County Commissioners debate wind tower driveway placements

By Clara Osten. clara@wayneherald.com

Considerable debate on the placement of driveways for wind towers was held during Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

David Levy, representing Next-Era Energy and the Sholes Wind Project, spoke to the commissioners on the compromises that have taken place between his client and the county in regard to a number of driveway placements on the project.

He noted that there are still two driveways that raise concerns with safety.

Alternatives to the current location of one of the driveways would result in approximately a half acre of farm land being taken out of production.

Discussion was held on other options, including the cutting down of hills or filling in of the area to make it safer.

Mark Casey, Highway Superintendent and Mark Mainelli with Mainelli Wagner & Associates Inc. told the commissioners that they would work with engineers from NextEra to find a workable solution.

Discussion was held on what can be done until the situation is resolved. This includes installing signage in the area informing motorists of the driveways.

Doug Elting with Berggren Architects was at Tuesday's meeting to give an update on the courthouse renovation project.

He said paperwork was sent to the county and that a number of concerns, including leaks in the roof and sidewalk repair, have been completed.

During Tuesday's meeting County Treasurer Tammy Paustian updated the commissioners on interest rates on investments and requested the approval of a resolution establishing Fund 2580 COVID American Rescue Plan.

Paustian said interest rates on CDs are currently "very low." She noted she had moved some of the county's funds and changed the maturity dates of the CDS in an attempt to get better rates.

A recently signed law by President Biden will result in the county receiving $1.836.000 that needs to be spent by 2024. Paustian said the money has been put into a separate account and noted it would take slightly longer to access the money when it is needed. Additional information on how the money can be spent will be made available in the near future.

Wayne County Emergency Manager Nic Kemnitz presented a list of activities he will be involved with during the month of April. On the list is an Emergency Operations Planning Training that will take place with schools in the county this week. It will be a Zoom event.

Kemnitz will be attending the Nebraska

Association of Emergency Managers Conference in Grand Island April 14-16 and will take part in County Government Day at the Wayne National Guard Armory on April 19.

He told the commissioners that he and other agencies in the area will be holding an Emergency Response Planning meeting prior to the MayDay STOL event at the Wayne Municipal Airport April 28-May 1. Local agencies will coordinate what to do in case of an emergency during the event.

During Tuesday's meeting commissioners spent more than a half hour in executive session to discuss potential litigation with Herbst Construction over liquidated damages charged to the firm for BRO-7090 (20) Wayne West (aka the Temme Bridge). Grant applications for Wayne County Convention & Visitors Bureau funds were approved for the following events:

Cars-N-Carroll Show & Shine, Gene Topp Memorial Car Show, Winside Old Settlers & School Alumni Banquet, radio advertising and fair book printing for the Wayne County Fair, Best of Northeast Nebraska Backroads Passport Program, Henoween and the Wayne Chicken Show.

Looking Ahead in Wayne

By Wes Blecke, City Administrator

City Council meetings

Regular Wayne City Council meetings are at 5:30 p.m. on the first and third Tuesdays of each month at the Community Activity Center...until this COVID virus is behind us. Come on by virtually or in person and be an active citizen participant in City government!

Council retreat from March The City Council held one of its "mini" retreats on March 30 at the Fire Hall.

There were many issues discussed and direction given to staff to continue working toward Council's goals. If you are interested in these topics, read the minutes from the March 30th meeting. Those can be found on the City of Wayne website under "Government" and then 'Council."

The item that received a great deal of discussion was the lagoon decommissioning. A potential water feature (lake) was discussed. The question of whether the City is willing to pump water (fresh or storm) on a regular basis is one that must be answered before the feature can be seriously considered. Once that (if a lake and then where) is determined the rest of the planning can commence.

If you have recommendations for the area, please reach out to City staff or directly to your Council representatives or Mavor.

Water – Transmission Main The City continues to take samples on its new transmission main. After passing all required tests in August, subsequent tests for coliform bacteria have failed.

Herald

The City is discussing options with the engineer, the state and contractor to figure out how best to remedy this situation. The City will likely in the near future be chlorinating the water again. This is a very regular item on City Council agendas as of late if you are wanting to keep up with the issue.

