoiled or fermenting organic matter mixed with animal manure, moisture, and dirt.

The most common developing sites are in feedlots or dairy lots, usually around feed bunks, along the edges of feeding aprons, under fences and along stacks of hay, alfalfa, and straw. Grass clippings and poorly managed compost piles also may be stable fly breeding areas. Winter hay feeding sites where hay rings are used can often be a source for stable fly development through the summer if the proper amount of moisture is present. Stable flies found on many Nebraska pastured cattle likely migrated from distant developing sites. Research has shown stable flies can move at least 10 miles or more.

The effect of stable flies on weight gain performance of pastured cattle is similar to that of livestock in confined operations. Research conducted at the University of Nebraska, West Central Research & Extension Center recorded a reduction in average daily gain of 0.44 lb. per head per day in 84-day trials with animals that did not receive an insecticide treatment compared to cattle that received an insecticide application. The economic threshold of five flies per leg is easily exceeded in Nebraska pasture conditions.

Control

The best adult management option available for reducing stable flies on range cattle is animal sprays. Sprays can be applied using a low-pressure sprayer or a mist blower sprayer. Weekly applications of control products will be required to achieve a reduction in fly numbers. Sanitation or clean-up of wasted feed at winter feeding sites may reduce localized fly development. If sanitation is not possible, these sites may be treated with a larvicide (Neporex®), but the application of either procedure may not totally reduce the economic impact of stable fly feeding.

Insecticides have been placed into numbered Insecticide Mode of Action groups (MOA) based on how they work against insects. Continuous use of products from a single group against a pest species can lead to reduced control (resistance to all products in the group). To reduce control failures due to insecticide resistance, do not apply insecticides within the same group number repeatedly. Rotate between (MOA) groups during the fly season.

Making Potassium Fertilizer Recommendations

Today we wrap up the Agronomy Focus series on Building a Fertility Plan for N, S, P, & K. Today, we want to focus on potassium. Like phosphorus, potassium is a nutrient we build a long term plan around. We focus on the soil test levels and use crop removal replacement to keep soil test levels in a good range. Usually, that range will be around 200 ppm K in the soil test. Sandier soils sometimes are a little under that number, and heavier soils are often over it, and we will usually make some adjustments based on soil texture. When we think about crop removal, a good rule of thumb is 200 bu corn is going to remove about 60 lbs of K<sub>2</sub>O while 60 bu soybeans will remove around 85 lbs of K<sub>2</sub>O.

By Tim Mundorf
CVA Nutrient
Management Lead,
Guest Writer

Potassium throws a little bit of a curve at us compared to phosphorus. If we look back at those crop uptake curves for the different nutrients, we see that the potassium uptake curve looks very similar to the one for nitrogen. It is much steeper than the uptake curve for phosphorus. We almost never talk about in-season application of phosphorus, but more and more about in-season of potassium. When I think about in-season application in corn, my mind first goes to nitrogen, then to sulfur, and then to potassium. To hit the uptake needed for late vegetative growth, it can make sense to supplement a little in-season K.

Most potassium recommendations focus on potassium chloride, often referred to as potash or 0-0-60. It is by far the most used K fertilizer product and really the most bang for the buck in terms of replacing crop removal or building soil test levels. One hundred pounds of 0-0-60 perfectly matches crop removal for 200 bu corn so is just a natural recommendation that comes to mind.

When we think about in-season application of K, we have some options. Potash (0-0-60) can be applied as a topdress, but I prefer a product called K-Mag. It is a naturally mined blend of potassium, magnesium, and sulfate. It will provide both potassium and sulfur and can be blended into a urea application to give N, K, and S all to the growing crop just prior to rapid uptake. If a grower wants to inject fertility into his pivot, we can accomplish the same thing with Potassium Thiosul (KTS).

Like we have talked about in previous installments. The best way to purchase fertilizer is to make it part of an overall fertility program developed between a grower and their trusted advisor. If these articles have piqued your interest, set up a time to meet with your Field Sales Agronomist. Work on a plan for soil testing, yield goals, and an overall fertility plan for each of your fields.

Wildcats have three named All-Americans by USTFCCCA

Wayne State Track and Field student-athletes Cade Kalkowski, Dylan Kaup and McKenzie Scheil were named 2020 Indoor Track and Field All-Americans by the USTFCCCA (US Track and Field and Cross Country Association) in New Orleans, La. on May 26. The three individuals qualified for the Division II Indoor Track and Field Championships in Birmingham, Ala. in March but were unable to compete due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Normal policies dictate that All-America honors are awarded based on classifications of performance at the NCAA Championships.

