Singing grads

Bressler Park was the setting for the Wayne Community Schools' Pre-school graduation program on Aug. 6. The students wore graduation robes and entertained parents, grandparents and guests with songs, dances and stories from the stage at the park. Under the direction of pre-school teacher Gwen Frideres and paraprofessional Mandi Fernau, the students were all smiles after not having been together for more than four months. After the students completed their portion of the program, Wayne Community Schools' Superintendent Dr. Mark Lenihan presented each with a 'diploma'.

Wayne State College re-makes natatorium into Kirk Gardner Indoor Athletic Complex

By Sarah Lentz
editor@wayneherald.com

When Mike Powicki became Wayne State College's Athletic Director eight years ago, one change he knew he wanted to make was to the Carlson Natatorium, the 25-yard long pool facility that connected the Rec Center to Rice Auditorium. While the pool, initially poured in 1964, was getting some use from community members, it also had leaking issues and wasn't getting lots of student use. After some inspection and repairs in the meantime, the natatorium's fate was sealed.

"We invested $50,000 in a liner for the pool (and) that didn't fix it, so they identified that it most likely was some kind of issue way down into the drainage system where we'd have to tear the whole thing up and basically build a brand new pool," Powicki said.

Facing a huge problem with a leaky pool and serious need for more multi-use space on campus, the decision was made to begin fundraising efforts to create what is now named the Kirk Gardner Indoor Athletic Complex.

The over $1 million project was nearly 100 percent funded through fundraising, something Powicki was proud of. A donation of $300,000 from the Gardner Foundation also helped make the project possible.

Construction began on the space in January. Mechanics for the pool were removed, and a specialty construction company filled the pool and surrounding area with high-density foam to fill and level the space with rock and sand. After the level floor was set, two types of turf was installed to make the space useful to multiple sports.

Wakefield school board meets ahead of new year starting

Most Wakefield Community Schools students will have their first day of the new school year on Thursday, Aug. 20. Some plans for re-opening with COVID-19 restrictions were still being discussed at Wakefield's Board of Education meeting on Monday night.

Wakefield Community Schools is requiring all students and staff to wear masks while in the building. Visitors will not be admitted at this time. If parents or guardians have not done so yet, the school asks they provide a current email address so that communication can be sent via email.

During the meeting, a resolution for the 2020-2021 School Re-opening was discussed. One item of discussion was whether superintendent Dr. Mike Moody wanted to specify a set number of days teachers could use as COVID-19 related sick days. Moody told the board he did not want to set a limit at this time and wanted instructors to get well and work from home if that's what they needed to recover.

It was also re-affirmed that students will need to be engaged online if they are home sick on doctor's orders. Wakefield Community Schools will be utilizing Google Classroom if they need online learning this year.

Moody informed the board that the school's Wellness Committee had a successful year. The committee won a Healthy Schools award and received a grant, free hand sanitizer stations, hand sanitizer refills, handwashing kits to show younger

"We have two different kinds of turf there," Powicki said. "We have some taller-ply turf that would be more applicable to baseball, softball, football, and around the edges we put some lower-ply turf. We actually put some golf holes in there so our golfers can putt and do some different things like that."

With sand volleyball added as an official sport, Powicki said the complex can give the team another surface to use and hone skills. Speed and agility drills for all sports can be done in the space and it could be used in classes and for intramural sports.

"The idea is that, that space can be changed (and) shift around and used for all sorts of activities, whether it's the general student population or club sports or our college athletes," Powicki said.

Above, three dividing nets were installed so the space can serve multi-purposes at one time and can be used as batting cages. The natatorium had space above that previously served that purpose, but in the Gardner Indoor Athletics Complex, the upper space has been converted into five new offices.

"You never think of 'oh great, you get to add office space,' but for us over here, as we've been trying to increase the number of sports and do some of those kind of things, we literally ran out of office space," Powicki said.

Final touches are just finishing up in the space and Powicki said he hopes to have the space finished and coaches in their new offices by the time the new semester starts next week. All in all, Powicki said having the new space is a benefit to campus life.

"Just to have another space to kind of alleviate the Rec Center and just provide an alternative surface for our students to do some things, I think, is a pretty big win," he said.

children the importance of handwashing, a face recognition temperature scanner, 10 infrared thermometers and more.

A new iPad policy was adopted. This year, all Wakefield students will receive an iPad at the beginning of the year in the event that they will have to move to online learning. In the past, students with iPads had to pay the school $50 for usage. High School principal Matt Farup said he was uncomfortable with the practice as it didn't fall within the school's obligation to provide a free education.

The next Wakefield Community Schools Board of Education meeting will be held on Monday, Sept. 14 with a budget hearing beginning at 5:20 p.m. in the Media Center.

Opening of school plan, budget on board agenda

By Clara Osten
clara@wayneherald.com

The plan for beginning the 2020-2021 school year and the district's budget for the coming year were discussed at length during Monday's regular meeting of the Wayne Community Schools' Board of Education.

Superintendent Dr. Mark Lenihan presented detailed information on the re-opening plan for the new school year.

Lenihan shared information from the Northeast Public Health Department on the recommended procedures for students who may be exhibiting symptoms of COVID-19.