Trail System

With the weather turning warmer and the grass starting to green up, it is a great time of the year for those evening walks.

I hope you are taking advantage of the trail system throughout the community. With an additional three miles added this past fall, the Wavne Trail System now has over five miles on concrete path.

One major enhancement to the system to hopefully take place next spring is renovating the old pool house in College Hill Park.

The City will be submitting for a grant later this summer to renovate the facility into meeting space as well as a restroom that can be accessed from the outside. We also want to tie this facility to the new trail to the north.

The City will know this fall if it receives this grant.

Northeast Community College veterinary technology program acquires tortoise; two boxed turtles

The cute and cuddly dogs and cats that routinely visit the Northeast Community College Veterinary Technology program lab have some mon. They go out on the road to get new competition vying for student's attention.

The story of George the tortoise and the turtles named Stevie and Peggy begins in Colorado when the stepsister of Instructor Dr. Kassie Wessendorf learned an animal rescue operation had to close due to the owners' declining health. That left the three reptiles in need of a new home. Wessendorf said her stepsister knew that Northeast was looking to expand its repertoire of animals.

"And so, I called the lady that runs the rescue and we chatted and then she determined that Northeast was going to be the best fit for them. I went out there in February and picked them up and brought them back for our students."

George is a 36-pound, 66-year-old African spurred tortoise, a desert animal that lives on land. He's been a little bit shy learning his new surroundings at the College and it has taken him some time to adjust. Wessendorf said he was previously in a house where there was approximately a half-dozen workers that would come in and take care of him. Now, he has 50 students who "love' to take care of him.

The turtles are native to western Nebraska and Colorado. Stevie was a pet and is approximately 30-years of age. After Peggy suffered a broken shell from being hit by a vehicle she was taken to the rescue to be patched up. Since no one is aware of her background, her age is unknown.

Wessendorf said laws state that such animals that are found are to be released within 100 yards of where they were located. However, in this case, since no one knew exactly where she was found, the rescue operation could not release her.

Wessendorf said Northeast has been working with a herpetology expert at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln to get the turtles back to a healthy state. Upon their arrival in Norfolk, Stevie and Peggy's beaks and claws were extremely overgrown. But since that time, their beaks have been filed down and their claws trimmed.

Student Whitney Podhradsky, Mount Vernon, SD, said reptiles are much different than dogs and cats which she and her fellow students normally work with.

"I'm not super into exotics, but it is an interesting area. I really never thought it was something l would be working with, but it is fun to see and experience them because it's not some something everybody is able to be around," she said. "It's not really common to see a 66-yearold tortoise roaming the halls."

Student Morgan Olson, Tekamah looks forward to working with the reptiles when she steps into the clinic. Reptiles are new to her, but it didn't take long for her to enjoy working with the new residents.

"So, being able to see them now and get hands on-activities with them has been so crazy, cool," Olson said. "Now that we get the chance to actually work with them, it'll open up other students' eyes and minds if they maybe want to go into more reptile-based clinics or not."

Wessendorf said one of the challenges with non-traditional pets, especially reptiles, is how they may be housed and cared for. By having them in the Northeast clinic, she said they can begin to show students how to properly deal with health issues.

The veterinary technicians will be able to take the information they learn as they prepare to go into clinics and educate pet owners. Wessendorf said as many owners fail or don't know how to properly care for their animals, students who are training to be technicians will have that experience to share with them.

"And it's a little more relatable to their potential clients because they can say, 'We had these in school, so I know exactly what to do."

George, Stevie and Peggy have made an impact on the students in the short time they have been at Northeast

"So, they're on their way to being a little bit better," Wessendorf said.

She said the boxed turtles, in this case, are misnamed and are technically tortoises as well; they're just smaller than George.

The distinction between a turtle and a tortoise, other than shell shape and size, is that shells on turtles are flatter and smoother, while the shells on tortoises have more of a dome and have a rougher texture. Turtles are semi aquatic meaning they swim in water and live on land. Tortoises are more terrestrial and generally live on land. They still do need to soak in water to assist with skin health.

