Nick Coil, representing Tradewind Energy, discussed a potential Road Maintenance Agreement with the Wayne County Commissioners and highway superintendent Mark Casey.

Haystack project dominates discussion at commissioners meeting

By Sarah Lentz editor@wayneherald.com

Discussion on a Road Maintenance Agreement with Tradewind Energy took the majority of the Wayne County Commissioners meeting held on June 16. Work on the courthouse, fund transfers and a decommissioning agreement with the Plum Creek wind project were also discussed.

The County and Tradewind Energy have been working on a Road Maintenance Agreement both parties can agree on for months. Project manager, Nick Coil attended the meeting Tuesday to meet with the commissioners, as well as highway superintendent Mark Casey to get the process moving. also require approval from the County. After more than an hour of discussion, Coil and Wayne County Attorney Amy Miller agreed to go through the agreement provision by provision and find something the County can feel comfortable with.

Doug Elting from Berggren Architects told the commissioners stone work on the courthouse restoration project is wrapping up. Still left on the project is carpentry work, copper work, installing oriels and some work on the towers. He also encouraged the commissioners to put aside money for possible future tuckpointing

Legacy Fund distributes money

Wayne Area Legacy Fund (WALF) recently presented two checks as part of the inaugural grant distribution. WALF has successfully raised enough funds through their endowment to begin granting funds to applicants.

Through the generosity and commitment of individuals and organizations in the Wayne area, the WALF has granted $6,000 of funds back into the community. This is the first year's earnings from the endow-

Last week check presentations were held at Rainbow World Childcare and the Wayne Senior Center.

Rainbow World plans to use the funds to provide updated technology for the children at the facility. Grant funds will be utilized for the purchase of new iPads and smart tablets for each classroom. The Wayne Senior Center is using the funds to purchase a large walk-in cooler which was recently installed in a new addition to the facility. It is already being utilized as supplies come in that need to be refrigerated.

Legacy Fund Chairman Bill Dickey said he was pleased to see the first funds distributed benefiting both the young people and seniors in the community.

"It's great to see how the funds raised will impact our community. We hope this is a stepping stone to larger grants in the future. With each additional contribution we are closer to our goal of $1 million donated and $50,000 annual grant availability; can you imagine the impact?" Karissa Hays, WALF committee member, said.

The application process was opened in the fall of 2019 to non-profit organizations and the committee had multiple applicants vying for the available grant funds. Each organization submitted a grant application and provided required documentation to establish their need for the funds.

"Each request submitted was warranted and made the grant decision difficult. There are many organizations in our area that are committed to making this the best place to live, work and play," Liz Onderstal, WALF secretary said.

The committee members are grateful to all the organizations that submitted a grant application and encourage all to watch for the next release of funds.

This was the information provided to members of the Wayne City Council during the regular meeting on Tuesday. Work needs to be done to caulk several areas of the pool, but when city staff began filling the pool with water, it was discovered that water is leaking out of the pool at a rate of 20-25 gallons per minute. City staff and engineers with JEO Consulting have been at the pool nearly every day trying to determine where the leak is located.

"The problem is different than what we were seeing last year. Something changed to do, " said Parks and Recreation Director Lowell Heggemeyer.

Discussion on where to go from here included whether or not there was a warranty on the pool, how long the pool season might last and the possibility of using this time to do other work on the pool.

Additionally, discussion was held on how to go about training lifeguards. It was suggested they get trained at a pool in the area and finish training in the Wayne pool.

Little Red Hen theatre begins rehearsals for Roald Dahl's 'James and the Giant Peach'

The Little Red Hen Theatre in Wakefield has been busy rehearsing for their upcoming production of "James and the Giant Peach." The show features a cast of 24 actors from ages six to 60-plus, and will be presented via a streaming service beginning Thursday, July

The Broadway musical features a score, with words and music by Benj Pasek and Justin Paul, the Tony Award-Winning team behind the popular "Dear Evan Hansen" and "The Greatest Showman." An imaginative adaption of the classic Roald Dahl book, the story centers around James, an orphan, who is rescued from a home by two aunts, who turn out to be atrocious. James escapes and finds his real "family" of unusual creatures who live inside a massive, magical peach and that's just the start of the ad-

Due to COVID-19, the production is being rehearsed with social distancing measures.

"We want to make sure rehearsals are as safe as possible," managing director, T. Adam Goos said. "The cast has been organized into smaller groups that are rehearsing mer, Charity Potter, and Dawn Reand performing separately to minimize contact. We've removed the audience seating so we can spread out and use the whole space and everyone is wearing masks during rehearsals. There is also a lot of cleaning and disinfecting happen-

The artistic process for the show is also different, according to stage director Scott Mead.

"Because the audience is going to view the show from a screen, we've had to re-think our ideas about the production. We're staging scenes and musical numbers to be filmed from various camera angles, utilizing close -ups and a moving camera, and coming up with other creative ideas that we wouldn't be able to do in a traditional performance. The cast is doing a fantastic job with the challenges we have, and I think the audience will enjoy it," Mead said.

