Update given to future of city property

By Clara Osten,

clara@wayneherald.com

Information on the future of the Community Activity Center (CAC) and the land surrounding it was shared during Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Council member Matt Eischied, who is part of the council's Facilities Committee. said the group met with the Wayne Community Schools' Facility Committee last week and "had lots of good discussion."

Eischied said the school would like to have an Elementary Learning Center that would house Pre-K through second grade in one location. He added that the city is "not ready to sell the CAC at this time, but this is not closing the door on the possibility in the future."

The school committee felt positive about possibly obtaining city-owned property west of the CAC to build on. This would not take away a lot of recreation area.

"The city wants to keep the school within city limits. We want to help the school, not limit them. We are equal partners," Eischied said.

Council member Brent Pick, who is also a member of the school's facility committee, told the council that the traffic flow and security is better at this site and leaves other school-owned areas open for other projects.

Additional discussion will take place between the city and the school in coming

Council members approved a resolution which approves Task Order No. 221753.00 with JEO Consulting Group, Inc. for a Wholesale Power and Generation Capacity Options Project.

Dave Peterson with JEO was at Tuesday's meeting and talked about the timeline for the project and said "this is a good time to do this as the city's contract with Big Rivers expires in 2026."

The project will help the city determine options for power purchases and possible generation of electricity in the future.

Peterson has done similar work with the city of South Sioux City and according to Electric Distribution Superintendent Tim Sutton, "Dave is very knowledgeable."

In the next couple of months, you will undoubtedly become frustrated with those Christmas lights that don't work, or worse yet, intermittently work. Real Estate and Projects The City and the Community Redevelopment Authority (CRA) have been busy with some recent real estate transactions and possible transactions. The City has closed on two properties in the last month: 3.26 acres of land for a future "Energy Center" just north of Great Dane at the corner of 14th and Centennial; and, the old Final Touch building at 110 S Logan. The bare property will be home to a new electrical substation in the future and possibly additional/new electrical generation capacity. The 110 Logan building is already being used for some Parks and Recreation storage/functions and Library storage and book sales floor. There is additional room in this property that I am sure we will find ways to fill it up! Possible future purchases include the old Ameritas building on Main Street and the adjacent parking lot owned by the Methodist Church. These properties would be home to a "new to us" City Hall. Public hearings have been held for these properties but no actions have been taken to purchase either property. And then the most recent conversations have started about the possibility of the Wayne Community Schools purchasing land from the City around the activity center for a Pre K-2nd grade school (and yes, we have even briefly discussed the sale of the ac-

This week I have been busy traveling in District 17. On Oct. 11, I was in South Sioux City with Governor candidate Jim Pillen. I was invited by Lance Hedquist, administrator, and Oscar Gomez, assistant city administrator, to visit with the administration and school board members of the South Sioux City Community School. We also visited Northeast Community College and visited with Dakota County Chairman Giese and Commissioner Launsby about concerns with the road leading to Kramper Lake. We finished with a wonderful lunch at Kahill's Steak, Fish and Chophouse where we had a round table discussion with other community leaders.

I enjoyed hearing the good things that are happening as well as the concerns of the community. It was wonderful to see where the new Veterans Victory Housing and Small Business Center is being built. It is very evident that there is a need for more housing in South

On Oct. 12, I attended the Dakota County Government Day at the Dakota City Hall. There were 27 students from South Sioux City School and 19 from Homer Public School. It is always good to visit with the students in my district and share my experiences of working in government to help my constituents and the people in the state of Nebraska. I would like to thank The American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary for hosting this event every year.

National Farmers Day was Oct. 12. I would like to thank all the farmers that work so hard to contribute to our economy, feed our nation and the world, and make Nebraska what it is. They work hard 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year to take care of the land, natural resources, animals, and provide for their families. Thank you so much to the farmers in District 17 for all you do for your communities and the state of Nebraska!

After visiting with people throughout my district, I am hearing there is still confusion regarding the pink postcards that were the information I wrote in my last weekly update.

The pink postcards come from your county assessor but may be for the county, city, more than one public school district, or community college. If one or more of these entities is asking for a property tax amount that exceeds the annual allowable growth percentage (2% plus real growth), then the additional hearing is required. The point of the postcards is to inform taxpayers that while the levy is not going up, their property taxes are, due to increases in value.

Political subdivisions should lower their levies when values go up to help offset the increase, rather than taking the windfall and increasing their budgets. That is why the Legislature enacted this law to make sure taxpayers know what is happening. I understand your confusion and know timing is not ideal. Senator Ben Hansen is reaching out to me and my colleagues to streamline the process if possible next session.

Election day is Tuesday, Nov. 8 and time for you to have your voice heard. There are two initiatives that received enough petition signatures to be put on your ballot this November.

The first is Initiative 432, Photo Voter Identification otherwise known as Voter ID. This would amend Article I of the Nebraska Constitution to require voters to present a valid photo ID to vote. A yes" vote supports amending the state constitution and would authorize the state legislature to pass laws to implement it. A "no" vote opposes this amendment.