He said the health department "really stresses the importance of wearing masks" and that the first question to be asked in a situation where someone tests positive for the virus is "were they wearing a mask?" If those around the person testing positive were wearing masks, they will be allowed to remain in school.

The district has been working throughout the summer to develop a plan for building time in the schedule when students will not have to wear masks. Also being stressed are good hand hygiene and social distancing.

"We are hopeful things will go well and are looking forward to starting school this week," Lenihan said.

He said the number of students for the coming year may be slightly different than originally projected due to several parents choosing to delay the start of school for their kindergarten students and other factors.

Alina Surber

Information was presented on the district's budget for the coming fiscal year.

Lenihan told the board that the current budget is based on last year's property valuation. The levy for the coming year will not be set until the new valuations are announced on Aug. 20.

The 2020-2021 fiscal year includes a $350,000 increase in the General Fund budget. This is an increase of less than two percent in this portion of the budget. The majority of the increase is staff salaries.

Lenihan explained some of the items in budget that are seeing changes, both increases and decreases.

Board discussion included the amount needed in the district's cash reserve. The general recommendation is to have three months' worth of expenses in reserve. The proposed budget would result in $2.4 million in the fund, which is nearly that amount.

New staff members were introduced during the meeting.

They include Vicki Smith, who will be teaching junior high science classes; Alina Surber, who will be teaching Family & Consumer Science classes; Nichelle Stolzer

FFA members compete in virtual state competitions

Starting on July 16 and ending on Aug. 4, Wayne FFA members competed in eight different Career Development Events.

These state-level competitions were supposed to be held during the State FFA Convention in early April. However, due to COVID-19, the convention was canceled and all components went online. This included sessions, awards, recognition, and competitions. Many agricultural educators across the state stepped up to host, proctor, or coordinate these competitions and awards. Chapters across the state then either competed in their schools or their homes.

In order for a member to compete in State CDEs, they first had to qualify at the district level. For some higher interest competitions, members had to take a test at the chapter level in order to earn a spot on the district team. Students are selected for a CDE team based on their test performance (if applicable), their previous experience, and their future career interest.

The first place winner in each CDE wins a $500 scholarship to UNL if they declare a College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources (CASNR) major. Members also earn a ribbon if they place in the top-half (purple, blue, red, or white). The top 10 competitors in each competition are recognized "on-stage" as well as the top five teams.

On July 16 members of the Wayne FFA competed in Farm and Agribusiness Management. This contest consisted of terms, definitions, current events, management scenarios, outcomes, and courses of action related to Farm Business Management.

Trevor DeBoer earned first in this competition and a purple ribbon. Josh Lutt and Amara Hurlbert earned red ribbons and Emily Armstrong helped the team earn a sixth place finish and a blue ribbon.

Wayne FFA members competed in Agricultural Communications on July 20. Each member competes in a different component of communications and then their scores are added together for a team score.

Noah Lutt competed in video production and earned eighth place and a red ribbon. Madison Kaup competed in website design and earned ninth place and a white ribbon. Faith Junck earned second place in opinion writing and earned a purple ribbon. Josh Lutt's score in journalistic writing assisted the team in securing a seventh place finish and a red.

Food Science was held on July 21. In this competition, teams go through a product development scenario. They also are tested on food borne illnesses, correct food preparation, and correct safety measures. The team earned a fourth place finish and a blue ribbon. Casey Koenig, Trevor DeBoer, and Faith Junck earned blue ribbons while Amara Hurlbert earned a red ribbon.

Also on July 21, members competed in Environmental and Natural Resources. Students are tested on ecosystems, soil usage, water usage, species identification, among other various natural resource concepts. Josh Lutt, Erin O'Reilly, and Karlee Janke earned red ribbons. Ellie Jech's score also contributed to the team, which earned a red ribbon as well.

Wayne FFA members competed in Ag Sales on July 24. In this contest, members are given a product that they have to sell to a judge individually and as a team. They also have a test about sales concepts and knowledge.

This year's product was Purina chicken feed.

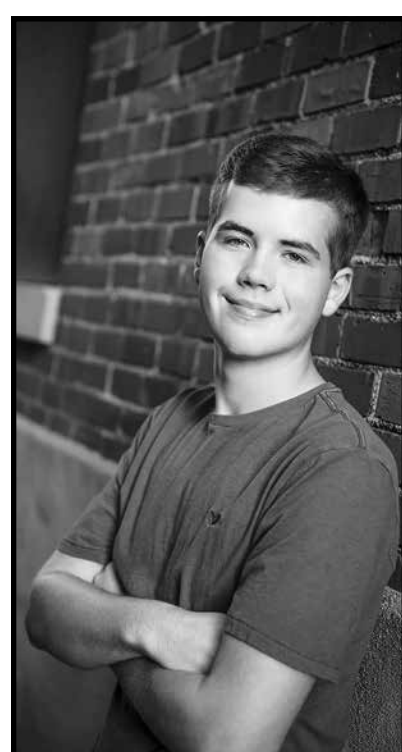

"Thank you to John Magnuson who came in earlier in the year to prepare students for this contest at districts," said FFA Advisor Toni Rasmussen.