The cast includes Kinslee Metzler as James; Elizabeth Carlson and Ryan Conyers as the atrocious aunts Spiker and Sponge; Katelynn Pommer as Ladahlord; Brian Johnimers as James' insect family; with featured ensemble members Olivia Dekok, Meg Engle, Nate Johnson, Jordan Metzler, Victoria Nelson, Octavia Pugh, Ashlyn Riewer and Lexie Weaver; with featured players ensemble members Lydia Engel, Elan Jepsen, Madeylnne Herting, Ella Reimers, Kenzi Rewinkle, Quinn Riewer, and Helena Wilt-

The production team consists of stage director Mead; music director Goos; stage manger Rebecca Jepsen, with costuming coordinated by Rita Gustafson, Eunice Johnson, Kathy Muller, and Chris Salmon with properties and set design assistance from Kaye Hilsinger.

The Little Red Hen Theatre's production of "James and the Giant Peach" is set to begin streaming on Thursday, July 16. Due to COVID-19 social distancing requirements and the hardships it has created, the Wayne Izaak Walton League Chapter has voted to cancel the Youth Fishing Derby for the 2020 year.

In an effort to still provide an opportunity for the kids and their families to fish, the group is opening the gate to the recreational area again providing free entry on Saturday, June 20 to non- members.

The Ikes ask that everyone practice proper social distancing while visiting the lake and use caution around lake edges.

The gate will be opened at 10 a.m. and be closed at 8:30 p.m. on the 20th of what would have been the Youth fishing Derby.

After teaching piano lessons to over 900 students during several decades, Marcile Uken of Wayne was directly impacted by the CO-VID-19 pandemic.

When the schools shut down in mid-March, Uken was unable to continue giving lessons to her current students and missed her routine of giving lessens each afternoon and evening.

After several weeks of brainstorming and working with other parents, Sandra Hansen came up with an idea. Her son, Nash, is one of Uken's students.

She arranged for a driveway concert to be presented by a number of Uken's students on June 12.

"Kim Schultz, whose daughter is a former student of Mrs. Uken's, provided a keyboard and I printed a program similar to those handed out by Mrs. Uken at each recital," Hansen said.

Uken was surprised when her students began showing up in her driveway. During the "concert" she was presented a bouquet of flowers from her students.

Madge Bruflat, whose children are also former students of Uken, presented each student with a bag of M&Ms, just as Uken does at the end of each recital.

Using proper social distancing, Uken watched from her garage as approximately 10 of her current students took his or her turn at the keyboard. Following each performance, the keyboard was cleaned before the next performance.

Taking part in the event were Nash Hansen, Aiden Kesting, Parker Kesting, Alivia Kesting, Joe Leatherdale, James Tompkins, Whitney Hadcock, Claire Reinke and Ben Sandoz.

Johnnie Byrd Brewing Company's Byrd House food pantry sits right outside the brewery's door on the corner of 2nd and Pearl Streets in Wayne.

'Give what you can, take what you need' philosophy of Byrd House little free food pantry

Kelly and Greg Ptacek saw a need in the community. Kelly works with children and sees first-hand how food insecurity affects children right here in Wayne. On Easter, the Ptacek's, who own Johnnie Byrd Brewing Company, paired with Pac 'N' Save to offer free meals. After word got out about that, Greg said people began to contact him to see how they could help. Greg said Kelly suggested a mini food pantry, and got to work from there.

"We wanted to make ours a little bit more robust than a lot of other people. Most of the ones that I've seen are like one by one and then it's just some spaghetti and some canned food in there," Greg said. We wanted to go big and wanted to over design it."

That "over designed" pantry is vented to stop things from getting too hot in the summer and will have a heat source in the winter.

"The idea came from how can we help like long term? When we were doing Easter meals, there was a car that drove by six times just trying to like rationalize to themselves 'do I need that?'," Greg said. "One of the things that we really want to do with this is like undo the stigma behind (using a food pantry)."

The Ptaceks are asking for donations to be non-perishable items not susceptible to mold. Nothing homemade should go into the Byrd House. months, the theatre was able to set They're also asking for items to be kid-friendly if at all possible.

On Johnnie Byrd's website, there's also a link to donate monetary funds to the little pantry.

"The way we're going to operate it is give what you can, take what you need," Greg said.

Shelf-safe donations can be dropped off directly in the Byrd House pantry or into the brewery and funds can be dropped in the business or online at johnniebyrd.beer/birdhouse.html.

"We would like to see five to 10 touches on it a day. I think that'll really help us. Right now we just really want to focus on undoing the stigma behind need," Greg said. "We want somebody to be able to touch that birdhouse and other people to not know or judge, you know, whether it's somebody that's dropping off something or somebody that's grabbing something out of there."

Kelly, Greg and their children have helped create the Byrd House and Greg said they're excited to see their pet project get underway.

Wakefield City Council talks water rates, COVID impact at June meeting

By Sarah Lentz editor@wayneherald.com

Wakefield's city council worked through several agenda items during a nearly three-hour meeting on June 10. Among those items were re-opening city facilities, water rates and LB840 funds.

The City is planning a roughly $6 million water treatment plant project that would require current water rates to rise to help funding. Debate during the meeting was how much to increase rates, when to raise them and if the way rates are assessed needs to change.

"I think you have to understand (we're) at a point where we're going to have a pretty good increase at some point in time. Is it better to be proactive and get some steps in there rather than try to make some big jump up there?" city administrator Jim Litchfield told the council.

ing city rates from $1.75 to $2 per the 22. 1,000 gallons and the city base rate from $15.50 to $18 effective Aug. 1. The council will be looking for public input from their constituents before moving on the second and third reading of the ordinance. The project will also look for funding through state revolving loan funds, the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Rural Development and possibly a bond. After some tense debate, the council approved adding $12,500 to the $50,000 LB840 funds approved to help businesses and non-profits affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. At the last meeting, the council approved the release of $50,000 and told the committee in charge of disbursing the funds that they wanted businesses treated equally. The council approved re-opening more facilities. The indoor shelter at Graves Park is now open for rental with a limit of 25 people during usage. Rental will be organized through the City office. The outdoor shelters are also now opened, however, they will remain roped off until permission is granted by the City to use them. This is being done to ensure proper sanitizing is going on between uses. Playgrounds will remain closed, but basketball courts are tentativley being re-opened.

