JOHN KAUFF, KILLED NEAR LONG PINE, NEB.

FORMER WAYNE COUNTY FARMER

His Mother and Sister Live in Wayne - They go to Long Pine in Response to Summons.

John Kauff who used to live in the Wilsude vicinity, and well known there is reported to have been killed while on his way to Long Pine from his farm Tuesday afternoon.

Following is the Long Pine correspondence in the News.

John Kauff, a farmer, was killed on his way to town yesterday afternoon. Murder is suspected and it is believed an arrest will be made today.

Kauff was on his way to town yesterday afternoon from his home south of town. Near town in the afternoon he was seen by other farmers who passed him. Kauff was then talking to another farmer. They were talking in an open field and seemed to be engaged in some quarrel.

At dusk Kauff's team was seen coming into town without a driver. The team drew the running gear of a wagon, on which Kauff had been riding.

Parties went in search of Kauff and found his dead body near where he had been seen.

Bleeding from nose and ear. There were no bruises on the body. He was bleeding from the nose and ears. It is said that this morning blood was found on the running gear.

Kauff leaves a widow, one child and two stepchildren.

This afternoon's Norfolk News' Long Pine report says, the coroner's jury called to investigate the cause of the death of John Kauff found that he "came to his death from concussion at the base of the brain caused from injuries unknown to the jury."

SECOND NUMBER OF THE MUSIC COURSE

The second number of the Artists' Recital course under the auspices of the Wayne Choral Union, was presented last evening at the M. E. church.

The large, well balanced voice and the magnificent physical proportions of Mr. Holquist placed at once all technical difficulties in the background and the listener hears only a great artist's interpretation of the master composer.

It would be difficult to say in what style of music Mr. Holquist appears at his best, as his voice and technique seem to be so well adapted to the delicate, graceful effects of the Brahms' Love Song and Swedish folksongs as to the heroic strains of the Grandmeyer's Schumann, or lofty recitatives of the solos from the Handel Oration.

The graceful and efficient way in which our own musician and accompanist, Mrs. Miller, acquitted herself at the piano, should not be overlooked.

DR. W. B. VAIL SELLS TO AN OMAHA MAN TODAY

Today Dr. W. B. Vail sold his optical supplies and business to Dr. R. N. Donahy of Omaha, who will locate here permanently.

Dr. Vail speaks of him in a very complimentary manner.

Dr. Vail has bought a hardware store at Rock Rapids, Ia., and expects to move there to locate and take possession of this business next week.

Miller, deceased, were married at the Brown home, near the Victor Carlson place, on the 9th of November, 1887. When Blanche had arranged to be married Mrs. Miller requested that she and Mr. Carter invite the officiating clergyman of twentyfive years ago to perform their ceremony and the young people were pleased and satisfied to do so. After the wedding, guests, who consisted of the immediate families of the contracting parties, together with C. C. Brown and Rev. and Mrs. Gorst, partook of a most sumptuous dinner, and then the young people set out on their honeymoon, to which they were accompanied by several of their young friends' proposed attendances, to intercept some C. & N. W. or M. & O. train for Omaha where they will spend a few days, after which they will make their home at Carroll where Mr. Carter is assistant cashier in the First National Bank. CITIZENS ASKED TO MEET AT CITY HALL

TO CONSIDER THE POWER PLANT

Question of Repair or New Plant to Be Discussed - Everybody Urged to Be Present.

Mayor J. H. Kate asks that all citizens of Wayne meet at the city hall tomorrow evening to talk over the condition of the power plant, and if possible ascertain the majority opinion as to the best course to pursue in regard to it. The present plant is worn out, and is about ready for the junk pile. The boilers are already so condemned. The plant is already loaded to the limit, and necessary repairs would not increase the capacity. With increased consumption of electricity as the city grows, the plant, even if repaired, would soon be unequal to the task imposed upon it. Thus the question of repairing the present plant or replacing it with a new and larger one is presented for consideration. Only one other thing can be done - sell out to a private corporation.

The cost of operating the present plant is big and a good deal of a burden to the city. It has been advised that oil burning engines would be cheaper than those using coal, and that they would be satisfactory in all respects.

If a new plant is put in, it will be necessary to vote bonds for that purpose. Something must be done to perfect electric service and it is up to citizens to determine the course to follow. Therefore, they are requested to hold a mass meeting at the city hall tomorrow night to express themselves.

LAST WEEK OF UNION REVIVAL MEETINGS

(Continued.) This week our special meetings will come to a close. We have been favored with suitable weather, but had some unavoidable interruptions which hindered the work somewhat. It is too early to tabulate the results. A good number of people have begun a new life, homes have been opened to Christ's influence and we believe the work now begun will continue for some time. The remaining services should be largely attended. Mr. Lingren is at his best these last days. Sunday will be a great day of blessing for us all. Subject, "Failures."

