

Rump will spend year in Germany

Martin Rump of Wayne, a recipient of the Congress-Bundestag scholarship administered through Youth for Understanding (YFU) international Exchange, departs in July to live for a year with a host family in Germany. A student at Wayne-Carroll High School, he is the son of Carl and Elaine Rump.

The 299 Congress-Bundestag scholarships for educational and cultural exchange to Germany are open to sophomores and juniors from every U. S. high school. Now in its seventh year, the Congress-Bundestag program is jointly sponsored by the United States Congress and the German Bundestag and is administered by YFU, one of the world's oldest and largest international exchange organizations for high school students.

From the pool of nominees for scholarships, which included up to three students from each high school, finalists were selected on a state-by-state basis. In Germany, an equal number of students were chosen to live with host families in the U.S. as part of the Parliamentary Patenschafts Program, a reciprocal one-year study and homestay program.

He will leave for Germany July 20. Before departure, he will take part in a four-day orientation program in Washington, D.C., which includes meetings with U.S. representatives, study of German-U.S. relations and policy, a briefing by officials at the embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany and a tour of Washington.

In Germany, prior to joining his host family, Rump will attend additional language and cultural training sessions. During the year, he will travel to Berlin and to the capital city, Bonn, where he will meet with German government officials, returning home in July 1990.

Founded in 1951, YFU is a private, nonprofit, educational organization dedicated to international understanding and world peace, involving more than 130,000 youth in its programs. YFU has offices in more than two dozen countries, with 12 regional offices in the United States and nearly 4,000 professionally-trained volunteers around the world.

Wayne County Fair

Recollecting past years

This year's Wayne County Fair, scheduled for Aug. 3-6, will feature a touch of heritage and recollections of the past.

Thursday (Aug. 3) will be Heritage Day and in addition to the annual Ak-Sar-Ben Farm Family Awards, there will be a Heritage Day program (with Grover Ruwe) and 50 year 4-H Leaders will also be recognized.

Recently, volunteer workers have just finished roofing the sheep barn at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

The building was originally built for a beef barn.

Four-H beef clubs were among the first to be organized in Wayne County. By 1934, there were three beef clubs with 55 members. The calves were shown at the Wayne County Fair and most of them went on to the Interstate Fair at Sioux City.

BABY BEEF clubs were successful in Wayne County and soon there was not enough room in the buildings at the fairgrounds. Tents had to be rented each year.

W. M. Hawkins, Wayne County's first county agent, went to the fair board and asked if they could erect a suitable building. After some consideration they made the proposition, providing for the club members to raise as much money as they could toward the cost of the building and they would furnish the balance.

The clubs decided to solicit anything that would be suitable for an auction sale.

The 4-H'ers became busy and material for the auction came rolling in — pigs, chickens, feed bunks, items donated by local merchants and a ring of bologna.

Don Cunningham from the Sioux City Stockyards presided as auctioneer.

THE RING of bologna was sold — and resold — and proved to be a valuable piece of meat before someone finally bought it and took it home for supper.

The 4-H'ers raised about $750 and construction was begun on what is now the sheep barn.

There was room for 76 head of calves and a room upstairs for the boys to stay overnight.

Buying a room air conditioner

If you are in the market to buy a room air conditioner, you probably have one priority now — to buy it fast and beat the heat.

The most important factor to consider when buying a room air conditioner is the cooling capacity. Only a model with proper cooling capacity will comfortably cool and dehumidify a room. A room air conditioner with too little cooling capacity will not cool the room adequately, and one that's too large will not lower the humidity enough to prevent the cold, clammy feeling caused by chilly, humid air.

Cooling capacity is measured in British thermal units per hour (BTU/hr.). It is the amount of heat and humidity transferred from the room to the outdoors in one hour. The larger the BTU rating, the greater the unit's cooling capacity.

THE REQUIRED capacity can be estimated by following these four steps:

1. Find the volume of the room by multiplying the width, length and height, in feet.

2. Multiply the volume by 10 if the roof or attic is well insulated or if another room is above.

3. Multiply the answer above by 16 if the longest wall faces north; by 17 if it faces east; by 18 if it faces south; or 19 if it faces west.

4. Divide the answer above by 60 to determine an estimated BTU/hr. needed.

Once the cooling capacity is determined, compare room air conditioners on their energy efficiency rating. Room air conditioner efficiency is expressed as EER. The higher the EER, the more energy efficient the air conditioner. A bright yellow EnergyGuide label is on every room air conditioner. It shows the model's EER, its cooling capacity, and how the unit compares in efficiency to other models of similar capacity.

While you may be tempted to get the first air conditioner you see, take the time to make sure you are spending your money wisely.