The Wakefield Civic Center will also re-open with the restiction of 150 people. Those using the Civic Center will also need to sign a waiver. There will be no July 4 community meal this year. Wakefield Volunteer Fire Depart-

Traci Haglund, Wakefield Health Care Center updated the council about COVID-19 precautions they are taking. There are lots of regulations in place outlining the amount of PPE the health care center must have on hand in case of an outbreak and Haglund said she and her staff are currently working on that.

The council voted unanimously to pursue a Nebraska Department of Economic Development Broadband Grant program. The City would partner with a broadband provider and only pay a percentage of the cost for the project. A dividend check from EMC

Kurt Kohler, dean of student life and athletics, described Coach Fenton Nelsen as an incredible addition to Northeast athletics.

"Fenton has shown compassion for those he works with and is an outstanding teacher. He will be missed in our athletic department, and I know he has a bright future ahead of him in coaching rodeo in another program," Kohler said.

Nelsen does have the opportunity to remain employed by Northeast in another capacity in the upcoming academic year.

In another budget cutting move. Northeast Community College will be shifting its men's and women's basketball programs from Division I to Division II over the next 18 months. Both programs, however, will continue to compete in the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) at the Division I level during the 2020-21 season.

Room and board scholarships already signed by basketball student-athletes for the 2020-21 academic year will be honored based on their Letter of Intent, although no additional room and board scholarships will be awarded for the upcoming academic year. This will be the last season that room and board scholarships will be granted to Northeast's men's and women's basketball student-athletes.

"The costs to maintain the basketball scholarship commitment and the travel expenses are not sustainable," Barrett said.

Northeast will also petition the NJCAA for permission to move both basketball programs to Division II beginning with the 2021-22 season with a new declaration for NJCAA competition at that level for a fouryear cycle in the 2022-23, 2023-24, 2024-25, and 2025-26 seasons. The move to Division II for basketball will mean that all Northeast athletic programs will participate at that level of competition.

Other NJCAA Division I basketball programs have petitioned to move to Division II over the past several months. This includes the recent announcement by Iowa Western Community College in Council Bluffs. It comes at a time when many colleges and universities across the country are eliminating some of their athletic programs or making other adjustments.

Northeast also cut its dance team program earlier this spring. The move of all of the athletic cuts and adjustments will save the college at least $250,000 annually.

"Today is a difficult day for Hawks Athletics, and one that was not anticipated when the establishment of Northeast men's and women's rodeo program was announced in 2018 as our newest additions to the athletic department," Kohler said. "The decisions to eliminate rodeo and begin having the basketball programs compete at the NJCAA Division II level, as well as cutting the dance program in March, were not arrived at easily, but are critical in sustaining competitive athletic programs while maintaining fiscal responsibility at Northeast. Hawks Athletics has shown grit and resilience through tough times before, and we will continue to do that through these unprecedented days of financial uncertainty."

In addition to men's and women's basketball, other athletic programs at Northeast Community College are baseball, softball, men's golf, women's volleyball, and men's and women's soccer.

Nebraska Farm Bureau Awards Student Project Grants to 4-H and FFA students in Thurston, Chase, Keith Counties

Farmers Market opens

Nebraska Farm Bureau Student Project Grants, supported by the Charles Marshall Fund at the Nebraska Farm Bureau Foundation were awarded to four deserving student Farm Bureau members in Thurston, Chase, and Keith Counties. Each student was awarded one thousand dollars to be used to either begin or expand their 4-H project or FFA Supervised Agricultural Experiences (SAE) project.

"We are proud of the entrepreneurial spirt our student members embrace and are very impressed by the passion they have for each of their projects," said Audrey Schipporeit, director of generational engagement. "We hope these funds will help them achieve their goals and look forward to watching them continue to bring new ideas and ventures in their communities for years to come."

These grants are awarded to Nebraska Farm Bureau student members each year. If selected, the student must share how they have used the grant towards starting or growing their 4-H or SAE projects. Winners were selected by a Farm Bureau committee.

Grant recipients are as follows:

Alexis Bodlak is a member of Thurston County Farm Bureau. As part of her SAE project, Bodlak worked at a greenhouse where she was involved with the business aspect of the operation and the physical management of the greenhouse. Due to her employer scaling back the greenhouse portion of the business, Bodlak is transitioning her SAE project to an entrepreneurship project. She plans to continue to work at the greenhouse but will start growing plants on her own. In order using the grant money to access a space where she can raise her own plants. Morayah Cupp is a member of Chase County Farm Bureau. Cupp has a small business where she rents out mobile chicken coops to families in her community. She currently has six mobile coops with a goal to expand to 10 coops by the end of November. Cupp has a passion for poultry and wants others to share her passion as well.