Korrina Niemann, Tyler Reinhardt and Faith Junck earned reds individually with Mia Nelsen's score contributing to the team earning a red as well.

On July 28, FFA members competed in welding competition. Each team member specializes in a different process. They take a test, read a schematic, and weld based on that schematic. The welds were then mailed to Southwest High School where they were judged.

"Thank you to Tony Cantrell for letting us use the shop and helping to coordinate materials," Rasmussen said.

Reid Korth specialized in

oxy-acetylene. Alex Echtenkamp welded using TIG (GTAW). Colton Vovos was the stick/arc (SMAW) welder. Cade Janke earned a red ribbon in wire/MIG (GMAW).

Two FFA members participated in horse evaluation on July 31. In this competition, they judged performance classes, halter classes, completed questions on classes, gave reasons, and took an equine test.

Ella Leseberg was state champion in the junior division for this competition. Riley Haschke was a great contributor to the team as well who then earned fifth place.

Board members tabled any action on adding bowling as a sport for the coming school year.

Lenihan told the board he has received more information from the Nebraska School Athletic Association (NSAA) on the requirement, but is waiting on the possibility of forming a co-op with another school. He said the Wayne High students will be served in the coming weeks to determine the actual interest in the sport.

It is anticipated that having a bowling program would cost between $8,000 and $10,000.

Arts Council seeking designers

The Nebraska Arts Council is seeking designs for a new license plate. Nebraska Legislative Bill 942, introduced by Omaha Sen. Megan Hunt, passed July 31. This bill allows the Nebraska Arts Council to create a new specialty license plate. The proceeds from sales ($5 for a regular plate/$40 for a message plate) will provide funding support for newly passed legislation for Creative Districts throughout Nebraska.

The council believes the Nebraska arts community should have the opportunity to design the state's arts plate. Now is the public's chance to envision an iconic license plate that renders Nebraska in a unique, artistic and exciting way.

Due to the Legislature's late session, the timeline is short. Those interested are asked to submit their license plate design by Aug. 31.

The selected artist will receive $500 for their design, and bragging rights that their design is on cars throughout the state.

Northeast Nebraska RC&D receives grant from Nebraska Environmental Trust

Northeast Nebraska RC&D announced that it will receive $38,740 from the Nebraska Environmental Trust for the "Early Detection and Integrated Management of Invasive Plants" project. The Trust Board announced funding for the project at its meeting on June 11 in Lincoln.

This is the first year of award with a potential for second and third year funding totaling $38,740 and $39,040 respectively. The project is one of the 118 projects receiving $20,000,000 in grant awards from the Nebraska Environmental Trust this year. Of these, 73 were new applications and 45 are carry-over projects.

The Northeast Nebraska Weed Management Area (NNWMA), established in 2004, seeks to use innovative, collaborative and effective means to reduce the ecological and economic impacts of noxious weed infestations. Through this effort, the partnership strives to increase awareness of issues in the hopes that it will lead to more effective conservation actions.

NNWMA works collaboratively to conduct environmentally sound and integrated approaches to invasive and noxious weed management and protection of biological diversity across NNWMA; identifies and contains invasive and noxious weed infestations resulting from flooding early in their establishment; increases awareness and appreciation of biological diversity in the area, and increases awareness of threats that invasive species present, economically and ecologically.

The objectives of this funding are to: support collaborative efforts of NNWMA to control the spread of invasive and noxious plant infestations that threaten native habitats, range, and agricultural lands; reduce herbicide use to spot treatments resulting in cost savings to landowners, agencies, and others as well as protecting non-target herbaceous species; increase NNWMA outreach effectiveness through field tours, presentations, news releases, and web page information

The Nebraska Legislature created the Nebraska Environmental Trust in 1992. Using revenue from the Nebraska Lottery, the Trust has provided over $328 million in grants to over 2,300 projects across the state. Anyone - citizens, organizations, communities, farmers and businesses - can apply for funding to protect habitat, improve water quality, and establish recycling programs in Nebraska. The Nebraska Environmental Trust works to preserve, protect and restore our natural resources for future generations.

State FFA

The final competition that Wayne FFA members took part in was Veterinary Science. In this contest, members identify parasites, breeds, and tools, and veterinary terms among other various veterinary knowledge.

Emily Eilers placed fifth in this competition and earned a purple ribbon. Meghan Spahr earned a red ribbon, Korrina Niemann earned a white ribbon, and Karlee Janke's score contributed to the team earning a red as well.

"Overall, Wayne FFA did very well in virtual competitions. As you might imagine, some of these competitions were very difficult to hold over zoom. However, as these students have been faced with many challenges and overcome, this was no different. We're anxious to see how this year's competitions go and look forward to competing again," Rasmussen said.

Service learning comes in many forms

Most of us have done some type of a community service project. Maybe picking up trash along a roadway, donating resources for a food drive, or visiting residents at a nursing home.

This is one step to be more community focused for youth audiences. A core activity of positive youth development programs should deal with service learning opportunities for youth. What does this mean? Youth are able to examine the issues in the community and develop a plan to achieve the project. They are able to apply knowledge, skills, and critical thinking to the problem.