The second is Initiative 433 which would increase the state's minimum wage in increments beginning in 2023 from $10.50 up to $15.00 by 2026. Currently it is $9.00 per hour. A "yes" vote supports this ballot initiative and a "no" vote opposes it. I would like to encourage all of you to do your research into each candidate on your ballot and into each initiative to make a sound decision. Wayne High and Wayne State College both recently held their annual Homecoming celebrations.

Now, celebrating her very own homecoming, Elizabeth King has decided to move back to Wayne, into the home known as "The Brick," where she lived during her college days along with her sorority sisters in Chi Omega. King searched for houses in

"Having these women in my life has been an incredible gift," King said. "Even 40 years later, we are all still friends. I know I have them when things are good and when the chips are down. After moving in and settling

She has also traveled across the world, keeping notes of her favorite and least favorite aspects of the various places she has stayed to make the perfect business in Wayne.

King has owned a bed and breakfast previously, running the business for around seven years. Out of her many professions in the fields of journalism, radio, marketing and promotions, King crowned "Miss Lizzie's Boarding House" as her favorite job.

She feels ecstatic to move back into the Wayne community, calling the move a true homecoming.

"I'm excited to be close to family and back in the community that has always been in my heart," King said. "People have already stopped by to welcome us home. What a gift to be able to give back to the community that has given us so much.'

Wayne Rotarians recognize World Polio Day by giving and serving

World Polio Day is Monday, Oct. York. 24. Most Americans have lived in a polio free world since 1979, so why have a world day recognizing polio? The poliovirus is highly contagious, and spreads person to person affecting mostly children, usually through contaminated water. It can infect the nervous system and cause paralysis. There is no cure, only prevention by vaccination.

In 1985 Rotary International vowed to rid the planet of the poliovirus. Since then, more than 1.4 million Rotarians globally have honored the commitment by raising $50 million which is matched $2 for every contributed dollar by the Gates Foundation and coming to $150 million annually. The Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI) is an organization spearheaded by Rotary in partnership with the WHO, CDC, UNICEF, the Gavi Vaccine Alliance, and The Gates Foundation with a singular goal - to eradicate polio everywhere.

Today, polio remains endemic in only Afghanistan and Pakistan. But until it is eradicated globally, no country is safe from a potential re-emergence of this devastating disease. Polio is "just a plane ride away." Vaccine complacency in the USA has added to our vulnerability.

In June of this year, we were reminded that the world and therefore the USA is not yet immune. A young unvaccinated man in New York was infected becoming paralyzed by poliomyelitis. Poliovirus has since been detected in the wastewater of four counties in New

First off, I want to get back to the basics by listening to the voters. This will start by using the actual Mayors office in City Hall and setting office hours for the public to stop in. I plan to hold more ward meetings, town halls and get better virtual meeting options with increased fairness, truth and transparency..

Speaking of City Hall, it's time to quit wasting time and money and make a decision. But now they are looking at buying prime real estate on Main St. Wasn't that the reason to buy Riley's? Lack of direction and follow-through will cost us millions! The current City Hall does need some upgrades, but it is in a great location and large enough. Renovations have already been done in many of the offices. Cost is always an issue with an old building but are we sure we want to start over again? Thanks BJ Woehler

Another tie-breaker for Wayne boys leads to state trip

PIERCE — Only a good barber could shave it as close as the Wayne boys cross country team did Thurs-

The numbers bounced back and forth as the runners came home during the C-3 district meet at the Pierce Community Golf Course, and the Wayne boys and their fans nervously watched as the scores changed.

When the final runner came home and the scores became official, the Blue Devil boys erupted in celebration — not only had they qualified for state, but they won the district runner-up plaque the same way they won last week's Mid State Conference title — with a tie-breaker.

Easton Blecke's 28th place finis was higher than the fastest fifthplace finisher for Bloomfield/Wausa, and that was enough to give Wayne the runner-up trophy, finishing just one point behind district champion Hartington-Newcastle.

"A tight race is better than no race," a happy coach Terry Beair said once the results became official. "The boys have been running that way all year, and I've really

Freshman Drew Miller, who has been a consistent top-five finisher all year, led the charge with a fifthplace medal, but it was the placement of the other five runners that helped Wayne secure its first team trip since 2011.

Kasen York raced home for a seventh-place time of 18:05.33 and Alex Frank also medaled when he crossed in 11th place at 18:14.20. There would be a wait before the second half of Wayne's sextet came home, with Adrian Klinetobe edging teammate Easton Blecke by two-hundreths of a second for 27th place and senior Eathan McCraney finishing the deal in 32nd place.

"Kasen and Alex ran outstanding races today," Beair said. "I told the kids before today that we weren't worried about times as much as we were placers because we needed three medalists to have a chance, and the kids did it."

And having Klinetobe, Blecke and McCraney finish where they did was even more important, as it helped settle the tie-breaker for see who would get the runner-up tro-

The Blue Devils have already seen the Kearney Country Club course they're going to compete on Friday afternoon at the Nebraska State Cross Country Championships, and Beair is hoping they will have a good showing in the Class C boys race.

