LETTER TO HERALD FROM MRS. ELLA J. PILE

Salt Lake City, Utah Dec. 20, 1913.

Editor Herald: Ever since my return to Utah, I have regretted that I had not had a chance to visit one of the big old mines of which I am so fond.

My work this year has been very pleasant. I have the English and algebra, two subjects I like very much.

Carbon county has a county high school, a fine public library, a high school, while the branch is at Seaford. I had expected to be in Price, but the position I wanted was not vacant as it was expected it would be.

I signed my contract, and I was a little disappointed, but after having been in Seaford four months, I am much pleased that I am in that school.

Conditions are very different there from what I had expected. The school is entirely different from the one in Seaford.

The majority of the people are Americans. Carbon county is one of the great coal fields of this country.

Carbon county has a county high school, a fine public library, a high school, while the branch is at Seaford.

The school pays good salaries, and the taxes from the mines are large. In fact, it is said there is paid per child more than any place in the United States.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

When there are no flies to swat, my human sons and daughters, but bling o'er with ardor hot, OUT of come and wildly wave their SEASON seaters. "Let us see a busy fly," cry these out of date crustlers, "and we'll show it how to die!" What enthusiastic raiders! But when flies are buzzing near, spreading death where'er they're trotting—these crustlers disappear—they leave us to do the swatting. When there is no snow to dig from the walks before your dog, people come to staid rip asking if they may not shovel. But when snow is piled around six feet deep or at creation, no one brings a helpful spade, you must work your own salvation. There are always helping hands when to task we are parasitic. Whining—Woeing—always stands above there's nothing that we do, so the wise man does his work, letting not the helpers jibe him, not depending on the bore who is always glad to aid him.

me that day when winter rages like some wild lion hunting spoil, while I sit snug and turn the pages of some thing new by Conan Doyle. It's sweet to look out through the casement and see the snow wreaths rushing past, to watch the trees, as in a staccato, head low before the howling blast. Ah, such a scene to me discloses a bliss of which I'd never dream while basking in a bed of roses or fishing in a woodland stream. So by the stove I sit and dream. Just I thought, supposing it was coal. Come, winter, come and do your dirtiest—do you cannot bluff my rugged soul!

Oh, this is the season when man has found reason to lie in abundance: of powder and pills, to order in swarms of ointments and lotions, of leechbalm and balsam and syrup of squills. For all passing breezes the germs of diseases are sent abroad with an impetuous zeal, around you they hover, and when you THE SICK SEASON from pain in your shoulder, there's one in your back, 'till follows ailment, and there's a derangement of all of our organs, lungs and such; with pain and rheumatism from toes to our wrists, we're glad we are able to walk with a crutch. With this, trembling talons we reach for five gallons of dope that the doctor prescribed for three centuries and which will give all our aches to the poor. We're tired of the measles, and chigger as woeles, we toddle down on a gosh-shin trip, and when the night's falling and newlows are calling, we pour our lock home with a dose of the grip. Man, healed of the shingles, in ecstasy mingles with other glad mortals, and frolics and jumps, then chagrined view him, and sadly come to him, and send him back home to be cared of the sunnys. Thus pain and disorder drives man o'er the border, o'er sanity's border, alas that it's true! And when he has shaken one fierce kind of aching, another will find him in a trice or two.

I wish wishes through my bosom while, and scratch my head like teacher, and when I have the rheu-DISCONTENTment, I wish I had the measles. My heart is never satisfied, and in it there are threnologies, sighs, hopes, longings, which are doubtless wild, incoherent longings. The doctor says I must get long, prescribing rest and quiet; he's thrown all fancy vestals out, and I've a hernut's diet; and as I chew the bean and root, or take my dose of sage, I sigh, "How happy I might be if I could have lumbago!" The blessings which I now enjoy I do not prize or treasure, but find in all a base alloy, and envy that his pleasure who has the shingles or the measles—the grip or influenza, and so I nurse my doleful pains until I'm as freezy. It is an evil thing, my friends, to be so constituted, that every blessing which descends on us one but poorly suited. Unfortunately that man of woe whom nothing ever pleases, who envies people, as they go, their several diseases. Let's be content with what we have, let's be gay as the sun, and all our troubles, the salt, and on our heels, the position.