Makenna Eisenzimmer is a member of Keith County Farm Bureau. Eisenzimmer's SAE market swine project expanded to a show pig business this year. Her goal is to raise affordable show pigs for area youth and mentor them on how to properly feed and show a pig. Eisenzimmer built a small farrowing barn on her grandma's farm and plans to use the grant money for construction costs. Her goal is to farrow at least 16 piglets a year from two gilts that she can sell to area youth for 4-H and FFA show pigs.

Lindsey Mendenhall is a member of Chase County Farm Bureau. As her SAE project, Mendenhall raises and sells American Kennel Club (AKC) registered golden retrievers. As a 4-H participant, she showed dogs for obedience and showmanship and her dog has passed the AKC Canine Good Citizen Evaluation. She plans to use the grant money to buy a Cumberland building, dog food, and pay for vet expenses in the future.

Those interested in applying for the Student Project Grants must meet certain requirements. Applicants must hold a current Nebraska Farm Bureau student membership and be ages 16-23 to participate. To join Nebraska Farm Bureau and learn more, visit www.nefb.org.

Let's get Nebraska agriculture growing

Here in Nebraska, June is both Renewable Fuels Month and Dairy Month, so it's a fitting time to talk about how we're working to get Nebraska agriculture growing. 2020 has been another challenging year for our state's largest industry. The coronavirus pandemic has impacted commodity prices and caused significant changes to the nation's food supply chain. Through it all, our farmers, ranchers, and food processor workers have delivered the food our nation and the world

Over the years, Nebraska's ag producers have defined Nebraska grit and determination, and they have once again responded well to adversity. As they navigate difficult circumstances, we're dedicating federal and state assistance to keep our farms and ranches growing.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) has rolled out the Coronavirus Food Assistance Program (CFAP) to aid the nation's agricultural community. CFAP is making $16 billion in direct payments to farmers and ranchers to compensate them for coronavirusrelated price drops and market disruptions. USDA has just begun to issue the first CFAP payments. As of June 8th, the program has already disbursed about $100 million to ag producers in our state. Nebraskans interested in CFAP should contact their local Farm Service Agency to inquire about submitting an application. Details of the program are available online at farmers.gov/cfap. The USDA is accepting applications through August 28, 2020.

The State of Nebraska has also received over $1 billion from the federal government through the Coronavirus Relief Fund to assist with our recovery from the coronavirus pandemic. As part of our plan to get Nebraska growing, we are allocating $330 million of these funds to assist small livestock producers employing 1-10 persons and small businesses with 5-49 employees. Grant applications are available by visiting getnebraskagrowing.nebraska.gov.

The coronavirus has been especially challenging for the ethanol industry. People have been driving significantly less over the last few months, which has reduced the demand for ethanol and other fuels locally and worldwide. At one point, 42% of ethanol production in Nebraska was offline. The good news is that as drivers return to the road, demand is coming back.

To support the farmers, ranchers, and production facilities in the ethanol industry, we're successfully advocating for higher ethanol blends-E15, E30, and E85. Ethanol fuels save consumers money, benefit the environment, and create more opportunity for Nebraska's farmers and ranchers. A year ago, the ethanol industry celebrated news that E15 had been approved for sale all year long. This February, the USDA announced a new initiative—the Higher Blends Infrastructure Incentive Program. It represents a real commitment to expand access to higher blends of ethanol fuel throughout the United States. The USDA will award $100 million in grants this year as part of the program. Through August 13th, gas stations and other fueling facilities can apply for funds to install or upgrade fuel pumps, storage tanks, and other infrastructure.

International trade continues to be a key to growing agriculture. The new USMCA trade deal officially takes effect on July 1, 2020, which is great news for our ag community. Mexico already ranks as Nebraska's top export destination for corn and dairy, while Canada is our second largest market for ethanol and dairy. The more advantageous trade terms of USMCA will give Nebraska's ag producers even better access to these North American markets. This is especially true for our dairy farmers, who will face fewer restrictive trade barriers when selling to Canada.

While travel restrictions have put a temporary pause on trade missions, our economic development team continues to be in contact with international partners. As travel opens up, I'll lead additional trade missions to promote Nebraska's high-quality crops and livestock. We've seen great results from these missions. For example, in September I met with top trade leaders in Japan and Vietnam to talk about the premium ag products grown in Nebraska. From January to April of 2020, Nebraska's combined beef and pork exports to Japan have been over $50 million higher than they were during the same period last

In early March, Vietnamese trade officials visited Lincoln as a follow up from our 2019 trade mission to Hanoi. They committed to buy $3 billion of cattle, corn, distiller's grains, soybeans, and wheat from Nebraska in the next two to three years. We're already seeing exponential growth in the Vietnamese market. Beef exports to Vietnam have risen 119% and pork exports are up 136% in the first four months of 2020 compared to the same period in 2019.

True to character, Nebraska's ag community has found ways to help their neighbors in their hour of need even while facing difficulty themselves. After the coronavirus outbreak, the Green Plains plant in York quickly found new uses for the industrial ethanol it manufactures. The company has donated the ethanol for use in the production of hand sanitizers to aid communities in Nebraska. The Alliance for the Future of Agriculture in Nebraska (AFAN) also stepped up to launch a grant program to supply food pantries around the state with cold storage. Milk is typically the most requested item from food pantries, but many of them do not have the ability to store non-perishables. Nebraska's ag community is donating milk as well as contributing funds so that food banks can purchase refrigerators.