Vendor's Day successful

The Second Annual Vendor's Day golf outing was termed very successful, according to Wayne Industries President Bill Dickey. "We had more participants this year than we had a year ago," Dickey said, "and we hope we can even expand it next year as we look forward to continued growth in the outing."

Dickey gave the opening remarks at the luncheon which was viewed by 120 golfers, (Members of the Wayne Industries and their vendors). "Wayne has a lot to offer," Dickey said. "We feel the network that has been established is a healthy one and we would like to see it continue to expand."

Dickey went on to say that Wayne has a lot to be proud of such as the centennial which was celebrated in 1984. "Out of that Centennial celebration came a logo which described Wayne as a community which offers Education, Industry and Agriculture," Dickey said.

Following Dickey's opening remarks, speeches were heard from the president of Wayne State College's Foundation, Al Cramer, and city administrator Phil Kloster. Virgil Kardell, one of the principle owners of Restful Knights, also said a few words.

Following the luncheon the members of the Wayne Industries and their guests, played a Texas Scramble Golf Tournament which consisted of 18-holes. The tournament was won by the foursome of Grant Ellingson, Ted Ellis, Pat Gross and Scott Prussia, which fired a score of 59.

"The purpose of the vendor's day golf outing is to say thank you to the vendor's who supply members of the Wayne Industries with supplies for their business," Dickey said. "It's just a way to say we appreciate everything they do for us."

Wayne gains revenge

Dating back to last baseball season, the Pender Legion team has defeated Wayne's Legion team by at least 10-runs, three consecutive times. Thursday night at Overin Field Wayne's Legion started a new string beating Pender by a 13-3 count in five innings of play.

The game, previously scheduled for Friday, was moved to Thursday to accommodate for rest-time that Wayne would need before heading to O'Neill on Saturday for three games in two days against Lexington, O'Neill and Wakefield.

Matt Peterson was on the mound for Wayne Thursday night and perhaps his only downfall was eight walks. He struck out five however, and only allowed three hits while picking up the victory—Wayne's 10th of the season to go with six losses.

"The kids got a little revenge," coach Hank Overin said. "Pender had 10-run us the last three times we played them and they didn't want to see that happen to them again."

Wayne had 13 runs, but only on six hits as Jess Zeiss and Corey Frye notched two hits apiece. Zeiss had an rbi double in the first inning and later added a single while Frye laced a triple and also added a single.

Chad Metzler also doubled but more importantly drove in two runs with that double and Jeff Lutt doubled as well. Matt Peterson went 0-3 in the game from the plate but it was his sacrifice fly ball in the fifth inning which ended the contest.

Wayne scored twice in the first inning and added four more in the second. The last three innings saw two runs in the third, three in the fourth and two in the fifth. Pender scored twice in the first inning and added one more in the second before Peterson and Wayne shut them down.

Million fish stocked

Some 2.7 million fish of all varieties were stocked in lakes and reservoirs across the state in May, according to a fish stocking report issued by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's fisheries division.

The stocking program in the panhandle emphasized stocking of rainbow and brown trout species, although some yellow perch, tiger musky, bluegill and largemouth bass were put into panhandle waters.

Stocking activity in the north central region was light, with the bulk of stock being catchable rainbow and brown trout, which were put into Keller Park Lake No. 5 and Long Pine Creek, both near Long Pine. Also, 1500 northern pike were stocked in the Anderson Bridge pond near Kilgore.

Northern pike stocking dominated the northeast region of the state, with 20,000 one-to-two inch fish going into the DeSoto Bend Wildlife Refuge Lake near Blair. Fingerling pike also were stocked in Skyview Lake in Norfolk, the Pilger Dam, Grove Lake near Royal, Summit Lake near Tekamah, Buckskin Hills Lake near Newcastle, Maskenthine Reservoir near Stanton, and Crystal Cove Lake near South Sioux City.

More than 34,000 catchable rainbow trout were stocked in Lake Ogallala, while another 800 of the species were put into Rock Creek Lake near Parks. The southwest district fisheries division also reported stocking 100,000 tiger muskie fry in Lake McConaughy, 900,000 sauger fry in Sutherland Reservoir and more than 80,000 total northern pike in Jeffrey Lake, and Red Willow and Enders reservoirs.

In the southeastern region of the state, which includes the Salt Valley and Omaha Lakes, 900,000 walleye fry were stocked in Carter Lake, 480,000 white bass fry in Glenn Cunningham Lake No. 11, and 2,550 two-inch northern pike in the Two Rivers State Recreation Area lakes.

Council offers guidelines for safe camping and hiking

For many families, camping is a favorite summer activity. But outdoor living can have special hazards, such as floods, fires and wild animals. Follow these tips from the Safety Council of Nebraska, Inc., to keep your camping trip trouble-free.

- If you're a new camper, or an experienced camper with new equipment, test your equipment at home before you leave for your trip. Practice pitching your tent and using lanterns, axes and cooking equipment. Be sure all equipment is in good operating order.