There are four types of service learning. They include the following:

- Direct: the project directly meets a need in the community (trail building, mentoring, visiting the elderly)

Thurston County

Jennifer Hansen

Extension Educator

UNL Extension

- Indirect: the project supports direct service that meets a need in the community (organizing volunteers, mailings, raising funds)

- Raising Awareness: the project outcome is designed to enlighten and educate a group on an issue or problem (community health campaign, texting and driving, etc.)

- Advocacy: the project selects one side of an issue and advocates for or promotes it (writing letters to the editor, researching and testifying for legislation, creating a protest or rally)

There are three components to a service learning project: youth involvement, meaningful service, and reflection. Youth will be able to learn valuable skills as they plan, organize, and implement the project. They may see a need in a community that adults have not addressed before, and adults play a critical role in helping youth prioritize the community needs.

A key component of service learning is reflection which occurs before, during, and following the project. They are able to reflect on the experience to discuss the "What", "So What", and "Now What". Youth are able to make the connections of the service project and how it will influence lifelong learning.

Here are the five steps to implement a service learning project:

- Assess and identify the need;
- Plan and prepare;
- Experience meaningful service;
- Analysis and evaluation;
- Celebration

Service learning ties in well with citizenship and leadership development for youth audiences. What does citizenship mean to you? The definition of citizenship is the character of an individual viewed as a member of society. This definition happens to follow the mission of the National 4-H program to empower young people to be well-informed citizens who are actively engaged in their communities and the world. 4-H is a valuable program to teach all youth about using positive character traits to help within the community.

The service learning projects that youth are able to address can fall into the 150 different 4-H projects offered in Nebraska 4-H. The 4-H youth can challenge themselves to try new service activities within their projects to develop of sense of volunteerism for their community.

Learning about service learning, citizenship and leadership happens all the time within 4-H activities. Youth might serve as an officer of a club to learn about parliamentary procedure, join a committee to plan out an event for the club, or be a part of the service learning project.

One of the capstone events familiar to many is the 4-H CWF (Citizenship Washington Focus) trip that youth attend during their high school career. 4-H teens learn about citizenship and how they are a contributing member of society; travel to Washington, D.C., to see the United States government in action and learn about the past through historical sites; and plan a service learning project that they could complete after the project.

We all need to have hope in these challenging times Caption This!

These are challenging days, we may feel hopeful, hopeless, angry, fearful, tired, resigned, and exhausted and that might be in just an hour!

COVID 19 interrupted the lives of millions of people in this country and around the world. The impact of COVID is not just health-related, but includes short and long-term economic concerns for individuals, communities, and the world.

In addition, there is climate change, the resumption of federal executions and violence toward men and women of color. These are just a few of the pressing issues of our society. It can be challenging to remain hopeful when so much anxiety surrounds us.

Recently on a friend's Facebook post I came across an excerpt of a book written by C.S. Lewis, a British theologian. Lewis is one of my favorite theologians and authors. Lewis was an adult in the late 1940's, a time when there was a near-constant fear of atomic warfare. Lewis' essay, "On Living in an Atomic Age" from a book entitled "Present Concerns: Journalistic Essays," offers valuable insight to past and present days when darkness, whether from COVID or other concerns threaten to overwhelm us.

Lewis wrote: "In one way we think a great deal too much of the atomic bomb. How are we to live in an atomic age? I am tempted to reply: 'Why, as you would have lived in the sixteenth century when the plague visited London almost every year, or as you would have lived in a Viking age when raiders from Scandinavia might land and cut your throat any night; or indeed, as you are already living in an age of cancer, an age of syphilis, an age of paralysis, an age of air raids, an age of railway accidents, an age of motor accidents.'

"In other words, do not let us begin by exaggerating the novelty of our situation. Believe me, dear sir or madam, you and all whom you love were already sentenced to death before the atomic bomb was invented: and quite a high percentage of us were going to die in unpleasant ways. We had, indeed, one very great advantage over our ancestors—anaesthetics; but we have that still. It is perfectly ridiculous to go about whimpering and drawing long faces because the scientists have added one more chance of painful and premature death to a world which already bristled with such chances and in which death itself was not a chance at all, but a certainty.

"This is the first point to be made: and the first action to be taken is to pull ourselves together. If we are all going to be destroyed by an atomic bomb, let that bomb when it comes find us doing sensible and human things — praying, working, teaching, reading, listening to music, bathing the children, playing tennis, chatting to our friends over a pint and a game of darts — not huddled together like frightened sheep and thinking about bombs. They may break our bodies (a microbe can do that) but they need not dominate our minds."

Lewis's words translate into our current situation reminding us that we must not fail to have hope, we must not to give into fear whether driven by an atomic bomb, a pandemic, or any other darkness. We must pull ourselves together as individuals and a society. Lewis' words encourage us to continue to do sensible and human things like praying, teaching and working, things that help us revive body and spirit. During this pandemic, each of us must do our best to keep ourselves and our families safe, wash your hands, wear a mask and social distance, let us continue to "...do sensible and human things...." as we care for each other.

Even during hard things, consider your blessings and give thanks. You can still visit with family and friends via phone or video conference, take a walk on a moonlight night filled with stars.