Special Announcements
There will be services at 7:30 Saturday evening. Let all remember this. Union service at M. E. church at 10 a. m. Each church will hold its regular Sunday school session at 12 o'clock. A union young people's service at the Baptist church at 6 p. m. led by Mr. Lingren.
The closing service at the M. E. church at 7:30 p. m. Let us fill the hours of this service. The subject for the evening will be: "A Serious Question."

The following is in part his sermon entitled "Hot Shot for Skeptics," delivered last Sunday night:
His text was John 3:11, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, we speak that we know and testify that we have seen, and yet receive not our witness."
He said in part: "What one man knows that he knows is better than what a hundred men think they know. The testimony of one, testifying on a certain subject to what he has seen is worth more than the testimony of 100 testifying to what they have not seen in connection with the same subject."
Mr. Lingren here told of a rural justice trying the case of a man who had been charged with chicken stealing. Three men had seen the act and testified against the man. A local man who acted as attorney for the defendant produced six men who swore they did not see the prisoner steal the chickens and requested the release of the prisoner on the grounds of the majority of three on his side. The justice released him.
"You smile at that," said the speaker, "but do you know that represents the sense and judgment of the average skeptic of today. They allow their ignorance to control their knowledge and the evidence they have not got to destroy what they have."

Appeal to Reason.
"The infidel asks, 'Do you believe things that do not appeal to your reason?' Yes, I do. If I didn't I wouldn't believe much. There are things all about us we can't account for. The scientist can't explain why thorns, hickies and weeds will grow without cultivation, when corn, wheat and all bread-stuffs have to be planted and cultivated. There is not an inch of soil on earth that will bring forth a crop without planting and cultivation, but every inch of land will produce weeds. Scientists can't explain it but the Bible states why. God cursed the earth because of Adam's sin and said in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, and we have had to sweat for things ever since. Man, you are a mystery, you don't understand yourself. God never created a greater mystery than man—unless it's woman. They certainly can keep you guessing."

Question of Miracles.
"And the miracles don't appeal to your reason! Miracles are God's things and if He sees reason for doing them, that's reason enough. I am surprised at bright, scholarly men who stumble over the miracles of the Bible yet do not seem to have any trouble tracing their ancestors back to a pack of monkeys up a tree. They may do that if they like; I don't want to interfere with anybody's family affairs, but when they attempt to run by lineage back that way, I draw the line. My father doesn't look any more like a monkey than I do."
Why Not Understood.
"Every man fitted out with all the modern conveniences has five senses; that of hearing, seeing, tasting, smelling and feeling. These senses are for things material, but when it comes to the spiritual realm with which the Bible deals another sense is needed—the spiritual one. Paul speaks of it in 1 Cor. 2:14, 'But the natural man receiveth not the things of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned.' You will never know Christ as God except by revelation. And you will never get that revelation except you do what God wants you to. Jesus said 'If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.' John 7:17. There's the challenge. You do what God wants you to do and you shall know. If you are an honest skeptic you will accept that. If you don't accept it you will prove yourself dishonest."

MEETING OF COUNTY TEACHERS SATURDAY
Wayne county teachers will hold their first meeting of the school year at the court house next Saturday afternoon. Election of officers will be a part of the business of the session. The following program has been arranged:
Vocal Solo ..... Iva Hughes
McKenna, The Personality of the Teacher, Chapters 1 and 2 ..... Principal Lee Vernon, Carroll McKenna, The Personality of the Teacher, Chapters 3 and 4 ..... Principal Ruth Sterling, Hoskins
Some Suggestions (Five Minutes Each) ..... French Penn, Carroll ..... Perditta Morgan, Hoskins
Edith Porter, Sholes
Address ..... Dr. J. T. House, Wayne State Normal

CHARGED WITH USING OFFENSIVE ENGLISH
Fred Brueckner of the Hoskins village, was placed under arrest last Saturday on a complaint charging him with using vulgar and other kind of language in the presence of ladies. W. H. Stephens, marshal at Hoskins, is the complainant. A hearing is scheduled to take place in the county court next Saturday when the quality of the language used on the occasion specified will be determined.

CORRECTION.
Mr. Editor: The statement made at the meeting last Sabbath evening that the University of Chicago is a nest of atheists is surprisingly far from the fact. The writer spent three scholastic years in that institution without finding even one atheist.—J. T. HOUSE.