- Choose high ground for a campsite — a heavy rain could cause flash flooding in low-lying areas. Use a designated fireplace when possible, or remove leaves and litter to form a circle 10 feet in diameter.

- To safely extinguish your campfire, let it die down, then break up the coals or logs. Spread the partly burned pieces, soak them thoroughly with water, stir and soak them again. When the fire appears to be completely out, cover the area with dirt or sand.

- Unless water sources are certified safe by a competent authority, bring your own drinking water.

- Don't attempt to touch or feed wild animals, no matter how friendly they seem. Keep your food in your closed car or in a cooler placed far away from your tent.

- If you'll be hiking in the woods, wear long pants and high socks to protect against scratches, insect bites and poisonous plants. Shoes or boots should be sturdily constructed and cover the ankle.

- Be sure to notify someone of your intended hiking route and the time you'll return. Take along a compass, a small first-aid kit, a canteen of fresh water, a large garbage bag and a whistle. If you become lost, the trash bag will keep you warm and dry and the whistle will enable rescuers to find you.

- Allow enough time to make the return hike during daylight hours. If you must walk after dark, slow down and be extra alert for hazards.

For Your Information

Question: A. Wouldn't it be nice for Wayne High School to have a school newspaper distributed to interested patrons?

Answer:

A. Each school in the Wayne district prints a monthly newsletter and school calendar which are distributed to students with the intent of having them taken to the home.

There are 120 high school newsletters mailed directly to churches, business and civic organizations who have an interest in school activities. It would cost $2,400 a year to place one newsletter on a monthly bulk mailing route.

Wayne High School sponsors have a difficult time obtaining student help in publishing a yearly school annual. Middle School administrators have given up on obtaining student help on publishing an annual.

The Wayne Herald and KTCH provide excellent coverage of all governmental and student activities of the Wayne and Carroll Schools. The school district, with its limited staff of journalism training, would find it very difficult to improve on what is presently being provided the community in the ways of school news coverage.

Do you have a question concerning Wayne City or County Government, Wayne-Carroll School, Wayne State College or the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce?

Send questions to The Wayne Herald, P.O. Box 70, Wayne, NE 68787 or phone 375-2600. Questions can be submitted anonymously.

Thomas will work with a selected group of high school students in developing correct jazz style, improvisation and successful performance practices, according to Gary Davis, director of bands at Wayne State.

At the conclusion of this concentrated jazz clinic, the clinic band will perform with Thomas in a concert Saturday, July 22, at 8 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre. The concert is free and open to the public.

"This is an opportunity for selected high school instrumentalists to work with one of the finest jazz educators in America," said Davis.

Wayne State bureau will assist Northeast Nebraska communities

Northeast Nebraska communities will benefit from new outreach programs this fall when Wayne State College launches a Bureau for Community and Economic Development, funded in large part by a grant from US WEST Communications.

The on-campus bureau will coordinate delivery of the College's public service outreach programs and act as an information clearing-house for programs of other agencies.

"We intend to assist the communities in our service region by helping them maximize the use of the many resources and services available to them," says Dr. Donald J. Mash, president of the college. "We will help them develop their leadership and agendas to address their issues."

The Bureau will be funded primarily by a grant from US WEST Communications, which Mash says "was crucial in getting the initiative off the ground."

KEN POWER, vice president and chief executive officer of US WEST Communications in Nebraska says, "as a corporation, US WEST is committed to bettering the well-being of our communities and the people living in them. This project will be another step along the road toward the goal, and we are happy to be a part of this program."

Governor Kay Orr also announced that a Department of Economic Development field office will be located at Wayne State College. The field office is expected to complement the College's community development efforts and in turn enhance DED's ability to deliver assistance in Northeast Nebraska.

"The Bureau for Community and Economic Development was established at Wayne State College through a purely cooperative effort involving the College, US WEST and the Governor's office," says Orr. "My placement of the DED field office with the Bureau further exemplifies the kind of cooperative regional service we need to be providing in rural Nebraska."

WHEN THE offices are in place this fall, Mash says they will coordinate their efforts and work cooperatively to provide assistance to Northeast Nebraska communities.

"We'll bring together the work of the College's Bureau, the DED field office and our Nebraska Business Development Center office," Mash says. "This massing of outreach resources will enable us to effectively coordinate and maximize efforts to promote rural revitalization in Northeast Nebraska."

College's active role in rural regional development is important and appropriate.

"We function as a center and catalyst in our service region for education, as well as for the arts, cultural activities and community development," Mash says. "As a public agency, the College is actively pursuing a regional public service agenda to support the Governor's agenda for statewide development. Coordinating these new resources with existing efforts will enable the college to play a larger role in rural development."

Happy 52nd, DORT!