As an herbivore, George eats only plants. Wessendorf has been working with Chartwells, Northeast's on-campus food service provider, to have staff save any leftovers from the salad bar in Hawks Point for them.

T.J. Feyerherm, director of dining services for Chartwells, said they provide a weekly average of 16 quarts of vegetable scraps that are still edible, but not for human consumption. This includes wilted lettuce, carrots, celery, arugula and dark greens, among others.

"Actually, right now, Chartwells is feeding about 90% of George's diet for us. So, the staff really enjoys it because they know the food doesn't go to waste," Wessendorf said. "And we enjoy it because we get a constant supply of fresh veggies, and he loves the variety.'

Stevie and Peggy are omnivores and eat fruit, vegetables, and insects, with their favorites being crickets and earthworms.

Wessendorf said it is important to bring reptile education into the vet tech program. She said they want students to be prepared and exposed for anything that may come into a clinic.

"If you go to a wildlife rehab you

"My students love them," Wessendorf said. "I cannot walk into this building without somebody either telling me a story about either George or the two little ones. or without catching somebody petting on them or loving on them. You know we see dogs and cats all the time. They're common, but we don't get to see these more exotic animals and so I think by bringing that here, it's boosted their passion."

And they have helped in other ways that students may not even realize. Wessendorf said each reptile has brought a calming effecting into the lab.

"We're in the second quarter of the first four weeks and the students are taking tests and they're getting stressed. So, when they get stressed out, they come and play with our animals to destress. They've had a lot of great education so far in the time we've had them, and they love them, they're just constantly asking questions, 'How do I feed and what do I feed and how often do we bathe' and this that and everything."

There is no question Olson has a favorite – it's definitely George.

"Everyone is so inspired by this slow creature, but he's so big. And the way he walks and his arms and everything when he eats stuff I mean everyone just really likes him, so it's a good environment. I do like to feed him – he's real fun! George is just one hunk of a man," she said with a chuckle. "He's cool and I never been around a tortoise so big in my life. It's amazing and awesome.'

All three reptile will be making the move to the program's new Veterinary Technology program building on Northeast's Acklie Family College Farm in Norfolk. George will essentially get the run of the whole floor of the new Reptile Room and the two little ones will have a space to stay as well. With an average lifespan of 80-to-100 years for tortoises and 50-to-60 years for turtles, they'll be sticking around for a while.

Pender Community Hospital & Medical Clinics welcomes Chelsea (Brinkman) Moore, PA-C

The Pender Community Hospital (PCH) and Medical Clinics have welcomed Chelsea (Brinkman) Moore, PA-C to their list of providers. She will primarily care for patients in the PCH emergency department. As a passionate, skilled medical professional and native of Pender, she will be an invaluable asset to the healthcare system.

Chelsea recently graduated from UNMC and is excited to be able to start her career in the same place that rooted her desire to help others. Being born and raised in Pender made it an easy decision to return and give back to the community that has supported her throughout her education.

"The desire to help others and also expand my knowledge in the ever-changing field of medicine is what inspired me to become a Physician Assistant," Moore said.

She will be stepping into a new role at PCH that will further support their mission to provide the highest quality care for patients. Her main care focus will be within the ER, where she will provide daytime coverage four days a week and night coverage twice a month. This will allow other providers to focus on patients at the medical clinic. Chelsea will also provide clinic cov-

The addition of another full-time provider at PCH is a great benefit to patients, staff and the community. In her downtime, Chelsea enjoys spending time with her husband Spencer, their corgi Archie, and friends and family. She also enjoys cooking, watching movies, reading books, and being outdoors as much as possible through camping and hiking.

Youth Lifetime Half-Price Permit drawing will award 150 permits

A drawing this spring will provide 150 young Nebraskans a chance to purchase a youth lifetime permit at half price.

In an effort to encourage young Nebraskans to participate in hunting and fishing, the Nebraska Game and Parks Foundation established its Youth Lifetime Half-Price Permit Program in 2006. This program gives residents age 15 and younger the opportunity to purchase a lifetime hunt, fish and other permits and stamps for half price.

