GOSHORN, & HERALD Editors.
THURSDAY, DEC. 2, 1885.

Alfonso, King of Spain died last week.

Five vice presidents have died in office.

There are still nearly a million and a half acres of school lands in Nebraska that have not been offered for sale or lease.

President Cleveland did not attend the funeral services of Vice President Hendricks, giving as a reason that he was urged by many prominent men of both parties not to take even the smallest avoidable risk until after congressional meets and makes some arrangements regarding the presidential succession.

The death of Vice President Hendricks removes one of the most prominent figures in public life. For many years he has been one of the foremost of the leaders of the Democracy and as a man of his prominence and decided views, he had many friends and many enemies. In private however many of his most persistent opponents in both the Democratic and Republican ranks were his warm personal friends and his death is widely and sincerely regretted.

The Omaha Herald commenting on our notice of the survey, being made here, and the statement that the Omaha Northern would probably be killed by the Northwestern, says that we underestimate the strength behind Mr. McShane and the Omaha Northern. It says, "No matter what other operations may be, the Omaha Northern will be constructed and operated by Omaha capital." We hope that the Herald may prove to be right but we confess to serious doubts in the matter.

The death of the Vice-President again calls the attention of the country to the dangerous condition of the laws regulating the succession to the presidency in case of the death of either the president and vice president. With no presiding officer of the senate and no speaker of the house yet elected, the life of President Cleveland alone stands between the country and the greatest political confusion, if not even anarchy. There will no doubt be a universal demand from all over the country that one of the first acts of congress at the coming session shall be to pass a law that shall regulate the succession and prevent the possibility of leaving the country without an official head and with no provision for filling a vacancy.

The Hon. P. M. Sutton, of Iowa, a member of the Iowa legislature, one of the brainiest and most strenuous advocates of prohibition in that state has been traveling extensively in the South and West with the express view of studying the liquor laws in the various different states. He has been giving the results of his observations in a series of interesting letters in the Chicago Tribune. Mr. Sutton is a keen and impartial observer, and though naturally prejudiced in favor of prohibition, his careful study of the alcohol law in Nebraska, and the excellent results that have followed its adoption in this state has convinced him that in the present condition of public feeling, especially in the cities, it is much more powerful for good than harmful. He is enthusiastic over what has been accomplished in the regulation of the liquor traffic and contrasts the condition in which he found it in Omaha and Lincoln compared with Iowa cities in terms by no means favorable to the latter.

The following is a brief extract from one of his letters.

I must say, however, that further investigation convinced me that the character of the saloons in Omaha has been very much changed by this law. After many observations and interviews I have come to the following conclusions with reference to the effect of the alcohol law on the city of Omaha.

First—It has decreased the number of saloons fully two-thirds; that it has closed and prevented two-thirds of them.

Second—It has closed the very worst saloons.

Third—It has greatly decreased the drink habit.

Fourth—It has greatly improved those who have the drink habit.

Fifth—It has greatly protected the people from the inevitable excesses and evils consequent upon the traffic.

Sixth—It has given the city of Omaha the best government of which its people are capable.

Seventh—It has greatly relieved the tax-payers.

Nov. 25th, 1885.

Commissioners met per adjournment with full board present.

The minutes of the meeting yesterday met and chose J. H. Brown as the third party and proceeded to view the jail and upon careful examination found the jail in most respects constructed as per contract with the exception of the cell and a few minor parts. They also reported that after careful examination of contract and hearing the oral testimony of county board concluded that the contractor G. W. Kortright, was and could not be compelled to dig the well, whereupon the report was accepted and the committee discharged.

In motion the contract for the digging of a well three feet in the clear walled with brick edgewise, be let Dec. 1st whereupon Board adjourned to meet at that time.