The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, the dog and the druggist THE H. C. O. L. who furnish us the pills I've figured, and figured, and I will be jiggered if I can see how I can pay all their bills! The wolf's drawing circle! The arrogant grocer insists on his money, and that P. O. the coal man is growling, the plumber is howling, all merchants seem taking a holiday! The high cost of living is certainly giving the people more trouble than people desire, and when the situation prescribed for the nation by statement who fanned us with language of fire! Before the election, they fed us, our confect—the kind known as "taffy"—and promised relief, they'd strangle the tyrant of high prices and high rent, but what have they done that will lighten our grief? They fool and they fiddle and sidestep the riddle that's driving us batty and filling our hearts with grief, they look at the muscle, but dodge the prize puzzle that's thumping the collar with dark blue despair. Man woees like old Harry, the load he must carry is breaking his spirit and crushing him fast; no odds how he rustles and struggles and hustles, the High Cost of Living will get him at last.

The cost of living still goes up, and trouble round us 'tinkles, and yet we're not complaining. In fact, we've porticoed our LIFE EXPENSIVE or chickens. To make our walks less proper, we should be less and scrawny, but we're the muscles of a horse, and we are fat and brassy. The portly man gets up and whoops about the cost of living, while to his farm some costly couple a penal warmth are giving. The stouman wrings his hands and whines, the Cost will make us vagrants, while his breath imported woees impart a pungent fragrance. We should be hollow-eyed and thin, our slats like wash boards, showing if we'd denounce the men of sin who keep the prices going. But nearly all the kicking is done by fat and fussy sinners who have their pockets full of money and swallow four-ounce dinners. I do not hear the other woees—hearts—the street-of-a-plug, he eats his dinner from a saucer, and he kicks it down with water; he and his children shed their woees, and scabrous "Yankee Doodle," and to the moving picture show he takes the whole of Pierre, will soon resign his present position, and a successor will be chosen by the county board. There are three candidates for the clerkship. Laud Advocate: Mr. and Mrs. C. Templin of Hoskins, were guests at the H. J. Candor home Monday. They had been at Boston to attend the funeral of their son, John Templin, who died Friday. The old folks were accompanied by another son, William Templin, of Friend, Neb.

John Barnum, wealthy farmer living four miles northeast of Redway, committed suicide on last Wednesday by cutting his throat with a razor. There was no known cause for the rash act. While on his way to his farm near O'Connell, he stopped and tied his team to a telephone pole, and then took his own life. He leaves a wife, but no children.

Pilger Herald: Albert Frank, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Frank, farmers living northeast of Pilger, and Miss Tillie Vernon, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Vernon, of Wood Lake, Neb., were married at Stanton, on Wednesday, December 10, by Judge Cowan. They left Stanton noon of last week for Wood Lake, on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Frank's parents. They will return by Judge Spring, and make their home on a farm just over the line in Wayne county.

officials that the contracts have not been fair to the county. Mr. Price states that his time is rather limited just now, but he expects to check up the records in the clerk's office, and get an idea whether there is a basis for the complaints made. In talking with the county board at their informal meeting, Mr. Price expressed the opinion that he expected to find the bridges built according to the contracts, but probably in a few instances the county may have paid too high a price for the materials used. Mr. Price expects to be here in January some time to commence the work of checking up the bridge matters for the past three years.