CITY NOTICE

The Wayne Public Works Department wants to remind all residents that blowing lawn mower clippings into the street is prohibited and is a violation of City Code, Section 78-237. These grass clippings and other such debris left on the street will travel to the storm sewer inlet and can block them. The blocking of the inlets can cause local flooding from storm water accumulation.

Because the water from the storm sewers runs into Logan Creek, the grass clippings can negatively affect the creek with the chemical content in the grass from lawns that have been fertilized and treated with weed killer.

When mowing, please mow the first few rounds so that the grass blows in towards the lawn and when finished, sweep up the grass that has been thrown into the street.

Hunt turkeys safely this spring

Spring turkey hunters are eager to get back in the woods each year. They should not be so eager they overlook safety, though.

"Hunting continues to be one of the safest recreational activities there is, but there are a few things to remember as you match wits with a smart tom turkey," said Jackson Ellis, Nebraska Hunter Education coordinator.

Ellis has the following safety reminders for turkey hunters:

 Always keep the shotgun's muzzle pointed in a safe direction with the safety on. Keep your finger off the trigger until you have positively identified your target and are ready to fire.

•Always identify your target before taking a shot and be sure to have a safe backdrop. Never shoot at sounds, movement, through thick brush or at sky-lined game.

 Avoid wearing white, blue or red while turkey hunting as those colors often are displayed by male turkeys in the spring.

·Be prepared for any condition, as weather can change quickly in the spring.

•Ticks can be prevalent as the weather warms. Check yourself for ticks after a day afield, especially along waistbands and hair. Prodis permethrin, when used

Fighting for our rights Capitol View

The Wayne

era

President Joseph R. Biden, Jr. took office a little over two months

In his inaugural address, President Biden dedicated himself to "bringing America together." In the weeks since then, he has charted a very different course. Instead of governing by building consensus, he has aggressively pushed a farleft agenda. He refused to compromise with Republicans on stimulus legislation. Instead, he signed a coronavirus spending package that bailed out Blue states at the expense of states like Nebraska that had taken a better approach to the pandemic. He has also supported corporate bullying of states that pass laws he doesn't like.

The President's early actions have been divisive rather than unifying, and they fail to respect the rights of states in our federal system of government.

As President Biden forges ahead with a narrowly partisan agenda, the State of Nebraska will vigilantly guard our state's freedom. When the Obama Administration tried to claim powers belonging to the states, we successfully fought back in court. Nebraskans can expect us to take the same approach to the Biden Administration when its actions violate the rights we cherish.

Here are a few of President Biden's early initiatives that we are closely following:

Federal Takeover of State Elections

The number one priority of Congressional Democrats is HR 1, which would lead to a federal takeover of elections. Right now, elections are managed by the states. In Nebraska, we set the rules that we believe are best for Nebraska. Our state election laws have consistently overseen free and fair elections. Democrats want to erode the measures that ensure election integrity in our state through a federal takeover.

Squashing Religious Freedom

President Biden has made the passage of the Equality Act one of his top priorities for Congress. Don't let the name of the bill fool you. This bill is not about treating people fairly. It's an unprecedented attempt to punish Americans who have deeply held pro-life beliefs and traditional values on gender and sexuality. At its core, the bill is an assault on religious freedom. It specifically deprives Americans ended the Mexico City policy. This policy has been in effect under prolife administrations beginning with President Ronald Reagan and bans U.S. foreign aid for non-governmental family planning agencies that perform or promote abortions. By discontinuing the policy, the Biden Administration is authorizing taxpayer dollars to fund abortions around the world. The Biden Administration is also rewriting Title X rules to again allow the flow of federal tax dollars to abortion clinics issued an executive order on the an "economic redevelopment area" climate. It sets a goal of restricting "at least 30 percent of our lands and waters by 2030." The President has no constitutional authority to and this would potentially deprive people of their property rights. It would also harm small towns and rural communities.

Finally, economic development for the little guy

Commentary by J.L. Schmidt, Statehouse Correspondent Nebraska Press Association

They weren't sitting around the fire pit singing Kumbaya, but Nebraska lawmakers were mostly congenial in advancing several economic development measures, which could actually help the little guy for a change.