STATE NORMAL NEWS.
The board of education will hold its next meeting at Lincoln on December 16.
L. E. Goodyear, representing Good-year-Matthall Publishing company, was a visitor Tuesday.
A number of new classes have been organized for the accommodation of students who are enrolling for a winter course.
Members of the editorial staff of the Goldenrod are at work on the next issue of the paper, which will be a special Alumni number.
Miss Clemmie C. Smith, class of 1912, and now teacher in the primary department by the Sholes schools, spent Sunday with friends at the Normal.
Professor Huestener reports a good outlook for basket ball this winter. Thirty young men have enrolled and some excellent material is in evidence.
The Chapel exercises on Wednesday morning were of unusual interest. Mrs. Johnson of Omaha, sang a vocal solo and Miss McBeth gave two musical readings.
The Crescent literary society will give its next regular program on Friday evening, December 6. The public is cordially invited to be present.
Miss Rose Bartosh, teacher of the intermediate department of the Genoa schools, has recently received an increase in salary of seven dollars and a half a month. Miss Bartosh was a member of the training class of 1911.
Mr. James Britton, at present a junior at the university of Nebraska, was a pleasant caller Wednesday. In addition to his high school credits points James was allowed seventy-two college hours toward a university degree.
On Monday morning the attendance of the school was increased by the enrollment of forty new students. Of this number twenty-five entered for the first time and fifteen were students of the school last year.
Hon. A. H. Veile and wife were the guests of President and Mrs. U. S. Conn last Sunday. Mr. Veile is now vice-president of the normal board and he is the member of the executive committee who acts for the Wayne institution.
Professor Lewis' class in civics is studying the five constitutional amendments adopted at the last general election. Members of the class are divided in their opinion as to whether the legislators of this session will receive $10 a day, or whether the new salary schedule will become operative in 1915.
The announcement that Dr. J. F. Roach has accepted a call to another state is deeply regretted by those who are familiar with his work as a member of the state board of education. Dr. Roach has visited Wayne a number of times and the keen, personal interest he has always manifested in the welfare of the school makes him deservedly popular with students and members of the faculty.

Western Union 26; Wayne 0.
The bright sunshine of an Indian summer, a crisp atmosphere and hundreds of cheering voices greeted the two teams as they marched upon the field at Le Mars, Ia., last Thursday afternoon. Western Union won the toss and selected the west goal. Wayne kicked off. After several successful line plunges, Western Union worked a long forward pass, securing a touchdown just one minute and fifteen seconds after the referee's whistle announced the beginning of the game. One more touchdown by the Iowa lads was registered in the initial quarter. The second quarter yielded seven points more for the beefy Iowa gladiators.
In the third quarter Wayne branched, took the aggressive, and for a time threatened her opponent's goal, but the superior weight and experience of the Iowa team prevented a score. As the fourth and final period opened, the shadows of twilight were beginning to stall over the field. Western Union have placed several fresh men in line and gradually worked the ball down the field for the last touchdown of the year. Western Union kicked goal, making the score 26 to 0.
Considering the fact that the Normal team entered the game with a crippled back field, being minus the services of both fullbacks, Shellington and Welch, pitted against a heavy, experienced team which has not been defeated for two years, the result is in no way discouraging to the Wayne boys.—F. E. M.

J. H. GOLL AT HOME AGAIN.
Waterville, Wash., Nov. 29, 1912.
Editor Herald: I thought I would drop you a few lines, to let Wayne friends know that I am home from the hospital where I spent three months recovering from fractured legs. I had so far improved that the doctor let me come home. I can't now use my legs, but I believe I will be able to use one of them in a few weeks. My right leg is still very sore. I am very glad that I can be at home with my family again.

We had good crops this year. We threshed 14,000 bushels of wheat, 2,000 bushels of oats and 500 bushels of barley. The prospect is good for crop next year as we have had plenty of moisture. Members of the Wayne colony are well excepting myself.
Yours truly,
J. H. GOLL.

Colonel Roosevelt is quoted as saying he will not be a candidate for president again. But he said the same thing once before.

The annual convention of the Nebraska Women's Suffrage association is being held in Omaha this week, and a proposition to fight for a constitutional change granting privileges of the ballot to women will be considered. Encouraged by victory in other states, there is no doubt an effort will be made to secure the electoral franchise for women in Nebraska. And Colonel Birby and others who view—really with a good deal of reason—the impracticability of women voting, might as well, in the question, is submitted, join in and make victory unanimous. Whether practical or not, men are fast coming to regard women fully capable of participating in the affairs of government, and justly entitled to the privilege, and those who have been opposed, will have to yield before long.

The West Point lad who hanged himself because he was punished and was refused an excuse to his teacher for remaining away from school, should impress the fact that children are very sensitive and things that seem trivial to adults may appear of enormous importance to the youth. The troubles of a child, though perhaps of no actual consequence, may weigh more heavily on his shoulders than vastly greater troubles do on the shoulders of a grown person. Thus children's griefs, no matter how seemingly insignificant, form the cause, should not be brushed aside indifferently, but should be given thoughtful attention. The aggrieved child should be calmed and put on the right track with sound counsel.

