

NEXT SATURDAY THE BIG CONTEST CLOSES

EACH ONE ANXIOUS TO WIN

Many Votes Will Come in on the Last Day. No One Knows Who Winner Will Be.

The most interesting feature of the Herald and Nebraska Farmer automobile contest will be the closing of the contest and the awarding of the automobile and other prizes on next Saturday night. The contest will close promptly at 8 p. m. All subscriptions and votes must be turned in by that time. As soon as that hour arrives, the committee appointed to make the final count the count that will decide the winners. They will take the ballot box in charge and proceed with their task. It will possibly take an hour or more to make the final count and award the prizes. The prizes are all ready for the winners, but who the winners will

Each contestant is anxious for the time to come, and no doubt, all are doing their best to have as many votes as possible in the ballot box when the closing hour arrives. The management knows some of the contestants are working very hard and presume all are. It is expected that more actual work will be done, and more accomplished, than all of the rest of the time during which the contest has run. This has been a friendly contest all the way through, and the managers will do their best to have the contest close with the same friendly spirit that has prevailed ever since the start. The contestant who has the largest number of votes will own the automobile, and if the contestants will follow the plan outlined for Word reached Wayne the first of the week announcing the death of Cyril Nafziger, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. Nafziger, formerly of this place, now living in Omaha.

The boy who had been suffering ill health for a number of years, was at the time of his death visiting his grandparents at Marcus, Ia., and he lapsed into a stupor from which he did not recover. He died Sunday about noon. Consciousness had gone before his parents were able to reach him. The boy was stricken with diabetes while the family lived in Wayne, and he was taken to an expert in Chicago in the hope of finding a way to restore his health. If he had lived until February he would have been 14 years old. Funeral services and interment took place Monday. The family will have the cordial sympathy of Wayne friends.

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them, and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop of Roseville, O., writes: "About a year ago, I was troubled with indigestion and had sick-headache that lasted for average three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies, but nothing helped me until during one of those sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in three days. For sale by all dealers.—A. D."

the sacrifices of the soldiers who fought in the civil war, is stranded and penniless at Wahoo, according to information received in Norfolk. Johnson never asked for money and declared that he was paying his own expenses. He said his original purpose was patriotic and that he was helping here and there, when he had money left from his pension. Johnson said he was a close friend of Abraham Lincoln, and he carried what he believed was an oil painting of the emancipator, with him to Norfolk. This picture was found to be of paper, and although Johnson said it was valued at more than $3,000 and had been in his family since the civil war, it appears to be a state-wide reputation for its clean civic atmosphere. It has many beautiful homes, and its business blocks are most attractive. It has several fine churches and a very good school system has an excellent local paper and supports a shipwreck and winter literary course. It is a dry town and has no pool halls. The one picture show house is closely censored, and there doesn't seem to be much of a disposition on the part of the city fathers to let in anything. The majority of the people of Wakefield are of Swedish extraction—the most hospitable and progressive kind. They are a community of boosters—those Wakefield people, believing most firmly that it is the best town

How would he manage to sleep through the night without waking to think of the innocent lives that might have been saved had he done his duty?

Where rests the responsibility for a legal execution? Is it on the man who pulls the trigger or judges the lever? Is it on the warden who signs the death warrant? Is it on the governor who refuses a pardon? Is it on the judge who delivers the sentence? Is it on the jury that finds the verdict of guilty? Is it on the lawyer who fails to save his client? Is it on the legislators who enacted the law providing for capital punishment?

All these questions were answered recently in Arizona, where the execution of eleven condemned was deferred while the question of repealing the capital punishment law was referred to the voters at the late election. The voters decided that the capital punishment law should stand. By so doing they quite plainly took upon themselves full responsibility for the executions the governor would have preferred to avert.

In Arkansas, as in Arizona, responsibility for the execution of criminals must in the last analysis rest on the shoulders of the public that stands back of the law under which the executions are decreed. There is no special burden of responsibility to be carried by any of the officials who may be directly connected with the events leading up to the death of any particular criminal.

The new electrician at the Arkansas penitentiary may not have figured it out so accurately, but he has the right idea in concluding that there is no reason why he personally should lose any sleep over the fate of any of the convicts who are sent across the dark river in a boat propelled by him.

Emancipation.

Lincoln Journal: The men comprising the style committee of the national cloak suit and skirt manufacturers' association have voted to strike the shackles from the ankles of more slaves than Abraham Lincoln ever dreamed of. We refer to the promised decree abolishing the hobble skirt.

It is now five years since American women were condemned to the crow hop. Freedom shrieked when that decree fell upon the civilized world, but the women, ever amenable to law, took the medicine. In all these years women who could take a free stride have been as few as anarchist generals. They bowed to fate as wise vassals do.