With no negative votes, they advanced to second-round consideration the Urban Redevelopment Act (LB544), the Rural Projects Act (LB40) and the Municipal Inland Port Authority Act (LB156). That's refreshing progress in a climate where the rich seem to be getting richer and the big are getting bigger.

The Urban Redevelopment Act would help small businesses establish and expand in impoverished areas of Omaha and help smaller cities build rail spurs to attract new businesses. They could receive up to $50,000 in tax credits for a business that invested at least $150,000 in a property, hired at least five new employees and paid at least 70% of the state's average hourly wage. In January, President Biden Such businesses must be located in that has higher unemployment and poverty rates.

The bill's sponsor, State Sen. Justin Wayne of Omaha, said qualunilaterally restrict these lands, ifying areas in North and South Omaha and in Lincoln could see "substantial change" in employment via the financial incentives offered in the measure. His Omaha colleague Sen. Terrell McKinnev said his North Omaha district has the highest poverty rates in the state, and it's time that state eco-For example, our state has become nomic development efforts benefit

> "If we invested in communities like North Omaha, there wouldn't be a need for a new state prison,"

Wayne's inland port authorities — a novel concept in a landlocked abundance. We have a track record state — would allow up to five inland port authorities to be established in metropolitan, primary and first- class cities in Nebraska.

To be eligible, an inland port site would have to be at least 300 acres in Atlanta and Boulder, President in area and meet two of the follow-mile of a navigable river or waterway; one mile of a major rail line; two miles of a major airport; or two miles of any federal interstate or any four-lane divided highway.

He said the bill would help develop large-scale commercial and industrial sites throughout the state by bringing together individuals focused on creating "shovel ready" project sites. Nebraska has missed out on opportunities in the past, he said, due to problems with land acquisition and site readiness.

North Platte Sen. Mike Groene's Rural Projects Act would set aside $50 million in state matching funds over 10 years to help counties with under 100,000 population develop business parks linked to railroad lines. He said the measure would clearly help his west-central Nebraska community develop a multimillion-dollar "rail park" linked to the Union Pacific main line that runs through the city. In the past, North Platte has missed out on business opportunities because it lacks a rail spur to any tion at its Bailey Yards, the world's largest railcar sorting yard.

Groene said his community lost about 5% of its population in the most recent census and has seen a drop in employment by the railroad. It needs the kind of incentives the Legislature previously has passed in urban areas. "Rural Nebraska has a lot to offer to the state if we help it grow," he said.

I like these three proposals because of their size and target markets. They appear to be homegrown projects that have been well thought-out and are not meant to bully their way through legislative approval, as has been the custom of the administration-backed economic development proposals since the mid-80s

Nebraska's economic develop ment practices first gained national attention in 1987 when ConAgra pressured the state into enacting what was then one of the costliest subsidy packages ever seen in the United States. The Employment and Investment Growth Act (LB775)

The proposal was heavily promoted by the administration of then-Gov. Kay Orr in response to Enron moving its corporate headquarters from Omaha to Houston and threats of ConAgra also leaving the state. Enron was an energy trading and utilities company that fell apart a few years later after authorities said it perpetrated one of the biggest accounting frauds in history by falsely inflating the company's revenues. ConAgra abandoned its Omaha campus several years ago.

Given that history, the proposals from Sens. Wayne and Groene. are a breath of fresh air worthy of further debate and implementation. Let's hear it for helping the little guy!

J.L. Schmidt has been covering Nebraska government and politics since 1979. He has been a registered of protections guaranteed by the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) of 1993.

For example, the Equality Act would expand the legal definition of discrimination on the basis of sex to include pregnancy. Nurses or doctors refusing to perform abortions would risk being sued for "pregnancy discrimination." Under the Equality Act, medical professionals would not be able to claim their right of religious freedom as grounds for refusing to kill a preborn baby. Again, that's because the law strips away the legal protections of RFRA—a law that passed on a vote of 97-3 in the U.S. Senate.

Expanding Abortions

While Nebraska has been strengthening protections for the unborn, the Biden-Harris Administration is heading in the opposite direction. Early indications suggest President Biden is going to lead the most pro-abortion tory. On Jan. 28, President Biden citizens' constitutional liberties.

measures. The President should work to address the underlying causes of violence in our communities rather than trying to roll back the right to bear arms.