The Hamilton club of Chicago proposes to invite 3,000 leading republicans to meet in that city in January to promote harmony. The president of the club said it is proposed to bring the party together by eliminating objectionable leaders from both factions. The club recognizes the fact that party division is due more to disagreement over leaders than differences over principles. Another move is made by John O. Yesser who has called a conference of republicans at Lincoln January 6, to formulate plans looking to a reunion of the party in Nebraska. Yesser's proposed reunion, however, implies acceptance of Colonel Roosevelt's leadership and the nomination of the colonel for president in 1916. The party break having been caused by Roosevelt who repudiated the party and named against the man he pushed to the front four years ago, it is not conceivable that the two factions can ever be brought together under his leadership. He will have to stand aside if real reunion is to be accomplished. New leaders will be necessary to unite broken ties.

The Herald's attention has been called to lack of proper behavior on the part of a number of young people in Wayne. Do fathers and mothers know where their sons and daughters spend their evenings? If they don't, it is high time they found out. If parents of Wayne are not sure as to the conduct of their children, let them counsel with teachers, find out what they suspect or know, and co-operate for betterment. It is important for parents to establish and maintain a close partnership with sons and daughters. It is important to be on confidential terms with them. If such candid relationship does not exist, parents are neglecting an important duty and need a revival of heart interest in their children. If a barrier of concealment has risen between you and your child, meet it with the warmth of manifested love, and through the aid of his or her teacher, restore confidential relations. The supreme essential of home life is to properly shape the character of children by example, counsel and loving solicitude, and thus develop in them strength and wisdom to from aside improprieties or evil suggestions and grow into pure, noble and intellectual men and women.

POWER OF THE SEA.

Fearful Forces of Ocean Waves When They Run Wild.
The average inland American who has never seen the ocean has no real idea of the force of its waves. He reads about the storm of boats being carried away and outwards stove. But he does not realize the steam bummer blows that may be struck by mere water.

A recent storm on the British coasts received the official designation of a storm of "extreme force." A picture taken in Hastings harbor shows the condition with which the waves struck the sea wall, sending the spray apparently higher than the buildings along the street. Blocks of concrete and iron railing were torn from the new parade extension at Chertsey place and tossed back into the roadway as if they had been bits of plank. Timber work that had withstood the stress of years was torn apart and carried away. Basements were flooded along all the seaward face of the town.

Such a storm when it sweeps over a ship will sometimes carry away almost everything on deck. Deck houses are often smashed, and the lifeboats are often stove in and ruined.

Various attempts have been made to devise motors to develop power from the force of the waves. The amount of energy wasted through their lack of success is beyond estimate. If the power of the sea could be used it would drive the machinery of an unlimited number of plants.—Chicago Tribune.

READING THE FUTURE.

Foresight or Good Guessing in a Parisian Robbery Case.
One day in October, 1888, Lady A. being in the city of Bel-Respos, Paris, found that she had been robbed of a sum of 2,500 francs. She notified the commissary of police on Rue Borevier, who instituted a search and questioned the servants, but discovered nothing. Lady A., when enumerating to her agents, begged the commissary to exclude from his suspicions her second valet de chambre, a youth of nineteen, very good looking, very respectful and very well qualified for his duties, who had been nicknamed "le Petit" not on account of his stature, for he was rather tall, but from a feather of delicacy protecting familiarity which his good qualities had won for him.

Meanwhile among the friends of Lady A. there had been a good deal of talk about a certain Demoiselle E. who, they said, could see the most surprising things in a bowl of coffee grounds. M. L. D'Erveux had the curiosity to accompany his governess to the house of this person and was quite surprised to hear her describe exactly each piece of furniture in Lady A's apartment, pass in review her several servants and say that though she could not name the thief, he would be culminated within two years.

Some weeks later "le Petit" left the service of his mistress without giving any reason, and two years later he mounted the scaffold. This servant, so highly esteemed, was none other than Marehauion, the assassin.—London Notes and Queries.

The Crested Rat.

The crested rat of East Africa is remarkable, first because of the great length of the black and white hairs down the ridge of the back, which are rendered the more conspicuous because the hairs along the sides of the body are so short and so differently colored, being brownish gray and looking for all the world as if some one had taken a pair of scissors and maliciously shorn all the decorative hair, leaving only a dull undercoat, secondly, it is remarkable because the skull has a roofing of bones exactly resembling that of some turtles, while, furthermore, this rat has a complicated apparatus resembling that presented by the skulls of certain fishes. In its habits it appears to be arboreal, while from the structure of its teeth it would appear to be at least partly insectivorous.

Valid Excuse.

Our schoolteachers need no comic papers. Funny enough things come their way in the shape of letters from the parents of their pupils, as witness the following received by a teacher: "Be expected also—Please excuse Willie for absence. He has fell downstairs, and we feared his internal insides was hurt at first, but they ain't." The doctor says that no part of anatomy was hurt but the twisting of the spine, the end of the outside side and also his hippy hurt some. But he narrowly escaped fatal death. So kindly excuse."—Boston Transcript

THRIFTY NAPOLEON.