The Apostle Paul reminds us that hope originates with God, hope is not rooted in perfect circumstances or our ideals. Hope is rooted in Christ, His sacrifice for us, and the promise of being united with Him one day when all hard things cease.

Christians have the assurance of knowing who holds their future no matter what comes our way in this life. The Apostle Paul wrote in Romans 8:39-39: "And I am convinced that nothing can ever separate us from God's love. Neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither our fears for today nor our worries about tomorrow—not even the powers of hell can separate us from God's love. No power in the sky above or in the earth below—indeed, nothing in all creation will ever be able to separate us from the love of God that is revealed in Christ Jesus our Lord."

On those hard days when the world seems a scary place, remember to do those things which revive your body and soul and that no matter how dark the world may seem, remember there is no calamity, whether bomb or pandemic, that can separate us from the love and grace of God.

Does obedience matter to God?

Often I engage with people in conversations about God and the Bible. Many times I do not know where they stand with God until we begin talking. More often than not, I hear "I believe in God", "I pray", "I've asked for forgiveness", "I've been baptized", or even "Jesus is my Savior and Lord."

Yet, in the midst of these religious professions I have noticed a glaring problem. There is a wide chasm between their profession and daily lifestyle. The two do not line up. When I observe this and ask a question like, "It's wonderful you state that Jesus is your Savior and Lord. Do you obey Him?" Then I hear the sound of crickets.

Somehow, somehow, they have been exposed to a teaching that tells them obedience to God does not matter. They have been taught that if they get all the right religious professions down and throw in a few important religious duties along with that, then God's grace will cover them and their home in heaven is certain. Is this true?

Within days of Jesus' death and resurrection, He was spending time with His disciples teaching them, preparing them for what was to come. He stressed the importance of obedience to Him four times, saying, "If you love me, you will keep my commandments . . .", "Whoever has my commandments and keeps them, he it is who loves me.", "If anyone loves me, he will keep my word . . .", "Whoever does not love me does not keep my words" (John 14:15,21,23-24).

Jesus, the Master Teacher, was emphasizing an absolutely essential truth in the Christian life – obedience to God matters. Notice the kind of obedience Jesus talked about was not mere rule keeping. It was an obedience that springs from a heart of love for Christ. Not a romantic love that is just feeling, but a love that is rational, deliberate, sacrificial and willing to lay down its life in suffering and death for Him if necessary, just like Jesus modeled through the cross.

In addition to the obedience question, another one is, "You say Jesus is your Savior and Lord . . . , but do you love Him?"

The lyrics in our modern worship music extols the love of God, but where are the lyrics that also sings about our obedience to Him? Our evangelism proclaims the love of God in Christ inviting people to pray and make professions, rather than calling them to take up their cross and obey the gospel's challenging call of repentance from sin. Our churches teach the love of God through biblical principles, keys and steps to be followed in order to live a better life, rather than biblical commands to be obeyed in order to live a holy life.

The church has created a whole generation of followers of Christ that elevate professions and feelings above the way of the cross. For it is rooted in a sacrificial love that is demonstrated in daily obedience to the Word of God and the leadership of the Holy Spirit.

What I am writing about is so important. Eternal souls are at stake. Every one of us is heading toward an appointment with God our Creator on Judgment Day. This should instill a healthy fear of God, and sense of accountability within each of us. As the Lord Jesus will one day examine us, are we just going to offer profession after profession? Jesus predicts this will actually happen. He once said people will come to Him on that day and say, "Lord, Lord" and He will reply, "Why do you call me 'Lord, Lord' and not do what I tell you?" (Luke 6:46)

Obedience is non-negotiable. It is a must! It is an expression of saving faith and love toward Christ, who obeyed His own Father and gave all for Him. Let us follow the example of Jesus. And let us begin by obeying the call to repentance, to turn from what we know is wrong and to God with all our heart.

A prayer for you - "Lord God, help us as pastors, evangelists, missionaries and all believers to take your call to obedience seriously. Help us to go beyond teaching professions and principles to teaching obedience to the King of Kings. And may all believers everywhere humble themselves before your Word no matter the cost. In Jesus' name. Amen."

The Prairie Doc Behind the mask

Last week I looked in the mirror and saw something I don't usually see, a breakout of pimples. As a dermatologist I am fortunate enough to have the right tricks to keep my skin blemish free most of the time (some lucky genetics don't hurt either). I'm also seeing a lot more acne and rosacea breakouts in my patients over the last few months. What might be the culprit? Wearing a face mask.

As the COVID-19 pandemic rages on, wearing a face mask is one of the most important ways we can prevent the spread of the disease. I urge you all to wear a cloth mask when you can't social distance and when in public spaces. The data regarding face masks is clear, but our skin doesn't always behave itself with frequent wearing. The good thing is that there are some simple steps you can take to keep your skin healthy while wearing a mask to protect those around you.

Skin issues from wearing masks can include dry skin, acne, and rosacea. Make sure to wash your face before and after wearing masks with a gentle cleanser. Cleansers are different than soaps and can clean the skin without removing normal oils. Apply a moisturizer that is tailored to your skin type: gel moisturizers for oily skin (or during those humid summer days), lotion for normal skin, and cream for dry skin. Try to get this moisturizer on after each time you wash your face as well as before bed. Dry lips are best treated with plain Vaseline.