The world has presented many notable scenes as strokes for liberty were being struck. There was that famous day in Philadelphia when the liberty bell rang and the shouts of a newly independent populace rippled the calm gliding Delaware. There was the decree of Alexander I emancipating the serfs, and our own great emancipation proclamation. When King John signed Magna Charta history was measurably enriched. Moses' march out of Egypt was one of the world's inspiring bids for freedom.

Probably not even a photographer was there to flashlight the committee of the national cloak, suit and skirt manufacturers' association as it signed its momentous emancipation decree. Great historical moments like these are seldom recognized till long after their day. But when the judicial hand of times comes to write its verdict on the past, we miss our guess if this unassuming liberation of the feet of forty million women is not recognized as the making of one of the world's forward strides.

Wayne People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Wayne who suffer with weak kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon—Doan's Kidney Pills is a medicine for the kidneys only, and one that is backed by willing testimony of Wayne people. Here is a case:

"Mrs. W. M. Fleetwood, Wayne, says: 'I was in such great misery that I could hardly get about. I had a dull, heavy ache across the small of my back and I was lame and stiff. I had a feeling of tiredness and languor and it was out of the question for me to rest well. I felt the beneficial effect of Doan's Kidney Pills immediately after using them, and continuing taking them until I was in good health.'—Witness here, any one complaining of disordered kidneys, I advise a trial of Doan's Kidney Pills.

William Barnhardt, a prominent young former living near Norfolk, who was paralyzed after a fall from a tree which he climbed to catch chickens which were roosting in the branches, will recover after a remarkable operation at the Norfolk General hospital Tuesday morning. They have a factory over there that turns out a piers that it said to be the best made. We understand that the only thing that stands in the way of the growth of this industry is a lack of capital. Then, too, Wakefield has a bakery that turns out a product second to none, and we believe the bread to be the best we have ever found.

What would you have done in his place?

As it happens, the electrician who quit his job has not interfered with the course of justice. Another equally competent expert has been secured to take his place and the executions are to be held on time. But suppose there hadn't been another of these squeamish electrician available—suppose the date set for the execution had passed without pardon, reprieve or execution, what then? Suppose that as a result of one man's failure to do his duty ten criminals should be turned loose on society who will and that new murders should be committed by them, how then would the defaulting electrician be able to avoid the responsibility for loss of life?

When the time comes for making regulations, let the Commercial club request a list of things for the city next year, and then do them.

Richard L. Metcalfe has taken charge of the Nebraska, an Omaha weekly publication, and in the course of an editorial introduction says that for many years on the Nebraska Herald he was known as "Hickcock's editor," and for eight years on the Commoner as "Bryan's editor," but now he would be "Metcalfe's editor." The paper is expected to be made of statewide interest, and by Mr. Metcalfe at its head, it will grow rapidly in influence and popularity.

Congress reassembled Monday for the short session which expires March 4. Many Democrats will conclude their public service at that time, and be succeeded by republicans chosen at the late election. Appropriation bills will command so much attention between now and Christmas time that it is feared that little will be devoted to other affairs, and if all public business is not sufficiently disposed of by next March, an extra session may be necessary.

A Wayne business man talking to an Omaha wholesaler recently was informed by him that dealers in northeast Nebraska towns were the most prosperous in the state. It is a fact which investigation will prove, that northeast Nebraska takes the lead without exception. Its land is the best its farmers are the most intelligent and prosperous, and thus, accordingly, its towns the most wideawake and progressive. People who are dissatisfied with conditions in northeast Nebraska ought to study the life of the old croning business centers in the southern part of the state.

People who give in the right spirit at the Christmas season, are actuated by good feeling and good fellowship, without expecting as a consequence, gifts in return. It detracts from the spirit of the season to bestow or accept gifts reluctantly because of a lack of equal reciprocity. A rich gift, not the result of a selfish whim, but the result of a sort of love, should be infinitely less welcome than the comparatively inexpensive gift prompted by pure love. Christmas giving, to satisfy material obligations, rips the life of the giver, and brings a feeling of unhappiness into the soul of a neglected child or brightening the pathway of an unfortunate adult by means of a simple gift is worth more to character building than the lavish bounties of millionaires laid at the feet of others equally rich.

