Apply for Grant

Concord Plans Senior Citizens Center

Concord will have a Senior Citizens Center soon, if everything works out as planned, according to Melvin Puhman, Puhman, who is in charge of putting the new center together, said that he has just completed an application to get a grant from the Commission on Aging office in Norfolk.

The center will make its home in the building that now houses the Concord cafe. The cafe is owned by the City of Concord, and is run by Mary Peterson and her daughter, Linda Kvols. The cafe will be moving into a new addition of the Concord VFD. The addition has been built for a few years, but work on the interior has only begun recently. Mrs. Kvols said the new location will give the restaurant more room, and that she is looking forward to moving into it. Mrs. Kvols added that most of the equipment from the old cafe will be moved into the new facility. Puhman said that quite a lot of work will have to be done to get the old cafe in shape for a senior citizens center. New heating, and air conditioning have to be installed, an additional restroom is needed (the cafe has only one) and recreational facilities must be built. Money to run the center will come from Goldenrod Hills, a federal organization that supplies money to those who have financial need. According to Puhman, the preliminary studies needed to become eligible for the Commission on Aging grant have been completed. The necessary documents See CENTER, page 10

Computerized Shopping Comes to Wayne

Computerized shopping, the first of its kind in the State of Nebraska, is now in use at the all-new Wittig's Food Center located in the 500 block of Main street in Wayne.

Although the 6,000 square foot food center is not completely finished, it opens for business tonight (Monday). This newly-doubled size of the old store.

And with the opening came the advent of computer check-out lanes to Wayne and the State of Nebraska.

The new check-out lanes are prime examples of efficiency plus. They utilize a scanner, a computer and a detailed print-out of the items purchased...and the date and time they were purchased.

The NRC In-Store Controller system called "Cecll," utilized those stripes on merchandise which customers have been wondering about for the past year. They are called Universal Product Code Symbol (UPC). They contain the manufacturer's code, product and price code.

The prices of all the items are entered into a central computer which is located in the basement of the new facility. The UPC label on the item is read by a light beam in the scanner when the item is checked out. The information is received from the computer and transferred to the cash register and receipt instantly. Items which are weighed, such as meat and produce, are checked out by the cashier.

The receipt given to the shopper is a detailed accurate record of each item.

Al Wittig, owner of the modern, new food center, explained the new check-out service will save both time and money for the customer because of its efficiency.

"Each of the computerized checking lanes will take the place of three conventional lanes," Wittig explained. He said because of this efficiency, more groceries can be processed through a check-out stand during a business day, resulting in a larger volume of business which, in turn, allows for a reduction in prices.

"With our check-out machines which we used in our old store, we could work about $250 worth of groceries an hour," Wittig explained. "With the electronic system, we will be able to handle about $750 an hour."

Wittig said the convenience to the shopper in time saved while being checked out, also was an important factor in deciding to install the electronic check-out lanes.

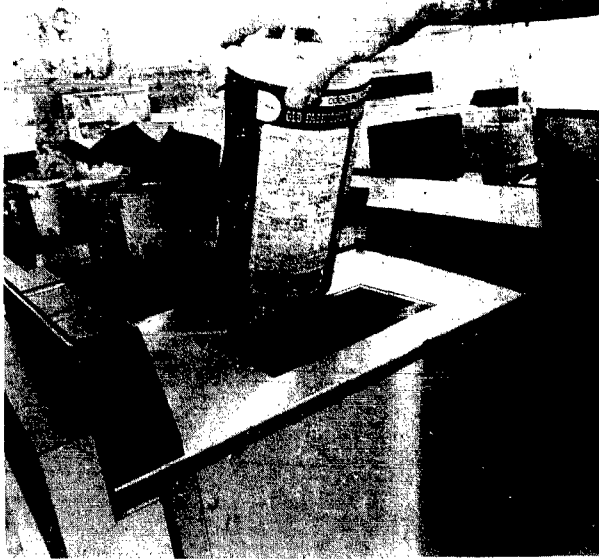

"We feel we are providing customer service with this new system because it not only allows us to do more business and thereby reduce prices, but it gives the consumer an accurate record of items purchased and the price of each item," Wittig explained. The in-store computer has more than 8,000 items stored in its memory bank. The computer can be put into manual mode for in-store programming to add new items and to make price changes.