This right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution and reasserted in Article I of the Nebraska Constitution. Banning guns will not solve the problem. Nebraska is a pro-Second Amendment state, and we will stand up against any attempt by the federal government to impede our freedoms through restrictive gun regulations.

In our federal system of government, the 50 states have freedom to adopt different policies best suited to their unique needs. President Biden needs to respect our rights.

Happy Easter! I enjoy spending time with my family hunting Easter eggs with my grandchildren, seeing trees and flowers beginning to bloom and the hope of new life brings the sweetest things of life together. I hope that you experience a new joy and hope this Easter Season!

Rural Nebraska is a great place to live

Having resided in both urban and rural communities in Nebraska. one of the factors that I enjoy the most about living in a rural area is the familiarity and camaraderie that is shared among its people.

It makes it a great place to come home to. That is why when I came across this survey of how rural citizens of Nebraska feel about their communities, I thought it would be valuable to share with you.

According to Nebraska Institute of Agricultural and Natural Resources, more than six in ten Nebraskans who responded to the Rural Poll, which was sent to 7,000 rural households across the state in April 2020, said they agreed or strongly agreed with the following statements: People in my community help each other (82%); I believe in the ability of my community to overcome an emergency situation (76%); people in my community work together to improve the community (69%); I can depend on people in my community to come to my assistance in a crisis (68%); my community keeps people informed about issues that are relevant to them (65%); and there is trust among the residents of my community (63%). (Segments from an article by Becky Vogt)

from the storm of 2021

I have been keeping in close contact with community officials in District 17 whose communities suf-severe weather February 15-20th. My first hand understanding of their situations causes me to strongly support LB 549. This bill would set aside $10M in the State budget for municipalities who own natural gas systems to be eligible to apply for a State grant which may be used to cover up to 90% of the extraordinary costs incurred from extreme weather.

I want to thank those of you who have reached out to my office with concerns for your community, or people you know who are struggling in response to the unexpected financial stress. It is so important that we stand together to get through tough times like this.

LB 549 has not come to the floor as of yet, I will keep you informed to its status as the Session proceeds. School funding and property taxes aid

Last year LB1107 was introduced which should have provided approximately $12M in additional funding to District 17's schools. Because it failed, I am standing in strong support of LB 454, which would create a School Property Tax Stabilization Program which would direct State aid to School Districts whose property taxes and formula needs ratio qualify them for aid.

It also reduces the assessed value of agricultural land for purposes of funding schools over a two-vear period. This bill would provide from $1.4M to $3.8M in property tax relief to District 17. For those reasons I will be giving LB 454 a green light.

Advancing broadband

There are more than 80,000 households in Nebraska who lack adequate internet speed, most of them in rural areas.

LB 388 is one of the broadband bills this year that looks to bridge the gap in Nebraska. LB 388 cre- ensure available funds are prop- can reach me at (402) 471-2716 or Bridge Act" which provides $20 million in each of the next two years to increase broadband across Nebraska.

That could help 30,000 households get better access to the internet. It is evident that we are not going to be able to get the coverage we eventually hope to see in every Nebraska home this year, but we will be able to launch some important endeavors that will aid new business and bring in commerce, which in turn helps all Nebraskans.

Another important bill playing a part in expansion of broadband this Session is LB 338, which allows a community to have more input on who will be providing them broadband services after NUSF funding has been withheld from the old carrier due to not providing the minimum speeds of 25/3.

Together, the broadband bills introduced this year will help fered enormous financial loss due to ates the "Nebraska Broadband erly used to develop broadband at jalbrecht@leg.ne.gov.

It may be difficult to set a clear goal at a time we are constantly receiving conflicting messages: "Eat less carbs." "Eat all the carbs you want as long as you stay under your allotted calorie count." "Eat only meat." "Eat no meat." "Cook at home more." "Only eat raw food." "Do yoga, but don't overstretch." "Do cardio, but don't pound your joints." 'Lift, but not heavy weights."