The serious injury done by habits of idleness has been pointed out in an address by Chauncey Dewey who said: "The curse of the youth of our country is idleness. Our bootleggers, our gangsters, our gamblers, our young criminals are all the products of idleness. The ambition of the boy at school is aroused first by competition with his fellows. As he advances to the high school or the college, it is for the honor which can be achieved. I look back over sixty years of continuous effort, and when I try to differentiate the causes of my health and happiness, I come back always to work. I never had an idle man, I never had a happy one. I mean an idler man who was such from choice. Every man I ever knew who was doing the best he could in the line of his talent and equipment, and who became fond of his work, and who became a workman, and who never had any other kind of work, never ending sources of education in broadmindedness, in higher ideals of citizenship, and material, spiritual and intellectual advancement."

The Herald's attitude taken some time ago in advising against the use of farmers' unions to destroy home towns, and urging cooperation of town and country for mutual advantage met adverse criticism from a farmer who visited the office recently. He favored the plan of the union to combine against the home town by eliminating local dealers, though protesting that he did not want to bust the town, and would withdraw support, but was willing to have the town kept up. He would cut off rations from the animal, though seeming to expect it to live. When advised that destruction of the home town would remove school, church and social privileges, as now developed, he did not seem to be alarmed, and when reminded that such ruin would reduce the price of real estate, he expressed anxiety to see such values drop. His position regarding land values was explained when he admitted that he owned no land. He said townspeople organize, and why not farmers? Certainly they should organize, but they should not, as most of them would not, make a united effort against their business and social center which maintains public institutions, in proportion to its strength, for the general benefit and welfare. Town and country should have their claims for different purposes, but they should be carried out rather than farther apart, each remembering that profit and enjoyment in life depend largely on the flourishing condition of the other. United, both sides, divided, both go down.

CHRISTMAS WREATHS.

Order your Christmas wreaths as early as possible if you wish to have the most satisfactory results. Wreaths with spray-on-is so busy, one is apt to get what is left and be thankful. The wreath of holly, mistletoe, with branches of holly, sativa, cones and mistletoe, arranged on a green base, wide red satin bows, makes an exceedingly fine looking wreath. Wreaths made entirely of holly and mistletoe on them and red satin ribbons, are much more desirable.

Every one knows and likes the holly wreaths. They are made of great size and thickness and plentifully sprinkled with red berries. A wide red satin bow wreaths are probably the best of all the various wreaths made up and sold at Christmas time.

Something Doing.—No wonder Christmas is the one best time of all the year. When all the little cares of life are made to disappear. And if there's one regret it is the practical necessity of buying Christmas presents. Buy everything in lovely when the outdoor season is over. G. Connell in Philadelphia Ledger.

BURNING GLASSES.

Powerful Lenses With a Few of Their Fiery Feats.

PENN'S MARVELOUS MACHINE.

The Heat Rays From This Mirror Lens Were So Intense That They Melted Garlic, Flint, Steel and Iron and Did Other Wonderful Things.

It is written that when the Roman ships besieged Syracuse Archimedes burned them to ashes by means of mirrors. He tried the effect of a number of the navy of Utahum when those patriots besieged Byzantium, by means of burning glasses. And there in the wonderful story of Ptolemy's mirror, which placed on the tower of the Pharos at Alexandria, represented accurately everything that transpired, in all respect, on both land and water, with which an enemy's fleet could be seen 10 leagues away.

It is the story of Archimedes' mirrors as fabulous. But Kircher believed it to be true and made many experiments to prove his contention. He tried the effect of a number of plane mirrors and with five of the same size, placed in a frame, concentrated the rays reflected from them to the same spot at a distance of more than 100 feet, and the degree of heat obtained led him to conclude that he could increase the number of mirrors could increase the heat to any desired degree. He made a voyage to Syracuse to inform himself exactly of local conditions. From his observations it was convinced that the famous glasses could not have been more than thirty-gone or less than 100 feet. From the place where Archimedes mounted his unique engine of destruction.

Buffon constructed a machine composed of two mirrors, one of which was in his first experiment, using twenty-four mirrors, he set fire to pitch and tow at a distance of ninety feet. He tried the effect of a number of mirrors, he set fire to pitch and tow at a distance of ninety feet. He tried the effect of a number of mirrors, he set fire to pitch and tow at a distance of ninety feet.

The most powerful burning mirror of modern times was constructed by one Penn, an English artisan. He succeeded in producing a burning lens no less than three feet in diameter, and this lens was used in firing the experiment upward of $3,500. Its power was astonishing, and the hardest and most solid substances, such as iron, brass and steel, melted like wax when exposed to its tuneful focus, only a few seconds being required. A small quantity of gunpowder was exposed to the rays for thirty minutes and was reduced to six grains by the process. During the operation the stone melted and melted like the leaves of a flower and emitted whitish fumes; but when it had closed again it still bore a polish and was identical in appearance with the original lens and proportionately smaller. Ten cut diamonds melted and ran together in a few seconds. In fact, nothing was so hard as to melt the lens, but heat generated. This remarkable machine was afterward taken to China by an officer connected with the British embassy and finally lost sight of.