"We went there for the UNK Invite and it gave the kids an idea of what to expect, and state will shake things up a little more," he said "I just want the kids to run really well. Hasemann ready to leave it all out on the course

By MICHAEL CARNES For The Herald

When it comes to high school cross country, girls generally mature before boys and have more of their success during their freshman and sophomore years before body changes come into play and tend to slow them down.

That doesn't seem to be the case with Wayne High senior Laura Hasemann. In fact, her running and competitive spirit have seemed to age more like a fine wine as she goes into her final cross country race this those physical changes get in her week at the Nebraska State Cross Country Championships.

It seems we can't go one cross country meet without getting a picture of Wayne senior Laura Hasemann smiling for the camera, and she makes sure we get one more in as she runs (alongside teammate Kyla Krusemark) during the C-3 district meet Thursday in Pierce. Hasemann is a four-time qualifier in cross country and has proven to be a fantastic leader for the team this season.

"Last summer, I was dealing with cially with girls, but she didn't let ally hit the weight room and put a lot of miles in, and I really changed my mindset this summer and just really embraced this being my last year," she said."

All that hard work has paid off, not only for her but for her team. The Wayne girls have won several meets this year and enter the state race on a high note after dominating wins in the Mid State Conference and C-3 district meets the last two weeks.

Hasemann said the trust the younger athletes have in the only senior on the team has made it a lot

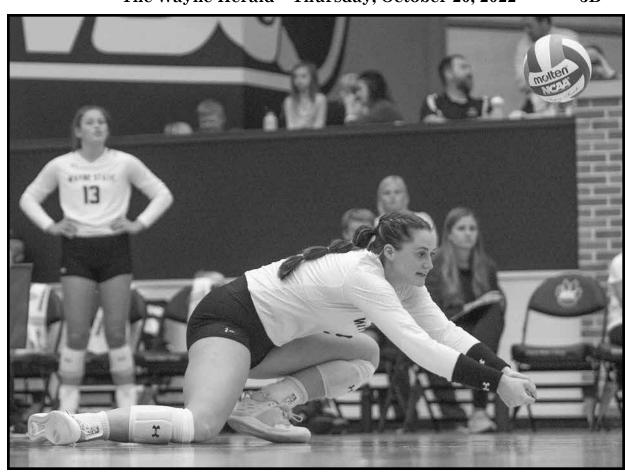

"It's really cool to see, because I've been looking forward to this the past couple of years," she said. "To see how much growth we've had the last couple of years and how much trust we have in each other, I haven't been able to do what I've done without them and I just love them to death. They make me proud every single day.'

Maas is impressed with the leadership Hasemann has shown, both on and off the track.

"Before the season started, we had a team-building thing in Yankton and I told her that she's in the best shape of her life both physically and mentally, and she's truly embraced it and has just worked her tail off," she said. "She really is a good leader for this team, not only as a runner but as a person."

As for how she hopes her last race finishes this week, Hasemann said she's leaving that to a higher power.

"I know the weather's going to be nice and the environment is always full of energy and it's such a wonderful experience," she said. "I'm just putting my trust in God and looking forward to getting through

Sasse wants to leave the circus in Washington

GREETINGS, GOVERNOR PILLEN!

I'M HERE TO CLAIM THAT VACANT

Commentary by J.L. Schmidt Statehouse Correspondent Nebraska Press Association

I will admit that I have never been very excited about Nebraska's representation in the United States Senate. I blame it on growing up in the Curtis-Hruska era when it seemed like we just kept sending the same two guys to do the work of the nation.

Roman Hruska was born in David City and served 22 years in the Senate from 1954 to 1976. Carl Curtis was born in Minden and served 24 years from 1955 to 1979 in the Senate after a 15-year run in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1939 to 1954. Both were Republicans. Both were notably conservative.

The edgiest thing either one of them did was when Curtis was cited as a "staunch supporter" of troubled President Richard Nixon - go ahead and Google Watergate scandal. Hruska was born a year before Curtis and died a year before Curtis died. They were both 94. Put that in the history book and close it.

So, you understand why all the recent furor over Nebraska's junior Senator Ben Sasse, also a conservative Republican, has left me a little nonplussed. He's 50, has a wife and three kids and wants to leave the Washington circus where he has served since 2015 and take a shot at being a college president again.

He's apparently the leading – and only - candidate to be the next president of the University of Florida. He did a similar gig at Midland College (now Midland University) in Fremont back before he went to the Senate.

I like what he apparently told the Tampa Bay Times newspaper recently. "I'm excited frankly about the opportunity to step away from politics and onto a team of bigcause, low-ego people who want to build stuff and serve students and the Senate seat in 2006 and lost better. plan for the future," he said.

Big cause. Low ego. I'm sure there are those who take offense with that. I don't. Pretty much sums up politics in the Beltway as I read it. It's a free country and he has faithfully served seven years of his sentence. No need to suffer through any more at the expense of creating good national policy that may, or may not, serve Nebraskans.