Wittig explained there will be a conventional check-out lane as well as the three electronic lanes. Computerized shopping is just one of many unique characteristics to be found in the new store.

A compressor system was custom designed for the food center and energy utilization is at an efficiency level where it will have to get below zero in temperature before the heating system will kick in.

Wittig hopes to have a grand opening in the very near future so customers can see for themselves the many innovations which have been incorporated into the store.

"In the meantime, come in and meet Cecll," Wittig said.

A CODED grocery item above is passed over the scanner at Wittig's Food Center and its price and name is automatically printed out on a cash register tape by a computer. The sophisticated check-out system gives an accurate receipt (right) of the transaction. The computerized check-out is the first of its kind in the State of Nebraska.

There will be $100 in prizes to the winning artists in three divisions—elementary middle and high school. Persons wishing to take part in the event can pick up an entry blank and reserve a window from any of the participating merchants. The paintings will be judged by Vader and a team of judges Thursday evening. Wayne merchants are taking advantage of Vader's visit by offering some money saving back to school bargains.

Job Market Opening Up

It's an employees' market as far as job hunting in Wayne is concerned.

Kampert said there are openings for sales clerks (full and part time), general laborers, production workers, registered nurses, nurses aides, dry wall applicators, mechanics, waiters

He also pointed out that construction is still in full swing and the need for workers is near its peak.

Persons wishing more information may contact Kampert at the job service office located at 108 West 3rd or telephone 375-2945.

Second Brood of Borers May Attack Corn Fields

Wayneland farmers should check their corn fields for infestations of second generation corn borers.

John Witkowski, Northeast Station Extension entomologist, said late-planted, hail damaged or long-maturing corn is particularly susceptible to the second generation borers.

Dr. David L. Keith, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension specialist, advised farmers to "scout each field at least four times at weekly intervals for eggs and young corn borers."

He added that each corn variety must be considered as a separate field. The hatching season will last for the next two to three weeks, he stated.

Witkowski said cool weather, high humidity and an abundance of pollen for the small larvae to eat, make conditions right for high survival rate for second generation borers.

Dr. David L. Keith, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension specialist, advised farmers to "scout each field at least four times at weekly intervals for eggs and young corn borers."

He added that each corn variety must be considered as a separate field. Farmers should look for whitish egg masses on the underside of the corn leaves and should examine several plants in different areas of each field, he said. "The eggs are flat and overlap each other like fish scales, with perhaps 10-50 eggs in a single mass."

Each egg will develop a black spot on it just before hatching, he added.

OBSERVATIONS

Wayne is the place

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources district is looking for a new location for its district office.

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce, in a letter from Executive Vice President Gary Van Meter, suggested to the board of directors that the office would be welcome in Wayne.

We would like to reinforce that invitation.

We admit there is the selfish motive in having the office located in Wayne, but that is of relative importance. The important thing is that it would benefit the district to have its office located in Wayne.

Wayne is more centrally located in the district than is Norfolk, where the office is presently located. This is more than a convenience factor when saving fuel is important.

Wayne, according to figures which we have heard quoted, can offer office space for about one half the cost in Norfolk. This is either rent or building a new facility.

The board is considering a location in Madison County because Madison County wants to co-locate its federal and state agriculture offices. Wayne County has its offices in one location and the NRD office could be located near it.

Wayne also is located near Northeast Station which works hand-in-hand with the NRD in water conservation. By having the Lower Elkhorn NRD office in Wayne, its staff could avail themselves of the expertise of the extension personnel.

As a matter of fact, the NRD and the Nebraska Extension is sharing in paying the salary of a forester whose homebase is presently Wayne.

And then there is Wayne itself. We don't mean to disparage smaller communities of greater pride on are able to offer more in the way of service spectrum.

We feel the professional staff of the Lower Elkhorn NRD would rather move to Wayne than to a smaller community. If they were given a choice. We think they would be more comfortable. But we are prejudiced.