For all the latest information, I encourage you to visit my website, governor.nebraska.gov, and to subscribe for updates. Agriculture is the backbone of the Cornhusker State, and we are working every day to grow opportunities for the farmers and ranchers who help feed the

Capitol View Protesting, rioting and listening to find solutions to problems

By J.L. SCHMIDT Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

The tragic death of George Floyd at the hands of a Minneapolis Police Officer has taught Nebraskans the difference between protestors and rioters and the importance of listening and offering solutions to problems. A Friday night calm in the Capital City was broken by a large crowd of mostly protestors marching down O Street in Lincoln, blocking a major intersection or two and ultimately devolving into name-calling, rockthrowing, window-breaking and looting before police dispersed them early into a Saturday morning.

As they did through subsequent nights of demonstrations, mostly centered on Lincoln Mall, the four blocks between the Capitol and the County City Building, protestors carried professionally printed Black Lives Matter signs. The fringe, which one can assume included some rioters, carried hand-lettered signs with messages such as the incendiary "ACAB," translated as all cops

Saturday night's peace on the mall was marred by a window-breaking spree by - one assumes - the rioters. Many were captured on video. Police managed to shepherd the crowd between the County-City Building and the Capitol. Sunday night was more of the same, and more costly.

Authorities estimated more than $10 million in damage to buildings including the headquarters of the Nebraska Association of County Officials, which is actually a block south of the mall. Rioters also torched the Universal-Inland Insurance Company, a 63-year-old building on the mall which the landlord says may be a total loss. More than 20 people were arrested blocks away as they threw rocks at an already boarded-up Target store.

The mayor spent a fair amount of her time speaking and listening to protestors. On Monday, the governor spoke the Lincoln City Council held an open important to listen, and then act. and allegedly misspoke to a group in Omaha. Omaha's mayor and city council tried to listen. The Saturday night death of a young Black man in Omaha at the hands of an Old Market business owner complicated things there.

REOPENING NEBRASKA

As Nebraska reopens, each health district, and in fact, each county and city encounters its own unique challenges. Nowhere is this more visible than in District 17, where Thurston and Wayne Counties are opening under a Phase 2 Directed Health Measure (DHM) while Dakota County is operating under a more restrictive Phase 1 DHM. Even within the counties, differing challenges exist. COVID-19 has greatly impacted individuals, families, churches, businesses and industry. Hardest hit economically have been the hospitality (restaurants, hotels, venues) and agricultural industries. We have seen inspiring creativity and adaptability in many areas, including re-directing agricultural products unable to get into the bottleneck created by processing slowdowns and shutdowns, processor plant re-fits to improve safety for workers, and a hospitality industry that has completely re-worked everything from delivery methods (think take-out) to interior design to protect employees and guests. Because of the willingness and dedication of so many producers and business owners, we can all look forward to healthy re-

We mourn those we have lost to COVID-19. We also mourn alongside families who have been unable to hold traditional funerals for their loved ones. We are all heartbroken that most of our high school and college seniors were not able to walk across the stage after so many years of working towards a graduation goal. This has all been hard work and sacrifice, but as Nebraskans, we are not strangers to hard work and we know hard work pays off. As that there is hope on the horizon. Even in Dakota County, where we experienced a spike in the number of positive cases of COVID-19 over a short period of time, the number of new cases has been slowing down and leveling off, just as they have statewide. The Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services (NDHHS) has continued to find the health of our healthcare system strong and stable. Our sacrifice and hard work have kept our health care system from being overwhelmed. In fact, NDHHS reports that we continue to see 40 percent-50 percent of our hospital beds available for those who need it, with 45 percent-50 percent of ICU beds, and over 70 percent or more ventilators. Thank you for being a partner in helping Ne-

Grounded in extensive research in youth development, resiliency, and prevention, the Developmental Assets represent the relationships, opportunities, and personal qualities that young people need to avoid risks and to be successful. These 40 assets are powerful for all young people, regardless of their gender, economic status, family, or race/ ethnicity. Levels of assets are better predictors of high-risk behaviors or of a youth's likelihood to thrive than poverty or being from a singleparent family.

The average young person experiences approximately 20.6 of the 40 developmental assets. Females report higher average levels of assets (21.3) than males (19.9). The most common assets reported by youth as external assets. External assets are: integrity (75 percent), achievement motivation (75 percent), and family support (73 percent), positive view of personal future (73 percent), positive peer influences (72 percent), honesty (71 percent), and responsibility (70 percent).

The least commonly reported assists by young people were: positive beled as internal assets. The more assets that a youth has, the fewer high risk behaviors they will exhibit. Youth with low asset levels (0-10 assets) engage, on average, in 7.7 of the 24 risk behaviors, compared to 0.7 risk behaviors among their peers who experience 31-40 assets.

Of the 40 assets, 20 are labeled revolve around positive experiences in the environment from parents, school and community. These external assets are further organized into four groups: support; empowerment; boundaries and expectations; and constructive use of time.

The remaining 20 assets are lasets focus on the self-concept of the youth; their morals and ethics; and positive values; social competencies; and positive identity. Adults who interact with youth in any setting have a responsibility to help youth development their assets. Assets don't happen accidently. Most often adults must strategically plan opportunities and experiences to enhance certain assets. Adults who work with youth organizations such as 4-H; mentoring; scouts; summer recreation leagues and faith based organizations can implement activities that create an asset based experience. City councils and county government can make youth development asset promotion the culture of their community to ensure that each youth have the opportunity to be successful... all because the adults surrounding them care about their future. #### Weddings --

The Wayne Herald welcomes news accounts and photographs of weddings involving families living in the Wayne area.