If you're going to be wearing a mask for longer periods of time it's best to skip wearing makeup under the mask. Treat your skin gently and avoid harsh treatments like chemical peels or exfoliating. Some of the medicines we use to treat acne with can ironically cause more skin irritation while wearing masks, so be sure to discuss with your physician if you are having problems.

Lastly, be sure you are wearing the correct mask and washing them frequently. Cotton is the least irritating fabric and anyone with acne or rosacea should make sure that the layer that touches the face is cotton. Masks that fit well (snug but not tight) will be less irritating than masks that are too big and slide around on the face.

Hopefully, these simple tips help your skin stay healthy as you continue to wear your mask!

Missouri River Outdoor Expo at Ponca State Park cancelled for 2020

The 2020 Missouri River Outdoor Expo at Ponca State Park has been cancelled due to the unpredictable nature of the COVID-19 health situation and potential public health restrictions for the fall.

The expo, originally set for Sept. 19-20, typically is a field trip destination for schools across the state, as well as a draw for families who love the outdoors. The event features hands-on activities, such as rock climbing, shooting, outdoor cooking and competitions, all of which provide limited opportunity to socially distance, restrict group size or appropriately disinfect between users to reduce the potential for spread of COVID-19.

"The Missouri River Outdoor Expo prides itself on introducing and reinroducing families to a wide variety of outdoor opportunities," said Scott Oligmueller, Ponca State Park superintendent with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. "We thank the thousands of expo guests for their understanding at this time, as well as their commitment to conservation and traditions of our outdoor heritage. We intend to bring back the event in 2021, a year that will mark the 100th anniversary of Nebraska State Parks."

The decision to cancel the popular event was unanimously rendered by the Expo Advisory Board, which consists of Game and Parks representatives and numerous private sector representatives and volunteers.

Nebraska LEAD programming postponed through August 2021

Members of the Nebraska Leadership Education/Action Development (LEAD) classes 38 and 39, will pause their programming and resume in the fall of 2021.

The Nebraska Agriculture Leadership Council (NALC) Board of Directors unanimously decided to postpone seminars and other programming for members who are involved in production agriculture and agribusiness for the 2020-2021 year.

"To suspend regular programming from September 2020 through August 2021 was not an easy decision, but one the board felt was in the best interests of all people involved with the program," said Ed Woeppel NALC Board Chair.

"Our discussions centered on two major issues; the safety of participants, staff, and others involved in programming; and secondly, the quality of the program."

Given continued uncertainties about the spread of COVID-19, the board was unable to see how programming could occur in a way that would safeguard the health of everyone involved without compromising participants experiences.

"The foundation of the Nebraska LEAD program is not only the content, but also includes the experiences that participants have while in the program that allows them to truly develop as leaders," said Richard Bischoff, associate vice chancellor for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The program is Nebraska's premier two-year agricultural leadership development program, built over 39 years.

"While we will be pausing for this year, we will not be sitting still. We will have some new activities for the LEAD 39 fellows in order to keep them connected. We will use the year to conduct a 'deep dive' into all aspects of the program. We will ensure that we are providing the highest quality programming possible," Woeppel said. "Our goal is to come back even stronger when this pandemic is behind us."

The Nebraska LEAD Program is Nebraska's two-year premier agricultural development program. Nebraska LEAD is sponsored by the nonprofit Nebraska Agricultural Leadership Council in cooperation with the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and 11 other institutions of higher education throughout Nebraska.

Nebraska LEAD officer are located at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Nebraska Resource Conservation and Development Council Inc. receives grant from Nebraska Environmental Trust

Nebraska Resource Conservation & Development Council Inc. announced recently that it will receive $13,471 from the Nebraska Environmental Trust for the "Household Hazardous Waste Collections" project. The Trust Board announced funding for the project at its meeting on June 11 in Lincoln. The project is one of the 118 projects receiving $20,000,000 in grant awards from the Nebraska Environmental Trust this year. Of these, 73 were new applications and 45 are carryover projects.

This project will properly dispose of and/or recycle approximately 12 ton of household hazardous waste (HHW) over a three-year period and provide citizen education on how to safely manage HHW in the home through recycling, sharing, proper storage and reuse. They'll also learn what is appropriate to bring to the collections.

Citizens continue to ask for help with disposal HHW materials that they or their families have accumulated over the years because they know throwing them in the trash or pouring them down the drain isn't proper. The benefits of proper disposal of HHW are many:

- Conserves resources and energy that would be used to produce more products

- Reuse of hazardous household products saves money and reduces the need for hazardous substances to be kept around individual homes and properties

- Proper disposal prevents pollution

Two collection events will be held annually within the Northeast Nebraska Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Council's area. Monthly educational information will be on the RC&D's website, Facebook page, sent to radios and newspapers. Targeted groups are individual citizens, tribal members, and general households within the region. Communities will serve as local host sites.