With these modern experiments to consider, the tale of the burning of the Roman ships seems more probable. La Brocquiere, a traveler of the 16th century, says that at Damascus they made mirrors of steel that magnified objects like burning glasses. The telescope was not invented till early in the seventeenth century.

This could seem corroborative evidence concerning Ptolemy's burning mirror, which La Brocquiere does not mention and of which he perhaps never heard. Abulfeda, in his description of Egypt, says that the wonderful mirror was made of Chinese iron and that soon after Mohammedanism prevailed the Christians destroyed it by brass.

In a work published at Marseille in 1847, the author tells us that he was in favor of the probable existence of the mirror, but contends that its power was far less than recorded in the legends.

"If this mirror existed," he says, "it is probable that it was the only one of its kind and that no other means had then been found of viewing distant objects distinctly. It must therefore have been considered as a great wonder, and as such, it would have been gazed upon with astonishment all who saw its effects. Even though its effects had not been greater than those of a small telescope, it is not probable that those effects were exaggerated beyond all probability and even possibly, as commonly happens in rare and admirable machines and inventions of Emmett Campbell Hall in Cleveland Leader.

A Disclosure.—Little Willie was instructed by his teacher, Mr. Robinson, to write an essay on the subject of "Antidotes." This was the brief essay: "My antidotes on chocolate, marmalade, novels, automobiles and you." London Postman.

DO IT NOW

Make ready for Christmas this week, at least get a good start. Don't put off your buying till the last minute and then be "stumped." To wait means to deny yourself much of the pleasure of giving, for your purchases won't satisfy you nearly as well if you buy in a hurry at the last moment when the stocks are low and there is but little choice. Come while there are hundreds of things to suggest themselves; selections will be easy to make and there will be no cause for worry. In the hurry and scurry of last-minute buying, your hasty judgment often leads you wrong. You buy and repent and the one who receives indignities the gift, cost what it may. Buy now and get the best results.

Holiday Offerings

Christmas Shoes and Slippers for the Whole Family

If you don't know the size needed, get the numbers from the old shoe or cut a piece of card-board to fit from toe to heel, inside and we can come very close. We will gladly exchange for the right size after Christmas.

The giving of boy's and girl's shoes at Christmas time is a very popular custom. When you select yours, why not buy "Kreiders"? They are good wearing shoes—the best made—and they are good looking. We have styles for the little folks, just as pretty as are made in ladies' and men's shoes, too. The price is no higher than ordinary shoes.

We have in a fine assortment of felt and leather house slippers for men, women and children, at 50c to $2.00 per pair.

Furs Make Elegant Gifts

And this year the prices are much lower than they have been. If we sell you furs, we will tell you exactly what to expect in wear and satisfaction, and if the furs fail to come up to our recommendation, we will replace them.

There are beautiful light furs out this year at a very reasonable price. Large muffs and collar or red fox, natural opossum and gray lynx; all fur wearing furs, are only $20.00 and $17.50 per set.

Rich brown river mink, sets consisting of large shawl scarf and pillow muff—furs that will wear for years, are $18.50 per set.

Beautiful sets, muff and scarf, of silky Japanese mink, rich dark brown, are $25.00 a set.

Black and brown cone sets, are rich appearing and fairly good wearing furs, large muff and scarf, per set of two $10.00.

Gray or black Russian bear, a good wearing fur, per set $5.00.

Children's furs dyed to exact imitation of tiger and leopard, are something new and very pretty, set $5.00.

Sweaters at Reduced Prices

We bought a salesman's samples of ladies', men's and children's sweaters at a discount of one-third, and you will find sweater priced here to you one-third below the usual price.

Among these samples were an especially large lot of girls and misses sizes, and if you plan on giving your girls sweaters, here you can buy them from a big assortment at a good saving.

Your boy would like a jersey. Get him one for $1.00 or $1.50, that usually sell at $1.50 and $2.25.

Ladies' sweaters in white, gray or red that usually sell at $3.00, are here marked at $2.00.

THE HOLIDAY SPIRIT; A CHRISTMAS FANCY

DRIVEN from the heart of the people, Christmas Spirit left the great Alps, fled from the market places and from every habit of man until he came to the quiet little sunlit path that runs through the deep wood.

When he was yet afar of the most perfect Fir Tree in all the forest called entry to the Great Oak at her side. "Christmas is coming!"