The bigger part of the drama comes in the speculation caused in Lincoln when pundits realized that Governor Pete Ricketts would soon be unemployed and just might see an easy pathway to the U.S. Senate through the Sasse resignation.

Nebraska's fast-growing bioscience industry

In 2024, NASA will send a small surgical robot from Nebraska to the International Space Station. The tiny, two-pound robot will be able to perform surgeries on the space station that would normally require a surgeon's expertise and much larger equipment. The surgical robot can operate more or less on its own, performing complex procedures at the flip of a switch. The device, developed by Nebraska-based Virtual Incision, is a significant step toward making it possible for surgeons to operate remotely—whether their patients are in deep space or on a battlefield halfway around the world.

Virtual Incision's surgical robot is just one example of the many breakthrough products Nebraska's bioscience companies are creating. From biomedicine to biofuels to biochemicals, companies in our state are on the cutting edge of innovation. We're growing our bioscience industry by prioritizing research and development, making it easy for bioscience companies to do business, and helping to develop the workforce talent bioscience firms

Prioritizing Bioscience R&D Our universities are doing tremendous work in the biosciences right here in Nebraska. In 2021, for the fifth straight year, the University of Nebraska system ranked among the top 100 academic institutions worldwide in earning U.S. patents. Virtual Incision, founded by faculty members at UNL and UNMC, received four surgical robotics patents last The State has supported Virtual Incision's growth with $1 million of funding through the Business Innovation Act (BIA). In 2017, the Nebraska Department of Economic Development (DED) was part of a coalition that launched the Biotech Connector at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Innovation Campus. It's a startup incubator dedicated to biotech companies, with more than 7,700 feet of leasable wet lab space. These specialized labs have the water, utilities, Adjuvance Technologies was the first tenant of the Biotech Connector. The company located there in 2017, a year after receiving a $450,000 Business Innovation Act seed investment from the State of Nebraska. It produces adjuvants (substances that enhance the body's immune response) that are added to vaccines to increase their effectiveness. In 2019, within three years of receiving BIA funds, Adjuvance won a contract with the National Institute of Allergic and Infectious Diseases to make more effective flu vaccines. In January 2020, it raised $20 million in venture capital. This January, the company received a patent for an adjuvant that improves the vaccine for shingles.

Supporting Bioscience

Production While working to become an incubator of high-growth startups, we're also making it easier for bioscience firms to build production facilities in Nebraska. With our state's abundance of agricultural feedstocks, we've had major success recruiting investment from bioprocessors. Cargill's campus in Blair has become a hotbed of bioscience activity. In the past five years, several European bioscience companies have made major investments there: Avansya (Dutch/American), Corbion (Dutch), Evonik (German), Novozymes (Danish). Veramaris (Dutch/German). Last month, the City of Blair won a $1.5 million federal grant to increase water capacity to the biocampus to support a $300+ million expansion

The Nebraska Department of Transportation's (NDOT) Economic Opportunity Program helps support growth across the State through grants for strategic transportation improvements that connect businesses to Nebraska's statewide transportation network. For example, NDOT has approved $450,000 to help Merck Animal Health, a biopharmaceutical company, make turn lane improvements near their facility in metro Omaha. The agency has also approved a half-million dollars for road improvements at the Heartwell Renewables biofuel production facility being built in Hastings.

Developing Nebraska's Bioscience Workforce

Nebraska has nearly 18,000 bioscience jobs. These are great-paying jobs, with an average annual salary of $70,000. We're equipping Nebraskans with the education and skills they need to excel in the bioscience industry.

Berry Hall parade float fire, winners at Homecoming

Wayne State's 1962 homecoming is history now, and probably it will rank among the most elaborate and successful in the annuals. It had all the usual features plus a few new ones too, ranging from many stunts to serious business- and with a fire to make it livelier. One fire was on the schedule, the traditional pep rally bonfire Thursday night. But another fire provided the excitement. One of the parade floats took flame in front of the football crowd.

It happened during pre-game ceremonies as the prize-winning floats were towed before the stadium. Berry Hall's first-place entry, depicting a river steamboat with rotating paddlewheel and smoking stacks, had moved right in front of the stands when a smoke bomb got out of controland suddenly about eight students came tumbling off the flaming float while onlookers rushed to detach the tow car.

Spectator astonishment turned to amusement then as Master of Ceremonies Marlin Nielsen quipped: "That's the hottest parade entry we've

In more serious tenor, WSC's score mounted to 31-0 over Chadron. Also, Ardis Halleen, in front of about 3,800 spectators, was crowned queen of Wayne State's homecoming.

An unwelcome surprise

With Halloween less than two weeks away, Mother Nature played a trick on Northeast Nebraska Tuesday that won't be forgotten. What started out as a rainstorm, turned to sleet and then to heavy snow as this part of the state was hit by its first major snowstorm. Temperatures into the 40's and plenty of sunshine on Wednesday melted away the remains of the snow, but the snow left its mark.