He Made Sure of Being Served With Honesty and Economy. Emperor Napoleon I, dressed in plain clothes, often visited the markets of Paris in order to learn the current prices of food and find out where his household officers served him with honesty and economy. In "Foreign Reminiscences" Richard Lord Holland says that this was only one illustration of the emperor's thrift and shrewdness. When the Tuileries was being repaired Napoleon suspected that the upholsterer's charges were higher than they should be. So he asked one of his ministers, who was with him, how much the ivory egg at the end of the bell rope ought to cost. "I do not know," was the answer. "It shall be ascertained," said Napoleon. Thereupon he cut off the ivory handle, called for a valet, bade him dress himself in plain clothes, inquired the price of such articles at several shops in Paris and order a dozen as if for himself. The valet bought them for two-thirds of the price that the emperor had had to pay. Napoleon, inferring that the same overcharge had been made in the other articles, deducted a third from the entire account and informed the tradesman that it was done at his own express command because on investigation he had found the charges to be exorbitant.

A DREAM AND A CRIME.

The Story of a Slumber Vision That Comes From Cicero. Cicero furnishes us with a tale of two Alexandrians who, sleeping together, arrived at Algazra, a city of Greece between Athens and Corinth, where one of them lodged in a friend's house and the other at an inn. After supper the person who lodged at the private house went to bed and, falling asleep, dreamed that his friend at the inn appeared to him and begged for his assistance, because the innkeeper was going to kill him. The man immediately got out of bed, much frightened at the dream, but, recovering himself, fell asleep again, his friend appeared to him a second time and desired that, as he would not assist him in time, he would at least care not to let his death go unpunished—that the innkeeper, having murdered him, had thrown his body in a cart and covered it with rubbish. He therefore begged that he would at the city gate in the morning before the cart was out.

Struck with this new dream, he went early to the gate, saw the cart and asked the driver what was in it. The driver immediately fled. The dead body was taken out of the cart and the innkeeper apprehended and executed.

Her Conscience Clear. "Well," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "it looks as if your son had some place at least. He has become a proctor in admiralty."

After she had studied the matter for a moment Mrs. Oldcastle put an arm around her friend and consolingly said: "Try to bear it the best you can. You'll always have the satisfaction of knowing you done the best you could for him anyhow."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A NICE COOL BED.

The Surprise a Trio of Laplanders Spurred Upon Nansen. Sir Henry Lucy tells in the Cornhill Magazine a good story that he had from Nansen, the explorer. It amusingly illustrates the hardy health of the Laplanders. Part of Nansen's equipment for his trip across Greenland consisted of two sleeping bags made of undressed skins. On the first night of the journey Nansen and his two Norwegian companions got into one of the bags, pulled the mouth tight across their necks, and slept in the snow with only their heads out.

Before retiring to rest Nansen saw the three Laplanders he had engaged for the expedition cozily tucked into the other sleeping bag. When he awoke in the morning, almost numb with cold, he observed that the bag in which he had tied up the Laplanders was empty and that they were nowhere in sight. He was afraid they had deserted him and, scrambling out of the bag, went in search of them. He found the three men fast asleep behind a hillock of snow that they had scraped together as a protection against the wind. "Ah, master," they said when asked to explain this extraordinary conduct, "we couldn't sleep in that thing. It was too hot, so we got out and have had a comfortable night here."

Attacks on Tea. Cobbett is not alone among authors in his distaste for tea. Arthur Young soundly rates the agricultural laborers of his time for their indulgence in this luxury. "An object seemingly of little account," he writes, "but in reality of infinite importance, is the custom, coming in of men making tea an article of their food, almost as much as women; laborers losing their time to come and go to the tea table—many farmers' servants even demanding tea for their breakfast with the master, which has actually been the case in East Kent. If the men come to lose as much of their time at tea as the women and injure their health by so bad a beverage, the poor in general will find themselves far more distressed than ever."—London Chronicle.

HIGHLY COLORED FUN.

Gruesque Sport That is Part of the Hill Festival.

The curious and happy of the Hill festival, which is celebrated annually by the maharaja of Patiala, is described by Mrs. Charles Bertram in "A Night in Many Lands." The story made the acquaintance of the famous Hindu ruler during a tour of India and was invited to remain over for the festival.

Early in the morning I went to the club, where I found many of the guests who were taking part in the program for the first time. We were greeted with a complete new set of Hindu garments, and our dressing was superintended by the maharaja's servants. We had camels, elephants and victorias provided for us. I was on an elephant in a kind of box, and we drove in procession to the palace in the native city.

We were received with great acclaim by the natives, and I was led to believe that it was to be decidedly a dignified occasion. But I was woefully mistaken. The fun had not begun. Certain formalities had to be gone through before the signal was given.

We took our seats in the courtyard of the palace at a long table that was here and there studded with small, colored balls as large as oranges and filled with Hill powder. At a signal the brother of the maharaja, the Maharaja, was seated at the table and threw it gently across the table, striking the officer on the forehead.