And in the same vein, we won't dwell on the many, many things Wayne has to offer in all areas. We think if Wayne is being considered, a trip to Wayne and a long, objective look, would substantiate anything of the "Cling" we might try to put on the cake as far as the community is concerned. It speaks for itself.

We think we speak for the community when we ask the NRD board to strongly consider Wayne. We truly believe that since the district is going to move its office, its directors will find that Wayne is the place to re-locate as far as logistics are concerned and as far as friendliness is concerned. Just try us. Chuck Barnes

"With my three companions we have sailed over Nebraska in a line from the forks of the Platte, along the Little Blue Valley and thence to Manhattan, Kansas, generally at night, returning to the Mauvais Terres (Badlands) in the early mornings. . . It is but a six hours trip from the Mauvais Terres to the junction of the Blue with the Kansas River. It was necessary that we should become familiar with the earth's configurations lying under our aerial track. Hence I am in your city (Beatrice) to make some necessary investigations, in order that we may obtain a title to the route over which we propose to operate our ship. . . For prudential reasons I dare not describe our ship in detail to you. Those who have seen it, know its general appearance to be something like a very large umbrella with a transparent covering. This large umbrella is immediately above the car, which also contains the little motor for operating the large wings immediately above the umbrella. These wings are expanded and contracted at the pleasure of the engineer. Suspended above and attached to these wings are two balloons containing the new gas, hydrogen, immediately between the wings is another smaller umbrella-like affair that can be made to revolve very rapidly, for a purpose I dare not disclose to you. . . I very much regret to announce, that while we were sailing over the town of Odell, in your county, last Saturday night, that a small flask of helium fell from the car and exploded with a loud noise and set fire to a barn near in Odell. The people of that section thought, of course, that it was a winter thunder storm, and that the exploding helium was a flash of lightning. . . Pailardy's airship is generally supposed to have been a flight of fancy. Neither I nor any other Nebraska flying machines materialized before the Wright brothers first ushered in the air age at Kitty Hawk six years later.

The bus was crowded, cramped and hot. I leaned down through a jumble of elbows and shopping bags and spoke to my mother. "You're gonna love this birthday present, Mom." She replied in Polish, not trusting her English in front of strangers. "So why are you dragging me on a bus clear across town?" "It's something special, Mom. Something special."

And special it was. I'd been saving for this for years. Ever since my first job, I'd been buying U.S. Savings Bonds so I could give my mom the best birthday ever.

We stepped off the bus. I grabbed Mom and hurried her through the airport. By the time we got through airport security and on our way to the gate, she was laughing and crying at the same time.

"Now I know!" she said. "You're going to send me to Poland to visit Aunt Emilia."

"No, Mom."

Her face fell, but she tried to hide her emotions.

"No, Mom. You're not going to Poland. Because I've brought Aunt Emilia over here!" The look on my mother's face when she saw her sister was worth everything I'd saved for. But then, I guess that's what love is all about. "Happy birthday, Mama."

Bornhoff & Miller Top Junior Golfers

Bob Bornhoff of Wayne and Susan Miller of Wakefield were the overall winners in the Dick's Dairy Sweet Junior Golf Tournament played at the Wayne Golf Course Friday.

Susan Miller
Girls' Division

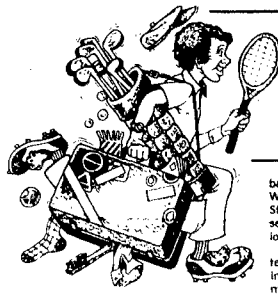

Bob Bornhoff
Age 14 And Overall

Wayne High golfer, Bornhoff, had the low score of the tournament with a 41-38-79 while Miss Miller, a golfer on the Wakefield High boys' team, shot a 31 in the five-hole competition.

Jess Zeiss, age 7, won the 10 years and under division with a 21 for three holes and Tony Bohlin, Pender, won the 11 year old division with a 59. Cole Froeschle shot a 46 to win the 12 year old group and Rod Nixon of Wakefield won the 13 year-old bracket with a 44.

The 14 year old division was won by John Kluge with a 44-48-92 while Steve Warren topped the 15 year olds with 43-49-92. Bornhoff won the 16 year old group and Tim Patterson captured first in the 17 year old group with a 38-42-80.