The early storm may have caused more damage than any storm will throughout the upcoming winter season. Thousands of acres of ripe soybeans were smothered and buried by the wet, heavy snow. Bean fields which survived the spring's wicked rain and hail storms were now wiped out. Corn also suffered extensive damage in some areas where ears were knocked to the ground.

Tree damage was tremendous. Leaves had not yet been shed by most trees and the wet snow burdened the limbs until they succumbed and cracked. Across the community of Wayne, branches of all sizes were scattered across the yards of nearly every home.

There were also the usual problems which come with snowstorms. Families ate by candlelight as the storm knocked out power lines and forced blackouts. Ditches along slippery country roads were marked with cars which has slid off. It was not a pleasant preview of what may be ahead.

Former baseball great visits Wayne

Former major league baseball great Richie Ashburn was in Wayne, Monday afternoon signing autographs, answering quesitons and chating with baseball fans along with gaining signatures on a national campaign to get him into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York. Ashburn, a long-time great for the Philadelphia Phillies from 1948-1959, and later with the New York Mets and the Chicago Cubs, has spent the last 30 years as a broadcaster for the Phillies.

The national campaign labeled as "Why the Hall Not!" is out to get 100,000 signatures across the nation to put Ashburn's name back on the ballot for the Hall of Fame.

This is Ashburn's first appearance in Nebraska as a speaker. "My family still lives around the Tilden area and I come back every so often to visit, but never to do something like this," Ashburn said. "I don't mind though, because I like seeing and talking to people." Ashburn spent two and a half hours at Stadium Sporting Goods in Wayne.

Remembering Roger Welsch

I frequently think of things I want to write about during the week, and then, when Monday evening arrives, those things have disappeared and I can't come up with one interesting subject!

Tonight, I'm going to reminisce about one of my favorite Nebraskans, who died just a short time ago. His name is Roger Welsch.

I think I first became aware of him while seeing Postcards From Nebraska on Sunday mornings with Charles Kuralt. I don't think I saw very many of those because we were typically not watching television on Sunday mornings. But they were sort of like Pure Nebraska; the local show by Jon and Taryn Vanderford, highlighting unique, small, out of the way places in our state.

Roger had been a German instructor at Wesleyan, and moved on to teach English at the U. He was into all things Native American and became interested in the weeds they used for medical things and to eat. Therefore, he did not get rid of the weeds in his lawn. And, the Noxious Weed Board left a sign at his door telling him he had to get

My Mom would buy them for my brother; she liked titles like Old Tractors and The Men Who Loved Them, featuring a picture of an old Allis on the cover, along with the author in his trademark bib overalls, his longish hair, and facial hair before all guys were wearing facial

I just checked out more titles: Everything I Know About Women I learned From My Tractor, and It's Not the End of the Earth But You Can See it From Here! There is even one about Outhouses; how to build them, where to site them, and their history. That is one I did not

And, true to form, I meant to write about him the week he died. But then, Tuesday morning came and I had forgotten about him... that happened last week, too. Frustrating!! He will soon be old news!

I have to tell you, we visited Dannebrog several years ago and drove by his place. He was still raising weeds! And I'm not a bit sure he was cooking them. The Big Farmer just could not abide them. A former "hired boy" told me a couple of weeks ago that was one of the things he remembered about spending a summer on our farm; chopping thistles; Mike with his trusty shoe spade! I think it's a good thing Mike was never on the Weed Board in a community Roger Welsch lived in. But then, he didn't make nearly the same money from writing a book that Roger Welsch did! We all have our talents.

Grazing Vs. Baling Corn

Residues By Ben Beckman

As harvest progresses, crop residues are readily becoming available as a forage source. Producers looking to capitalize on these feeds often consider two options for use, grazing or baling. Which option is best for you?

Grazing corn residue allows animals to be selective about what they eat. Animals choose higher quality grain, leaf, and husk first, grazing soiled or lower quality feed when it becomes the only choice available. With proper stocking, corn residues will meet nutrient requirements in dry cows. However, quality of residues will decrease with time as stalks are subjected to weathering.

Practices such as strip or rotational grazing can help extend the grazing period and balance quality. Initial investments in fence and water sources are drawbacks of grazing, but once the labor of putting fence in is completed, the cows do the work of harvesting.

residues. Because of the tough nature of corn residue, wear and tear on machinery is a consideration. How residues are harvested is also important and can greatly impact final quality. If the initial raking of have developed. Drought-damaged residues is particularly aggressive, corn may not have many ears, but the dirt(ash) content of the final product will be high.

Because of the generally low quality and the risk of sorting, grinding corn stalk bales before feeding is beneficial. This does however add additional cost and equipment requirements for use.

Baling on the other hand requires curred. The value of these losses moved just twice each week. labor and fuel to harvest and put-up depends on fertilizer price and how Dry cows may become fat and ing manure from the feeding location back on the field can help mitigate some of this loss.

Grazing Standing Corn By Ben Beckman

Dry weather may have left your corn field with low yield. If harvesting for hay or silage did not occur, can we capture value in standing corn by grazing?