"Yes," answered the big oak, "but there is something wrong. See how pale at the end of the path, stooping as if the load of the world's sorrow lay upon his shoulders. See how he comes now, with all the gladness gone from his step."

"It was quite true. Christmas Spirit came toward the most perfect Fir Tree in the wood with aching step, looking away through the forest with sad and troubled eyes.

"Why, what is the matter, Christmas?" called the Fir Tree. "There was no answer. The forlorn figure sat down on a fallen log at the foot of the Fir Tree, but still there was no answer.

"Tell me about it all, Christmas," invited the Fir Tree in a voice vibrant with sympathy. "I have looked over the wide world. I have knooped at the door of every heart, and no one has opened to me. I am forgotten, and there is no one who loves me," he said. They looked at each other.

"Every heart?" questioned the Fir Tree incredulously. "No, but many, many hearts, and they are all alike," he complained. "I have been in the home of men and stood so close to them that I could lay a finger on their naked hearts, but they did not stir at my touch. They looked me squarely in the eye, and these are the things they said to some woman in their homes: 'Don't break me.' 'I shall be maddened by the bills you are making.' 'Christmas is a nuisance. Confound this custom of giving presents anyway!'"

"These are the things they said while they looked into my eyes, and all the while my hands lay frozen against their hearts."

wood yesterday," said the Fir Tree, "and with her there was another woman."

"We must find the most perfect tree in all the forest, for none other will do," said the first woman. "Yes," said the second woman, "for the child has no one to bring Christmas Spirit to her, no relatives, no friends, no one to care."

"They talked on and on until the story of the little crippled child for whom they were preparing a joyous Christmas came out. She was nothing to them, but she was alone and a little child."

"A party of men were walking through the wood last Sunday," went on the Fir Tree, for Christmas Spirit had stopped sobbing now and was listening intently. "One of these men was telling the others about his aged father, who worked his fingers almost to the bone in years gone by to give his boy an education. Now he is very feeble, almost down the western slope, and his son—who will always be just a little boy to the old man—is going back to the little country village to spend a portion of the holidays with him and his wife. He will long miss his father. He has planned some wonderful surprises for the lonely old man away back there in the country," ended the Fir Tree.

"Oh, has he?" exclaimed Christmas, no longer a forlorn little figure, but a happy, happy spirit. "I am going every next week to be decked for the little crippled child," laughed the Fir Tree when Christmas Spirit stopped making merry and was joyful. "And I am going across the whole world, and I shall knock so earnestly at the heart of every human being that one can fall to open wide the inner doors to Christmas Spirit," called the little figure of Christmas Joy as he danced away toward the edge of the wood and the cities and towns beyond.

Profit and Loss at Christmas.

Old Lady—Vba's the matter with the little boy?
Elder Brother—Oh, he's cryin' 'cos 'u' can't see my Christmas cake 'n' won't give him any.

Old Lady—Is his own cake fished, then?
Elder Brother—Yes, an' he cried while I was eatin' that too.

Most Liberal Christmas Givers.

The big private banking houses of Wall street are the most liberal benefactors at Christmas. Just as they are the highest salary payers throughout the year. The greatest house in the street has been known to give 100 per cent bonus to its employees at New Year's—that is, double pay for the entire year. In that firm New Year's is the greatest day. Nobody has ever seen a greater gift than the one given to Christmas. Often the house gives 40 per cent. But like other private banking firms, it never lets it get out what bonus it will pay for fear that the size of the gift will be taken by the world to indicate the state of prosperity of the firm preceding year. The greater the amount of the bonus naturally does leak out afterward through the people who get pieces of it and who lunch with benefited ones from other banking houses. So it is that almost everything in Wall street leaks out through the amiable weak seams of luncheon gossip.

EASE IN MARCHING

Foot Comfort is Essential to the Soldier in Warfare.

THE GERMAN MILITARY SOCK.

It is in the Form of a Large Napkin, is the Result of Years of Study and May Be Folded About the Foot Thirty Different Ways to Relieve Pain.

The famous field marshal, Von Moltke, once said that the Anglo-Saxon is a warlike people, but that the German is a military people. The Anglo-Saxon fights to the death when war comes, careless of his previous preparation. After the war is over he drops his arms, dismisses all thoughts of war from his mind and returns to his civil pursuits. The German, on the other hand, feels that there is no peace as long as there is an interest in war as he does in the midst of a conflict. He takes note of his actions in one war and when peace comes devotes himself to ruminating these errors.

A German officer who was visiting America spoke of the way in which his people address themselves to war problems in time of peace.

"Here is an excellent illustration," he said, and, lifting his foot, he took off his sock. From about his foot he took, not the ordinary sock that men wear elsewhere, but a square of material or handkerchief, which was carefully folded about it.