Some of the highlights in the tournament of 34 golfers included an eagle two on the first hole by Tom Fredrickson, who pitched in from about 50 yards away, and a birdie two by Royce Anderson on the number three hole. Royce, at age 15, was the youngest golfer to record a birdie.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall baseball season will be like. This year the Wayne Midgets finished second in the State Class B Tournament and at the same time the Wakefield Juniors won the Class C title.

So what happens next year when both teams are in Class C? It's going to be an interesting situation but could be detrimental to one of the teams.

KEEPING AN EYE on Dave Nitz, the speedy shortstop from Beatrice. I see he ran the 100 yard dash in 10.5 seconds at the National AAU Junior Olympics Multi-sports Championships in Lincoln.

He had the fastest time of Nebraskans but finished quite a ways behind the winning runner at 9.4. In case you don't remember, Nitz was the top base running threat for the Beatrice Midgets, who beat Wayne at state.

NOTES FROM THE GOLF COURSE: the Wayne Golf League ends after two more weeks of regular league play and then the playoffs will begin. The top team in the Cons will play the top team of the Pros.

Upcoming tournaments include the club tourney on Sunday, Aug. 20 and a women's tournament Tuesday, Aug. 22. The men's tournament will include 11 flights and a $10 entry fee. More on golf next week.

SPORTS QUIZ: Now that baseball is over, eyes turn to football. Last year Wayne State had a successful season finishing second in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference behind Kearney State. What was Wayne State's conference record and for some of you avid WSC fans, who did they lose to?

ANSWER: Wayne State finished the season with a 5-2 conference record, losing only to Kearney State 20-6 and Washburn 24-17.

Ponca Eliminates Town Team

The Wayne Town Team season came to an abrupt finish Thursday night when the Town Team lost the third and deciding game in the best of three Ralph Bishop League playoffs with Ponca, 6-3.

Many umpire calls were hotly disputed at the mosquito infested ball diamond.

Wayne had all the base runners it needed but couldn't push enough of them across the plate to stage a comeback to win the game.

The Town Team scored in the first inning as Dave Hix singled, stole second base and came home on a base hit by Bill Schwartz. Ponca tallied two runs in the bottom of the first on two walks and a hit off of starter Ray Nelson.

A run in the third prompted Earle Overin to relieve Nelson on the mound. Another two runs in the fourth on two doubles and a single vaulted Ponca to a 5-1 lead. Center fielder Steve Overin caught a fly ball and threw out a runner going home on the tag up, for the top defensive play.

The locals cut the lead to three runs in the top of the fifth as Steve Anson singled and Schwartz drove an RBI double to the center field fence. Ponca bounced back with a run in the bottom of the inning however, and the score was 6-2.

Wayne loaded the bases in the sixth as Overin tripled and Mike Meyer and Aaron Nissen walked, but two consecutive strikeouts ended the inning quickly.

Steve Anson hit a ground-rule double and Schwartz and Nelson walked to load the bases again in the seventh but again the team couldn't score. Overin hit a line shot to the first baseman who made the catch and stepped on the bag before Nelson could dive into first, ending the inning with a double play.

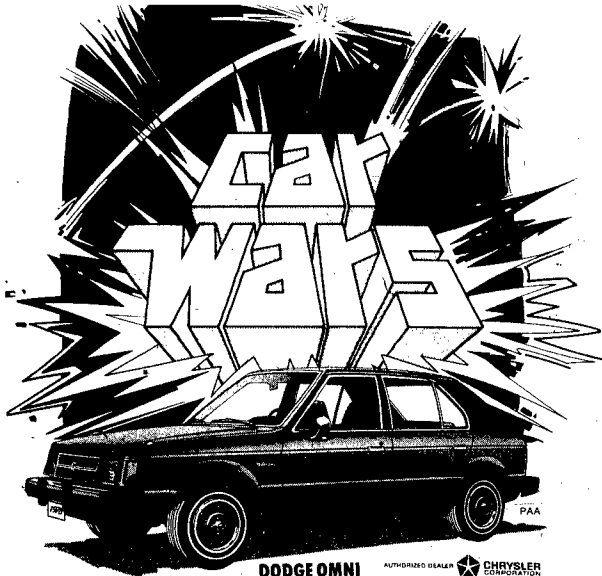

Terry Luft pounded a home run over the right field fence to score the final run in the eighth inning and the 6-3 score stood as the final count.