The Nebraska Legislature created the Nebraska Environmental Trust in 1992. Using revenue from the Nebraska Lottery, the Trust has provided over $328 million in grants to over 2,300 projects across the state. Any-one citizens, organizations, communities, farmers and businesses- can apply for funding to protect habitat, improve water quality and establish recycling programs in Nebraska. The Nebraska Environmental Trust works to preserve, protect and restore our natural resources for future generations.

Remembering Mike - More hills to climb

You may have noticed a couple lapsed weeks without The Farmer's Wife this summer. That's because the Big Farmer was declining physically, and as I told Clara earlier, my well was empty.

As you know, Mike had polio in 1952, the last big epidemic. He had to leave the farm in 1990 because of something called post polio syndrome. They theorize that after the initial bout with the virus, some healthy neurons took over for the damaged neurons and some function was restored. That certainly happened for him. But, they add, the healthy ones were doing double duty and thus, were wearing out.

By pacing himself, resting when he needed to, and incorporating accessible devices, Mike was able to live thirty more years. In 2017, he wrote an autobiography. It was called "More Hills to Climb." The title, of course, was two fold; he farmed land with many hills, and he had encountered many obstacles to that occupation and others.

Just as he made it his goal to finish the book in time for Christmas, he had a habit of setting goals and then working to attain them.

His most recent goal was to live to be 90. His birthday was in September. Seven of the nine members of his confirmation class were still alive, and two had already reached that milestone.

In May, when I missed the first deadline, he had a bout with extreme vertigo. Many of you have experienced that. His hung on for days, making it very difficult to even get out of bed. With physical therapy and the Espey maneuvers, he conquered that.

He was also dealing with an open area on a heel that necessitated first, weekly dressing changes; then, daily; coupled with visits to the Wound Clinic, when we had to have our faithful bath aide, all 6'6" of him, help get him there and back.

The heel was often painful, usually in the middle of the night. Isn't that always the way? Finally, it became too hard for him to navigate with one assistant, so we hired some helpers. And then, even two people were not enough. He was very weak.

On July 31st, we admitted to hospice and we told the kids to come home. (I had made arrangements to go into a nursing home the following week, where they were going to give us a double room and let me stay there, quarantined). But God had other plans.

That weekend was a gift! They took turns at the bedside, they dug out farm pictures, they looked at 4-H record books, they reminisced. And on Monday morning, he thought he should get up and get to the kitchen for coffee! How I wished he could do that! Actually, except for a few spoonfuls of ice cream that afternoon, he had only sips of water and coffee; he simply did not want anything else.

He dozed a lot. There was a period of 36 hours that were restless, during which we gave anti anxiety medications prescribed by the hospice team. Kay spent a long night, followed by one with our three-fourths doctor grandson, and then, on Wednesday, the 5th, he climbed that last hill to meet Jesus!! The goal to make it to September 28 was not met. He couldn't wait any longer.

Had he been in that nursing facility, there would have been no visits. People are dying alone in some places. Here in Lincoln, if it is a Hospice situation, visits can be arranged, but it would have been nothing like we had here at home.

We had opportunity to tell him we loved him, as if he didn't know that. We know he dearly wanted to stay with us, but we also know he knew where he was going. The words to the contemporary song of a few years ago keep going through my head; "If you could see me now, I'm walking straight and tall." When I told my friend, Mary, that, she responded, "in your family's eyes, he always walked straight and tall!" Yes!

It's been heart-warming to hear from old and new friends, knowing that many prayers were offered, and I think you all are going to have to come visit to get away with all this food!

When you read this, his body will have been laid to rest next to his parents and his sister, at Hillcrest in Norfolk. But his spirit continues to live with me. I get to use the remote now, and I can go to bed when I want to instead of having to wait until I get him there. Some evenings, when I was very tired, that seemed to be such a task. Now, of course, I wish I could do it one more time. One more time to tell him how much I admired him, how much I respected him, how much I loved him.

Now, I'll have to wait until I, too, climb that last hill.

Transforming manure from 'Waste' to 'Worth' in rural Nebraska

By Karla Melgar,
Graduate Research Assistant,
University of Nebraska-Lincoln

The misconception about manure being just a waste and harmful by-product of the cattle and livestock industry is still a big concern.

A group of researchers and extension educators have joined efforts with farmers across Nebraska to find the value of manure as a source of nutrients in crop fields in the Sandhills and reduce the environmental impacts caused by this industry. At the same time, they are trying to incorporate residues from red cedar trees that are currently threatening the Nebraskan wildlife and ecosystems due to its rapid expansion.

Animal feeding operations in Nebraska generate significant amounts of manure that can provide essential plant nutrients, organic matter, and active microbes to cropland. Additionally, Eastern red cedar tree (Juniperus virginiana) encroachment in grazing land has become an economic and ecological threat. Some farmers believe that, together, manure and woody biomass (created from tree management activities) could benefit soil quality.

Finding manure and woodchips benefits to the soils of Nebraska

Their interest in testing this idea helped launch a three-year study to test the impacts of these treatments in small field plots at two farms in the Sandhills.

Results of those studies showed that woody biomass combined with manure amendments have a positive impact on soil physical properties, as it increases sorptivity, improves soil organic matter and decreases bulk density. More information regarding the benefits of manure on crop fields can be found at <https://water.unl.edu/article/manure-nutrient-management/how-can-animal-manure-help-my-soils-be-healthier-and-more>.