Spring is a time for shedding lay- mean losing weight. Perhaps you self, have more energy and know that you're doing something good for your body. If you identify why give you the willpower to say "no thanks" to the bagels your co-worker brought to the office.

There is a lot to think about. and every person is a little different. Each person can set a goal, but don't feel guilty about trying to do too much. Try some smaller, simpler steps that can help you make a big difference.

Try to find a way to be active everyday. If you find activities that ing the short but effective exercise you truly love, you will find joy in count as physical activity. And you get nutritious food as a bonus.

As you are getting in shape, don't skimp on sleep. It is easier said than done. In our hectic, over-scheduled lives, sleep often gets pushed to the back burner. But sufficient rest should be one of your top priorities.

As you are working out, remember to drink water. Proper hydration aids digestion, refuels our bodies for upcoming workouts, boosts energy, nourishes the skin and benefits the whole body. Keep a water bottle by your side as a constant reminder to drink more, or carry a water bottle with you. The weight of a heavy water bottle will remind you to do your best to empty it.

There is no "right" way to get in shape and maintain a healthy lifestyle; there is only what works for you. Realistic tweaks to your routine are the first step to a lasting habit. Don't overwhelm yourself by taking on too many ambitious goals at once; instead, stick to the basics.

And remember: Being healthy should feel fun, and be something you look forward to every day.

Fourth graders followed the journey of Lewis and Clark while carrying an egg on a spoon in their mouth. Eggs were sorted while playing the game so all students received the same number of eggs.

This activity was sponsored by the Allen Community Club, and thanks goes to those adults who helped with hiding, sorting, and supervising the game. There was no egg hunt in the park because of CO-VID-19 restrictions.

Sharing the Easter message

As a hospital chaplain at Providence Medical Center, I have the privilege and work alongside incredibly compassionate and caring people.

This past year, as we've gone through this pandemic, I've seen this demonstrated again and again. Despite the challenges, their dedication to bringing care and healing to all who came through our hospital doors remained unchanging.

To support them, I began writing small weekly devotionals. As I've done previously, I'd like to share a version of one with you this week.

As I think back to Easter last year, it's wonderful to see how far we've come. Some of the fears and unknowns we faced then have eased. In terms of the pandemic, with the arrival of safe and effective vaccines, there are signs of hope for an end to the pandemic. I'm so grateful for scientists and healthcare workers of all kinds who have been a part of that success.

Despite that, though, many hardships still remain. The losses of the past year are still keenly felt. The words of hope and promise of our faith are words we still need today. We cling once more to that Easter promise that God is with us.

And so today, a devotion from the Easter story in the Gospel of John: "And the doors of the house where they met were locked for fear... and Jesus came and stood amongst them and said, 'Peace be with you.'"

The disciples of Jesus live in fear fear.

When we trust in God, we can feel free of our fears as well. When we feel anxious or afraid, we can rely on the love and patience of God to be our guide. In the midst of our own concerns and fears about the current health situation or what the future may hold, we may find ourselves asking, "What happens next, God?"

We don't know what each day may hold for us, but we can find calm and strength because God is with us in it. "Peace be with you," Jesus says to his disciples, and he says the same to us today. Have peace today knowing that God is with you. Let our actions and words today be a gift of peace to others.

May you be of good courage even in these times of uncertainty and change, for God is with you.

Sharing thoughts on trip to Florida

Yes, April has brought a shower; a welcome one, this morning! Yesterday, I had the AC on, and today, I'm a bit chilly. Good old Nebraska! And dare I mention the wind? It almost blew me over while doing the daily laps around the cul de sac.

Yes, I made it to Orlando and back, and it was a wonderful vacation. My friends let me sleep in, and we all took naps after lunch .. Doesn't that sound like a good trip?

Speaking of trips, I felt safe because of two vaccinations. But you would never realize we are in a pandemic and that a lot of younger folks have not had their vaccines.

I flew Southwest, which I must say has more seat room than that United flight of a couple of years ago, which I complained mightily about.