The ball broke and scattered the powder over his costume. Then there was a general scramble, and in less than ten minutes we were all covered with the colored contents scattered broadcast on the crowd. Next baskets of loose powder were thrown upon us in handfuls. It was no use to extricate. The moment you opened your mouth something filled it with powder. The battle grew fast and furious, when suddenly the Maharaja, with a flourish of his fan, declared the powdering over.

After this sort of thing had gone on for half an hour it ceased by mutual consent, and we returned to the private gardens of the maharaja, where we were most unceremoniously pitched into a tank of running water. I was dyed a deep scarlet all over my body, and it was fully a month before the color entirely disappeared from my face and hands.

She Knew the Symptoms.

There is a certain bright English actress who comes over here once a year or two to play an engagement, says the Saturday Evening Post. Among her admirers on this side is a middle aged theatrical man in a serious turn of mind. He is courtly, but has been called thronome in conversation. One afternoon at her suit in a New York hotel she sprightly lady was wearing a dress of tan for a coat and newspaper men. The telephone bell rang, and the hostess answered the call. "Yes," she said, "this is Miss Blank. Who? Oh, Mr. Blank calling, is it? Then, in a tone of weary resignation, "Very well, send him right up." She hung up the receiver and turned to the newspaper men.

"Boris," she said, "you'll have to toddle away. My sick headache is coming on."

The Gold Lions of Peking.

Fronting the imperial palace at Peking are two beautifully carved lions of enormous size. They are supposed to be the mandarin, are of solid gold and have been there since time immemorial. When the combined armies of England and France advanced on Peking in 1860 the Chinese pushed these statues gray in order to make the Europeans believe that they were of bronze and therefore to insure against their being melted. Later, during the Japanese war, these lions disappeared for a time, but at the conclusion of peace they reappeared in their original position. The value of these relics is said to be incalculable, and they are in native eyes a symbol of the unity of the empire.—Harper's.

Algebra.

The science of algebra is said to have been the invention of Mohammed of Buziana about 850 A. D. The science was introduced into Spain by Moors. The first treatise on the subject in any European language is believed to have been that by Luca Pacoli in 1494. The first English algebra was written by Robert Recorde, teacher of mathematics at Cambridge, about 1577. He was the first to use the sign of equality.

Killing Time.

Perhaps the quietest time of the year in old colonial days was November, called "killing time." When the chosen day arrived, oxen, cows and geese which had been fattened for the winter's stock were slaughtered early in the morning; that the meat might be tender and cold before being put in the pickle. Sausages, rolldies and headcheese were made, laid tried out and allowed to save.

Changed.

"When my two girls were born I used to wonder what I was going to make of them."
"And now?"
"Now that they're grown up and in society I've begun wondering what they're going to make of me."—Detroit Free Press.

Are Outraged.

An outraged spirit in the sweetness of existence.—Dickens

A MORAL CLEAN-UP.

Premont Tribune: At no time, perhaps in the whole history of the country have there been more genuine reforms under way, than now, and it is encouraging to note their importance from a moral point of view.

The vigorous prosecution of the big trusts that has been carried forward under the present administration while one of the most significant movements of the day is primarily an economic readjustment and not so directly a moral reform as some others of conspicuous moment.

The enforcement of the statutes touching the question of "white slavery" is commanding the activities of the federal department of justice. In many portions of the country the machinery of the government is being actively employed to prosecute villainous who traffic in virtue. The law is severe and it is being widely used to suppress an evil that has grown to astounding proportions.

Criminals engaged in blowing up buildings and other structures are also being vigorously prosecuted at Indianapolis. The procedure under way here means much to the securing of life and property. It had come to such a pass that neither had any assurance of safety against the unrestrained agents of organized violence. The federal government is asserting its potential authority in this particular, with the prospect that the nefarious business of destroying by dynamite will be torn out by the roots.

A few days ago by concerted movement nearly two hundred so-called doctors were taken into custody charged with the serious crime of engaging in race suicide. These dastards have been carrying on their occupation in defiance of all law and they have committed a multitude of heinous crimes. The government has having laid its heavy hand upon them will doubtless suppress much that has hitherto gone unpunished.

These things all indicate a forward movement toward purifying public morals, toward cleaning up many reeking corners of our social institutions.

The government's power for improving the social status is being used to effective ends and good citizens everywhere applaud it.

A Limited Habit.

"I see that some of our scientists claim that death is largely a matter of habit, depending on one's thought and all that," he said.