Due to the cancellation of the NCAA Division II Indoor Track & Field Championships, the Executive Committee adopted the following criteria:

Based on the posted start list for the national championships announced by the NCAA, the following will be recognized as All-America for the 2020 indoor track & field season:

Individual events: All student-athletes listed on the start list for the anticipated event. There will not be a distinction of "first-team" or "second-team" to these recognitions. Kalkowski, a junior from Niobrara, was an indoor national qualifier in the weight throw for a second straight season after recording a top season mark of 67' 3 1/4" at the NSIC Indoor Championships in Mankato to place second and earn All-NSIC honors. He ranked sixth in NCAA Division II entering the national championships. Last season, Kalkowski earned All-American honors in the event with a seventh place finish (66' 7 3/4") at Pittsburg, Kan.

Kaup, a senior from Neligh, was a repeat national qualifier in the weight throw also after posting a top throw of 64' 1" this season at the SDSU Last Chance Meet on Feb. 21. His mark ranked 14th best in NCAA Division II entering the national championships. Kaup was 18th in the weight throw at nationals last season with a top mark of 60' 8 1/2".

Scheil, a sophomore from Fairmont, repeated as a national qualifier after captured the weight throw title at the NSIC Indoor Championships in Mankato, Minn. with a season-best mark of 63', which ranked as the fifth-best mark in NCAA Division II entering the indoor nationals. Scheil claimed a 15th place finish (54' 11 1/2") at the indoor national championships in Pittsburg, Kan. last season.

Tips offered to protect against coronavirus scams

Submitted by Kim Bearnes, Extension Educator

Amid all the troubling coronavirus news, I have also read that there are various coronavirus scams going around right now taking advantage of innocent people who are afraid of getting sick or are worried about those that have. What can you tell me about coronavirus scams and what can I do to protect myself?

Unfortunately, coronavirus scams are spreading nearly as fast as the virus itself, and seniors are often the most vulnerable. Con artists are setting up websites to sell bogus products. Scammers are also using spoofed caller IDs, email addresses, text messages and social media accounts as a ruse to take your money and get your personal information.

The emails and posts from these accounts may claim to promote awareness, provide prevention tips, but will also disseminate fake information about cases in your community. The emails and posts may ask you to donate to fictitious victims, offer advice on unproven treatments and may contain malicious email attachments.

Here are some tips to help you keep the scammers at bay:

- Click carefully: Do not click on coronavirus-related links from sources you do not know in emails, text messages or unfamiliar websites. When you click on an email or download a file, you may instead get a program on your computer that spreads malware and digs into your personal files looking for passwords and other personal information.
- Ignore bogus product offers: Online offers for coronavirus vaccinations or miracle cures are rampant on the internet. Do not fall prey to those advertisements. At publishing time, there are currently no vaccines, pills, potions, lotions, lozenges or over-the-counter products available to treat or cure coronavirus. If you see or receive ads touting prevention, treatment or remedies that claim to cure the coronavirus, remember they are not legitimate.
- Beware of CDC spoofing: Be wary of emails, text messages or phone calls claiming to come from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and/or the World Health Organization (WHO). These scams can take several forms – such as fake health agency warnings about infections in your local area, vaccine and treatment offers, medical test results, health insurance cancellation, alerts about critical supply shortages and more.

For the most up-to-date information about the coronavirus, visit CDC.gov/coronavirus.

• Beware of fundraising scams: Be wary of emails or phone calls asking you to donate to a charity or crowdfunding campaign for coronavirus victims or for disease research. To verify a charity's legitimacy use apps.irs.gov/app/eos/. If you are asked for donations by prepaid gift card or by wiring money, it is probably a scam.

• Beware of stock scams: The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is warning people about phone calls and online promotions, including social media promotions, that tout stocks of companies with products that supposedly can prevent, detect or cure coronavirus. The promotions typically urge you to buy these stocks now, because the stocks will soar in price.

• In this scheme, the con artists have already bought the stocks, which typically sell for a dollar or less. As the hype grows and the stock price increases from additional purchases, the con men dump the stock, saddling other investors with big losses created by the mass sale of stock. Making matters worse, you may not be able to sell your shares if trading is suspended.

When investing in any company, including companies that claim to focus on coronavirus-related products and services, carefully research the investment. Remember, investment scam artists often exploit the latest crisis to line their own pockets.

For more tips on how to avoid getting swindled, see the Federal Communications Commission COVID-19 consumer warning and safety tips at FCC.gov/covid-scams.