In late 2018, this project was expanded to include on-farm research using large plots (approximately 40' wide and 350' long) at four locations across the state of Nebraska – near Saint Paul, Pierce, Ainsworth and Brule. Two more study sites have been added this year – near Julian and Overton.

The primary goal is to evaluate potential short- and long-term impacts on soil quality and crop productivity of utilizing manure and red cedar woodchips as soil amendments on cropland that has not received manure for several years. Plots were established at the initial four sites prior to the 2019 growing seasons to accommodate at least three different treatments (manure, manure+woody biomass, and control plots that received only inorganic fertilizer) with each treatment replicated four times. Manure sources for these sites included beef feedlot manure at two sites and bedded beef barn manure or beef slurry manure at the other two sites.

At the site near Brule, woody biomass was replaced by coal char from a Colorado sugar beet processing plant since wood chips were not readily available. Preplant nitrogen was the same among all plots within a single site, whether supplied by manure, fertilizer, or a combination of both.

Soil samples were collected before treatment applications at all research sites to determine initial soil chemical, physical and biological properties. Subsequent samples were collected at the end of the 2019 cropping season and corn yield was determined for all research sites.

Soil and crop improvements after the first year of treatments

Results from the sites studied during 2019 indicate that applications of beef manure make significant contributions of nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and potassium (K) in crop fields without compromising yield, indicating that manure is a reliable source to replace preplant nitrogen normally delivered in inorganic fertilizers. There is no evidence that woody biomass contributed to soil acidification or nitrogen immobilization with surface application. Further applications over additional growing seasons are expected to generate measurable changes in soil physical and chemical properties.

Sugar beet coal char application produced an increase in soil organic matter, pH, and sulfate sulfur in the top two inches of the soil; however, a 16 percent yield decrease was observed following a single coal char application. Other studies have demonstrated yield benefits following cropland application of biochar or similar materials, so additional research is warranted before making definitive conclusions about the use of coal char as a soil amendment. Crop yields were not negatively impacted by any of the remaining treatments.

A second year of applications for all treatments except coal char (at the four original research sites) is expected to reveal further changes in soil composition and nutrient availability following the 2020 crop season.

Residual impacts of a single application of coal char will be studied at the site near Brule. The sites near Julian and Overton that were added prior to the 2020 growing season were laid out like the other sites and received swine slurry and beef feedlot manure, respectively, along with woody biomass, manure+woody biomass, and inorganic fertilizer as a control. Additional data collection to assess the potential of woody biomass to retain moisture will be evaluated in the plots near Julian where no irrigation is applied to the crops. Moisture sensors will be installed in each plot and data will be compared among treatments.

While it can take multiple years before changes in some soil properties can be measured, the immediate impacts from a single manure application include addition of organic matter and microbes that support the soil biological community, increased pH and increased electrical conductivity.

Likewise, the use of manure to meet pre-plant crop nitrogen needs can have immediate positive impacts on crop growth. The guidelines for manure nitrogen credits can be found at this <https://water.unl.edu/article/manure-nutrient-management/proposed-changes-nebraska-recommendations-manure-nitrogen-credit>.

Mineral Balance and Bioavailability

Every season I read about the new, big item on the market that's a cure-all for any issues within your herd. Unfortunately, the truth is that the majority of the "added value" ingredients very rarely have any data to prove the so-called cure truly works. The good thing is that we have all been trained to read feed tags. But has the tag reading war caused us to forget about balanced nutrition?

Sorting through mineral options and brands can become a time-consuming task. That is why our feed sales team is here to help make that decision with you. We know every operation is different. We take the time to understand your herd's needs by visiting with you, the producer, and observing the herd to pinpoint any situation that may need to be addressed, such as over or under consumption of mineral, breeding issues, or health issues.

The right mineral program is driven by the feed and water your cattle consume. Forage and water analysis will determine mineral content and help you select the right mineral for your program. Keep in mind that not all mineral sources are created equal. Bioavailability can alter the absorption of trace minerals and reduce the full benefit of a mineral program. Decreased weaning weights, small weak calves, decreased milk production, reduced immunity, and poor conception rates can all result from a non-quality supplemental program. Costs increase with bioavailable mineral sources, but serve an important purpose when it comes to immunity, reproduction, and growth.

Studies from South Dakota State Extension show inorganics such as sulfates and chlorides are more available than oxides or carbonates, except for zinc oxide and magnesium oxide. Organic minerals are bonded to an amino acid, and bioavailability exceeds 100. These minerals provide an added benefit during times of stress, like weaning. Hydroxy minerals use covalent bonds that allow trace minerals to by-pass rumen digestion, further increasing the bioavailability. A balance of these minerals is very important. If levels are increased in some minerals, they may tie up the balance and reduce the bioavailability of another, thus decreasing the benefit on the mineral program.

When selecting a mineral program for your herd, always work closely with your nutritionist to determine what program is best for your operation. Also, remember that starting with feed and water analysis is critical. Central Valley Ag offers a wide variety of mineral programs and we can design one specifically for your herd.