"Nonsense," she replied. "Did you ever know any one who was in the habit of dying?"—Exchange.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

It is indeed a wondrous thing, this modern telephone, that will across the distance bring a speaker's lightest tone. Sometimes I sit—and contemplate its weird, TELEPHONE surprising plan, and bless these scientists who gave this boon to man, and then again, I rant and bawl about its many faults, and tear the blamed thing from the wall, and on the pieces write: Your mirthful lips are stricken dumb, sealed are the founts of song, when central (busy chewing gum) gets all the numbers wrong. I sometimes wonder what we'd do if we should lose our phones. We'd be a hopeless, helpless crew! We'd fill the world with groans. To get back to our fatherly ways would fill our souls with ache! A message then would take three days, that now a minute takes! And then again it seems to me that life would be more gay if all the telephones that be were buried or shipped away. For when in haste I'd use the phone to get up with my first stern scolding: "The line is busy now!" It is a nuisance and a boon, a blessing and a curse; perhaps they'll improve it soon, perhaps they'll make it worse.

Men come into this world of we and fuss a while and then they go some where beyond the sun; a little while they work and weep, a LITTLE BRIEF reap, and then their journey's done. Men come into this vale of tears and skinnish road like brindled steers a few brief, weary days; a little while they prance and whoop and then they all forsake the coop, and vanish in the haze. Yet in the little fleeting space the world is their abiding place, some do their work as well, that when it's done and they have died the people speak their names with pride, and of their labors tell. And others live like butterflies; they dawdle round 'neath summer skies, content to show their wings' and when they've gone their useless ways, no weeping mourner speaks their praise, no poet of them sings. This life is brief but it is good, and you may saw a lot of wood between the morn and eve; to others you may comfort give so that they'll praise you while you live, and bless you when you leave. Man comes into this world of sighs and snoops around a while and dies and undertakers smile; but if he does his best to cheer and comfort other pilgrims here, his journey is worth while.

When counted were the recent votes we found (and were dismayed) that 57,000 goats were stolen, lost or strayed. And some who lost their GOOD treasured goats were grouchy, LOOSE and sore; dire threats came smothering from their throats, they vowed the ground and swore: "We wretches victims of a diabolical faction or a ring, but we'll get even yet," they shriek "we'll grind our knives, by jing, and when the traitors, villains, knaves, themselves for office strive, their goats will fill dishonored graves, as sure as we're alive!" The wise man who talk like this but fill their friends with ache, for fools don't make a bit who hiss like hooded garter snakes. Some other looper go around as though they felt relief, and from their lips there comes no sound of mourning or of grief. "Our goats are gone, so let them go!" exclaim these dauntless men; "but when we have the time, you know, we'll round them up again." Some other day the people's votes in our behalf may fall; then will come back our wand'ring goats, with whiskers, horns and all! The people mark the joyous sport, and on some future day, when he their influence shall court, their votes will come his way.

Dear Woodrow Wilson: Let me say how glad I am you were, and all the smoke has cleared away, and all the CONFIDENTIAL won't be out of place, I guess, to take the liberty of telling you that your success was largely due to me. I organized three Wilson clubs at Mudville-on-the-Hill, when all the other villages had stood up for Ted or Bill. While others raved about the flag and made's frightful din, I wore a red bandana rag and Woodrow Wilson pin. I punched old Billy Biddad's head, and thus rebuked his crimes, when he came round one day and said that you would bring hard times. I had your picture on my porch to paralyze your foes, and packed around a big tin of soap which leaked and spoiled my clothes. My pup's named Woodrow and my cat your honored surname bears; an old-time Al-leo, Thurman: hat your correspondent wears. I've yelled my larynx out of joint, and now that you've the chance, your faithful friend you should appoint me ambassador to France. Don't say this please, my dear Uncle Walt.

Important things; an audience should be denied to statesmen, consuls, kings, till you've rewarded those who wore your colors in the fray, till you have honored those who bore the burden of the day.

Young Winkler worked for Jabez Beall, who deals in shoes and luscious meal. For years he was a valued clerk, and Jabez warmly THE SWELLED HEAD praised his work.

A sad Winkler's friends would often say he should be drawing better pay. He sees his splendid trade to you; oh, what would poor old Jabez do, if you'd devote to free the coop? "I would surely leave him in the soap." Young Winkler's head began to swell, so many people stopped to tell him what a honeybird he was, and clapped his back with fervent paws. So Winkler then began to feel he was a bigger man than Beall, and he got grouchy, mean and sore, because he wasn't drawing more. He thought if he resigned his job his boss would wail around and beg him for a while to stay, and doubtless give him double pay. And so, in baughy tones he told old Jabez that his feet were cold. "My services are in demand; good jobs await on every hand. You don't feel, appreciate, how much I've done to make you great." Thus Winkler made his little spiel. "I'm glad you quit," said Jabez Beall. "In other days you'd do quite well, but since your head began to swell you made my self and patrons tired, and I had planned to have you fired." Now Winkler tramps around the town and scratches a job, as he turned down, and while his world's a thing of gloom old Jabez' trade is on the boom.