STAY IN NEBRASKA
Sixty in Lincoln Journal: Unless you have plenty of money, California is good place to keep away from. Its limited natural resources, its remoteness from anywhere, and the difficulties attending Utah language transportation, all warn the man of modest resources to "stay in the state," and keep out of trouble. Los Angeles, home of the population, but what is the profit of having folks unless you can feed them? One tenth of the population of Los Angeles is out of work, and nothing to eat, but lemon and cactus bark. An army of 30,000 with nothing to be thankful for but a comfortable climate and the memory of better days back before they came from in the Mississippi valley let me stay till I am old. Where we have the changing seasons, and the weather warm and cold; Where the summer and the winter give us cause for mirth and song, And the people who ask hungry are not hungry very long. O the flowers are very pretty, and there's much of which to boast in the beauty of the mountains all along the western coast; But the people there are stranded when a blain comes in all around. And the great Mohave desert does not furnish food and rest. There is proper inspiration in the sea and mountain air; But the lack of ham and cabbage is a serious affair; While the careless go to suffer in the cities by the sea, I will linger in Nebraska—it is good enough for me.

I'm sorry they and slight the terms of fishing pier. Nothing helped me as I'll use Dean's Ointment. The result was fitting.—Hon. John S. Bennett, Mayor, Grand, Ala.—Ad.

HERALD EXCHANGE

CLEANINGS OF WEEK
Harrington wants and expects Carnegie to fork over $10,000 for a library building.

The Cedar County News says Vermilion, S. D., is to have a government building, and that Harrington also needs and deserves one.

March 1, 1917, Nebraska will have experienced fifty years of statehood, and there is already talk of a proper observance of the occasion by the Omaha Trade Exhibit. Christmas has but one year, but that doesn't worry the live retailer whose head is full of selling schemes for the eleven months.

The Lincoln Trade Review says it will show in its forthcoming annual review edition that Nebraska has produced more in dollars and cents from the soil in 1913 than in any previous year.

The Little town of Fordyce in Cedar county is to have a newspaper, published by G. J. Shephardson of Harrington. The Harrington Herald will do the job of the mechanical work for the new enterprise.

The county clerk of Placer county having been appointed postmaster for employed justice in other cities. Unemployed men have less hesitation than usual in asking for help. The Journal reports that an officer of a society for the relief of distress was surprised to receive a call for assistance from a lady who used her own telephone to make her wants known. He said he expected next someone would whelp in an automobile in quest of aid.

Harrington Herald—Judge Bryant has received word yesterday from the clerk of the supreme court that the juvenile court law was held as being constitutional by the supreme court. This is the final decision in the case of W. R. Miller vs. ed. vs. William F. Bryant county judge, which has been attracting considerable attention lately. The case was to test the constitutionality of the juvenile court law, and since the supreme court has held the law good, Judge Bryant says that it is his intention to enforce it.

Harrington Herald: State Engineer D. D. Price arrived here from Potosi, where he has been checking up some bridge for Placer county, and arranged to soon begin his investigation of the bridge controversy in Cedar county. Complaints have been made to the state

HERALD PUBLISHING CO. R. W. YARB, Editor and Manager Telephone No. 146

The editor of the Pender Express explains that neglect of his newspaper is due to a burden of duties in connection with the postoffice which he also runs. That is the objection to a public letter to him...

An effort is being made by extreme partisans in congress to take deputy postmasters out of the civil service and make their positions subject to political favor. The civil service a policy which requires merit to gain and hold places of trust...

With the beginning of the new year, the Herald would urge as an important resolution a determination on the part of all to boost for Wayne stronger than ever before, and with unity of spirit and unflinching zeal...

The St. Paul, Neb., Republican whose editor is a Roosevelt satellite, thinks it would be folly to try to reduce the party under the leadership of Blinn Road, but would be willing to have it done with Roosevelt at the head...

We are in the midst of our preparations for moving into our new building. Whoever knows what "moving" is will readily understand that we want to try to make this task as easy as possible...

We have a good many articles on hand which we would rather sell away below regular prices than move around from one place to another. In other goods, we have large quantities on hand and are willing to reduce stock by liberating profits...

There is no question that among all these goods are some you need, and which you can pick up very cheaply next Saturday.