The plane for Orlando arrived from Vegas while I was waiting. And it was full, also; what people wear to travel always amazes me; I'm sure I saw some bedroom slippers. I guess they would be comgo West to go East, there was a va- the flight from Denver was FULL!! lounge pants, and tops that should

Water Law 101: Part 3, surface water administration terms and definitions

By Gary Stone, Extension Educator

This is the third in a six-part series of articles covering basic water law in the United States, predominately in the western part of the country, and how it affects this finite resource.

Water law can be traced back to Roman times and also has roots in English common law. Across the United States, it varies from state to state, and from East to West. When conflicts arise, courts usually determine the outcome, unless there are state or federal laws or previous case studies to resolve the issue. Exceptions to the law can arise from differences in each state's water laws.

Part 1 of this series covered basic concepts and legal terms related to water law and explained riparian doctrine and the doctrine of prior appropriation. Part 2 discussed some of the other types of water rights and legal doctrines and concepts. This article explains terms and definitions used in administering surface-water rights.

A streamwide adjudication process is where all established water right priorities and quantities of diversion are recorded and use determined for all appropriators on a stream. This can include federal and tribal water rights. Practicably irrigable acres is a set number of acres that may be irrigated. For example, if 10,000 acres of a tribe's 50,000-acre reservation are practically irrigable, the tribe may divert water for 10,000 acres, even if they are not irrigated. Water right cancellation, also known as "use it or lose it": In Nebraska, surface-water rights can be canceled by several methods: Administrative cancellation, when the Nebraska Department of Natural Resources (NDNR) may cancel an appropriation if a water-right holder has not used their water for five consecutive years (unless irrigation was not needed due to adequate precipitation); and by common law abandonment, where an appropriator who does not use water for 10 consecutive years can lose the appropriation in a private lawsuit.

Stream is a general term for a body of flowing water, containing water at least part of the year. In hydrology, the term is generally applied to the water flowing in a natural channel as distinct from a canal. Some stream classifications include (in relation to time): ephemeral streams, which flow only in direct response to precipitation and their channel is always above the water table; intermittent or seasonal streams, which flow only at certain times of the year when they receive water from springs, rainfall, or surface sources such as melting snow; and perennial streams, which flow continuously. Streams and their relation to groundwater: Gaining streams (or stream reaches) receive water from the zone of saturation (water table); these are also referred to as an effluent stream. Insulated streams neither contribute water to the zone of saturation nor receive water from it. Such streams are separated from the zones of saturation by an impermeable bed. Losing streams contribute water to the zone of saturation. Also referred to as an influent downstream senior water approlosing streams or insulated streams that are separated from the underlying ground water by a zone of aeration.

Natural flow is the rate of water movement past a specified point on a natural stream from a drainage area, which have not been affected by stream diversion, storage, import, export, return flow or change in consumptive use caused by human modification to land use. Natural flow rarely occurs in a developed county.

Base flow is the volume of flow in a stream channel that is not derived from surface run-off. Base flow is characterized by loss flow regime (frequency, magnitude, and duration daily, seasonally and yearly). by minimum low-flow events and in the size and complexity of the stream and its channel.

Instream flows are flows reserved for uses within a defined stream channel - consumptive water requirements which do not reduce the water supply. Examples of these uses include: Aesthetics (maintaining flowing streams, lakes, and bodies of water for visual enjoyment); fish and wildlife; navigation (maintaining minimum flow for waterborne commerce); quality dilution (diluting salt and pollution loading to acceptable concentrations); and recreation (outdoor water recreation such as fishing, boating, water skiing, and swimming). Instream appropriations are usually junior to other appropriations. Priority administration refers to the administrative enforcement of water-priority appropriations in most western states. In Nebraska, the NDNR administers and issues closing orders under priority administration.

stream. Perched streams are either priator who is not receiving all of the water they are entitled to. A priority call on the stream/river is a notice to upstream junior water appropriators to reduce the amount of water they are taking so the senior water appropriator can get the water to which they are entitled.

Futile call/water use out of priority is a situation in which a junior priority use will be permitted to continue to divert in spite of a priority call by a senior appropriator in the same watershed, because curtailing the junior from diversion would produce water for beneficial use for the senior appropriator.

To repeat the question that concluded parts 1 and 2 of this series: What is water worth?