Ponca will play the Newcastle. Wakefield winner for the playoff championship.

It Smells As Bad As It Looks

A RANCID-smelling mess was left on Highway 57 about a mile south of Carroll when this rendering truck dumped part of its load Thursday. The driver of the truck said the end gate opened, distributing some of the remains along about a half mile stretch. He said the only way to clean up the mess was by mixing dirt on the highway or washing it off with a fire truck. After trying to scrape the remains off with a truck to no avail, a fire truck was summoned and took care of the job.

EXTENSION NOTES

By Tama Krause

LABELING DEBATED

It is estimated that Americans consume about one-third of a pound of table sugar (sucrose) per person per day or an equivalent of 600 calories.

About one-third of this is used at home and another third is consumed in soft drinks, bakery products and cereals. Sugar is also an ingredient in many foods which aren't generally considered sweet, such as catsup and non-dairy creamers.

A good deal of these sugar calories would be difficult for people to avoid even if they wanted because of current labeling procedures. At present there is no way for the consumer to judge the total amount of sugar present in processed food.

Currently, food manufacturers are required to list product ingredients in order of the predominance on the label. Even a careful reading of the label, however, doesn't reveal all of the facts. If more than one sweetener is used, for example, the relative importance of sugar as an ingredient may not be apparent.

In addition, when the sugar content of some food products is included on the label it is often listed as "grams of sucrose and other sugars per ounce of serving." It is doubtful that most consumers know that eleven grams of sucrose and other sugars in an ounce serving of cornflakes is equivalent to adding a tablespoon of sugar.

Sugar labeling requirements currently under review may give consumers a better idea of just how much sugar is in the products they buy. It is still being debated, however, how to best list sugar content on the label.

Sugar could be listed, for example, as either the added sugar content or the total sugar content. Since many foods contain naturally-occurring sugars, the added sugar content method would exempt naturally sweet foods like orange juice and raisins, from being labeled.

This method would, however, raise problems of enforcement since laboratory analysis can't distinguish between added sugars and those occurring naturally.

Labeling sugar in grams per 100 grams would also create problems since factors like water content affect the value, making comparisons difficult. For example, the percentage of sugar in a powdered soft drink mix is considerably higher than the percentage of sugar in a liquid, although the amount of sugar per serving may be the same.

There are numerous problems in deciding whether or not to label and how to label sugar content in food products.

Consumers might feel that labeling the sugar content would imply that ingredient is injurious to their health, while all other ingredients and naturally present sugars are safe.

Students Must Be Immunized

Parents of children entering school are reminded that a Nebraska law requires students under age twelve to be protected against measles, rubella, poliomyelitis, diphtheria, pertussis, and tetanus by immunization before they are permitted to attend any school, unless a parent or guardian presents a written statement he does not wish to have his child immunized.
 Mumps immunization is also highly recommended.
 This law has been in effect since 1973, but some schools have not complied as well as others. The Nebraska State Health Department will be working with schools and backing them this year to see that this law is complied with more fully.

Parents of children under age 12 entering school this fall should check their children's immunization records. If immunizations are needed, they should make arrangements with their private physicians or public clinic now.

All students should have a measles, mumps, rubella shot, at least four doses of polio, and 5 doses of DTP-Td—in some cases children may need a booster DTP-Td or polio. When in doubt, parents should check with their physician's offices.

Prior to World War I, dinner jackets were generally regarded as informal wear to be worn only in the absence of ladies.