After a brief learning period, cattle in standing corn will preferentially graze corn ears if any if much grain has developed, the cattle first need to adapt to a higher grain diet before grazing corn begins. Otherwise, acidosis or other digestive disorders could develop.

Cross-fencing and strip-grazing is needed to minimize trampling waste. Give cattle access to no more Finally, baled residues are usu- than a two-day supply of fresh corn ally fed away from the field where at a time; a one-day supply is even they are harvested, resulting in better, especially for younger, grownutrients losses where harvest oc- ing cattle. Dry cows might do fine if much residue is removed. Spread- over-conditioned grazing standing corn, especially if grain is present. Even without grain, barren stalks can be surprisingly high in nutrient concentration because protein and energy that normally would have been transferred to the grain has instead been stored in the stalk and leaves. Diets containing crude protein exceeding 8% and TDN of 55% are usually expected.

Standing corn can be limit-fed to stretch the supply and/or to minimize over-conditioning by reducing the area allotted to the cows and forcing them to eat more of the lower quality stalks. However, nitrate concentration may be high in the lower portion of the corn stalks. Before forcing animals to consume this part of the plant, test the stalks for nitrates and then manage accordingly.

This voluntary program provides funding for the purchase of conservation easements to help productive farm and ranch land remain in agriculture and to restore and protect critical wetlands and grasslands.

NRCS Nebraska State Conservationist Robert Lawson said, "Conservation easements are a great tool to ensure natural resources are conserved and protected for all Nebraskans. We encourage Indian tribes, local governments, non-governmental organizations and private landowners to contact their local NRCS office to apply."

The main goal of ACEP is to prevent agriculture land from being converted to non-agricultural uses, and to restore and protect wetlands and wildlife habitat. Cropland, rangeland, grassland, pastureland and nonindustrial private forestland are eligible.

Applications can be submitted at any time, but to be considered for this year's funding, applications must be received by Nov. 18, 2022. Applications are currently being accepted for both agricultural land and wetland easements.

Sign up available for the Master Gardener Volunteer Program

Many Nebraska Extension Master Gardener Volunteers (NEMGV) are winding up their projects for the 2022 gardening season.

The Master Gardeners who manage the Growing Together Nebraska gardens have donated 536 pounds of produce to food pantries in Washington County and 2858 pounds in Dodge County, boosting access to fresh food for the food insecure. Master Gardeners work in after-school garden programs, teach others about good gardening practices through the horticulture helpline, and promote healthy pollinator habitats through demonstration gardens.

NEMGVs are taught the newest University-led education one can

So, are Master Gardeners just about pulling weeds and making things pretty? Absolutely not! Master Gardeners are first and foremost teachers, reaching people where they are to improve the health, well-being, and quality of life for Nebraskans.

Extension Master Gardeners have a long history of helping people and communities in Nebraska. Starting in 1976, volunteers have been educated in a wide range of all things garden, extending from horticultural insects to soils to plant diseases. Education is virtual, allowing Master Gardeners access to quality programs from their home computer, bridging remote locations and long distances.

Who are Nebraska Extension Master Gardeners? They are your neighbors...community members... they are the new people in town, or they have grown up here... they are young, old, and every age in between...they have lots of gardening experience or very little. No matter the differences of how, where, and why people are called to the Master Gardener Volunteer program, there is one common thread-a love for gardening that spills over into sharing with others.

If you'd like to make a difference in your community or you have a love of gardening you'd like to share with others, then please consider attending an informational meeting for the 2023 NEMGV program.

• Tuesday, Nov. 15, 5:30 pm, Dodge County Extension Office, 1206 W. 23rd Street, Fremont.

The informational meeting proides answers about the classes and volunteer requirements.

Wayne Food Pantry/Backpack Program receive AWG Cares Award Grant

Recently, AWG Cares approved a grant request in the amount of $3,000 to the Wayne Food Pantry/ Backpack Program in Wayne.

The grant request was submitted by Cynthia Puntney, AWG Nebraska employee.

This program began in April 2013 in Wayne. The Wayne County Food Pantry Backpack Program provides a weekend supply of nutritious food for children when school lunch and breakfast is unavailable on a weekend. Each food bag contains two breakfasts (such as a package of oatmeal or granola bar), two lunches (a can of soup or an easy Mac and Cheese), two snacks (pudding or cheese/crackers), and two servings of fruit (one preserved and one fresh). All food is nonperishable, is able to be prepared by a small child, does not require additional ingredients or use of a stove and is provided to children free of

Organizers of the Backpack program said, "It is our hope these resources will support the health, behavior, and achievement of every student that participates. Though the program is intended to help those children whose families find it difficult to have enough food for the entire month, all children are eligible for this program."

Backpacks are distributed to over 100 children in the area each month.

AWG Cares is AWG's employee-managed, company-supported and community-focused non-profit charitable organization. It was established in October 2017 to help AWG employees support the charities they care about and give back to the communities where they work and live. AWG Cares focuses its charitable giving efforts in three areas or "pillars" (Disaster Relief Medical Research and Hunger Homelessness).