Come let us do our shopping early, before the Christmas rush begins, and buy a doll with tresses curly—or buy two dolls—if they are ANCIENT ADVICE twins. This theme is all that I can think of, the only subject for a lay; the bubbling spring that poets drink of for me is dry as just year's hay. I've scratched my head for hours, together to find a subject for a song, and there is nothing but the weather—and that I've sung about too long. I've racked my brain till it is popping, disturbed the household's restful calm; there's nothing left but Christmas shopping; that one in verses may embalm. Oh, sisters, do your shopping early, before the rushing throngs begin, for when you reach the portals pearly, St. Peter will not let you in! There's nothing doing in this valley, the country's quiet as the town; gone are the caucus and the rally, the suffragists have simmered down. The poet's briny tears are dropping adown his whiskers to the floor; there's nothing left but Christmas shopping that calls for anthems any more. The knee sprung muse is sour and surly, the harp is made of rusty tin. Oh, brothers, do your shopping early, before the Christmas crowds begin.

MANLIKE MANATEES.

These Queer Creatures Are Linked With the Mermaid Myth. In sentimental waters of America the legend disperses a number of that family of aquatic mammals to which has been ascribed the mermaid myth. Belonging to the dugong and the now extinct rhinoceros, we still have the manatee. This name is preferred by some to the word 'manatee' because the latter is the name of the Latin manatus (furnished with hands, though the name is probably of Mandingo origin).

The manatee is a herbivorous mammal inhabiting the shallows about the coasts of Florida, Mexico, central America and the West Indies. It is not known to attempt the open sea and does not possess the ability to come ashore. This animal is somewhat whalelike in shape, with a horizontal tail. It is from eight to twelve feet in length, the body being scarcely covered with hair. The only limbs are the fore flippers, low on the side of the body. This flipper has no fingers. It does not possess a dorsal fin, but has a free motion in all directions from the shoulder. The elbow and wrist approximate the human anatomy in movement, with the same resemblance to an arm the manatee has been said to carry its young. While the statement is not authentic, it is quite believable, its possibility being vouched for by all observers of the animal in motion.

ELECTION STRATEGY.

Incident of an Old Time English Parliamentary Contest. In the days before the institution of the secret ballot, when the candidate was known to all eyes, and an election, a former Lord Donalduid, who refused to give bribes, contested Holton, but was beaten by an opponent who had bribed his electors at the rate of 5s a vote.

The unsuccessful candidate conceived this brilliant plan, says the writer of a history of the Dundee family. He had friends that he was quite determined to win the seat next time without bribery. For he sent the town clerk round the town to announce that he had voted for him in this first election might repair to his agent, from whom they would receive £10.

As comparatively few people had voted for him this was not a very extensive process. And at the next election Lord Donalduid was elected by an enormous majority. After the triumph of his first election he had delicately suggested that some reward was due to such loyalty.

"Not a farthing," was the reply. "But, my lord, you gave £10 a head to the voters of the town, and the majority have been counting on something handsome on this occasion."

"Perhaps so," said the clever candidate, "but I would just explain his hand and let the bird fly. If the answer were 'Alive' he would with one little squeeze crush the poor bird to bits and eat it up."

But the wise man proved himself equal to the occasion and replied, "It is as you please." Each one held within his or her grasp the fair bird of life. Which is to be a blessing or a bane? It is "as you please."

Wayside Inns in Hungary generally rejoice in very quaint titles. This one was called the Dropperin and had the motto, "The dropperin has a long pipe with a wooden ring and a granite wine bottle suspended from it. The system of keeping the scores is primitive, but practical. The regular customer, the housekeeper have each a bit of wood called rovas, with the name of the person written on it, and every liter of wine consumed is marked by each making a notch on his respective bit of wood. When the score is paid off both the rovas are burned. Consequently you hear the peasants in the village shouting to each other, 'literally drink on my "knotch stick," which sounds most comical.' "Wanderer in Hungary."

Thermometer and Gully Stream. Investigators have observed that the thermometer is not necessarily a sure indication of the temperature. The strongest current does not necessarily coincide with the highest temperature. The warmth of the water only indicates its tropical origin, and is not a sign of the heat of the sun. Cape Hatteras is the result of a very gentle flow coming from the West Indies. The Gulf stream itself is between this warmer water and the 100 fathom current. Shipping Illustrated.

Against Speculation. The head of a big trout sat at a dinner in Boston: "I have always been against speculation in the stock market, but I have seen many a man get rich by speculating in the stock market instead of by honest work for the common good is to be an undesirable citizen."

Wise Provision. "Blignis says he has the smartest youngster in the world." "Of course," answered Mr. Orweber. "Every parent thinks that way, and it is very foolish. The best way to get every human being's life there ought to be a time when somebody thinks he is smart." - Washington Star.

His Hint. "When I last saw Jim Lobb, he was green with envy, yellow with jealousy, white with fear and red with rage." - Baltimore Sun.