"This," he said, "is the German military sock. It is the result of years of study and experiment by the best minds, not only in the German army, but in German science and medicine. During the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, when our armies were making forced marches around Metz and on to Sedan, our infantry was much impeded by sore feet. When it came to having a certain number of men at a certain point at a certain time for a tactical purpose, we were usually from 10 to 30 per cent short, because so many men had fallen out of the ranks from sore feet.

"We got through the war all right, for our enemies were as badly off in that respect as we were, but as soon as the war was over the government ordered every man in the service to turn his attention to contriving a form of footwear that would be more serviceable to the man of peace. It was finally decided that war. It was years before the present sock was adopted. Thousands of dollars were spent in experimenting. Thousands of soldiers marched in all kinds of footwear, tested every possible kind of sock and stocking. After years of study from 10 to 30 per cent shorter than the ordinary sock in which it can be worn."

Thereupon the officer took the napkin, which measured eight or ten or twenty inches square, made of cotton and linen and folded it about his foot with the softness of a Turk winding his turban about his head. Then, unwrapping it, he folded it about his foot in a different manner and then in still a third way.

"There are about thirty different ways of folding this sock about the foot," he said, "and during his three years in the army he soldier is capable to become expert in using them all."

Each manner of folding it has a different purpose. "One will relieve a soreness of the heel; another a weakness of the instep; a third will protect an irritated corn, and a fourth will relieve the inflamed ball of the foot. At the same time that the soldier is taught these different methods of wrapping the sock he also learns the anatomy of the foot, and just why the different wrappings relieve the different foot ailments."

"After serving his two years in the army," continued the officer, "the soldier goes back to civil life and becomes, let us say, a clerk at a desk. For ten years he doesn't walk a mile a day. At the end of that time war breaks out and he is called to the colors. He goes to the depot of his regiment and there finds among his other accoutrements two pairs of these military socks.

"Next morning he starts to march with his regiment. At the end of an hour, when he has tramped two or three miles over a country road, he is allowed ten minutes for rest. Now, the chances are that that soldier has not folded his sock back on his foot so as to give immediate relief. When, a few minutes later, he falls into line, he has virtually a new pair of feet. And this he does just as often as new foot troubles appear.

"The tremendous advantage that an army thus equipped has over one that wears the old fashioned sock is obvious. If 'getting there with the most men first' is the science of war the army with the German sock is at least one-third more effective than the other."—Youth's Companion.

Submarine Ridges.

The Norwegian sea is separated from the north Atlantic by what may be regarded as a continuous ridge running from Greenland to the British islands plateau, of which Iceland and the Faroe Islands are emergent portions. The Mediterranean is cut off from the North Atlantic by a ridge at the strait of Gibraltar, over which the greatest depth is only 175 fathoms, with steep slopes on either side.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the danger they will do is ten fold in the good you can possibly derive from them. Halls' Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Complete Free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Enjoy Christmas Many Times Before It Really Arrives

CHRISTMAS is lived a thousand times before it comes. The Christmas sweets are tasted before they are taken from the tree. The Christmas presents are received before Santa Claus has turned over to his sled. The lunatic spirit, impatient under the tortures of the clock, breaks away and lives Christmas before the prosaic almanac grants permission. How poor the world would be deprived of the pleasure of expectation! Good things would lose half their virtue if we could not enjoy them before we get them into our hands. Looking forward is one of the fundamentals at which we drink life and vigor. Imagine, if you can, dropping into Christmas in the twinkling of an eye without the privilege of tasting it in advance. Christmas becomes the great day of the year, because it is preceded by such elaborate and long drawn and loving preparation. To cut off all that preparation, Christmas would be shearing the sun of its beams. The whole year becomes brighter to everybody who has Christmas to look forward to.

It is part of the mission of the Christian religion to foster and develop the spirit of anticipation. Hops says Runkin, in the distinguishing characteristics of the Christian faith, Christianity keeps us on the tiptoe of expectancy. It entices us to look ahead. It will not permit us to consider present situations final. No matter how high we climb, we are directed to a still loftier height. However great our joy, there is still a new brightness ahead of us. Satisfaction with present attainments is forbidden because of the nightier achievements within the compass of our developing powers. It was the habit of Jesus to keep his disciples' eyes on the future. When they were amazed by what they saw he chastised them by saying, "Ye shall see greater things than these." When they were astounded by his miracles he assured them that there were things that they could do. When they exulted in their successes he reminded them of their relationship to a world whose glories were not confined to the present. He himself had the heart of a child. He was always looking ahead. When he saw dark things immediately in front of him he looked farther. He always looked through the darkness into light. He never spoke of his death without pointing out what would happen on the third day. For the joy that was set before him he endured the agony of the cross. "The Joy of Looking Ahead" by Charles E. Jefferson, D. D. Broadway Tabernacle, New York. In Woman's Home Companion.