There are three components to a service learning project: youth involvement, meaningful service, and reflection. Youth will be able to learn valuable skills as they plan, organize, and implement the project. They may see a need in a community that adults have not addressed before, and adults play a critical role in helping youth prioritize the community needs.

A key component of service learning is reflection which occurs before, during, and following the project. They are able to reflect on the experience to discuss the "What", "So What", and "Now What". Youth are able to make the connections of the service project and how it will influence lifelong learning. Here are the five steps to implement a service learning project:

- ·Assess and identify the need;
- ·Plan and prepare;
- Experience meaningful service; Analysis and evaluation;
- · Celebration.

Learning about service learning, citizenship and leadership happens all the time within 4-H activities. Youth might serve as an officer of a club to learn about parliamentary procedure, join a committee to plan out an event for the club, or be a part of the service learning project.

One of the capstone events familiar to many is the 4-H CWF (Citizenship Washington Focus) trip that youth attend during their high school career. 4-H teens learn about citizenship and how they are a contributing member of society; travel to Washington, D.C., to see the United States government in action and learn about the past through historical sites; and plan a service learning project that they could complete after the project.

Come to Jesus in all things

Associate Pastor, Journey Christian Church

In Faith

With Fall in full swing, school well underway, and seeing fall sports nearing the end of the season, I sure want to put on the brakes and slow things down.

Where did summer go? Summer projects still aren't completed. It's easy to think that things are just out of control and I'd love to be able to take control and stop time. Far too often, we have control over circumstances but what happens when things are just out of our control?

There is a big difference when things are just out of control or out of MY control. We live in a very independent culture and are told from a young age that we are to figure things out and take care of it ourselves. I'm not saying that's a bad thing but when things are just out of control and we have no way to take care of it ourselves, it can cause fear, anxiety, and panic to set in.

In Mark chapter 9:14-27 we read an account of where a young boy is possessed by an unclean spirit. This man had come to the disciples to help and they were unable to heal this young boy. As Jesus comes to see what is happening, He comes in very gently and not demanding or forcing himself on the situation but he waits to see if He's wanted there. The father pleads with Jesus to help, but let's focus in on how this the man's plea in verse 23. "If you lowers and ask for help but maybe

So the "if you can" statehis young son and that things are ment really is a question if Jesus is really only getting worse. I don't think it takes long to see how we can draw truths from this account and apply it to our own lives. Many of us turn to Jesus when chaos ensues and we have little to no control. So out of desperation we turn to Jesus and expect him to make things better. However, do we come because we know that Jesus holds all power and might to overations, or do we come because it's just more than what we can handle on our own and we have nowhere else to turn?

Can I encourage you, to come to Jesus in all things! Trust that Jesus has the power and ability to care for you in your circumstances. Surrender control to Him and allow Him to lead and guide you through your difficult times.

Members of the Wayne Kiwanis Club recently spent part of the morning reading with children at Rainbow World. The club purchased books to give to the children and read additional books borrowed from the Wayne Public Library. The event was one of several planned throughout the year to celebrate the club's 100 years of existence in the Wayne community. The club plans to spend at least 100 hours reading to youth in the community and give away 100 books to young readers. The Wayne Kiwanis Club meets Mondays at noon at The Table and offers a variety of ways to provide support to youth.

Caring for the caregiver

Every day in the clinic or hospital meet extraordinary caregivers.

They are the ones who have gone above and beyond the call of duty; sometimes for years at a time. When you ask them how they do it, they shrug and smile. I am not talking about any doctor, nurse, or therapist. I am referring to those who care for and look after their elderly friends and family members. This can be a spouse, adult child, adult grandchild, neighbor, or even a good friend.

There are many reasons that people volunteer to be caregivers. Spouses can often not imagine living apart from each other. Adult children and grandchildren may want to return the care that they were given growing up. Neighbors often have a relationship of caring that spans years. Whatever the reason, these people answered the call

Those who have stepped up to care for another person deserve our praise and admiration. What they also need and deserve is our help and support. Caring for another person around the clock can be exhausting. Chronic health conditions, like dementia, incontinence grocery store is complicated when caring for someone who needs constant supervision to be safe. There are resources to help caregivers, but finding them can be difficult.

Many caregivers do not know where to look for help. Adult daycare or respite care for weekends or nights can be difficult to find or prohibitively expensive. There are several national organizations with resources such as AARP, the Alzheimer's Association, Family Caregiver Alliance, and the National Council on Aging. These organizations all have websites with great tips that can offer support for care-Do not forget to reach out to your family member's primary care physician or clinic care coordinator. They may be able to help you reach out to local resources and support groups. Know that caregivers should never do this all alone. We want to help and support the care you give. The goal is keeping everyone happy, healthy and well cared for - including the caregiver. Thank you for all you do. How can we help?

Pink Out!

Organized by the Wayne High School FBLA, a number of activities took place during a recent volleyball game at the school to promote breast cancer awareness. The group sold pink shirts for the second annual Pink Out event. In addition, a bake sale with a variety of pink items was held during the game that evening. Proceeds from the sale of the shirts and the bake sale will go toward breast cancer research. A number of other "pink" activities have been scheduled at both the school and throughout the community during the month of October to promote breast cancer awareness.