We feel there is a widespread interest in local and area weddings and are happy to make space available for their publication.

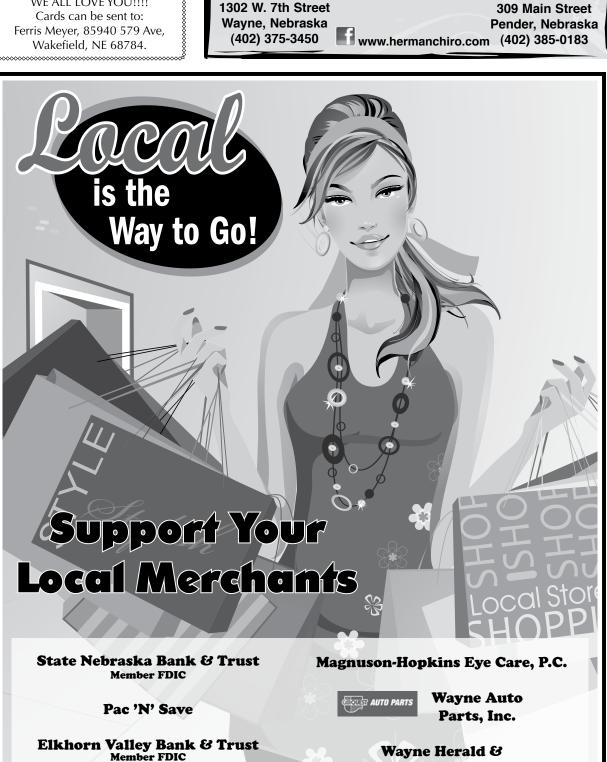

Wedding photos to be returned should include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

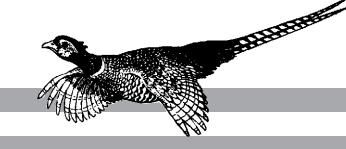

Since we can't all gather together right now, Let's send them good wishes some way or shomehow. A card or a note will sure make their day. June 24 is their special day!

Please help us to celebrate the 65th wedding anniversary of our parents, Gary and Yvonne Erwin by sending a card or note on June 24 to them:

What does the Lord require in times like these?

Editor's Note: The Rev. James Splitt is new to Wayne, serving at Dur Savior Lutheran Church He filled in as Pulpit Supply during the Easter holiday and continued through the end of May. As of June 1, he is full time for the period of transition as the congregation moves toward calling their next pastor.

"With the events happening in our world today and people crying out in many ways for justice, I put together a short story, a meditative journey of reflection as my entree above. for this article," Rev. Splitt said.

"With what should I approach the Lord and bow down before God on high? He has told you, human one, what is good and what the Lord requires from you: to do justice, embrace faithful love, and walk humbly with your God." Micah 6:6,8 (CEB)

ing about, yellow warblers caught my eye. Anytime you see a warbler is a precious moment. Time to be still. Really still. I paused to watch this dwarf among birds flit back and forth as if to play with the sun beams as they bounced on leaves dancing in the wind.

My thoughts were focused, for the most part. But any little buzzing, humming, stirring of leaves, and creature movement would take me away from my morning thoughts.

in the glade was intentional. The day before, I was there. I was right there. I saw the horror, and I tried, I really tried. I tried to stop it. Tried, of course, without crossing the boundaries.It was all happening in front of me in slow motion. Others were there in a collective moment of surreal suspense, as if time and seconds and breathes, and pulse all stopped. No one could breathe, helpless and yet fixed in a stare that my memory has recorded in such horrific detail. I'm consumed even now.

Oh! there goes, a nuthatch. I love how they walk up and down the road carved out in the furrows of the great oak. And beneath me, the first blossoms of bloodroot and trillium forming a carpet of pure joy, whites and pinks everywhere.

I'm sure he's dead. I'm so sure. I was alone on my journey. Dart- After the ambulance left with his lifeless body, we dispersed, we went home. But, not before looking at each other, with unspoken words of compassion, hurt, anger, anguish all of us breathless. We were, by the way, bystanders. The silence was eerie. But we moved on, just for the time being as we were soon to discover, we were not alone. The moment was instantly captured and like beams of light in the world of darkness, became viral.

I've reached my favorite spot, my Today, this morning, my walk living-water creek. Coming out of secret mountain springs, it flows and flows downward, splashing across moss-covered metamorphic beasts.

My eyes retreated, turning inward, from observing flora. Gazing deep within, my own stream of eye scorching tears flooded into the cool bubbling current at my feet, now bare soaking in the cool water. A breath of wind wiped across my face

Race Amity Day

The Baha'is of Wayne welcomed members of the public to a Race Amity Day celebration. Race Amity Day is meant to be a celebration of all faiths, races and nationalities in order to encourage better racial relations within the nation. The celebration started in Massachusetts and now there is a push to celebrate it on the second Sunday in June nationwide. Above Joseph Weixelman gives a recap of the virtual national Race Amity Day celebration. Below, Deb Hammer reads one of the many prayers and quotes about race and peace in our world.

and new drugs, the number of prescriptions skyrocketed – we did not want to be seen as bad doctors by the Joint Commission watchdogs.

Needless to say, the addiction rate skyrocketed as well. These drugs, some claim, can "turn on a switch" in the brain after only a single dose. One addict stated, "It was the first time in my life my body didn't hurt. I wanted that feeling to last." And he did almost anything to get the drugs, which ruined his life and almost killed him.