PICTURES AS GIFTS.

A picture need not be expensive to be beautiful. The stores are selling copies of the best pictures by great artists and the pictures valuable for their tender, noble sentiments or for pleasing colors. The frames are made of odds and ends of stained or polished molding and are in good taste.

If you took some interesting snapshots last summer of your holiday trips or of your home, which you would like to send to relatives at a distance, mount them on the regular photograph cardboard, which may be bought for 8 cents a dozen up. Fasten them together in a long strip and running a narrow ribbon through holes made in the lower corners of the mounts. When hung in a long strip on the wall the pictures add beauty to that particular corner of the room and give pleasure to the beholder.

To mount a water color picture on this cardboard for framing, put the mat the desired size, place the picture back of it and use a number of strips of paper to join the corners to the thin cardboard. Passe parout is excellent for the purpose, or the mat material may be used. It will not wrinkle the cardboard and pictures so arranged may be carefully rolled, placed in a tube and sent by mail.

When making picture mats, calendar booklets and other articles of soft cardboard a demish wall sometimes occur which is difficult to remove. By rubbing the spot with bread it will disappear. The bread should be fresh and not dry. A putty made with flour and ammonia is often used for cleaning white mats.

Five Million Dolls From One Town. About 5,000,000 Vincennes are turned out in one year at Vincennes, France. The dolls are not dressed there, but are sent to Paris where several hundred girls, some of whom are fashion experts, clothe them in the latest styles. Each year prices are offered for the best design of a doll and for improvements in the art of manufacturing them. This is one of the reasons why the French doll has reached such a high degree of finish. Scores of women in all parts of the world make their living by dressing dolls and may be said to dress the clothes for the most undervalued every year.

Christmas Trees. With us and elsewhere the old year goes so fast. That we are whirling past. The trees are whirling past. —New York Sun.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS TREE

The balsam fir makes the best Christmas tree because of its regular form and beautiful dark green foliage. So true is used also, but is not as attractive in form and color as balsam. Hemlock, pine and cedars are used occasionally, but are not considered equal to either the fir or the spruce. Every one interested should try to prevent early cutting, but should favor planting of the young forest, leaving the best formed, most rapid growing trees on the ground to form the future forest. The thinning should be made in the densest young stands only, and no larger open spaces should be left. The state will suffer a great loss if the young spruce and fir forests are clear cut for Christmas trees. The state should favor the rational methods of management the Christmas tree is a legitimate byproduct in the development of the forest. Whether the forest is planted or starts naturally from seed there will usually be many more trees on the ground than are needed for Christmas. The trees which are crowding others of greater value not removed nature will do it and that in a less effective way than if the small trees are removed as a thinning unit in the developing forest. Trees six feet high and two inches in diameter at the butt end in diameter are the best size in diameter, although larger sizes are frequently sold at good prices. The Christmas tree, provided it is properly cut, is a preliminary crop from the forest which should be taken out on the same principle as vegetable crops are thinned.

The Accusing Coin

A Christmas Parable

By EDWIN MARKHAM

It was when Ferdinand was king in Naples, back in a little ere, that a certain man was found a whirl of mist across the dawn. A little flock of those years ago, to proclaim the advent of a new little legend that, I wit, in the book of judgment writ. And now the accusation of this rime Will cry to you the ear of Time.

The king to find with eraly told St. Francis of Assisi, the old man. He had to go to the court of the king. A thousand accents as an aim. The lay within God's reaching palm. Will cry to you the ear of Time.

But Francis, friend of God, stooped down And, lifting up the cross of the cross. New stamped with Ferdinand's head and crown. He bent it till it broke, when, lo, It pulsed from him in great flow! "Take back your gold," the friar cried. "The traitor gold that props your pride! Behold, the people's blood you draw Through assailing treasuries of the law! This blood cries out the griefs and wrongs Of them to whom the gold belongs. Give all to them if you would give. The gold into God's hand and live!"

Seware! All deeds, even deeds of kings. For ever pass to God's hand and wings. —New York Sun.

HOMEMADE TRIMMINGS ADD TO TREE'S BEAUTY

The beauty of a Christmas tree does not depend upon the amount of money which has been expended upon it. Calling a finger and a cutting of things may weave the magic spell of romance about it. Indeed, the flutter of preparation and the merriment of creating your own decorations may become the real spirit of Christmas than a hurried visit to a store where these things can be purchased at short prices.