The surgeon uses hand controls that tell a robot how to move surgical tools to perform the operation. Robotic surgery helps the surgeon operate in hard-to-reach areas. People who have this type of surgery might get better faster and have fewer problems after surgery.

Natural orifice surgery. Natural orifice surgery is a way to operate on organs in the belly without cutting through the skin. Instead, surgeons pass surgical tools through a natural body opening, such as the mouth, rectum or vagina.

For example, a surgeon might put surgical tools down the throat and into the stomach. A small cut is made in the wall of the stomach. Surgical tools then move into the area around the stomach. The the lymph nodes, there's a chance that the tools could take a sample of liver tissue or remove the gallbladder.

Many women diagnosed with breast cancer don't have signs or symptoms

Breast cancer is not always accompanied by a lump. Many women diagnosed with breast cancer never have any signs or symptoms, and their cancer is found on a screening test, such as a mammogram.

Among women who experience warning signs, a lump in the breast or underarm area is the most common red flag. However, as a recent study illustrates, some women will discover their cancer because they're experiencing other, less common signs and symptoms

In a presentation at the 2016 National Cancer Research Institute conference, British researchers noted that, among more than 2,300 women they studied who were diagnosed with breast cancer, 83 percent sought medical attention because they found a lump.

For the other women, different signs and symptoms alerted them that something was wrong, including nipple abnormalities, such as discharge or a nipple that turned inward; breast-related pain; nonbreast-related pain, such as back pain and unintentional weight

Breast cancer also can cause changes in the skin of the breast, or nipple and areola, such as dimpling and pitting (similar in appearance to an orange peel), thickening, reddening, scaling, itching or swelling — with or without a lump. Depending on the symptoms, these changes may be attributed to rarer cancers, such as Paget's disease of the breast or an unusual but aggressive form of breast cancer known as inflammatory breast

Breast cancer also can cause a skin rash that looks similar to mastitis — an infection of the breast tissue that most often affects women who are breastfeeding.

If you find a new rash or breast redness, and you are not breastfeeding, that should be evaluated by your health care provider. If you are breastfeeding and experience persistent redness, that also should be evaluated.

It is worth noting that breast changes, including lumps, often turn out to be noncancerous (benign). In addition, many women's breasts change slightly over the course of a

That is particularly true as they go through their menstrual cycles, when breasts tend to become more tender or lumpier. These changes, called fibrocystic changes, often involve the entire breast. The tenderness and lumpiness, which goes away after the menstrual cycle, is not associated with cancer.

Breast tissue also changes as women age, becoming less dense over time.

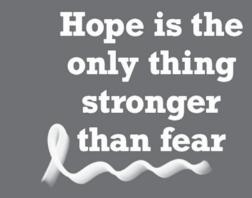

The British study mentioned above also found it took women with signs and symptoms that didn't include a lump longer to seek care than it did for women who found lumps.

That said, it's a good idea to become familiar with how your breasts normally feel, so that you can alert your health care provider to any changes and have the changes evaluated if they don't resolve within a few weeks.

The Other White Meat®

When launched in 1987, the goal of the Pork. The Other White Meat® tagline and supporting campaign was to increase consumer demand for pork and to dispel pork's reputation as a fatty protein. The Other White Meat was The Other developed to position pork as a good-tasting, versatile and white Meat nutritious meat that is easy to prepare and appropriate Since its inception, The Other White Meat has gained tremendous recognition from consumers. In 2000, a study conducted by Northwestern University found The Other White Meat to be the fifth most memorable promotional tagline in the history of contemporary advertising.

The tagline was certainly successful in positioning pork as a lean protein and an excellent choice for all meal occasions. The tagline is a symbol of the successful evolution of lean pork products available today and its contribution to pork becoming the world's most-consumed protein.

A study released in 2006 by the USDA states that six common cuts of fresh pork are leaner today than they were 15 years ago — on average about 16% lower in total fat and 27% lower in saturated fat. In addition, pork tenderloin is now as lean as skinless chicken breast. The study found a 3-ounce serving of pork tenderloin contains only 2.98 grams of fat, whereas a 3-ounce serving of skinless chicken breast contains 3.03 grams of fat.

The Other White Meat continues to have high consumer recognition and is an incredibly valuable asset to the pork industry. In the Fall of 2021, the Pork Checkoff leveraged the strong recognition of the tagline with Gen X audiences to launch a fun and nostalgic throwback campaign which reinforced that fresh pork cuts are safe when cooked to 145 degrees with a 3-minute rest.

the most sensitive parameter in the evaluation of calcium and phosphorus requirements. As can be seen in Figure 2, increasing supplemental phosphorus increased peak bone breaking strength for all phosphorus sources. The response was greater when phosphorus was supplemented from MSP as indicated by the greater slope of the line at 116.3, compared to a slope of 85.7 for TLA and 78.0 for SLS.