Virtual events for Pollinator Week June 22-28

In honor of the role pollinators play in Nebraska's economy and ecosystems, Gov. Pete Ricketts has proclaimed June 22-28, 2020, Nebraska Pollinator Week.

The celebration of Nebraska Pollinator Week, typically commemorated with pollinator-related events across the state, has taken on a new form this year in the interest of public health due to COVID-19. Virtual events will be hosted, and Nebraskans can join the Nebraska Pollinator Week 2020 Challenge, head outside, look for pollinators, and be a part of a national citizen science program. To enter the Nebraska Pollinator

Week 2020 challenge, visit nebraskapollinatorweek.org and complete the commitment form. Participants will be sent a package of pollinator resources. Participants then should head outside to look for pollinators and enter at least five species they find on iNaturalist, a web-based citizen science program.

The Nebraska Pollinator Week website also contains free resources, tutorials, lesson plans, and information about Nebraska pollinators. Discover more at nebraskapollinatorweek.org.

Those who participate should continue to honor all local, state and federal public health guidelines, includ-

Focusing on the good news

My neighbor tells me that her pastor, in his sermon on YouTube last week, advised us to stop listening to the news!

He meant we need to obviously tune in to learn about things we need to know, but to forego following those channels that are nothing but. I think the average one of us is severely fatigued from daily counts of the virus, and calls to defund police departments. (That is not happening in Lincoln, I'm sure.)

It makes sense, especially when you are closeted at home and finding it's easy to keep the TV on.. We don't, but it would be easy to do.

One thing that cheers me is a daily Good News Report; from all over the world. There are countries planting trees, huge boats equipped to rake the ocean for plastic, and lots of little stories about how kind people can be in the face of the pandemic.

after a protest, went to the streets at 2 a.m. and started cleaning up! He worked for ten hours, and when the street cleaners came, they were pleasantly surprised. AND, he has had some wonderful feedback, including a college scholarship.

The other thing we often do is turn to News Channel Nebraska at 8 p.m. to see what kind of music is playing on Quarantine Tonight. You all probably knew about this before we did, and right now, I don't remember who told us about it. But it is a wonderful break from bad news.

We have been aware of NCN because during the school year, we could sometimes watch Lutheran High's games. There was instant replay and everything. We also go there for frequent weather reports. Today, the first article was about It's quite a challenge to give the

> A lot of the groups do not dress up, and we think that's too bad, but it's the way things are now. We especially enjoyed seeing our friend, Dan Hansen, on the trumpet with the Burt Heithold band. They were in white shirts and ties and looked good. They sounded good, too!

When mob grazing is not mob grazing

By Bruce Anderson, Ph.D.,

University of Nebraska - Lincoln

Mob grazing is popular. If you aren't mob grazing yourself, you know someone who is mob grazing. Or are they?

What is mob grazing? The book Terminology for Grazing Lands and Grazing Animals defines mob grazing, "In the management of a grazing unit, grazing by a relatively large number of animals at a high stocking density for a short time period." While this definition looks okay, I think it lacks the specifics needed to adequately define mob grazing.

For example, 50 animals might be relatively large to a farmer who uses a half-dozen cows to keep weeds down on some non-tillable acres, while 1,000 cows might be just a nice group to a rancher with over 10,000 head grazing extensive rangeland. Likewise, one week is a short time period to someone who moves animals to new pasture at most a couple times a year. The grazier who commonly moves animals once or twice a day on irrigated pasture may not consider it short until the time period is only a couple

And what is a high stocking density? One hundred sheep or goats per acre? Two hundred cow-calf pairs? Or 400,000 pounds of yearling steers? And is it determined by animal count or animal weight?

Many early adopters and proponents of mob grazing consider "mob grazing" to be a popular name for ultra-high stock density grazing. What is meant by "ultra-high" also is debatable, but many folks consider at least 200,000 to 300,000 pounds of animals per acre as the minimum to qualify for this catego-

Two hundred thousand pounds

(equal to 125 cows weighing 1,250 pounds with calves weighing 350 pounds) of animals will eat at least 2 to 2.5 tons of forage dry matter each day. This doesn't even count the amount that will be trampled, fouled or otherwise left uneaten. One million pounds of animals, as has been reported by some graziers, will consume 10 to 12.5 tons of forage per day. With stock densities this high, these animals obviously can stay on one piece of ground for only a brief time. As a result, graziers who use ultra-high stock densities often move animals to fresh pasture several times each day.

Maybe the main question is "How does mob grazing differ from other grazing strategies like strip grazing, rotational grazing or management-intensive grazing?" After all, each of these strategies could include "a relatively large number of animals at a high stocking density for a short time period."

Stock density can be increased quite easily simply by constructing smaller paddocks. This would be expected to increase forage utilization while reducing selective grazing and promoting more even grazing. Carrying capacity of the pasture Deadline nears to complete can increase when this is successfully accomplished.

Likewise, the length of time animals graze a certain area can be shortened to whatever is desired as long as there is another area they can be moved to. Short grazing periods reduce the risk of animals grazing the regrowth of plants prema-

One objective commonly sought with mob grazing that isn't part of most other grazing strategies is animal impact and herd effect. While mob grazing might be practiced successfully when forage availability is low, most often it is used when yield is high, like when grass is heading. Animals placed into pastures in this condition can obtain good quality forage briefly via selective grazing, thus maintaining desirable animal performance. Most of the forage available from this more mature plant material will be lower quality, however. If animals need much more than a maintenance diet, they must be moved several times each day to fresh pasture.