Indeed, nothing quite takes the place of the old time tree, with its boughs laden with simple gifts and homelike ornaments. Each trifle has some significance—a meaning of its own, or a funny incident connected with it. If you live away from the city there are many things right at hand which you can turn to good account for the purpose.

Nuts may be gilded or silvered or covered with gold or silver paper. Popcorn may be strung, and if you wish will tint of any color it may be dipped into a dye of the color you want. Individual cranberries, or strings of them, make effective trimmings. Crabapples, in all the radiance of their fresh color, or oranges make a bright spot on the somber green. Gingerbread animals, birds and dolls are a delight, and flowers of tissue paper, crumpled and many geometrical figures may be made with a little ingenuity. Paper dolls, from magazines and books, and if they are not already so mounted on cardboard look quite imposing, and chains of colored or gold paper may be made by folding the paper innumerable times and cutting it in the shape required. When you unfold it one link is fastened within the other, and a large chain may be drawn from branch to branch. Circles made by folding a paper to quarters and stringing a number of beads together at the fold point make lovely balls. Dolls may be fashioned from many objects. A corned holds many possibilities, legs and arms and a cotton stuffed head being joined to this body. And did you ever see a dolly slapped from a clothespin?

Christmas Sale AT THE Wayne Variety Store

We want every girl and boy, and the fathers and mothers of the girls and boys in this district, to know that our store is going to be "Santa Claus" headquarters, every day from now on up to Christmas eve. We want you to know that our counters and shelves have been turned over to Santa Claus so that he can show you the very things you want to see in your stockings Christmas morning. If even Santa himself had helped us by the holiday goods we are showing our store couldn't have been made to look more like a corner of his great Christmas shop.

We have gifts for the Baby; Gifts for the Boys and gifts for the girls; presents for father and mother, grandma and grandpa; Practical presents; presents to make the home more beautiful; Presents to play with; presents to wear; presents to eat.

Here are a few suggestions for you to look over. Maybe it will help you a little to decide. Children want toys and dolls. You certainly cannot help finding something among our big assortment of Steel Toys, Tin Toys, Mechanical Toys, Musical Toys, Drums, Rubber Toys, Guns, Games, Blocks, Tools and so forth.

THE NEW "ERECTOR"—Steel Building Toys have an especially large demand this year. They are sure to please any boy who is mechanically inclined. Books, Paint Books, Painting Boxes, Etc., will amuse and instruct them at the same time.

THEN THERE ARE DOLLS! DOLLS! DOLLS! of all kinds, all sizes, and all prices, dressed and undressed, breakable and unbreakable. Doll Buggies, Chairs, Rockers, Rocking Horses, Express Wagons, Tricycles and hundreds of other articles will show that we have looked out well for the children's wants.

The grownups like more practical gifts. Handkerchiefs, Neckties, Scarfs, Mufflers, Fancy Boxes for different purposes, Jewelry, Toilet and Manicure Sets, China, Glassware and Aluminum Ware are only a few of the many articles you may pick from. We would like to call your attention especially to our big stock of

Imported Chinaware

We bought everything in that line before the war broke out, and have therefore not only a complete assortment, but name lower prices than you'll find anywhere. In tree ornaments, we have a larger assortment than last year.

Every purchase you make here up to December 24, will be credited to the girl or boy whose card you bring along. If one of your young friends is in the contest, help him or her along to win one of the beautiful prizes which we give away the day before Christmas.

Wanted War Horses

They must stand 15 1-2 to 16 hands high, must weigh 1150 to 1400 pounds, must be sound and fair of flesh—no gray except dark. Will also buy some old mares from 10 to 20 years old. These mares must be good size and in good condition. Will buy them with slight blemishes. Have them in Concord, Saturday, December 12, and Wayne, Saturday, December 19, at Goemann's feed barn.

You Are Careful to Avoid That place or person known to contain or have a contagious disease. You would not shake hands with your best friend if you knew he had smallpox. Exercising this same intelligence and wise precaution can you consistently continue to imbibe water from a well that is located anywhere near an outdoor closet and feel that you are playing safe so far as your health is concerned? Of course you can't. The very well which supplies that well, for all you know, flow directly beneath that out-door closet. But if this is not real in your case, what about the transmission of disease by flies or filth and disease germs from the closet to your food in your home. Again, leaving the question of the out-dog and start the New Year right by cheating the undertaker out of any prospective business in your family, due to the use of this relic of a barbaric age, by installing a "Hypoc" Asseptic closet in your home. Sample may be seen, and prices and particulars may be obtained on application to C. CLASEN, Special representative for the Hygienic Promotion Co. of Detroit, Mich.