Fire Volunteers Learn by Simulation

RRRRRR!
 "Wayne Fire Department."
 "Yeah, uh, there's a fire at the Presbyterian church, the address is 216 West 3rd. There's a lot of smoke."
 "Thanks we'll get right on it."
 Of course there was no fire at the church, but area firemen have been getting calls like this while they are in a simulator that re-creates the scene of a fire.
 The simulator is being by Bill Meenan, Gurley, who is the senior instructor of the Nebraska Fire Service. The simulator is built inside of a semi-truck trailer. It has been in Wayne for two weeks, and will be here until Tuesday.
 In the simulator, firemen take on the duties of various officers at a fire. They are told the date of the simulated fire, the temperature, and the wind velocity.
 Then the "chief" receives a telephone call via headset and is told where the "fire" is. After waiting the approximate amount of time it takes for the fire engines to reach the fire, a projected image of the building appears on the screen. The image has been fixed so it looks like fire and smoke are coming from the building.
 The fire officers evaluate the fire, and give orders as to how it should be taken care of. When the fire is "put out", the officers are given a critique of what they did right or wrong in their handling of the situation.
 There are a number of things that firemen have to be aware of at fires. Occupants of the fire-struck building have to be evacuated, and shelter must be found for them in the weather is unpleasant.
 They must evaluate the type of fire so it can be determined what kind of extinguishers should be used. Proper ventilation must be maintained to clear out smoke.
 The burning building's structural condition has to be watched, for a fire-weakened building could collapse, injuring, and perhaps killing personal, and the fire must be put out as quickly as possible while trying to keep the building fairly intact.

 necessary. Keith said that he and other UNL entomologists will recommend treatment if the egg masses average more than one-half mass per plant or if young borers can be found on either the first leaf above or below the ear zone on 50 percent of the plants.
 "Borers must be relatively exposed on the plants if control are to be effective," he added.
 Keith said part of the disagreement among entomologists centers on the value of the egg count method for deciding treatment is needed. Weather conditions can reduce the reliability of the egg count method.
 Depending on whether weather is favorable for the eggs, he said, infestations could be light or severe regardless of the number of egg masses present.
 Keith said granular insecticides have been more effective against borers than ground-sprays. He said both Foradan 10 G and Dylamate 20 G have given fairly consistent results and that EPN 4 G or diazinon 14 G could also be used.
 For farmers who do choose to spray, Keith recommended Sevin 80 WP and suggested farmers contact their county Extension agent for more information on insecticide applications and cost.
 Farmers who are suspicious of a possible infestation should contact their county agent or Witkowski.

Parents of children entering school are reminded that a Nebraska law requires students under age twelve to be protected against measles, rubella, poliomyelitis, diphtheria, pertussis, and tetanus by immunization before they are permitted to attend any school, unless a parent or guardian presents a written statement he does not wish to have his child immunized.
 Mumps immunization is also highly recommended.
 This law has been in effect since 1973, but some schools have not complied as well as others. The Nebraska State Health Department will be working with schools and backing them this year to see that this law is complied with more fully.

Croplands Diminish

Although approximately 17.5 million acres of potential cropland are available for future use in the northern Great Plains area.

"Although 'bringing potential cropland into production will not be without conservation areas, and the potential cropland base will be adequate for future food and fiber needs if existing high-quality cropland is retained and the high and medium potential reserve cropland is not committed to irreversible uses," Harlan explained.

A recent survey conducted by the Soil Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, has revealed that there are 32 million acres of high and 5.5 million acres of medium potential cropland—most of which is currently tied up in pastureland available for conversion to cropland in the northern Great Plains region.

"Potential cropland can be defined as those lands not currently in production and not in urban, building areas, and which eventually could be developed for farmland," said Phil Harlan, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension land use specialist. "Some of the land may be highly suited, while other areas may be only marginally suited for farming," Harlan said.

"However, since the cropland base has declined, 'the average quality of the nation's cropland has been improving because the poorest land has been retired,' Harlan explained. But another five million acres of marginal land should be retired, he said.

Retired poor and marginal acreage can be replaced by the 11 million acres available throughout the nation for conversion—including the 17.5 million acres located in the northern Great Plains region. However, only 34.9 million of the 11 million convertible acres can be converted without the application of significant conservation practices, he said.

Of the 17.5 million convertible acres in the northern Great Plains region, 13 million acres will require wind and water erosion protection if converted to farmland, he said. "Basically, erosion is our biggest limiting