During this brief, selective grazing time period, much of the remaining ungrazed forage may be knocked down, but the occupation time will be too short for much actual trampling. To accomplish objectives such as true trampling and incorporation of remaining forage into the soil to hasten nutrient cycling, increase organic matter, improve soil health and other ecological benefits claimed by some mob grazing advocates, enough animals need to remain in the pasture for a longer time period. This will reduce animal performance at least for the time period this trampling is pracin the herd directly affects the outcome of this trampling. The animal impact and herd effect will be much greater where 200 cows are on 1 acre compared with 20 cows on one-tenth of an acre, although both have the same stock density. Similarly, mob grazing when soils are wet will result in a much different animal impact than grazing on dry

The term "mob grazing" sounds interesting, so much so that it provides a sense of satisfaction to say you are using this novel, new grazing strategy. In my personal opinion, though, if mob grazing is more specifically defined as "grazing by a relatively large number of animals (100-plus) at a high stocking density (200,000 pounds per acre) for a short time period (move at least twice each day)" and part of the outcome is to truly trample and incorporate remaining forage into the soil, then unless all these conditions are met or exceeded, maybe it isn't mob grazing. (Minimum thresholds in parentheses are my suggestions

This does not mean that the extra paddocks or higher stock densities or the more rapid moves used in a strip grazing, rotational grazing, management-intensive grazing or other grazing strategy are not beneficial and evidence of improved management. It is just misleading to call it mob grazing.

Risk Coverage (ARC) or Price Loss Coverage (PLC) programs for 2020 must do so by Tuesday, June 30. Although program elections for the 2020 crop year remain the same as elections made for 2019, all producers need to contact their local USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) office to sign a 2020 enrollment contract.

"The Agriculture Risk Coverage and Price Loss Coverage programs are critical safety-net programs for farmers, helping producers weather market distortions resulting from natural disasters, trade disruptions and, this year, a pandemic," said FSA Administrator Richard Fordyce. "Contact your FSA county office today to complete enrollment before June 30. This can be done in concert with filing your acreage report and applying for other FSA programs." To date, more than 1.4 million ARC and PLC contracts have been signed for the 2020 crop year. This represents 89 percent of expected enrollment. FSA recently sent reminder postcards to producers who, according to agency records, have not yet submitted signed contracts for ARC or PLC for the 2020 crop year.

Producers who do not complete enrollment by close of business local time on Tuesday, June 30, will not be enrolled in ARC or PLC for the 2020 crop year and will be ineligible to receive a payment should one trigger for an eligible crop.

ARC and PLC contracts can be mailed or emailed to producers for signature depending on producer nearest FSA county office.

arrangements can be made in advance with FSA to drop off signed contracts at the FSA county office - call ahead for local drop off and other options available for submitting signed contracts electronically.

Producers are eligible to enroll on farms with base acres for the following commodities: barley, canola, large and small chickpeas, corn, crambe, flaxseed, grain sorghum, lentils, mustard seed, oats, peanuts, dry peas, rapeseed, long grain rice, medium- and short-grain rice, safflower seed, seed cotton, sesame, soybeans, sunflower seed and wheat.

Stand Assessment It's worthwhile to spend some time in your cornfields

taking stand counts and assessing your stand compared to your planting population. While there, you can make some observations about the performance of your planter. It's pretty easy to do. Bring a tape measure, small garden shovel, and your cell phone to use as a calculator and take some photos if you have questions about what

Once you have everything, visit several spots, drop a tape measure, and measure out 1/1,000 of an acre based on your row width. In 30 inch rows, this is 17 feet 5 inches. Count the number of plants in each of the two rows on either side of your tape, then average them out. Once you have your average number from your plant count, take this number times 1,000, and you have your population in this area. For example, if one row has 28 plants in 17 feet 5 inches, and the row next to it has 32 plants in the same distance. Your average population in this area is 30,000 plants/acre. This measurement should be repeated 5-6 times throughout the field and more often if you are finding a lot of variation.

Another thing I like to do is take that row length in inches (209 inches for 17 feet 5 inches) and divide it by my population to get an average spacing between plants. Then I can move my tape measure over against the row to see how consistent my spacing is. For that 30,000 population, I should have about 7 inches between plants. Six inches or eight inches is generally ok, but 3 or 10 inches means I have some plants that are going to bully the plant next to them or open wasted space. I won't go into all of the possible causes here, but generally, you need to look at your planter or planting speed when you see a lot of closely spaced plants. If you see gaps, use your garden shovel to dig up the seed and find out if you planted a seed there. You need to know if the seed didn't come up, or if no seed was planted. This year we saw more than a few plants damaged by the May frost. Some of these plants did not make it out of the ground. A judgment call also needs to be made when you see damaged plants or plants behind more than 1 leaf compared to the plants around them.

Will those plants survive? Will they produce a decent-sized ear?

In figure 1, we see a frost-damaged plant that should survive and bounce back from

In Figure 2, we see a corkscrewed plant that has attempted to leaf out under the soil surface and will not survive. Corkscrewing happens when the germinating plant senses warmer soil above it and grows up. Latter cold temps chill the soil above while deeper soil stays warmer. Now the plant senses the warmer temps below it and starts to send the shoot down. When air and upper soil temperature increases later, the plant reverses itself again. Eventually, the plant may run out of the energy needed to push through the soil
